Virden.—Recently our Christian Workers' Society rendered an excellent program in the interest of the Armenian-Syrian Relief. After a touching appeal, an offering of $105 was lifted. Sister Haynes, our primary superintendent, is doing some splendid work in that department along missionary lines. Sunday morning they had a program. At the close the little folks gave their pennies and nickels to help our Sisters' Aid in the support of little Leah Ruth Ebey, one of our missionary children on the India field. Our pastor is giving us good spiritual sermons. Last Sunday was especially good,—the subject being "Christian Consistency," emphasizing the thought that people at large read the Christian, rather than the Christian's Bible.—Stella Brubaker, Virden, Ill., Feb. 12.

INDIANA

Bango congregation met in council Feb. 15, with Eld. H. S. Bowers as moderator. Elders H. W. Schwalm and H. Roose were present. One letter was granted. It was decided to hold the communion service May 29. A missionary committee was elected. Bro. Shriner and wife were installed to the deacon's office.—Gleta Schwalm, Wakarusa, Ind., Feb. 16.

Buck Creek.—Jan. 5 Bro. Wm. Schwalm, of Manchester College, delivered two excellent sermons. Jan. 11 Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Bethlehem, Mich., began a three weeks' series of meetings. Sister Bertha Dilling, of Hagerstown, ably conducted the song service. Feb. 3 Bro. Chas. Replogle, a member of the Friendly church, gave a very interesting lecture on Alaska. Our Sunday-school gave $136.56 for Armenian-Syrian Relief, and $10.28 toward the Manchester Mission Chapel debt.—Ida Shivers, Mooreland, Ind., Feb. 18.

Huntington City church met in council Jan. 2, with Brethren Ira E. Long and D. W. Paul presiding. Sunday-school officers were elected for the year, with Bro. W. H. Weybright and Sister Cora Emley superintendents. Bro. C. C. Brady was chosen pastor and elder, and will come to us in March. We have had no regular pastor this winter, but the pulpit has been filled by such brethren as J. H. Crumpacker, J. C. Murray and A. S. Workman, all of North Manchester, and Bro. Howard, one of the oldest ministers in the State of Indiana, who is spending the winter here. All gave us many good thoughts. Our Sunday-school sent an offering of $21 to the Armenian-Syrian Relief. We also decided to support an orphan. Our Christmas program was postponed on account of the epidemic. Health conditions are much improved, and attendance at services is increasing, which is encouraging.—Mrs. J. B. Bailey, Huntington, Ind., Feb. 18.

Middletown.—Bro. Rool, of Anderson, preached two Sundays in

KANSAS

Bloom congregation has been blessed in that, during the influenza epidemic, only a few members were ill, and none of those cases proved serious. The increase in attendance and interest in Sunday-school and church services is very gratifying. The Sunday-school gave a very entertaining and instructive program Feb. 2, celebrating the ratification of the Prohibition Amendment. Our pastor, Bro. J. S. Sherfy, has been giving us some very inspiring sermons on the "Forward Movement." The Christian Workers' Band has recently adopted a constitution and arranged for some committees, which will enable the members to do more effective Christian service. The Band has secured Bro. Ed. McPherson, Kans., to lecture here on Saturday evening and Sunday, March 1 and 2.—Carrie Smith, Bloom, Kans., Feb. 18.

Conway Springs.—Once again we are having Sunday-school. Although we had preaching services several times, we had no Sunday-school from Oct. 6 until Feb. 9. Since our last report two have been received into the church by baptism. At a recent business meeting, officers for the year were elected, with Bro. W. E. Thompson, elder; John Stauffer, president of Christian Workers' Band; Mrs. Bertha Plaugher, president of Aid Society; Ruth Frantz, "Messenger" correspondent. If health conditions permit, we are expecting Bro. O. H. Keller, of Huntington, to help us in a series of meetings, beginning March 2.—Naomi Fasnacht, Conway Springs, Kans., Feb. 17.

Independence.—Bro. W. H. Miller, our home elder and minister, began a series of meetings Jan. 29 and continued till Feb. 16. Much good was done, and seven were added to the church. Among the number was one brother, formerly a minister of the Progressive church. He will be able to help our faithful elder and minister, who has labored so faithfully and earnestly here for the past few years. We have recently organized a Teacher-training Class.—Pella Carson, Independence, Kans., Feb. 18.

Larned church met in council Jan. 10, 1919, with Eld. E. S. Fox presiding. Church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Band officers were elected. Our services have been greatly interfered with by the influenza epidemic, but the work has now been taken up with renewed interest. It became necessary to postpone both our love feast and revival meetings. The date for the former has not yet been definitely fixed. However, we expect Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Garden City, Kans., to be with us to open revival meetings April 6.—Mary Geiman, Larned, Kans., Feb. 11.

McPherson First Church met in council Feb. 17. Eleven church letters were received and three were granted. Brethren Henry Stoner, Edward Van Pelt and Warnie Brubaker were elected to the ministry. Bro. J. A. Flory was appointed prayer meeting leader for the year. Bro. J. Edson Ulery, of Michigan, has been engaged to conduct the revival meeting this coming fall. Dr. D. W. Kurtz will fill the pulpit the remainder of this year, during the absence of our pastor.—Mrs. R. E. Mohler, McPherson, Kans., Feb. 18.

To the Churches of Northeastern Kansas.—The 1918 District Meeting, which was to have been held at the Ozawkie church last October, and was indefinitely postponed, on account of influenza, will be held in the above-named church April 6-8. The Bible and Sunday-school Institute, arranged for in connection with the meeting, has been called off. We urge that every congregation in the District send a strong delegation. Any congregation or individuals having reports or business for the meeting, will forward them to Bro. E. F. Sherfy, McPherson, Kans.—C. B. Smith, Moderator of Official Board, Morrill, Kans., Feb. 19.

MARYLAND

Meadow Branch.—Our contributions to the Armenian Relief Fund amounted to $855. Feb. 7 the members of the men's organized Bible Class, of the Westminster Sunday-school, met at the home of the teacher, Prof. W. B. Furbee, and had an inspiring address by Eld. C. D. Bonsack, of Blue Ridge College. The women's organized Bible Class, of the same school, with Sister Lydia Trostle, teacher, is planning for more aggressive work for the ensuing year. Our elder, Bro. Frank Bikle, has returned from the Johns Hopkins Hospital, where he underwent an operation. He is much improved in health.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., Feb. 12.

Pipe Creek church met in council Feb. 8, at Blue Ridge College, with Bro. J. J. John presiding. One letter was received and one granted. The yearly report of the deacons was read and accepted. The church decided to elect two deacons at our next council, to be held May 3 at the Pipe Creek house. Brethren E. C. Bixler, J. W. Englar and Wm. Kinsey were elected delegated to District Meeting.—Ida M. Englar, Uniontown, Md., Feb. 12.

MICHIGAN

Grand Rapids congregation closed a revival Feb. 4, conducted by Eld. C. L. Wilkins. Our song service, both congregational and special, was very spiritual and inspiring, and was conducted by Sister Iva Burke, of North Liberty, Ind. We had a number of very helpful cottage and special prayer meetings, which were well attended by earnest workers. Much home visiting and personal work was done by our evangelist, pastor and others. Two were received into the church by baptism. Interest was aroused and the attendance was quite good.—Mrs. M. M. Chambers, Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 15.

Marilla.—Members of the Marilla branch of the Harlan congregation met at the Marilla meeting-house for the purpose of organizing a separate congregation, which we decided to call Marilla. The following officers were elected: J. E. Ulery, elder; Lemon Ebey, clerk; Beatrice Shidler, "Messenger" agent and correspondent; H. Grossnickle, Clark Williams and Irvin Grossnickle, trustees.—Mrs. Beatrice Shidler, Marilla, Mich., Feb. 15.

Vestaburg.—Jan. 7 Eld. J. Edson Ulery commenced a series of meetings, and continued until Jan. 19. On account of influenza, the attendance was not large, but Bro. Ulery did a good work while here and the church has been encouraged. Feb. 15 we held our council meeting, with Eld. Jos. Robison presiding.—Samuel Bollinger, Vestaburg, Mich., Feb. 18.

MINNESOTA

Monticello church was again opened Feb. 2, having been closed since Jan. 5. The sickness is past and we have much to be thankful for. Only a few members of the congregation were stricken with the epidemic and there were no fatal cases. An offering of $86.83 has been taken by the Sunday-school for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our quarterly council was held Feb. 13. Two letters were received. Arrangements were made to begin our Mission Study Class and Oct. 31, beginning at 10:30.—Chas. W. Miller, Hagerstown, Ind.

IOWA

Beaver church met in council Feb. 15, with Bro. Chas. Rowe, of Dallas Center, presiding. Our crowds are becoming larger, and the work is going on with more vigor and determination. Bro. Rowe stayed over Sunday and gave us two good sermons. Bro. Esra Flory, of Chicago, recently closed a very interesting Bible institute.—Belle Ruth, Grand Junction, Iowa, Feb. 17.

Fernald.—We were hindered very much in our services during December and January, on account of the epidemic, but were permitted to open church and Sunday-school again Feb. 2. Eld. Robinson and wife have left for the South and will be greatly missed in our work here. Feb. 2, Bro. Pegtby, of Des Moines, gave us an interesting talk on missions. A collection of $25 was taken for the Orphans' Home.—Ona Stevens Sell, Nevada, Iowa, Feb. 8.

We have had many calls for an easy-to-read Bible with larger type than the usual minion black-faced type. Our Onyx Black-faced Self-pronouncing Type meets this very need. We recommend it to all who want an especially readable type in a Bible that is still convenient to carry.

You can get this easy-to-read Bible in either a Reference Edition or in a Teachers' Edition; the Bible is printed on a fine grade of white Bible paper and on Nelson's famous India paper.

These Bibles are all in the American Standard Version. This version is the most accurate, the simplest and the clearest of versions. The Editor of the Sunday School Times writes: "In view of its clear revealing of the meaning of the text, the most thoughtful Bible student of today does not feel really safe in studying a Bible passage unless he works with the American Standard in hand."

New Large Type Reference Bibles

An entirely new edition printed from new plates, made specially for this Bible. The type is a large heavy face with all proper names marked for pronunciation, remarkably easy to read. Contains 12 colored maps with index, and 25 outline maps throughout the text.

ren Geo. Throne and John Throne were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. We decided to hold a communion service June 21, at 10:30 A. M.—Mrs. Ottie Fisher, Pioneer, Ohio, Feb. 12.

Springfield church met in council Feb. 8, with Eld. A. H. Miller in charge. One letter of membership was granted. Steps were taken to secure an evangelist, to begin with us some time this summer. Our communion will be held on Easter Sunday, April 20, in the evening. Bro. Miller remained for the Sunday morning service and preached an excellent sermon. From Feb. 10 to 16 we had the pleasure of having with us Bro. W. R. Muller, who gave his Bible Land Talks, which were much appreciated by all. For most of us this was the first opportunity to hear Bro. Miller, and we feel that we were greatly benefited. Sunday morning he preached on "The Overcoming Life," and in the evening gave his experience with the Arabs.—Alice C. Mumaw, Mogadore, Ohio, Feb. 17.

OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City.—We have had a week of special things. Feb. 2 we had the privilege of listening to Brethren Nill and Loehbach. Feb. 9 we were favored with a discourse by Bro. Ray Wagoner. Tuesday evening and Wednesday we had the members of the Mission Board with us. At their meeting much business was transacted. The members at Enid asked that some work be done there and we are looking forward to securing some one for that place. The work at Paradise Prairie was planned for. The members at Tulsa are asking for help and Brethren Hoff and Meek are planning to take care of that work. Other things were discussed and arrangements made for the needy places. Wednesday evening we met in members' meeting. Six letters were received. Sunday-school officers were elected for six months, with Brother Barr and Clark, superintendents. Sister L. M. Dodd gave us a brief call during the week.—J. H. Morris, Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 14.

OREGON

Portland.—Bro. 3 our Christian Workers' Society rendered a missionary program. The life and works of Bible missionaries, such as Paul, Peter, Philip and others, were discussed. The life of David Livingstone was also briefly spoken of. There were also special music and a recitation. After this service Bro. G. C. Carl continued the same line of thought in his sermon. Much information was given concerning the sufferers in Armenia. The Sunday-school took an offering of $56 for the cause. We also donated $10 to the India Hospital Fund.—Grace W. Hewitt, Portland, Oregon, Feb. 18.

PENNSYLVANIA

Beachdale church met in council Jan. 11, with our pastor, Bro. B. F. Waltz, presiding. All the officers for the coming year were elected. Temperance and Child Rescue Committees were also appointed. Dec. 23 I. B. Trout, pastor of the Berlin church, filled the pulpit in the absence of our pastor. The sermon was much enjoyed by all that heard it. Jan. 26, Brother Krehel Hoyle, representative of the American Union Sunday-school, talked to us on the experience of his conversion and the work he has since been doing in converting others.—Mrs. Fred Brant, Garrett, Pa., Feb. 15.

Bethany church met in council Jan. 20, with our pastor, Bro. C. G. Hease, presiding. Eld. M. C. Swigart was also with us. The various reports of the church and its departments were read. We are all looking forward to our District Meeting to be held at the Bethany Brethren church in April. We had Promotion Day in our Sunday-school Feb. 2. Special services were rendered by various departments and the scholars who graduated were given a certificate, bearing the signatures of the pastor and officers of the school. We began revival services in our church last evening, conducted by Bro. M. J. Brougher, of Greensburg, Pa. We expect to do great things for God in helping others to find Christ as their personal Savior.—Margaret E. Rogers, Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 18.

Falling Springs.—Feb. 14 Bro. Ralph W. Schlosser, of Elizabethtown, Pa., was with us at the Shady Grove church. He is working in the interest of Elizabethtown College and his talk was very instructive and much appreciated. Since the last report the six, who stood for Christ at our series of meetings at the Hade house, have been baptized with two others, making eight in all.—H. N. M. Gearhart, Greencastle, Pa., Feb. 15.

Greensburg church suffered a heavy loss through the epidemic, but is picking up nicely again. Feb. 16 we observed the seventh anniversary of our church dedication. In the evening our missionary committee gave a splendid program in behalf of the famine sufferers in India. The offering lifted amounted to $73.31. Bro. Herman B. Heisey, of Rummel, Pa., will conduct our evangelistic meetings. They will begin March 24, and will close with a love feast April 13.—M. J. Brougher, Greensburg, Pa., Feb. 19.

Meyersdale church met in council Jan. 1. At a monthly Sunday-school meeting we elected officers for the school and Christian Workers' Meeting. Our pastor, Bro. Coffman, presided at these meetings. Our Sunday-school superintendent is a live wire and our school is doing excellent work. Feb. 9, after services, a young man was baptized. At the same time the church held a short council session and reelected our pastor for a period of three years, with a splendid increase in support. A few weeks ago our pastor preached a sermon on "Progress." He had received the "Five-year Forward Movement" program, which stirred him to preach as he did. For next Sunday evening our Missionary Committee has a splendid program prepared, the purpose of which is to arouse the missionary spirit. One such program will be given each quarter. Thursday evening, after our Teachers' Meeting, the sisters planned to be the pastor's wife a valentine in the form of a box, which contained $46.20 in money. It was a token of love, and greatly appreciated.—Mrs. D. J. Fike, Meyersdale, Pa., Feb. 15.

Middle Creek.—Feb. 2 Eld. Silas Hoover gave us a fine sermon, which was the first one we had had for nearly two months. We expect to have a council at the Pleasant Hill church March 22, beginning at 1 o'clock.—Carrie Walker, Rockwood, Pa., Feb. 13.

Pleasant Ridge.—We held our first preaching services Feb. 9. Our church and Sunday-school were closed before Christmas. We elected Bro. Virgil B. Bard, superintendent of our Sunday-school. We expect to take up a collection in the near future for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our Sunday-school gave $4.30 to missions last year.—Irvin W. Garland, Needmore, Pa., Feb. 13.

Windber.—We enjoyed a two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by our pastor, Bro. H. S. Replogle, which closed Feb. 16. There were four confessions, two having been baptized. The sermons were very helpful and appreciated by a good audience every night. The singing was in charge of Bro. J. H. Lehman, of Scalp Level.—Mrs. Harvey Knavel, Windber, Pa., Feb. 18.

York (First Church).—Jan. 30 Bro. Ralph W. Schlosser, of Elizabethtown College, who has charge of raising an endowment fund for the college, delivered an interesting address. He gave a brief history of the college and also brought out the need of a conservative, standardized school. In a very convincing manner he impressed parents with the importance of sending their children to Brethren schools. Jan. 30 our elder, Bro. J. A. Long, gave a very interesting illustrated sermon on the difference between the Jewish passover and the Lord's supper.—Alice K. Trimmer, York, Pa., Feb. 14.

VIRGINIA

Antioch church met in council Feb. 1, with Bro. Isaac Bowman presiding. Three letters of membership were granted. The women of our congregation have recently organized a Sisters' Aid Society, and we think much good may be accomplished through this organization. Feb. 2, Bro. L. A. Bowman preached a very interesting sermon for us.—Bella Bowman Peters, Rocky Mount, Va., Feb. 15.

Cedar Grove church met in council Feb. 8. Eld. D. P. Wine presided. Brethren D. P. Wine and B. W. Neff were appointed delegates for Annual Meeting. Three brethren were appointed delegates to District Meeting. A building committee was appointed to secure information as to the cost of remodeling the Cedar Grove churchhouse, so that it may be better suited to the Sunday-school needs. All meetings have been suspended for the past several months on account of influenza. The Sunday-school has not been reorganized for this year. The council chose Bro. B. F. Good, as superintendent.—Lelia S. Neff, New Market, Va., Feb. 15.

Mt. Vernon church met in council Feb. 15, with Eld. J. R. Kindig presiding. Eld. Geo. Phillips, from an adjoining church, was with us Sunday morning and evening. Bro. Phillips preached for us. Bro. J. R. Kindig was reelected elder; Brethren Chas. Kindig and D. F. Peters, Sunday-school superintendents; Bro. Chas. Cline, church clerk; Sister Nora Kindig, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. Bros. W. S. Campbell and Eld. J. R. Kindig were elected delegates to District Meeting. Eld. Kindig was also elected delegate to Annual Meeting. In January, an offering of $145.05 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our church also raised $53 for the Basic City church. The influenza epidemic prevented us from holding services for quite a while before Christmas. There are still a few cases in our community.—Fay Cline, Stuarts Draft, Va., Feb. 17.

Nokesville church met in council Jan. 25, with Eld. I. A. Miller presiding. Nine letters were received and six were granted. A Local Temperance Committee, composed of Brethren W. R. Honker, J. F. Flora, Jesse and F. J. Byer, was chosen. Bro. W. R. Hooker was elected superintendent of Sunday-school; Bro. Yagel, president of Christian Workers' Society; the writer, correspondent. A very important part of the meeting was the ordination of Brethren A. K. Graybill and B. F. Summer as elders. Our church, through its various activities, has contributed $132.50 to Armenian Relief: $50 by the Sunday-school; $15 by the Christian Workers' Society; $35 by the Sisters' Aid Society; $42.50 by a special offering.—Mrs. J. A. Seese, Nokesville, Va., Feb. 18.

Notice to the Churches of the Southern District of Virginia: The 1918 District Meeting, which was to have been held last November, was entirely postponed on account of influenza, and will be held at the Smiths River church, Patrick County, Va., April 16, 17 and 18. Elders' Meeting, Wednesday, April 16, at 3 P. M. The same program will be used that was prepared last fall.—D. A. Naff, Naffs, Va., Feb. 18.

Oak Grove church met in council Feb. 15. Bro. P. F. Wenger presided. Bro. C. C. Wine was elected Sunday-school superintendent. The vote for delegates to Annual and District Meeting was taken, which will be completed at the next session. Permission was granted the Sisters' Aid Society, to hold its regular business meeting in the church basement. On account of the influenza epidemic, our services have been greatly hindered.—Ollie Mae Cline, Mt. Sidney, Va., Feb. 17.

Peter's Creek church met in council in the Oak Grove house Feb. 15, with Eld. J. S. Showalter presiding. Reports from the different preaching points showed that $1,500 has been given in the congregation for Relief and Reconstruction work. On motion it was decided to give $300 to the India sufferers. Four of our young members are in Daleville College, preparing to do ministerial and missionary work. Sister Ella Wright, a member of our church, is to be with our congregation during the summer months. In the fall of 1917 we had arranged with Bro. H. C. Early to preach a series of sermons in Peter's Creek house. On account of a heavy program of work he asked to be relieved, but promised to be with us last October. These meetings had to be postponed on account of influenza. We now have his promise to begin May 4. Bro. Virgil C. Finnell and some of the District Sunday-school workers are to be with us March 20 and 21.—Mildred Naff, Roanoke, Va., Feb. 17.

Pleasant Valley.—On account of the influenza epidemic we were not permitted to engage in any church services for two months. Feb. 15 we assembled for council, with Eld. S. P. Reed presiding. Officers for the year were elected: Sister Stella Reed, clerk; Eld. Michael Reed, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Will Bowman, Sunday-school superintendent. On Sunday following, we met for preaching services.—Mrs. Livie A. Dulaney, Floyd, Va., Feb. 17.

WEST VIRGINIA

Littleton.—Jan. 25 Bro. J. B. Shaffer began a series of meetings at the Wade chapel church. He preached to a small crowd for a few nights, but as the interest grew, so did the attendance. Feb. 3 Bro. J. E. Shepler came to assist. Twenty-eight stood for Christ, nine were received by baptism, two were reclaimed and thirteen asked the privilege of going to other denominations. Four still await baptism. The meetings closed Feb. 13.—Ruth Wade, Littleton, W. Va., Feb. 18.

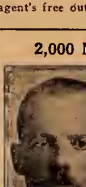
2,000 MILES IN A WAGON



Have you ever read the story of the "Mission Wagon"? At the close of the first year of travel Eld. James M. Neff wrote: "During the year we traveled by wagon 2,141 miles, camped outdoors under all sorts of circumstances, made 430 house-to-house visits, conducted 110 public services at twenty-one widely-scattered points in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, attended two love feasts and distributed 47,860 pages of tracts and the "Messenger" is going regularly into many homes, and we are hopeful that the Lord will magnify himself through it all." The Challenge of Those Who Suffered

THE volume of innocent suffering which the past few years have brought upon the world is beyond the power of any finite mind to measure. It is so vast and terrible that for many persons it has staggered faith in a moral order in the universe. Faith in such an order can survive, however, on one condition: That out of all this suffering there shall come to mankind a corresponding measure of blessing and well-being.

A mother cheerfully endures any hardship for her children's sake. She does not feel that Providence is unkind to her if her own bitter experience can be made to contribute to the happiness of those whom she loves more than her own life. Paradoxically, she finds her own highest happiness that way. But what a responsibility this fact entails upon the children to make good and not to disappoint their mother's hopes!

Here we can see both a comfort and a challenge for our times. Those who have suffered so unjustly and so much can be content if they can have love enough for those who are to be blessed because they suffered. None but God knows how much love that takes and naught but his Spirit can supply it.

But the challenge of this situation to those of us who did not suffer,—that is the overwhelming thought! Do you feel it? Do you hear those millions upon millions of heart groans, calling to you to make good,—to see to it that their sacrifice was not in vain? They're counting on you and me to give them solace in their grief, to give them rest in their too early graves, to justify their awful weight of sorrow before the moral sense of mankind. This we can do only by using all that they endured as motive power for commensurate progress in the coming of the Kingdom.

A Question for Discussion

BROTHER X is not a preacher but they call on him sometimes to lead in prayer. He is rather fluent in prayer. Last Sunday he prayed long and fervently. He asked God to "bless all conditions of the human family, the world over." He also prayed that God would "touch and tender our hearts with a finger of thy love."

They took up a collection for the famine sufferers last Sunday. Bro. X was about tn put in ten cents when something told him he ought to make it a quarter and he resolved to make the sacrifice. He felt like giving more than that, but the Sunday before he had given a dollar to the missionary offering. Besides that, he remembered that his income tax would have to be paid soon, and Bro. X has a heavy income tax, for he made a good bit of money last year.

Question for discussion: "Brother X's Idea of Prayer."

The Costliness of Intercession

IT is such an easy thing to pray for people,—to mention their names and ask God to bless them. Or even to ask God to feed them, if they are hungry. Or even to ask God to save them, if their lives are lost in sin.

But is that prayer? Is that intercession? Is it because we think so, that we feel so perfectly safe in asking God so often to do so many things for so many people?

True intercession is not quite so cheap as that. For prayer,—prayer that is anything but mockery,—is the bursting out of strong desire. Intercession,—the real thing,—is the agonizing of the heart in behalf of the object of its love. It involves an interest so deep that it stops at nothing short of the exhaustion of its resources. It can not be quieted until it has done its best to secure for its object the blessing for which it intercedes.

Not that you must be able to do much. But you must be willing to, and willing, therefore, to do your utmost, whether that be much or little. To pray and not be willing that God should lay his hand upon you in answering your prayer, is to prove your intercession false.

We do not know all the ways of God in hearkening to his children's cries. There are mysteries in his providence too deep for us. And we can well be content that it is so. But we do know that one of his most common ways is found in commandeering those who pray, their money, time and everything.

Does praying for the Kingdom pay? Not much, the way we do it, mostly. We do not mean it. But prayer that is prayer pays. At the very least, it puts efficient agents in God's hands. And, oh, how much he needs them!

If you're looking for some cheap and easy way to help the Kingdom on, for heaven's sake, don't pray. Oh, you can play at it safely. But don't really pray. That's expensive. Intercession is the costliest investment you can make. And the most fruitful.

When Prayer Takes Hold of You

HORACE BUSHNELL said that no prayer takes hold of God until it takes hold of the man. And Horace Bushnell, who said a great many wise things in his lifetime, never said a truer thing than that.

What can be done to lift our prayers out of the lowlands of the formal and perfunctory, up into the heights of real concern and soul hunger? There's no mystery about the low effectiveness of our praying. It does not "take hold" of us.

Test yourself out on this. What did you pray for this morning, yesterday, last Sunday? Have you been much concerned about it? Have you been listening, expecting that God would want to use you, in some way, in the answer?

Or did you promptly forget all about it? Did you, in fact, experience a feeling of satisfied relief, not to say self-righteous pride, because you had discharged your obligations in that matter by mentioning it in your prayers?

Why this hypocrisy of pretending to pray for things in which our actions show we have no interest?

The Glory of the Christ Life

"And the glory which thou hast given me, I have given to them."

STRICTLY speaking, the glory of anything is its divine quality; its God-like attributes and character.

The Glory of Jesus

When Jesus performed his first miracle, the Apostle John tells us that through it "he manifested his glory," that is to say: He, by this miracle of creative power, exhibited something of the Divine Power within him. It was this manifestation of Divine Power that was "his glory." In the first chapter of John, the author says that while the Son of God, who was in every way equal with the Father, tabernacled with us, "we beheld his glory, the glory as of an only-begotten." It was a unique glory. Nobody else on earth ever manifested such divine qualities or attributes,—such a glorious character.

And just what, in concrete terms, was this glorious character? How did it manifest itself? The Apostle John sums it up in two things: (1) "grace," (2) "truth," or, rather, fullness of grace and fullness of truth. The Law gave us some glimpses of grace, and fragments of truth, but the fullness of both grace and truth were manifested and revealed through the life of the Son of God on earth.

Fullness of Grace and Truth

Grace is God's gracious gift. Jesus manifested the graciousness of God in all its fullness, insomuch that he could say: "He that would see God, let him look at me," and "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." All that we call "the grace of God" seems to mean God's gracious gifts to us, undeserving sinners, whether saved or unsaved. The root of the word "grace" is graciousness. So grace is, in substance, God's graciousness. And this was one of the chief characteristics of the life of Jesus. He manifested to the world, the graciousness, the mercy, the forgiveness of God, in all its fullness, his lovingkindness in dealing with the children of men, even though they are sinners,—if their attitude be true toward God.

Just so, fullness of truth was also another characteristic in the life of Jesus. In dealing with men, even though they were sinners, in a loving way, God did not become unrighteous. The salvation of Jesus does not only provide for the saving of men, though they be sinners, but also for the preserving of the righteousness and truth of God. And so we are told, in the Epistle to the Romans, that the cross of Christ as well as his life, on the one hand, manifested, in fullest possible measure, the love of God. In the fifth chapter the Apostle says: "God commendeth his own love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Here is a perfect exhibition of the graciousness of the love of God,—fullness of grace in the death of Christ.

Then, in the third chapter of Romans, we are told that God set forth his Son "to be a propitiation, through faith, in his blood, to show his righteousness because of the passing over of the sins done afore-

The Peter Becker Memorial, 1919

BY JAMES A. SELL

Peter Becker, the founder of the church at Germantown, Pa., was the first minister of the Church of the Brethren in America. On account of persecution he left his home and country in 1719, and endured the privations, starvation and homesickness of a six-months' voyage across the Atlantic Ocean, in search of freedom to worship God.

He loved his God and for his truth,
He firmly took a stand,
He wished to see the Lord adored,
Throughout his native land.
But tribulation was his lot,
He found no peace at home,
His friends and loved ones he must leave
In distant lands to roam.

He truly was a man of God
And loved the ways of peace,
He sought and found a home that gave
To him a sweet release.
And here he built upon the rock
Of God's Eternal Truth,
To help establish in the world
What he had loved from youth.

Give us, O Lord, the faith and zeal
And vision bright, to see
That we may follow in the steps
Of him who wrought for thee.
And may the mantle of his love,
Fall on us, ever new,
And bind us to the church he left,
In all our journey through.

And when our struggles all are o'er.
And Christ shall claim his own,
Grant us, at least, a humble place,
Before the great white throne.
There, with the loved of other days,
We'll sing in nobler songs,
In praise to our Redeemer Lord,
To whom all praise belongs.

The Abrahamic Covenant

BY E. B. HOFF

In Four Parts.—Part Two

A Growing Faith.—Abraham walked by faith. He was given the promise of a world-wide heritage, though as yet he was an aged man without an heir. In hope he "believed against hope, to the end that he might become a father of many nations, according to that which had been spoken, So shall thy seed be. And without being weakened in faith he considered his own body now as good as dead (he being about a hundred years old), and the deadness of Sarah's womb; yet, looking unto the promise of God, he wavered not through unbelief, but waxed strong through faith, giving glory to God, and being fully assured that what he had promised, he was able also to perform" (Rom. 4: 18-21). This faith did not come to him all at once, but was a matter of growth. At one time he said: "Let my servant be the heir," but Jehovah said: "No, a son shall be your heir" (Gen. 17: 15-19). The faith of Abraham grew in its daily testings until it was one of the most remarkable examples of faith the world has ever seen.

Unswerving Faith.—When the "son of promise" was finally born, and when he had grown to be a lad, and hopes began to bear fruitage, then came a final test. The people about him, in their devotion to their idols and false gods, were offering their sons as the highest mark of sacrifice. Would Abraham be as loyal to the true God, as they were to their false gods? Would he offer not his animals, merely, not himself, not his wife, but his own long-looked-for son, in whom lay his only hope of blessing? Jehovah said: "Do it." "By faith Abraham, being tried, offered up Isaac: yea, he that had gladly received the promises was offering up his only begotten son; even he to whom it was said, In Isaac shall thy seed be called: accounting that God is able to raise up, even from the dead; from whence he did also in a figure receive him back" (Heb. 11: 17-19). That such a climax of faith should have been reached in that ancient world is almost astounding. It is from this ground that Abraham is truly called "the father of the faithful" of all the ages of the world.

The Covenant Renewed.—The unswerving loyalty of this good man in this final test brought an encouraging response from Jehovah. The promise was again renewed and made unmistakably plain: "By myself have I sworn, saith Jehovah, because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice" (Gen. 22: 16-18).

Renewed to Isaac and Jacob.—The covenant made with Abraham was renewed to his son Isaac when he was tempted to leave the land of promise and migrate into Egypt: "And Jehovah appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of: sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee: for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these lands, and I will establish the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father: and I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these lands; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed: because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws" (Gen. 26: 2-5). And later, when Jacob, the son of Isaac, needed encouragement and guidance, the promise was renewed to him in the same glowing terms in which they had been given to his ancestors (cf. Gen. 35: 9-15).

The Covenant, the Watchword of Israel.—The promise and covenant made with Abraham became the point of appeal, yes, the very watchword of almost every leader and prophet mentioned in the later histories of Israel. The leaders,—such men as Moses, Joshua, and others,—stand upon this ground for their authority; the poets sing it in the hymns of Israel; the prophets preach it as the ground of their defense. Not only is it used as a leverage for winning the people to God, but it is even woven into the prayers as a reminder of the promise that had been made (cf. Ex. 2: 24; 3: 6; 6: 8; 33: 1; Lev. 26: 42; Num. 32: 11; Deut. 1: 8; 6: 10; 9: 5; 2 Kings 13: 23; Neh. 9: 7, 8; etc.).

Abraham, a Man of Genuine Integgity.—The choosing of Abraham was not a matter of chance, neither was it a mark of special favoritism. Abraham was chosen because he was a man upon whom God could depend,—a man who responded nobly to the call of God, a man of sincere devotion, a man with a magnanimous soul; he was a man who walked out bravely on the promise of God, and who was responsive enough to make the most of the tests and the trials that came to him day by day. It is on this account that Abraham stands out in such preëminence above the contemporaries of his own day, or even above many others in later ages, with much larger opportunities than ever he had. He was a man who was willing and able to translate the blessings that came to him into blessings for his progeny.

The Use of the Lord's Prayer

BY L. W. TEETER

THE prayer referred to is Jesus' teaching, as given in Matt. 6: 9-13. The purpose of this article is to check the disuse of the Lord's Prayer, especially in public worship.

The Church of the Brethren has been noted for its use of the Lord's Prayer, in all of its principal services, for over a hundred years,—so far as we have record, and most likely dates back to its apostolic revival in 1708.

At the General Conference of the Church of the Brethren in 1805, consideration was given to it, showing that at that time it had been in general use, and that its use was being carefully guarded, as follows: "Concerning prayer [the Lord's Prayer] 'Our Father,' since some do not make the same expressions as given by the evangelists from the mouth of Jesus, it was considered that we should use the expressions according to the pattern of the doctrine of Jesus, our Master, and at the same time contemplate the meaning contained in these words, so that we may pray with the spirit and understanding of the heart, according to the mind of Christ, and in truth."

What is said here, as to the use of the Lord's Prayer, is very important. Some have objected to the frequent use of the Lord's Prayer, claiming that its use becomes too formal. If such a thing is possible, it is the fault of the one using it. Not entering into the spirit and understanding of it, the prayer will not serve the purpose that Jesus meant it should, when he taught it.

Possibly I have thought more of the importance of praying the Lord's Prayer during the Great "World War" than ever before, because of its intense fitness to bring about the very things that the Eternal, Universal Father wanted, and which every human being in the whole world needed. To this end Jesus taught his disciples this prayer,—a part of the Heavenly Father's WILL. Really, the "Lord's Prayer,"—as it is usually called,—or, we may say, "The Lord's Form of Prayer," which he taught his disciples to use when they pray, IS THE ONE ONLY GREAT INTERNATIONAL FORM OF PRAYER in the New Testament. Every one of the millions of souls, inhabiting this great globe, may, if he will accept the conditions of the Eternal Fatherhood of God, use that form of prayer. Indeed, he should use it, because Jesus taught his disciples to use it. As their successors, we must also use it.

We have seen good outlines, logical expositions, etc., of the Lord's Prayer, but let us look at it now, to see what it is to accomplish, by the simplicity of its own words.

"Our Father, which art in heaven." Here it is plainly implied, that if we pray this prayer, we must be children of God. We could not expect any blessing from him if we were not. God is a Spirit, but we could not worship him if we were not his spiritual children (John 4: 24).

At this point I am impelled to make the following remark: In our church work we often insist on being united in our prayers, because we feel certain that we will the more surely prevail with God. I can not conceive how the individuals of this whole world could be more compactly united in prayer with each other, and the whole of them, individually, with the Eternal Father in heaven, the Omnipotent God, and with Jesus Christ, who once proved himself a Champion in overcoming the world (John 16: 33), THE LORD OF LORDS, AND KING OF KINGS (Rev. 19: 33), and with the HOLY SPIRIT, our present World Comforter, and Reprover of its sins (John 16: 7-11) than by the general use of the Lord's Prayer.

Here I must say, that I am overawed by the thought of what might have been accomplished, had the whole world been faithful and persevering in praying the Lord's Prayer, long before the late "World War," or even during it, if such universal prayer service had not prevented it. This might have been possible, as we shall see, in our further exposition of the "Lord's Prayer."

"Hallowed be thy name." This obligates us to live truly devoted to him, and to manifest holy reverence for him among all men, that they may also glorify him (Matt. 5: 16). Really, we must live up to all the New Testament requirements, to hallow his name. This is not done by carnal warfare.

"Thy Kingdom come." This obligates us to do all we can to convert the world, to give the people life eternal,—not to kill them with carnal weapons. Then will God cause his Kingdom to come.

"Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." This obligates us to do his Will, here on earth, ourselves first. Then we should use every means of grace he has given us, through Jesus Christ, to make "all nations" do his will on earth, as all do his will in heaven,—not destroy the nations by the millions. That is not the way it is done in heaven.

"Give us this day our daily bread." This is an unselfish, neighborly petition. Notice that the Lord's Prayer is plural throughout. The first word is "our." In the four direct personal petitions are the words "us," "our," and "we." I am, therefore, not permitted to say: "Give me this day my daily bread," etc. Such would be my prayer,—not the Lord's Prayer," and,

What is said here, as to the use of the Lord's Prayer, is very important. Some have objected to the frequent use of the Lord's Prayer, claiming that its use becomes too formal. If such a thing is possible, it is the fault of the one using it. Not entering into the spirit and understanding of it, the prayer will not serve the purpose that Jesus meant it should, when he taught it.

Possibly I have thought more of the importance of praying the Lord's Prayer during the Great "World War" than ever before, because of its intense fitness to bring about the very things that the Eternal, Universal Father wanted, and which every human being in the whole world needed. To this end Jesus taught his disciples this prayer,—a part of the Heavenly Father's WILL. Really, the "Lord's Prayer,"—as it is usually called,—or, we may say, "The Lord's Form of Prayer," which he taught his disciples to use when they pray, IS THE ONE ONLY GREAT INTERNATIONAL FORM OF PRAYER in the New Testament. Every one of the millions of souls, inhabiting this great globe, may, if he will accept the conditions of the Eternal Fatherhood of God, use that form of prayer. Indeed, he should use it, because Jesus taught his disciples to use it. As their successors, we must also use it.

We have seen good outlines, logical expositions, etc., of the Lord's Prayer, but let us look at it now, to see what it is to accomplish, by the simplicity of its own words.

"Our Father, which art in heaven." Here it is plainly implied, that if we pray this prayer, we must be children of God. We could not expect any blessing from him if we were not. God is a Spirit, but we could not worship him if we were not his spiritual children (John 4: 24).

At this point I am impelled to make the following remark: In our church work we often insist on being united in our prayers, because we feel certain that we will the more surely prevail with God. I can not conceive how the individuals of this whole world could be more compactly united in prayer with each other, and the whole of them, individually, with the Eternal Father in heaven, the Omnipotent God, and with Jesus Christ, who once proved himself a Champion in overcoming the world (John 16: 33), THE LORD OF LORDS, AND KING OF KINGS (Rev. 19: 33), and with the HOLY SPIRIT, our present World Comforter, and Reprover of its sins (John 16: 7-11) than by the general use of the Lord's Prayer.

Here I must say, that I am overawed by the thought of what might have been accomplished, had the whole world been faithful and persevering in praying the Lord's Prayer, long before the late "World War," or even during it, if such universal prayer service had not prevented it. This might have been possible, as we shall see, in our further exposition of the "Lord's Prayer."

"Hallowed be thy name." This obligates us to live truly devoted to him, and to manifest holy reverence for him among all men, that they may also glorify him (Matt. 5: 16). Really, we must live up to all the New Testament requirements, to hallow his name. This is not done by carnal warfare.

"Thy Kingdom come." This obligates us to do all we can to convert the world, to give the people life eternal,—not to kill them with carnal weapons. Then will God cause his Kingdom to come.

"Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." This obligates us to do his Will, here on earth, ourselves first. Then we should use every means of grace he has given us, through Jesus Christ, to make "all nations" do his will on earth, as all do his will in heaven,—not destroy the nations by the millions. That is not the way it is done in heaven.

"Give us this day our daily bread." This is an unselfish, neighborly petition. Notice that the Lord's Prayer is plural throughout. The first word is "our." In the four direct personal petitions are the words "us," "our," and "we." I am, therefore, not permitted to say: "Give me this day my daily bread," etc. Such would be my prayer,—not the Lord's Prayer," and, justly, he would not answer it. But if I pray the Father to give us this day our daily bread, I really pray as much for all others as I do for myself. Then I am under obligations to use all proper means to provide my own supplies, and by economy and good conservation I may be able to help the Lord give " daily bread " to all others, for whom the Lord commanded me to pray.

" And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." Just following the Lord's Prayer, Jesus names two very important conditions, that determine the answer to our prayer, every time we use it. If we have been forgiving others' trespasses, the Father will forgive us ours. If we have not forgiven others, and pray this prayer, we really pray the Father not to forgive us, because we pray him to do to us as we have been doing to others. Here, again, the frequent use of the Lord's Prayer will be a constant reminder of keeping within us, at all times, the spirit of forgiveness toward all others, that we may be sure that our Father in heaven will always forgive us.

" And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." We know, and our Father knows, that we are constantly exposed to some form of temptation, or are overtaken by some kind of evil, and that we constantly need his protecting presence.

Finally, let us review the practice of the Church of the Brethren in the use of the Lord's Prayer. Not many years ago it was quite unusual for any one to omit the use of the Lord's Prayer in the opening or closing devotions of any regular public service, or at any special service, as at baptism, self-examination, election of officers, ordination of ministers, etc. In this practice, the church in general was united. May I not say, It is still united in the same practice? General Conference, only, could change the practice, if a change were best, but she has not done so. Some brethren have taken upon themselves the responsibility of omitting the Lord's Prayer, contrary to the general practice of the church. To say the least of such a practice,—it disappoints all those in the assembly who have been accustomed to the use of the Lord's Prayer.

Years ago it was the general order, in the opening and closing prayer service for one to lead in prayer, and another to offer the Lord's Prayer. In those years, the Lord's Prayer was never omitted in the opening or closing prayer service. Now, since, for some years, it has been more customary for only one to pray, closing with the Lord's Prayer, he should remember that the only difference between himself and the rest of the assembly is the fact that he is the mouthpiece of the assembly, to express its present desires and needs, as best he can, including his own, to the Lord. Hence, under those conditions, it is important that the one who conducts the prayer service for an assembly, should close with the Lord's Prayer, as every one in the assembly has a right to expect. This will give the one praying the greater assurance of pleasing both the Lord and the assembly, and also avoid the unpleasant feeling of not having done his duty. Such a feeling detracts from the unanimity of an assembly prayer service. For my part, I should feel very uncomfortable, to conduct any assembly prayer service and purposely omit praying the Lord's Prayer. I would fear that I had not pleased the Lord, and disappointed many, —if not all,—in the assembly, who had expected to join with me, either audibly or silently, in the Lord's Prayer. In fact, to be plain about it, I consider the Lord's Prayer by far the best part of a prayer service. All should bear in mind, as said above, that the Lord's Prayer is intensely " plural " from beginning to end. It is, therefore, perfectly adapted to the use of an assembly prayer and should be so employed in both the opening and closing services of all assemblies, and in all other special prayer services.

And since we are commanded to " pray for all men," it is altogether proper to pray the Lord's Prayer in our private or closet devotions, especially because Jesus said: " Thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." The Lord's Prayer should also be used in family devotions, having the children exercising in the same, for, besides all else, it has a very good influence over them.

Once I heard of a man who made no profession of religion, but he always repeated the Lord's Prayer as his grace at the table. A friend of his, knowing that he made no religious profession, asked him why he so used the Lord's Prayer. He replied that he did it for the sake of the good influence it had over his children.

I remember my first experience with the Lord's Prayer at about the age of eight years. It was in a summer school,,while using McGuffey's Second Reader. This had in it the Lord's Prayer, in the form of poetry. The teacher asked each of us to get a declamation. My selection was the Lord's Prayer in my reader. This I memorized, and in due time I recited it. While it was not, word for word, as it is in Matt. 6, yet it had in it the same general meaning. I must say here, that this, my juvenile experience with the Lord's Prayer, made a lasting impression on me.. It filled me with solemnity, and brought to mind that it was from God in heaven, and that I must never, never trifle with it, or use it vainly. It also impressed me with the fact that I ought to pray this prayer daily, which I did, many times, before joining the church. One thing more. The use of the Lord's Prayer is always inspiring, if it is prayed slowly, thoughtfully, deliberately.

Millionaire Christians

BY GALEN B. ROYER

PLENTY of Christians think that if they possessed a million dollars, they would know just what to do with all of it,—what good they would do in the world! They do not appear to realize that Christians are the only people in the world who can not possibly live up their income. Strange,—is it not?—that with access to such an untold income some of them live like paupers at the king's gate.

Have you ever tried to survey and estimate the unworked mines of God's grace, tied up by just that one little word " all " in the Bible? " God is able to make ALL grace abound unto you; that ye, having always ALL sufficiency in everything [ALL things] may abound unto every good work " (2 Cor. 9: 8). " My God shall supply every [ALL] need of yours according to [not out of] his riches in glory in Christ Jesus" (Philpp. 4: 19).

What undeveloped wealth is assured, and yet many satisfy themselves with scratching the surface, here and there a little, and picking up just a bit of God's bounty. What treasures would open if, as Paul suggests (Col. 1: 10) they would go deeper into the knowledge of God, or strive to live up to the spirit of his words: " I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus," " that I may know him" (Philpp. 3: 3, 10). To " know him " is digging deep, not into cold philosophy and bewildering mysticism, as some do, but to lose our all, as we live in him.

Or think of the Christian's wealth as an uncounted deposit, made by the Father himself, in the Bank of Heaven, for the use of all his children. Jesus, his Son, has signed every check beforehand, with his own blood, and every child of his is invited most cordially to fill it in for his " every need." One may write in thousands of dollars as well as ten cents,—the price of a " sandwich." Why do we write in such small amounts when we long for riches? Why do we satisfy ourselves with living like paupers when we can live just like kings? Simply because every check, cashed at the Bank of Heaven, must have our individual endorsement on the back and so few of us have faith enough in the name of Christ to endorse for much.

The " OBTAINING promises ",(Heb. 11: 33) come by faith, are had only through deeds of valor like " subduing kingdoms " and stopping lions' mouths, as the whole of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews points out. Perhaps, too, many have not yet learned the lesson of believing which makes the promises come true in their lives. " Blessed is she that believed; for there shall be a fulfillment of the things which have been spoken to her from the Lord " (Luke 1: 45).

Faith grows only in the soil of obedience. Doing God's will opens to us the knowing of the doctrines (John 7: 17) and enjoying their riches. The green pastures of God's Word (Psa. 23: 2) look good, but some do not like to lie down and rest. They choose to be " anxious " about food and clothing (Matt. 6: 31), to plan for tomorrow or next year (James 4: 13), without resting all in the Lord. No wonder they doubt their salvation. They take pleasure in their planning, their " glorying is evil " (James 4: 16), and they can not and do not rest because they are never satisfied. The sheep of his pasture that lie down and rest, are satisfied. They have fed on the Word till they are full.

How strange that, instead of delightful peace and rest, some of us tramp around in sloughs of despondency, looking at the grime of our own mistakes and sins instead of looking at the precious promises which will guide us out on solid ground again. We shut ourselves up in the Castle of Doubt, and leave unused, even to becoming rusty, the keys to the promises of deliverance. We faint because we refuse to " believe to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living " (Psa. 27: 13).

So different from the possession of much of this world's goods, which usually leads to a complex life, complete trust in Christ will supply all our need and answer every longing of the heart and yet make our lives simple, powerful and free from every care. To know Abraham's God, " I am the Almighty God " (Gen. 17: 1), in the sense that man of faith understood the " All-sufficient One," meaning fullness of resources as well as unlimited power,—makes it joy fully possible to " walk before me, and be thou perfect." Then, instead of the world and time, God and eternity dominates our lives. The world's praise is lost sight of in the thought of the " Well done " of heaven. The fear of offending men is swallowed up by loving God and the unfailing guidance of the Holy Spirit. All we need we find in God, and so we can shut up or hide our lives in him.

Such riches bring rest, sweet rest,—not, necessarily, rest in the things about us, but " rest in the Lord." We may be in the midst of most annoying and perplexing circumstances. Every day may be cloudy, and every person a foe, but the Lord is with us, to keep us in all his ways. He is greater than any enemy, is stronger than any temptation and nearer than any trouble.

What incentives to walk by faith instead of sight,— to " lift up our eyes and behold the Captain of the Lord's host " (Josh. 5: 14) nearing in the hours of our need. Short-sighted people see only the troubles and sorrows about them, but " opened eyes " see guardian hosts (2 Kings 6: 17) and blessed deliverance (Gen. 21: 19). Jesus is always near us, sometimes " over against the treasury," looking on, but our eyes are so often holden (Luke 24: 16) and we see him not.

Millionaire Christians become paupers and are not permitted to " eat the good of the land," just as soon as they cease to obey (Isa. 1: 19). To receive the supply from heaven for all our needs, to be filled with power, accompanied with guidance, and shielded from harm, one must keep as close to the line of God's will, as the street car must not only keep on the track beneath, but in contact with the power line overhead. THERE IS NO OTHER WAY TO GO FORWARD WITH GOD.

Is it " almost impossible " to yield ourselves fully to the Father's will? Some liken the life of faith to pulling up stream against a strong current. True, the world, the flesh and the devil are a strong current downward, but the gentle wind of the Holy Spirit, so full of the " power of God," is a stronger current, an overcoming power, even the overcoming of the world through faith (1 John 5: 4). As we trust the winds of God and not our own ways, his strength supplements our weakness and we live, love and enjoy our progress in holiness and towards heaven (2 Cor. 13: 4).

Beloved, when you feel you are bankrupt in spirituality, still keep in touch with the will of God, rest in his power and soon it will be revealed that you are still a " multi-millionaire Christian."

Members Moving to the City

BY A. L. H. MARTIN

THE city has its fascinations, not only from an industrial and social point of view, but from a religious standpoint as well.

Some one has said that the church is composed of three different kinds of members,—workers, jerkers and shirkers. These three classes are, perhaps, more noticeable in our cities than in our rural communities.

A worker moves to the city and wants his life to tell for "Christ and the church." Accordingly he starts out on the search for the Brethren church, only knowing that there is one or more congregations in the city. He does not know the location of the church, and so he continues to search and search until he gets the desired information. Soon he will enjoy the association and fellowship with those of like precious faith.

The other two classes may be in the city for months, and sometimes for years, before the pastor or some of his faithful workers incidentally happen to meet them. In the course of the conversation these tardy ones reluctantly reveal their identity as members of the Church of the Brethren. These poor, lean souls are really to be pitied. Next comes the supreme effort to get them started toward the place of public worship. Sometimes we are successful to accomplish a speedy return to the services. At other times it is a difficult task, but God's grace is sufficient to renew the attack. As a general rule, victory for the right will eventually be the result.

We hear some say: "Well, I am ashamed of myself that I did not get to public worship before this." You can not blame such for being ashamed of their negligence. Who would not be?

Perhaps it would be a good plan if members, before leaving their home congregations, to take up their abode in the city, would go to their elder or pastor in charge, and state their intentions, asking the official to direct them to the congregation of the Church of the Brethren in the city. Let the official notify the pastor of the city church as follows:

Brother ———— and family have moved to your city, and they are located at No. ——, ———— Street. Will you kindly, at your earliest convenience, call on them, and welcome them in your midst? Their church letters will be forwarded to you at an early date. We thank you in advance for exercising your pastoral care over them for their spiritual, moral and physical development.

Signed, ...

Now, when such an interest is manifested in behalf of members moving to the city, you may rest assured that such members will be called upon within thirty days, yes, within one week, after the city workers are notified of the new members' arrival.

Let us try out this little suggestion for 1919, at the beginning of the great "Forward Movement" by the Church of the Brethren! By the grace of God, let each one of us redouble his efforts, year after year, so that, at the close of the fifth year, the church may have reached the goal, and may have gone even beyond it.

Let every member of the church first find his Pentecost! Then, and then only, can all go forth in the field to work with Pentecostal power. Let all be directed by our great Commander-in-chief,—the Lord Jesus Christ! Then his Spirit will help us to go "over the top" of the hard places. A religious awakening in the city of Baltimore is manifesting itself in at least a small degree.

A good way to acquaint yourself with the location of our city churches, is to take the first ten cent piece you earn, enclose it securely within an envelope, and send it to the Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Ill., so that you may receive, by return mail, a copy of the 1919 Year Book. Then acquaint yourself with its contents. You will soon find the place of worship in any city where the Brethren are having services. The location of our churches in Baltimore, Md., is as follows: Woodberry, West Thirty-sixth and Poole Streets, F. D. Anthony, pastor; Fulton Avenue, 1506 North Fulton Avenue, the writer, pastor.

Fellowship

BY JOHN M. STOVER

"If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8: 9).

FELLOWSHIP means loving, enjoying, hoping for, and enduring the same things. It is really the proper socialistic idea, as found in the fourth and fifth chapters of the Acts, and as exemplified by the Roycrofters of the present age. The finest example of socialism the world ever saw was that of the early church, as recorded by Luke in the chapters mentioned above. These ideal conditions were undoubtedly best for the individuals, but they would not reach out and help the other fellow. So God had to break up the first real organization of socialists, that the Gospel might be spread.

Jesus had told the disciples to tarry in Jerusalem only until they were endued with power from on high, and so, enjoying what was, perhaps, the most nearly ideal condition the church has ever experienced, they forgot the "Go ye therefore," of their Lord, and gave up themselves to the enjoyment of these blessed privileges.

By the cruel hand of persecution they were scattered, but it was like scattering coals of fire in dry grass. Wherever one of these enthusiasts was tossed, by the rigor of the persecution which searched them out, soon a small circle of believers was found. Thus the new religion was soon scattered far and wide.

When the communistic spirit or circle had been broken up, there was grave danger of going to the other extreme, and it is this danger that the church has had to fight through all the twenty centuries of modern times. The loving disciple John spent his life combating this peril. The burden of his message,—whether he wrote or preached,—was: "Little children, love one another." He well understood that love is the basic principle of Christianity,—the first and the only true socialism,—and he also knew that the church is its visible expression.

With our diversified interests in life it is absolutely necessary that we have something to bring us in loving touch with each other and with God the Father, the Author of our divine nature.

The world, today, is boasting about its wonderful discovery of the "Brotherhood of Man." Indeed, it is a wonderful problem. Even those who do not believe in Divinity as a first and great underlying cause, are interested. True, we have much in common, and we should have more. This is the key to the problem,—the great brotherhood of man.

Let us reason a little. The term brotherhood is significant and implies common origin; interests, desires, hopes, etc. The best illustration I can think of is an earthly family. As long as we were boys and girls, in father's house, we had common interests and desires. How we loved each other and the dear father and mother! Now we are scattered to the four winds of the earth, but sweet memories are still ours.

"Oft in the stilly night
Ere slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond memory brings the light
Of other days around me:
The smiles, the tears
Of boyhood's years,
The words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shone
Now dimmed and gone,
The cheerful hearts now broken."

"Home, dear home, I never can forget,
Friends, dear friends, that linger round me yet.
Worn by care and torn by grief,
Home has afforded us a sweet relief.
Tender memories around me twine,
Like the ivy, green, around the pine.
Over land and sea we may roam,
Still will we cherish thee,—our dear old home."

So I wonder that the thinkers and philosophers, and preachers even, of this enlightened age, would spend so much time teaching about the brotherhood of man and almost lose sight of the infinitely greater Fatherhood of God. How can we be brethren without a common father,—speaking either naturally or spiritually?

What a splendid plan has been worked out for us! God, the Father; the church, the family; and we, the brethren, with the dear Lord as Elder Brother. The plan was ample,—simple enough to be understood by a child, and splendid,—but, the church dismally failed in some phases of her duties. Cold selfishness reigned instead of love. Too often the spirit is this: "Oh, Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, —us four and no more."

So men instituted other bonds of fellowship whose fruit is found in the modern lodge. I do not wish to discuss the lodge, only as it affects this question of fellowship or Christian socialism.

Once a man asked me the question, "What do you think of the Masonic Lodge?"

I answered: "My friend, I have no use for it, because it rejects Christ."

The gentleman's answer was: "Christ is accepted by the Lodge as a Prophet, but not as the Redeemer."

Let us concede that he told the truth. Now apply our text: "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

If the church had lived up to her duties and privileges and the teachings of her Master, we would not have these substitutes to contend with. At least we would not be pained by the brazen effrontery with which they point the finger of scorn at the church, and then complacently call our attention to their so-called "charities."

The ideal church has all the requirements of Christian socialism,—a common Father, home, interests and hopes, not only for this life but also for eternity.

How shall we judge men? By our text. Have they the Spirit of Christ? What is the Spirit of Christ? "Having loved his own he loved them until the end." "While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

Love for my brother. Yes, I must love my brother. I may not always agree with him, but I must love him! "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another."

Good Friday

One Way of Observing It

BY G. W. KIEFFABER

SOME years ago, while doing post-graduate study at Stanford University, I was surprised, a few days before Easter, to see window-cards in stores in Palo Alto, which read as follows: "This store will be closed on Friday from 2 to 4 P. M."

When Friday came, schools were closed, and in the afternoon, at the hours named, business was suspended. At two o'clock the church bells began tolling. Union services were held in the Presybterian church. After the singing of hymns,—each portraying the death of Jesus on the cross,—prayer followed. Seven short addresses were then given by as many ministers, each taking as his basis one of the seven statements of Jesus from the cross. Following fervent prayer, the service closed. I left the church and walked up the street to the business section of the city. The stores were still closed and the streets were quiet.

This experience was vividly brought back to my mind a few days ago, when the news was flashed around the world that Theodore Roosevelt was dead. Flags were dropped to half-mast,—that was military honor,—but note the respect when, at the time of the funeral, twenty-three million boys and girls in the public schools and universities of America stopped their work, and from two to ten minutes sat in silence with bowed head. A nation paused to pay tribute to a fellow-citizen.

Might it not be well to pause at least two minutes, at three o'clock on Good Friday,—not to honor a fellow-citizen but a World Redeemer? Well may we reflect on a lost world,—a breathless darkness hovering over the earth, a Calvary, a bleeding Savior, a dying Lord. Would not such a pause bring us nearer the feet of our Jesus?

A few might be willing to assemble at God's house and bow in deep reverence, commemorative of the One who bowed on Calvary.

Easter Sunday is a day of rejoicing,—exultation, joy, triumph. Good Friday is primarily a day of awe, reverence, devotion. Thus far it has received small recognition in our church calendar.

"Nearer the cross, nearer the cross,
Nearer the cross of Jesus,
Nearer the flowing fountain
That cleanseth me."

THE ROUND TABLE

Scourging for Sin

BY LEANDER SMITH

"For the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6: 23)

Surely God is scourging the world for its sins. With the close of the world's bloodiest war comes the dreadful epidemic. The influenza plague has cost America more lives than the terrible war. We fear that America has not yet had enough to bring her to penitence.

Should our citizens avail themselves of the opportunity of winning the world by righteous living, the future of our nation will be great and glorious. Should we fail in this, we will become a laughing-stock for the whole world, and perhaps incur greater punishment for our sins.

We believe it the manifest destiny of America to lead in the preaching and the exemplification of the Gospel of Christ. God help us to know the day of our visitation, and to avail ourselves of an opportunity that will never come again! It is a day of democracy, and should be a day of righteousness.

The Social Gospel

A RECENT SERMON BY M. CLYDE HORST

This is not "Another Gospel." Such expressions as "Social Gospel," and "Whole Gospel," merely signify a fuller obedience to the teachings of the Gospel. Few persons, if any, are yet sufficiently apostolic to give full expression to the faith "once for all" delivered.

There are two great commandments: "Love the Lord with all thine heart," and "Love thy neighbor as thyself." The first of these must not be neglected, for without individual salvation there can be no real social betterment. But obedience to the first inevitably causes faithfulness to the second. If one is not right with man, how can be be right with God?

There is a "Gospel of the Kingdom." It is not necessary to reject sane teaching concerning Christ's future Kingdom, in contending for the social expression of his present kingdom. Neither is it necessary to ignore present social obligations in the reception of the plain teachings concerning the future Kingdom.

The Christian has a social obligation. What else can it mean to follow such an one as Jesus, who "went about doing good." Conversion means taking up the cross, and acquiring the mind of Christ. Our church ordinances,—especially feet-washing, the Lord's supper, and the communion,—express our social obligation symbolically. If these ideals were made concrete in modern social life, what a change would take place! We would have not only charity, but justice!

A plea for the "Whole Gospel," surely ought to include emphasis upon "the other half." We have a grand opportunity, and a big responsibility in the present crisis, for the only real salvation from "the red flag" is to increase the number who express the conviction in all they do, that they are "saved to serve."

The Real Message of Mercy

BY WILBUR K. McKEE

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people," were the words of Jehovah to his prophet many years ago, and very thankful we are that it is the wonderful mission of God's servants to bring the message of love and mercy to the people of his kingdom. But many ministers of the present day are seemingly losing sight of that little pronoun my, and so are interpreting their orders as universally applicable. They are seeking earnestly to bring comfort to those who have never claimed a membership in the Kingdom. Sinners are gently and kindly patted on the back, and entreated soothingly to come into the church of God, "just to help along and to enjoy the blessings of Christian fellowship." "God is merciful and loving," they are told, "and of course he is too kind a Father to demand escape from a dreadful punishment, but what a favor will be conferred on him and on the church by those who consent to join his ranks and profess his name!"

Elijah, in his discouragement, was taken up into Mount Sinai and there God came unto him, not in the windstorm, not in the earthquake, nor yet in the fire, but in a quiet, gentle voice. We are told that he was thus rebuked for his desire to use forcible means of cleansing the land from idolatry; but what is the message that the still small voice brings? Anoint Hazael and Jehu and Elisha to slay the worshipers of Baal, and then shall the mercy of God be shown to those who have not bowed the knee to Baal. Punish the ones who have rejected Jehovah and then and only then will mercy be given its proper place. All through the Old Testament appear incidents like this, where the awfulness of punishment for sin is the necessary background for the inexpressible mercy of the Father. The New Testament continues the message, showing how great the mercy of God has been in his offer of free salvation.

All of this recent preaching to the contrary, and all the recent teaching as to the absence of necessity for salvation from a terrible punishment notwithstanding, we dare not lose sight of the one great fact that Christ came to save from sin and its consequences. He came to reach down into a dark, foul, death-dealing pool, and to lift men out from that pool into the glory of the saved life. He did not come to give men swimming lessons, that the stay in the pool might be the more enjoyed. God grant that we, as ministers of his Word, may not forget to emphasize, in our preaching, the magnitude of the real mercy that has been shown in the Gift of Salvation through Jesus Christ from the punishment that is our due.

The Parable of the Vine.—John 15: 1-8

BY R. H. MILLER

There are two ideas in the "Parable of the Vine,"—one is "fruit-bearing," the other is "purging." Jesus defines them both.

Fruit-bearing is the form in which the branch expresses the life of the vine. Christian fruit-bearing is the form in which the Christian expresses the indwelling Christ-life. Now the Christ-life, when it was enfolded in the flesh, some nineteen hundred years ago, expressed itself in self-sacrificing service. And this same life, enfolded in the Christian, will express itself in the very same way. Fruit-bearing is service.

And what is purging? Purging is what God does to us, in order that we may be more responsive and effective as mediums for the expression of the Christ-life. It is God's act, by which he frees us of those things which obstruct this expression. It is God tuning his harp. His harp is the Christian.

And what is the means whereby he purges? It is his truth. Note the result of this impartation of truth. The one who receives this truth becomes more effective as a medium for the expression of the life of Christ in service. The acquisition of truth is in the highest degree practical. Observe the order here: Reception of the truth, expressing the Christ-life in service. The end of truth is service.

Now purging consists of the impartation of truth. Purging is also conditioned on fruit-bearing, or service. So we can say that our acquisition of truth is conditioned on service. This is the point: We shall acquire the truth only if we serve. The acquisition of truth is our highest good. And it is conditioned on this,—that we seek, in self-sacrificing service, the good of others. Selfishness forever bars us from learning. It is the forerunner of failure. Fear it as you would a plague. But serve and you shall know. The end of service is truth.

Now in the text we have these two interacting phases: Fruit-bearing, which invites God's purging. The end of this is more fruit-bearing, which again invites further purging, etc., etc. Now allow a substitution of terms, which may serve to make the meaning a little more clear. Thus we have service,—in which we express the life of Christ,—inviting the impartation of truth to us, the end of which is better service, in which the life of Christ is more accurately and completely expressed. This again invites the impartation of greater truth, etc., etc. Or, in other words, there are two parallel developments,—an ever-enlarging store of truth by virtue of our service; and, on the other hand, an ever-growing service, in which the life of Christ is more and more accurately expressed, by reason of our increasing store of truth.

What is the end of that process? If it has an end, it is this: A being so purged by the truth of God that the indwelling life of God is perfectly expressed in what he does. He shall be like him then. There is nothing external or liable to destruction in the bliss of such a state. It is heaven. It is eternal life. And here and now it may become more and more our own.

The Survival of the Fittest in Hymns and Music

BY WM. BEERY

Only that which is fit to live will endure. The unfit, the unworthy, even the bad, may prevail for a season, but must, sooner or later, take its place among the forgotten.

It is common knowledge that many of the selections found in books used in places of worship, are short-lived. The answer to the reason why is couched in the homely but meaningful expression: "There's nothing to it." They come to the surface as a bubble, perhaps graceful in form and brilliant in color, and for a while give a certain kind of pleasurable feeling to the minds (not souls) of men, but owing to a lack of substance for soul-food they are soon abandoned. They are not fit,—they do not satisfy soul-hunger.

Other hymns there are which come from the soul and therefore touch the soul, nourish it and cause it to grow in strength and "mount up with wings as eagles." Such may be side-tracked for a while, to make room for the lighter and seemingly better suited to the times; but in all collections of any pretensions to fitness for the Lord's house, they have a place, though often in a "small corner." They are used, too, when something really worshipful is desired. They have not, like the unfit, vanished, because they are full of the Truth,—they are "alive forevermore." They will live as long as time lasts, and in heaven they will be the only kind that shall float on the heavenly breezes. Which ought we to learn to enjoy in this world?

"Just Little Things"

BY PERNIE HYLTON FAW

A little three-year-old child, in one of our southern cities, where the "War Angelus" was observed, was taught to pray each evening at seven o'clock. It happened that one evening she was on the street as the bells rang for prayer. She stopped, bowed her little head and offered the prayer she had been taught. A man who was not in the habit of praying saw her, and it so impressed him that he said: "Hereafter I will pray." A little child had led him.

A handful of rushes, a lump of pitch, a bit of mud, a little girl, a maiden's bath and a baby's tears saved a leader for the Jews. How important the little things of life become, the moment God takes them in hand!

Henry Ward Beecher came within one vote of being elected superintendent of a railway. If he had had that vote, America would probably have lost one of its greatest preachers. What a little thing fixes destiny!

The absence of a comma in a bill, which passed through Congress years ago, cost our Government a million dollars. A single misspelled word prevented a deserving young man from obtaining a situation as instructor in a New England College.

Among the lofty Alps, it is said, the guides sometimes demand absolute silence, lest the vibration of the voice bring down an avalanche.

A poor boy applied for a position in a bank in Paris, but was refused. As he left the door, he picked up a pin. The bank president saw this, called him back, and gave him the position, from which he rose until he became the richest banker in Paris.

A Massachusetts soldier in the Civil War observed a bird hulling rice, and shot it. Taking its bill as a model, he invented a hulling machine which has revolutionized the rice business. There are moments in history which balance years of ordinary life.

Small things become great when a great soul sees them. We may not do what will seem to us a great work, and yet, in the plan of God, it may turn out to be just as important as anything the greatest man has done.

Many an honorable career has resulted from a kind word spoken at the proper time, or the warm grasp of a friendly hand.

Only a thought in passing,—
A smile, or encouraging word,
Has lifted many a burden
No other gift could have stirred.

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE FORWARD MOVEMENT

The immense proportions of the war, and all the industries that have grown up in connection with the war, are a challenge to religious and educational leaders to see larger visions and set for themselves larger tasks. The call for quick and extended activity in all constructive religious, social and educational work, is imperative.

The General Boards of the church are awake to the needs of the hour. In response to the call of the General Educational Board, Mount Morris College has outlined for itself a Forward Movement. The Board of Trustees met Feb. 13 and adopted a program which will mark the beginning of a new era in the history of the institution.

In the first place, Dr. L. S. Shively, who has been the acting president during the past year, was duly elected president of the college. Dr. Shively is no novice. He has had a number of years of successful experience as a teacher in the college. Every one who knows him,—patrons of the school, students and associate teachers,—knows him only to love him because of his genial disposition and scholarly attainments. When the trustees elected Dr. Shively as president, they took a long step in the Forward Movement.

In the second place, the Board of Trustees have heard the loud call that is coming from all quarters of the Brotherhood for pastors,—men trained as organizers and leaders,—to take charge of country and village churches. The demand for men in this sphere of church work never before was so great. Plans have been made for enlarging and equipping the Bible Department of the college, whereby the demands of the church for trained pastors and Sunday-school teachers may be more adequately met.

Agriculture is the predominant occupation of the members of the Church of the Brethren, and is closely linked with the work of the pastor in the country Districts. The plans are to develop the Agricultural Department to meet the growing demands, not only for scientific farming and dairying, but for pastors who are skilled in community building.

Normal Training, Music, Domestic Science and Manual Training received their share of consideration by the trustees. As rapidly as possible, these departments will be enlarged and equipped with teachers and apparatus.

Last, but not least, the General Educational Board's proposal,—that the school increase its endowment at the rate of $30,000 per year, was enthusiastically adopted by the trustee body. They are planning to begin at once, to reach even beyond that goal.

We solicit the coöperation of all the patrons and friends of Mount Morris College in this Forward Movement.

Mt. Morris, Ill. M. W. Emmert.

MUSCATINE, IOWA

Our work here is moving forward right well. We received two splendid members last Sunday by letter,—a young man and his wife. We expect them to add materially to our working force. Our Sunday-school and church attendance has increased.

There can be no question that there is advantage and power in concerted action. This is true in almost every line of effort, and especially true in spiritual things. In this regard we have been impressed with the fact that it might be the part of wisdom to have simultaneous meetings with many of our churches. If only a fractional number of our churches would set a date upon which they would begin a series of meetings, it would, we believe, be a great spiritual momentum.

Owing to the ban placed upon public meetings, we have suffered great spiritual loss. Indeed, the financial losses have not been comparable to our spiritual losses. Some of our ministers have told us that it would take months to regain what their churches have lost by the suspension of services. This is but natural, and just what was to be expected.

In addition to our losses by the influenza ban, our backsliding has been aggravated by unparalleled financial prosperity. Our spiritual vision has been contracted by cash. The very thing that should have served to make us humble and zealous, has made many ungrateful and indifferent.

The return of our soldiers presents a field and an opportunity that we cannot afford to ignore. It is worse than foolish to prate about the war making men religious. The history of all wars disproves such a theory. War does not contribute to the growth of grace, but usually hardens the heart. Victory in war,—so far as we have been informed,—has never led to a great revival. We must look to another source for our spiritual victories.

In our judgment, there has never been a greater need for a real revival of the old-time religion. It is the one essential of the work in which we are engaged. As we see it, a great evangelistic campaign is needed to recuperate our spiritual losses and give us power to press forward in the work of the Kingdom.

Let us, one and all, pray that God may heal all our backslidings, and bring to our people the greatest awakening we have ever known. Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty and power and victory. Let us all labor for a "Greater Church of the Brethren."

GOODNESS AND GRATITUDE

Goodness issues from God, since God alone is good. God's goodness is reflected through his manifold acts of kindness, and he often works through the instrumentality of his children. Surely, man can not be otherwise than thankful for all favors thus bestowed.

Just a few weeks ago Bro. D. L. Miller, through the kindness of his great heart, urged our members to purchase the remaining copies of our "Open Way into the Book of Revelation." This was a greatly appreciated act of courtesy on his part and also an opportunity for many. The Publishing House then opened the door of opportunity on this matter, which also was greatly appreciated. Ere long the readers of the "Messenger" had eagerly bought 389 copies,—the remainder of the edition.

All this has aroused our deepest thankfulness. We pray that all may be abundantly blessed by finding some helpful spiritual truth in the book. Thus goodness and gratitude are fitly joined. We also thank Bro. Arnold for his prompt remittance. All this was done within thirty days. We honestly believe that God's hand was in it.

After reading the book, will each purchaser kindly write us a card? M. M. and Salome A. Eshelman.

THE SPECIAL BIBLE INSTITUTE OF HEBRON SEMINARY

Our arrangements for the Special Bible Institute were not interrupted by health conditions, and according to arrangement, the Institute opened on Monday, Jan. 27, and continued until Feb. 2.

The weather was ideal, and the roads were in good condition. The attendance was good, and grew better as the Institute progressed. To see so many autos and buggies on the Seminary grounds, gave one the impression that the school was the place of central interest for this community, and also for surrounding churches.

Eld. A. C. Wieand, president of Bethany Bible School, Chicago, taught two periods daily on "The Sermon on the Mount." In the afternoon he taught "The First Epistle of John" and also gave some work in "Selected Chapter Studies" and in the "Psalms." His work was greatly blessed and has been helpful to all.

Besides his teaching, Bro. Wieand gave us seven sermons and lectures. The first was in our Chapel service on Monday, when he spoke on "The Rich Young Ruler." In this talk he gripped the students and inspired them with a desire for efficiency, and showed that it may be had by paying the price. On Monday night he preached on Wisdom, and on Wednesday night he spoke on "Agreement in Prayer." This was a strong message and came in the power of the Spirit. It has already borne fruit in the prayer-life of a number.

Saturday afternoon his theme was "Education." We were shown what real education is and also its value. We were convinced that we have a responsibility toward the schools of the church. A number pledged goodly sums for the endowment of the Seminary.

Saturday night Bro. Wieand related thrilling experiences as a captive of the Bedouin Arabs. While this lecture proved intensely interesting, we were strongly impressed with the great truth that "the Lord is a very present help in time of trouble" to them that fear him.

On Sunday morning his theme was "Missions." He showed us what the great world-task of the church is, and we were made to realize that the church has not really taken its task seriously, nor has it made an estimate as to its proportions. In the afternoon the volunteer band of the school rendered a program, which proved interesting and helpful. On Sunday night Bro. Wieand spoke on "Christian Friendship and the Friendship of Jesus." This was an inspiring and helpful address. We were pointed to Jesus as the ideal Friend, and were led to feel that to make friends with him, and to follow his example, results in the joy of true friendship.

Other speakers came in just for a lecture or two. This added variety and also brought us more helpful messages. Bro. D. M. Glick, of Trevilian, Virginia, gave a lecture on "Congregational Singing," and on Wednesday, Sister Mabel Pence, our teacher of music, spoke on "Church Music." These lectures were both interesting and valuable, as these teachers know the power of music, and they also know how to wield it for the cause of the Kingdom.

Another helpful feature of Monday was a lecture by Bro. B. F. Summer on "The World Task of the Church." Bro. Summer, with all his heart and soul, is in the mission

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation.

Reflecting Christ in All We Do and Say

2 Corinthians 4 : 10

For Week Beginning March 16, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) The Origin of our light, "God hath shined in" (verse 6). (2) "The light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." This light must do its allotted work in us. (3) The purpose: "That it might be made manifest." (a) Conscious influence. (b) Unconscious influence.

2. Christlikeness the Believer's Highest Ideal.—A patterning after Christ, in all his exalted characteristics, is the goal toward which the believer must press from day to day. It is the one standard which the true Christ-lover will ever set before him, nor will he be content unless he is continually realizing greater degrees of approximation to it. It is the one thing in earth and heaven most worthy of effort. To have an insatiable thirst for it, to be ever on the stretch after it, is our only permissible attitude. This is the most important study. This is the finest of the fine arts. This is the main work of life. This is our chief task,—to take the natural elements of our character, and, by bringing them into close, permanent contact with Jesus, get them so purified and mellowed, so ennobled and glorified, that the grossness and dross shall depart, while the excellence remains.

3. Our Christianity Must Glorify the Everyday Tasks.—Possibly the surest test of the reality of our consecration will be found in its relation to our common, everyday life, to which a greater portion of our time must be given in secular affairs and duties. We are too apt to make our Christianity merely a highly spiritual and ethereal thing, confined to church meetings and so-called sacred services. It will be conceded by every keen observer that the Christ-life in the home, or in the business place, or any other scene of activity, is more thoroughly tried than in a prayer meeting or in a revival. It is in the busy marts of trade, where kindness, patience and unselfishness will have the best chance to show their efficacy. If our consecration cannot measure up to these tests, there are no other opportunities by which we can prove our adequacy for the task.

4. Serve One Another.—The Son of Man came not to be served, but to serve, and to give his life. So he that would reflect Christ in all he does and says, must be the servant of all. Paul gloried in this, that he "made himself servant unto all, that he might gain the more." The service of each member, when volunteered for "Christ's sake," is given for the good of the whole body,—not otherwise.

5. Pray and Labor for One Another.—As Christians, we may differ in some things, but surely we may all agree in this, that for Christ's sake we will pray for one another. For his sake we must labor patiently, and bear with one another. The secret of perseverance and victory lies in doing all as unto him. The work given us to do is his work, and must be done in his name, and for his sake. We must labor patiently, therefore, for the salvation of the lost, and the sanctification of the saved. "Consider him . . . lest ye be weary and faint in your minds."

6. Suggestive References.—Christians as light-bearers (2 Cor. 4 : 6-11). Work while it is day (John 9 : 4). Seek to excel in edifying (1 Cor. 14 : 12). Steadfast, immovable, abounding (1 Cor. 15 : 58). Godly sorrow results in betterment (2 Cor. 7 : 11). Commendable zeal (Gal. 4 : 18). The reaping time will come (Gal. 6 : 9). Walk circumspectly (Eph. 5 : 15). Put on the armor (Eph. 6 : 14-20). Blameless and harmless (Philpp. 2 : 15). Press forward (Philpp. 3 : 13, 14).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 9

Sunday-school Lesson, Joshua, Patriot and Leader.—Joshua 1: 1-9.

Christian Workers' Meeting. Our Personal Influence.—Matt. 5: 16.

MEETINGS IN PROGRESS

Bro. G. L. Wine, of Polo, Ill., in the Mt. Morris church, same State.

Bro. Roy S. Mishler, of Kewanna, Ind., in the Walton church, same State.

Bro. Van B. Wright, of Peebles, Ohio, in the Brookville church, same State.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. H. B. Yoder, of Lancaster, Pa., to begin May 3, in the Akron church, same State.

Bro. J. C. Inman, pastor of First Church, Springfield, Ohio, to begin in his home congregation March 16.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

Four were recently baptized at Rocky Ford, Colo.

Twelve were recently baptized in the Pittsburgh church, Pa.

Three were recently baptized in the Pleasant Hill church, Ohio.

One was recently restored in the Armourdale Mission, Kansas City, Kans.

Four,—making eleven since Jan. 1,—have been baptized in the Hollidaysburg church, Pa.

One was baptized at Mariou, Ohio,—Bro. J. L. Guthrie, of Upper Sandusky, same State, evangelist.

Two were baptized at West Milton, Ohio,—Bro. J. W. Norris, of North Manchester, Ind., evangelist.

One accepted Christ in the Kewanna church, Ind.,—Bro. Geo. E. Swihart, of Roann, same State, evangelist.

Twenty-one accepted Christ in the Mississinewa congregation, Ind.,—Bro. D. R. McFadden, of Smithville, Ohio, evangelist.

Six stood for Christ at the Mt. Hope house, in the Chickies church, Pa.,—Bro. Thos. Patrick, of Penbrook, same State, evangelist.

Eight were baptized and one reclaimed in the Pleasant Valley church, Ind.,—Bro. Walter Gibson, of Goshen, same State, evangelist.

Twenty-two were baptized, one awaits baptism and two were reclaimed in the Little Swatara church, Pa.,—Eld. Rufus Bucher, of Quarryville, same State, evangelist.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. Jeremiah Barnhart, late of Delphi, Ind., changes his address to Pyrmont, same State.

Bro. Chas. C. Cripe, whose former address was North Liberty, Ind., should now be addressed at Bremen, same State.

Eld. P. J. Blough has changed his residence from Hooversville to 735 Grove Avenue, Johnstown, Pa., and his correspondents will please note his new address.

Meetings of the General Sunday School Board and of the Becker Bicentennial Committee are scheduled for this week at the Publishing House. As this is written, the members of the last named,—Brethren H. C. Early, H. K. Ober and J. H. Morris,—have arrived and are now in session. The completed Bicentennial program will likely be ready for publication at an early date.

Bro. Hiram Forney, of 555 West Lincoln Avenue, Goshen, Ind., writes us that his address is erroneously given, in the 1919 Yearbook, as being Thomas, Okla. Just why some one instructed us to make the change, we do not know. We trust, however, that all of Bro. Forney's correspondents will turn to their copy of the Yearbook and enter the correction named, for their guidance in the future.

Bro. A. J. Culler spent a day at Elgin last week in further conference with the committee on relief and reconstruction plans. He was accompanied by his wife and children, who are planning to spend some months with Sister Culler's mother, near Tyrone, Pa. Bro. Culler has arranged to sail for the East March 15, in company with Bro. J. E. Miller and the other Sunday-school leaders, whose proposed trip was explained in our issue of two weeks ago.

Bro. Quincy A. Holsopple changes his address from Elgin, Ill., to Penn Run, Pa. Since the return of Brother and Sister Holsopple from the India field, the former has been one of our Publishing House workers. Regretting to lose them here, we wish them success in their new field of labor. They are accompanied on their removal journey by Sister Holsopple's mother, Sister Galen B. Royer, of Huntingdon, Pa., who has been spending some days at Elgin, making final disposition of household goods.

Our sympathies go out to Eld. Jacob Funk, pastor of the Wiley church, Colo., whose wife died Feb. 27, after an illness of but one week. Sister Funk was a victim of pneumonia, following influenza.

In our last issue we stated that the meeting at Covina, Cal., by Bro. D. L. Miller, which began March 2, was to be the last before the return of Brother and Sister Miller to the East. We are now informed that a meeting in Los Angeles is also on the program.

Bro. J. Homer Bright, our China missionary, now in the homeland, is spending some time in Chicago in architectural studies in preparation for his special work on the China field. He is also taking several courses in Bethany Bible School. Last Sunday he and Sister Bright ministered most acceptably to the Elgin congregation, the former in the morning and the latter at the evening service.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Churches in the District of Southern Virginia will please note Bro. J. F. Robertson's announcement among the Notes, and help him along the line indicated.

Members of Middle Pennsylvania are invited to give special attention to Sister Ella J. Brumbaugh's communication among the Notes. She presents an opportunity for real helpfulness that should not be missed.

The District Meeting of Northwestern Ohio is to convene in the Pleasant View church, Allen County, March 18 to 20. Full particulars as to transportation arrangements, etc., are given by Sister Ada Miller among the Notes.

The La Verne church, Cal., has worked out a systematic plan of bringing about greater congregational efficiency. Turn to the note from that place and study the method proposed. Perhaps it may be adaptable to the needs of your congregation, and prove of decided value. At any rate, it is worthy of careful consideration.

MISCELLANEOUS

The District Meeting of Southeastern Kansas, which was postponed from the date originally assigned, is to be held May 6 to 8 in the Osage church, McCune, Kans.

The Franklin County church, Iowa, recently raised $351.42 for the famine sufferers of India,—truly a creditable offering. We trust that all of our churches will fall in line with equally ample contributions, attending to this most urgent matter at their earliest convenience.

The pastor's personal message in the new directory of the West Johnstown congregation, Pa., contains many pertinent observations from which we glean the following: "The number of subscriptions to the 'Gospel Messenger' has been considerably increased over the previous year. This excellent religious paper should be a welcome visitor each week in every home in our congregation. You need it to keep informed on the forward movements of the church. It will give you inspiration and vision for your own work." Thank you, Bro. Detwiler.

"The Reminder" is the suggestive name of a folder which Bro. H. M. Brubaker, the pastor of the Smith Fork church, Plattsburg, Mo., has distributed among the members of his congregation, and it must have reminded them forcibly of the important matters mentioned and briefly discussed. Naturally special attention is given to the "Forward Movement." We are especially struck with this pertinent question: "Isn't this a great time of the world in which to live?" It surely is. And it is especially great for you and me because it happens to be the time in which we are living.

One of our correspondents makes this significant remark: "In addition to our losses by reason of the influenza ban, our backsliding has been aggravated by the unparalleled financial prosperity." The latter part of that statement might serve as the theme of a most profitable discourse, in at least some parts of our Brotherhood. However, the situation referred to is by no means peculiar to modern times. Here is the criticism that was launched against a congregation, similarly situated, in the early days of Christianity: "Because thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; . . . I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich." Might it not be well, in these days of great prosperity,—especially as experienced in the rural regions,—to remember the solemn warning of the revelator, and particularly the part that refers to the securing of "gold tried in the fire," by which we may become truly rich?

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

Sound the Triumphant Note in the Prayer Meeting.—Nothing else so touches the prayer meeting for the highest and best, as getting the hopeful, the optimistic, the jubilant strain into it. Too many of the meetings are dyspeptic. They need more of the things that appeal to active men. The leader should have more of the straightforward, manly incisiveness of the business world,—more of the smiling-faced courage and optimism of the man of achievement. The real trouble with the prayer meeting is not that it IS decadent, but that we THINK it is decadent. It is our attitude that is fatal. The hopeful, confident, joyous tone should be infused into the prayer meeting in every way possible. It is the very tonic the world needs,—the most attractive element in our religion. If we have any influence for good over others, it will never come from being austere and strait-laced, but by the cheerful, triumphant key-note of our lives.

Blessings Multiplied Through Sharing.—We often pray God to do something for others when he has already confided to our hands the means to administer to their needs,—helping them as well as ourselves. Might it not be well to remember that one of the requisites of real prayer is our willingness to enter into fellowship with the Lord, in bringing about the results we desire? There is no real genuineness to any prayer for the help of a needy neighbor, when the one who prays it has abundant means to relieve his neighbor's distress, and yet will not do it. So, too, there is no real genuineness in your prayer for the conversion of your friend, or for the saving of some lost sinner, when you yourself are unwilling to speak to him or bring to him, by your own testimony, the knowledge of Christ's great love.

Church Difficulties.—It may not be generally known to our people that the settling of grievances, according to Matt. 18, is practiced by other religious bodies to general satisfaction,—just as the Church of the Brethren has found it an excellent means of adjusting differences of opinion. A writer in a recent issue of the "Christian Standard" has this to say about it: "Each case is a problem in itself. There is a regular procedure for the disreputable church-member (see Matt. 18: 15-17). He should be earnestly entreated by the one he has offended,—by one from the church, if his offense is general. If incorrigible, he should be waited on again by more than one. If still unwilling to submit to Christian principles, the whole church should hear of it publicly. If then, after a third entreaty, he be rebellious, the whole church membership should treat him as a 'stranger.' This course, soberly and prayerfully followed, will save the unruly one, if he can be saved. If not, it will save the church from reproach."

A "Sunday House" for Rural Districts.—In Southwestern Texas, where people live on large ranches and where ordinary methods of church attendance are impossible, the "Sunday House" has solved the problem. These people, scattered as they live, are spiritually-minded, and are determined to have at least a moderate amount of church life. The "Sunday House," accordingly, has been brought into existence. The head of each household maintains a meagerly-furnished but comfortable house near the church, and every Saturday afternoon there is a steady procession of conveyances, carrying the families, from children to grandparents, with food for man and beast. On the Lord's Day all are in readiness for the day's services. There are the Sunday-school, the morning preaching service, young people's meeting, a missionary service, and finally the evening service. All are in prompt attendance, because they are right there, on the meetinghouse grounds. Early on Monday morning the entire procession of vehicles starts on the journey towards their week-day home, refreshed and invigorated for the coming week.

THE HOPE OF ARMENIA

The following was handed us by Bro. A. J. Culler, before leaving the "Messenger" office, the other day, for the information of our readers concerning the field of our relief and reconstruction activities:

"All eyes in the Old World are turned to America. This is especially true of the smaller and persecuted peoples. In none is the longing for a just Government more sincere than in Armenia. Their persecution is the greatest single horror in world history. The reports are now coming that perhaps the United States will assume control of Armenia.

"Even the people of Turkey see the failure of their own Government and the cruelty of its domination of Christian peoples. I have a friend who has been in Constantinople during the four years of the war and who, some months ago, came to Switzerland to inform his friends in America of the true situation. He says that a League has been organized in Turkey, composed of the best business and professional men, and supported by nearly all the Turkish newspapers of Constantinople. This League is asking the United States to assume the control of Turkey for a long period of years. They no longer want empire but democracy. This is to me one of the most startling facts of these remarkable times. It predicts the downfall of Turkey, foreshadows the destruction of Mohammedan unity, and may be the last chapter in that history of misrule, associated with the 'sick man of Europe.'

"Whatever be the disposition of these countries, we can rest assured that the Peace Conference will not allow the old order of injustice and massacre to continue. If we save these people now, they will be able to help themselves. They are a thrifty, industrious and peace-loving people and will, if not massacred, take care of themselves. Their very energy and prosperity has been the goad to the jealousy of their shiftless and cruel masters. Now, when they are refugees, thousands of miles from their homes, without food, clothing, or shelter, they need the strong arm of a friend to help. But they will soon rise from their ashes of ruin to help themselves.

"The situation is bright with hope. Relief, in its best sense, means to rebuild a whole people and not, permanently, to doie out charity. The best charity is that which sets a people back on their feet. This we are helping to do. Once the fear of continually recurring massacre is lifted from them, they will progress, in the arts of life. The seed sown now will bring a harvest of friendship, and prepare the whole of Turkey for the reception of the Spirit of Christ."

AROUND THE WORLD

Home Missionary Efforts Pay

In an eastern city a gang of boys, organized as a club, were turned out of their building because they were so turbulent,—so we/are told in the "Missionary News." Then they were brought under Christianizing influences by the efforts of several men connected with a church. Here is the subsequent history of a few of the gang: Frank Severone went through high school and college. He is now a judge of the Juvenile Court in the same city. Albert Tofana is an attorney of high standing. Giardo Balboni is a physician of good repute. Joe Canter is a high school principal. Louis Albert is a successful artist and,—like most of the others,—an earnest Christian.

Russia Wants Sunday-schools

Leading educators of Russia have learned about the manifold advantages of American Sunday-schools, and now they are anxious to introduce them as a permanent part of the Greek Church of their country. Only a few years ago such an innovation would have been regarded as a most preposterous thing, but not so now. The better elements of the population have great respect for all things espoused by America, and rightfully do they attribute a goodly share of America's excellency of character to the influence of the Sunday-school. Arrangements are now being made to send a commission of workers to Russia, to introduce Sunday-school work in all its varied branches.

When Knowledge Means Safety

While there is a tendency, upon the part of some, to ridicule measures of precaution against the transmission of disease germs, the fact remains that results always tell a story that can not be doubted. During the prevalence of Spanish influenza at Nome, Alaska, the white population paid due attention to the warnings of the health officers, and as a result only thirty-four were stricken. The natives were wholly indifferent to all precautionary measures, and in consequence more than one thousand lost their lives. Did you ever realize that "knowledge means safety" in the spiritual realm also? A prophet of old exclaimed: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," and who shall say that his words do not apply to the Israel of today?

Ignorance of Bible Truths

At various times the assertion has been made that students of leading colleges and universities exhibit a lamentable lack of knowledge, so far as Bible truths are concerned. According to a statement in the "Christian-Evangelist," Dr. Thwing, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, determined to test the matter to his own satisfaction. He took twenty-six quotations from Tennyson, in which familiar Bible incidents are used as metaphors, such as "Joseph's coat," "Manna in the wilderness," "Pillar of fire by day," "The shadow of Hezekiah's dial," "The crown of thorns," etc. After the students had been questioned concerning these citations, the president discovered dense ignorance concerning these matters,—wholly discreditable to the students and the Christian homes whence they came. But what is the remedy?

Is the Sermon to Be Supplanted?

D. Webster Wylie, a religious worker of some note, and in direct charge of Bible instruction work at Ocean Grove, N. J., last summer, has made a close study of church attendance and kindred topics, and has arrived at some truly startling conclusions. He finds that in many cases the usual Sunday discourse fails to attract the people. The attendance has fallen off, notwithstanding the most heroic endeavors to maintain at least a moderate interest. Many of the ministers have resorted to a program of talks on current topics, the rendering of select readings and musical numbers, etc., with varying degrees of success. Dr. Wylie deprecates all such efforts, and insists that instead of the regular sermonizing there be more actual teaching of the Bible,—the very method pursued by the old-time teachers of the primitive church. Will it solve the problem?

The Japanese in America

Illuminative of the fact that we have a foreign mission field right in our midst, we are now informed that 100,000 Japanese are now living in the United States,—all but five thousand in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast districts, and nearly a hundred thousand more on the Hawaiian Islands. It will be remembered that immigration of Japanese is now rigidly limited to wives and children of previous immigrants, and to students, teachers and merchants. One-sixth of the Japanese here are native-born Americans. Many of those who come from Japan are anxious to be naturalized. They admire our institutions and are eager to learn the language and to conform to the ideals of their adopted country. Hard-working, ambitious, progressive, they are rapidly adapting themselves to the social and moral standards of America. There are seventy-eight Japanese Christian churches in the United States, with fifty-two hundred members; also a strong interdenominational missionary organization, largely maintained by Japanese themselves, for the purpose of supporting and extending the work of their churches on the Pacific Coast. In times past there may have been objections to those who came to us from the Nipponese empire, but who is there that does not see a door of opportunity today, in reaching these people?

Total War Dead 17,500,000

According to a complete summary of the world's casualties during the great struggle, the total number of deaths reaches the appalling aggregate given in our heading. This number includes a mortality of 4,000,000 from pneumonia and influenza, due to war conditions. The total allied losses were 5,500,000, excluding a large number of French civilian dead. Total deaths suffered by the central powers were about 3,000,000. At least 4,000,000 Armenians, Syrians, Greeks and Jews were massacred by the Turks. One million Serbians died through massacre, hunger and disease. Surely, a ghastly record, never before equaled in the world's history.

Our Big Bill for Luxuries

It was Benjamin Franklin who said that humanity's heaviest tax is the one which people voluntarily place upon themselves by their indulgence in downright luxuries. Renewed emphasis is given to this thought by the fact that nearly five billion dollars have of late been spent annually for these things, by the people of our country. For liquor we have spent $2,200,000,000; for tobacco, $1,200,000,000; for jewelry and plated ware, $800,000,000; for candy, $200,000,000; for soft drinks, $1,200,000,000; for chewing gum, $13,000,000. These items almost equal the entire cost of the nation's food bill. What we have been spending on liquor is nearly double what we spend on schools. With the elimination of the liquor traffic in the near future, a big item of the above list will disappear, furnishing means,—let us hope,—for something truly worth while.

Christian Stewardship

Not always are the various phases of Christian stewardship as sacredly regarded as they should be by those who lay claim to discipleship. This was demonstrated by a recent incident in a California city. A Buddhist temple was being built by adherents of that cult, who, profiting by the example of Christians in church construction, solicited means from their friends and acquaintances. Among these, as might be expected, were a number of professing Christians. Business considerations prompted some of these men to contribute to the building of the heathen temple, but when others of their fellow church members heard about it, there was considerable indignation. And that leads to this question: Is it not a fact that Christian stewardship demands a bestowal of our funds for such purposes only, by which God's name is honored and his cause exalted?

Do Away with Military Toys

Time after time have the women of America voiced their protest against the making and selling of toys, calculated to rouse the military spirit among their children. Unexpected as it may be, a writer in a prominent French journal now testifies to the same sentiment. He asserts that in spite of the shortage of metal in Germany, the Nuremberg toy factories made lead soldiers as usual during the war, and sold their product at home and also in adjoining neutral lands. Admitting that the League of Nations will undoubtedly be able to preserve peace during this generation, the editor of the French journal, above referred to, fears for the future if children are to be encouraged in the idea of war and militarism during their most impressionable years. He proposes that if "guns are to be beaten into plowshares," and shells into implements of husbandry, why should not the tin soldiers become toy sailors, explorers, railroad men and followers of other occupations less destructive and no less pleasurable and exciting? Sure enough, why not turn the youthful mind to thoughts of gentleness and peace?

The Problems of Today

With bated breath humanity awaits the disposition of pending world problems. Is there to be an equitable and lasting adjustment of affairs, or merely a coalition of the leading powers, bent on their own aggrandizement, and provocative of sanguine embroilments later on? As one writer says: "Human nature is the most powerful explosive known. Harnessed and ordered by intelligence and justice, it is the dynamic of civilization. Ignorantly and brutally suppressed, it becomes a wild, ungovernable force that wrecks governments and plunges peoples into savagery and wholesale robbery and butchery. It is never inactive." It is gratifying, indeed, that today, more than ever before, in the world's history, there is an insistent pressure for world betterment. Invention and progress have drawn together, from all nations, men of kindred minds. The unity of the race is being recognized, and steps are being taken to safeguard the welfare of all. Humanity is recognizing that internationalism is not a condition to be brought about, but a fact to be recognized and lived up to. Human initiative can no longer be wholly suppressed. Its force must be recognized and wisely directed. Two plans are presented for the utilization of this force. One is the League of Nations with a program of constructive measures, to be wisely safeguarded. The other is bolshevism, the blind and unreasoning fury of hatred and destruction. If the majority of the world's people fail to realize their unity and safety through the sanity and order of the one, they must, inevitably, relapse into the hopeless anarchy of the other. At this time the better elements of humanity are in no mood to be trifled with. United and organized action is demanded. Sane and orderly direction must be given to world affairs, in order that bolshevism may be effectually disposed of.

Improved Conditions in Jerusalem

Latest reports from Stephen Trowbridge, secretary of the World's Sunday School Association for Moslem Lands, indicate that the Sunday-schools in the ancient city are still flourishing, having continued their activities despite the obstructions and discouragements visited upon the unfortunate people by the cruel Turks. Robbed of practically all their possessions, they were left in sore distress. When relief workers of the "American Committee for Relief in the Near East" came to the city, they found a very needy field. At this time, by means of their wisely-administered beneficence, a great change is in evidence. A new and better day has dawned upon the people.

"Appreciation Week"

A recent number of "The Weekly Bulletin," the State Sunday-school paper of the Disciple Church of Kentucky, urges the importance of observing "Appreciation Week." As we understand it, something of an appreciative nature is to be spoken and done by every one connected with that body of believers. The keynote of the plan is found in the following incident: "A pastor recently received a letter from a friend, who had taken time to write him a message of real helpfulness. He told him of the fine things he was doing, and assured him that they were greatly appreciated. When the pastor received the letter, he was so greatly encouraged that he felt moved to urge a more general application of the appreciation idea." We, too, like the plan, but why stop with just the one week? Why not be more appreciative all the year through, and let that feeling be known?

When a Prayer Was Made

According to a newspaper report, some important investigations had to be made, recently, by a Dallas County, Texas, grand jury. A neatly-dressed young woman,—a worker from a rescue mission,—entered the jury room as a witness. Invited to a seat, she stood for a moment, then lifting her hand, she quietly said: "Gentlemen, anything that is worth doing is worth praying over. Let us pray." Without noticing what the men did, she humbly knelt and poured out her heart to God, imploring him for wisdom and strength to do her duty, thanking him for saving her soul, and asking his blessing upon the members of the grand jury. When she arose from her knees, her cheeks were wet with tears, and the men were all weeping. The testimony she gave that day was accepted by the jury. Questioned concerning the incident, the foreman frankly admitted: "I have served on the grand jury many times, and have had ministers, Sunday-school workers, and other Christians come before me as witnesses, but that was the first time I was ever called to prayer by a witness in the grand jury room."

When the Critic Saw the Light

A writer in the "World Outlook" describes how a newspaper man from the United States, not greatly impressed with the value of missions, was put in touch with a new world,—one in which the nobler impulses of man hold sway. As he walked into the office of a well-known exporter of Japan, he asked: "What is the greatest thing which the American business man must do to win the favors and dollars of the Far East?" The Nipponese merchant replied: "He must live in his trade practices the precepts of Christianity." "Christianity?" queried the newspaper man. "What do you know about Christianity? You are a business man." "Very true," was the reply. "But I am a business man,—and a successful business man,—because one of your missionaries took me out of a hovel in a little village far north, and sent me to a mission school where I got the education my own Government never could have given, because it did not have it to give. That school taught me of your God, and how to do business on the square, because no other kind of business principles permanently succeed, gave me the ambition to go to America and complete my education, then helped me into a position with this house, whose head I later on became. What do I know of Christianity? Very much. It has been the cornerstone of my success." When asked about the missionaries and their activities, the Japanese merchant replied: "They came to us not to secure our dollars by sharp tricks, but to help us without hope of any reward but our gratitude and the consciousness of altruistic work well done. They have given their life to us. It has been a sacrifice we could understand. We loved them because they helped us. The Christian missionary out here is a big man,—the salvation of our race in the great race-struggle ahead." It was then that the light of better knowledge dawned for the newspaper man.

HOME AND FAMILY

Strive, Wait, and Pray

Selected by Agnes M. Geib, Manheim, Pa.

Strive; yet I do not promise,
The prize you dream of today
Will not fade when you think to grasp it
And melt in your hand away.
But another and holier treasure
You would now perchance disdain,
Will come when your toil is over,
And pay you for all your pain.

Wait! Yet I do not tell you
The hour you long for now
Will not come with its radiance vanished
And a shadow upon its brow.
Yet far through the misty future,
With a crown of starry light,
An honr of joy you know not
Is winging her silent flight.

Pray, though the gift you ask for
May never comfort your fears,
May never repay your pleadings,
Yet pray, and with hopeful tears
An answer, not that you long for,
But diviner, will come one day.
Your eyes are too dim to see it,
Yet strive and wait and pray.

Toys for Children

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER

"I AM sorry, Bernard, but you forget the bills, the high prices for meat and eggs. Oh, I hate to say it, but many things are so shabby in the house, so—" Mrs. Wenrick looked helplessly at the doll in her hands. Then her eyes met those of her husband accusingly.

"Well, Mary, I know that we need some new furniture," began Bernard. Then he turned around, to see who was standing at the door.

It was Jim, with a message, asking him to come to the office at once. "Very well," he said, "I'll go with you."

Before he went he leaned toward Mary and kissed her. "Sorry, and I hope to be back in time for dinner."

Mary followed him to the veranda steps, carrying the doll. All she could say was a mechanical, "You'll be back soon," as he went away with Jim, one of the office-boys.

She watched them go down the street. Then she went slowly into the house. There was his suitcase lying open. He had just taken the doll from its box, and given it to her with a jubilant "Watch Sweetest's eyes when I give her that!" When she had not answered him, he had misunderstood her silence and asked her whether she did not like it. Then she had made him unhappy by reminding him of their need of other things,—all in the first half hour of his homecoming when he had been away for a month. Bitterly she regretted the words,—greatly she deplored the necessity for them.

"We need the money for other things. What would I have done with a sixth of the toys my children have?" she asked herself argumentatively. For deep down in her heart she knew that Bernard was as careful about spending money foolishly as she could ever hope to be. It was only this whim of his to give the children more than they needed, that she worried over.

"I am not going to say another word about it when he comes back to dinner," she concluded. Then she went to the kitchen and prepared the best dinner possible. Had she not been thinking and planning this dinner for several days? It was so wonderful to have Bernard at home again, she heaped high the yellow meringue for the lemon pie, which old-fashioned dessert was Bernard's favorite. She had made some raspberry jelly for him. It quivered as she put it into a small cut-glass dish. It was such a pleasure to look forward to this dinner,—the time when Joice and Roy should sit near him,—too happy, almost, to eat, for Daddy was home again. She had,—oh, yes, she had put away the doll, and closed the suitcase. The children were still asleep. Daddy himself always gave them their toys.

That evening, the children, one on each side of him, hegged for stories. Bernard told them about the little red hen, and the gingerbread man. Joice sat on one knee by this time, and Roy on the other, though their mother was afraid he was too tired to entertain them. She wondered a little why he took the babies upstairs, and sat by while she put them to bed, without saying a word about toys. Joice brought him her Pansy and showed him the arm that was "borked" as she termed it. One eye was also "borked" and Daddy said: "Poor dolly, what shall we do with her?"

"She ought to be baccinated; she can't go to school this way," said Joice.

Roy, aged three, brought his engine and showed Daddy that the wheels wouldn't go round.

But mother hurried them into their beds; she was anxious for the time when she could sit down and talk things over with Bernard. It had been a whole month since he had sat in the dingy Morris chair, talking about the future, hoping that they could make the last payment on their home in the spring. But they stayed with the children until Joice's long black lashes lay on her round cheeks and Roy's gentle snores proved that they would not miss Daddy if he went into the library.

Then, after a few commonplaces, Daddy went straight to the subject uppermost in his mind, as he usually did.

"Toys," he murmured thoughtfully, as he shaded his eyes with his hand. "Perhaps it is selfishness,—my bringing them so many. The look of their faces when I open the door."

"It doesn't require the toys to make them look at you like that," she answered defensively.

Bernard's eyes rested sadly on the unopened suitcase, where reposed the wonderful doll and a new train of cars for Roy. "Did I ever tell you about the toys in our home?" Mary shook her head and Bernard marked idly on the blotter with his pen.

"I had very good parents; I am not blaming them, you know?"

Mary looked at him with understanding and sympathy. "Why go into that?"

"Parents then had great notions of not spoiling their children. Many things that children liked they couldn't have. Sometimes it almost seemed as if they always found a principle to justify their inclination. They used the rod when they were angry, and then quoted what Solomon says about spoiling the child. My little sister, Florrie, was fond of toys. She begged for a tea-set, to have it in her playhouse. She was always put off with some excuse or other. She earned pennies by helping mother to do some work. But it took her several years until she had money enough. Indeed, she was too old to really care for it when at last she bought the dishes herself."

Mary looked straight into his eyes sympathetically. She knew that Bernard's home had been a cold, cheerless one.

"Then there were my skates," went on Bernard reminiscently, "how I wanted them! I shoveled snow and ran errands until spring. Then I bought my skates, but there was no more ice that winter. The next winter they never liked me to skate,—the ice was too thin. The following winter the skates were too small. I traded them off." He looked into the fire, sparkling in the grate: "I wonder whether that kind of disappointment is good for a child? I feel that I would lose all I have, rather than see Roy have an experience like mine with the skates."

"I know," said Mary, softly, "but your suit is shiny and your shoes need soles right now."

"It's like this: I want our children to have a happy childhood. I give them toys to remember how bright it was. I want them to say, in after-years: 'How they loved us.'" He was silent again and Mary had nothing to say. "Then, dear, when they are older and they walk the road of the lonely heart, . . . as they must, . . . we shall not be there. You know all lives have their times of sorrow, their failures, their physical pain, . . . we can't keep these things away from Joice and Roy."

"If we could do for them without spending so much money," hazarded Mary.

"I would give much if my brother Jack, who died in Cuba, had enjoyed a happier childhood. Jack went away from home before he was sixteen."

Then they left off talking of the toys and began to talk of other things.

The next morning, Joice and Roy were in raptures when the suitcase was opened. The doll, the train of cars, and many colored balls were received with exclamations of delight. Then they came to father and mother, signifying by turning their backs and raising their arms that they were to be taken up. Daddy took Joice and the doll. The new doll had a pretty face,—not the ugly, staring thing which is so often found in many homes. He held them both in his arms, well content.

Mary held Roy and admired the ball with a rubber string attached. She, too, was content. She felt that they were rich in their power of getting joy out of the little things that most people miss. Bernard placed a small packet in her hands. Roy looked on with wondering eyes, as his mother took out some pieces of paper.

"Why, Daddy, you haven't gone and paid for our house?" she questioned tremulously.

"Even so. Those notes are all paid; there are better times in store for us, I hope. You and the children can have things. I want them to know how much we wanted good things for them."

Grandmother Warren

BY BESS BATES

3. Reforming John

MARY had come over to spend the afternoon with Grandmother Warren. It had been rather a silent afternoon, considering that Mary had never been at a loss for something to say. They had talked a little about the weather, and then the half dozen chickens which Mary and John had purchased. Then they had discussed the relative value of aluminum and granite ware for the kitchen. But through it all there had been many pauses which plainly showed that Mary's mind was not entirely with chickens and kitchen ware. Finally, Grandmother thought she had better help Mary get to the obvious point of her visit. "What's on your mind, my dear?" she asked.

Mary brought it out frankly enough. "It's John. He does little things that get on my nerves."

"What things?" asked Grandmother.

"Oh, just little things. I oughtn't to let them bother me, but they do. I try not to think about them but they are there all of the time, and I just think sometimes that I will have to tell him about them. But they are such little things and I know that my criticism will hurt his feelings, so I just keep still, and they keep right on getting on my nerves."

"What things?" repeated Grandmother.

"Why, he sleeps in his chair in the evenings and it's the only time we have to talk. If he would really say he was tired, and go to bed, it would be all right, but just to doze, and to have to sit and look at him! Sometimes I think I can't stand it. And it's such a little thing that it just makes me provoked with myself when I think about it. There are some other little things, too, but that is enough, I guess."

"Did you ever think about charity beginning at home?" asked Grandmother.

"No," admitted Mary,—disappointed that Grandmother seemed to be changing the subject. Mary had hoped that Grandmother would help her out of her trouble.

"Well," went on Grandmother, meditatively, "I used to wonder about that when I was a little girl. They would tell me: 'Charity begins at home,' and I thought it meant that one should give things to the poor people nearest them and then, if they had anything left, give it to those that lived farther away. It probably means that, but it seems to me that it also means this: Take the case of you and John. John does things that you don't like. You want me to suggest some way for you to improve John. No doubt, you want to do it in a way that it will not hurt his feelings. But the main thing is that you want to help and improve John. You want to give him something.

"Mary, did you ever notice how stubborn human beings are? They hardly ever like to take doses of reform medicine, handed out by some one else. Almost always, when some one sets up a standard and says: 'Here, this thing and that thing you are doing is wrong. You ought to do this,' the person accused will always ask: 'What are you doing to improve yourself?' And you can't blame them for it, either.

"I might tell you to go home and tell John just how you feel, and he probably would try as hard as he could to do as you want him to, but even if he didn't say it, he would probably think: 'Well, Mary does this and that, and they seem just as bad to me.'"

"Why, do you think that I do things to get on John's nerves?" asked the astonished Mary.

"My dear child," smiled Grandmother. "There is no doubt but that you do. John is sensitive, the same as you are. Now my idea is this: You are trying to give John a few hints on how to improve. Don't do that! Just forget about John and begin on yourself. Make your charity really begin at home. Find out what it is that you do that John doesn't like, and try so hard to improve yourself that John will say to himself: 'That Mary is the finest little wife that ever was. Look how she tries to please me. Wonder what I can do for her?'

"I have an idea," went on Grandmother, "that you will soon forget about those little things that John does, but if you don't, the time will come when you can talk them all over with him. But for the present, keep your charity at home."

"Thank you, Grandmother," sighed Mary happily, "I'm going to do as you say. I guess I will fix a place for John to sleep on the couch tonight, so he can get a better rest. We don't use it so very much, because the cushions are so pretty and new. John has been working awful hard lately."

cause, and his message came as live coals from off the altar.

On Tuesday, Rev. W. B. Stoddard, of Washington, D. C., presented his two lectures on "The Glory of the Cross versus Lodge Glory," and "The Evils of the Lodge And How May They Be Overcome?" Rev. Stoddard is thoroughly familiar with his topics, and his messages ring with Gospel truth. We shall be glad to have Rev. Stoddard with us again.

Besides Bro. Wieand's regular work on Wednesday, Bro. Byer gave an hour of Bible Reading.

On Thursday Bro. P. H. Bowman, president-elect of Bridgewater College, gave us three discourses. The first was on the Book of Philemon. This was given in a most impressive and beautiful way. His use of the historical method of Bible study gave us some rare glimpses into the life of the great Apostle Paul. Following this he took the Book of Genesis. This discourse was introductory to his theme for the evening, "The First Murder." These lectures were appreciated, and we thank Bro. Bowman for his coming to us.

Bro. W. K. Conner, of Harrisburg, Pa., was here to enjoy the blessings of the Institute with us, and he was prevailed upon to give us some of his demonstration work on the blackboard. Bro. Conner knows how to handle crayon to the glory of God. To see him is certainly an incentive to Sunday-school teachers to use the board more in their teaching.

Bro. W. H. Sanger, of Fairfax, came to us on Friday with a live-wire message on "The Work of the Ministry." Bro. Sanger is thoroughly alive to the needs of better preaching, and his message was stirring and up-to-date. It would have been well, could more of our ministers have heard it, and we trust that those who did hear it will catch its spirit.

The Institute has been a great success. It has been a mountain-top experience in the lives of many, and some consider it the greatest and richest week of their lives. It is our fond hope that it will bear a rich and bountiful fruition in the lives of all who attended, to the glory of God.

ROCKY FORD, COLORADO

During 1918 death claimed thirteen out of our church family, and in the first month of the new year one of our aged deacons passed to his reward. We do not consider these as lost to us, for the influence of godly lives has no end. A number have been received by baptism and several by letter. Four were baptized last Sunday.

At a recent council, the organization for the year's work was effected, most of the officers of the past year being retained. Appropriate and impressive installation services were conducted by the pastor. Great interest is being taken in the church and its auxiliaries. We now have four departmental superintendents and three organized classes. The Home Department was added to the Sunday-school.

A new house of worship is to be erected at Ordway, which is a mission point of the Rocky Ford church. More attention is also to be given the Holbrook mission point. The Rocky Ford church hopes soon to be able to have a new house of worship, which will measure up to the possibilities of our growing church and city.

The church pledges unstinted support to the Forward Movement, feeling that every goal set by the General Mission Board can be reached. The total offering for missionary and benevolent work, as well as for relief and reconstruction, will reach $800 in eight months.

The church calls for the District Meeting of 1919.

AN AGED MOTHER IN ISRAEL AT REST

Sister Mary S. Klein, nee Seaman, was born Nov. 17, 1823, in Upper Bern Township, Berks County, Pa., died Feb. 6, 1919, at the advanced age of ninety-five years. She leaves five sons and two daughters,—the youngest of whom is over fifty years of age. Henry S. Klein, of Reading, a minister in the Church of the Brethren, is one of her sons. There are sixteen grandchildren and eighteen great-grandchildren. Six great-grandsons acted as pallbearers at her funeral.

Sister Mary S. Klein

She was married to Samuel S. Klein Oct. 28, 1843, who preceded her fifty-four years ago. After father died, mother was left with ten of the children. One had preceded father in death. She managed the farm by the help of the children and some hired help. Later on the children grew up, to assist mother in her work.

Mother was ever loyal to her church. She instructed her children in honesty, and also taught them to be industrious. All the children stood by her and were kind. In her family worship she often prayed that the Lord might spare her until the youngest child would be twenty-one years of age. Her prayers were more than "doubly" answered.

Bro. Samuel S. Klein was a second cousin of Eld. John Klein, who was killed at Broadway, Va. He was elected as deacon April 8, 1864, in the Maiden Creek congregation, before its organization,—at the time when it was still a part of the Little Swatara church.

They made long trips to their meeting places, before the Mohrsville meetinghouse was built, and looked forward in fond anticipation to the time when they could worship at a fixed place. Unfortunately, however, the father was called away in death before the meetinghouse was completed. Prior to that time meetings were held regularly at their home, and were often largely attended by the neighbors.

Mother Klein was a faithful and consistent member of the Church of the Brethren for over sixty years, having a strong desire for God's house, and was present whenever possible. Even in her old age, her children always tried to take her to meeting and love feast occasions, whenever she was able to go.

Mother Klein lived in a place where there were only a few members. While wearing her simple garb, she was, nevertheless, admired for her Christian walk in life, and commanded the respect of all her neighbors.

Sister Klein was the most aged woman in Tilden Township, Berks County, at the time of her death. With the exception of the last three years, during which she resided with her daughter, she spent her entire life in the township named.

Funeral services from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Yerger, of Reading, by Eld. W. H. Oberholtzer and the writer. Text, Matt. 5: 6. She was buried in what is known as Becker's burial-ground, near Hamburg. This historic graveyard was originally donated by John Jacob Hertzler, the first Amish minister in America. He also rests in this place of burial.

Mother Klein, in her youth, attended school about two squares from the cemetery. About four squares north, she was born and raised by her noble parents, John George Seaman and his wife, Magdalena, nee Kauffman.

ARMOURDALE MISSION, KANSAS CITY, KANS.

Owing to the great amount of sickness and other retarding causes our work here has suffered much during the winter. Then, also, Sister Miller has been unable to assist as usual, because of ill health. The future, however, seems to hold out to us brighter prospects. Attendance and interest in both Sunday-school and church services are increasing now. The missionary spirit seems to be growing nicely. The class offerings, on two Sundays of each month, are given to District missions. It is a noticeable fact that the offerings on these Sundays are much larger than at other times. Although these people are very poor, they like to help in the cause of the Lord a little.

Last evening a brother who had not worked with the church for a number of years, was received back into full fellowship again. We are trying to raise some funds with which to do some repairing on our little church-house. Our little band would feel very grateful to any who might be disposed to assist us some.

In these times of high prices there are many pitiful scenes which come under our observation, a few of which I will mention.

One day in the early winter, when the ground was covered with snow, there came to our door a little fellow, nine years of age, whose feet were protruding through his ragged shoes upon the snow. Although we had nothing but an old pair of shoes, at least three sizes too large, we gave them to him and his gratitude was very manifest. We were able to get this little fellow a pair of new shoes later on, after those old ones were worn out completely. When we presented the new ones to him, his joy seemed to be complete. He pressed the empty box to his breast and would not let it go.

Another, a little boy about the same age, came to our home one cold, stormy day in early winter, with no covering for the upper part of his body but a little gingham waist, and some ragged underwear. Through the kindness of some friends of the Mission we were able to take him to a store and get him a little sweater which he has been wearing to Sunday-school every Sunday since. Of course, he has no coat, but he doesn't complain.

During these times of high prices, when many poor people are being thrown out of employment because of the factories cutting down their forces, many will need help until warm weather comes. Used clothing, especially children's clothing that still has some wearing value, would do much to relieve suffering. Either money or clothing sent to this mission will be duly acknowledged and a correct account rendered to the Mission Board of Northeastern Kansas. Chas. A. Miller.

McPHERSON COLLEGE NOTES

Already we are thinking of the coming summer and its vacation duties. Summer school will be held as usual. The regular school-year will close May 30, and the summer school will open the following week.

Among those who are taking some special line of work this year, we have a number who expect to teach next year and would prefer, if possible, to secure positions where they may have the chance of working in our own church activities. So many times our young people must take positions where we do not have any congregations, and their Sunday-school and church work must be done where it will not count so much for our own church.

Some of those expecting to teach are specially qualified in Domestic Science, Music, Manual Training, Agriculture, Normal Psychology, Athletics, History, Social Science and such like. If those in need of teachers in High Schools, in any of these lines, will write us, we can recommend according to the needs of the place concerned.

Also, since it is so vital, in the life of our young people, to connect them actively with our work, if any one who knows of vacancies in any of these lines, for teaching, whether such vacancies are in your immediate community or not, will write us of them, we shall try to get teacher and vacancy together.

Bro. Ernest Ikenberry did considerable Music Institute work among the churches last year and will devote more time to it again this summer. There is such a great need for music work in most of our congregations, that we feel we are able to supply a long-felt want. Bro. Ikenberry has had such splendid success in this work that we have no hesitancy whatever in giving him our unqualified recommendation. We shall be glad to correspond with churches that need such services, and to help them all we can.

Quite a number of the boys who have been in Camp are now getting home and are entering school. We are indeed glad to have them back with us.

Our trustee body held their annual meeting Feb. 10. A great deal of business came up for consideration. We are accepting the challenge to move forward and do our share in the great Forward Movement in the church. What an opportunity lies before us!

Our class-rooms are becoming so crowded with students that we must have other and larger quarters. Accordingly, we must build our long-needed Science Hall within the next year or two. Plans are being prepared for it now. This will fill a long-felt want in our equipment.

A very substantial gift came to the College, recently, in a deed to an eighty-acre farm,—the gift of Bro. John Kline, of Cherokee County, Kansas. For all these things we are deeply grateful. W. O. Beckner.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

As I promised to return to the Northwest, I am now getting my appointments arranged in time to prevent conflicts,—so many wanting me to serve them in a series of singings.

My promise is to be at the District Meeting of the District of North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada, to convene in Irricana, Can., and I wish to meet with as many churches as I can immediately after our Annual Conference at Winona Lake, Ind.

I expect to return with Eld. Luther Shatto, who will represent this vast territory on Standing Committee at our next Conference, as far as North Dakota, and work in as many churches as I can before the District Meeting, a little later. I have already arranged with a few of the churches and would be pleased to hear from others, desiring my services, while in this greatest of our church Districts.

My greatest trouble last year was the lack of books,—more being ordered at every place after the work was started. As we do not buy instruments, it is surely desirable to have plenty of books.

I was not able to meet as many of the churches as I was called on last year, on account of not being acquainted and so many wanting me at the same time. I desire very much to arrange with as many as I can on my way to and from the meeting to be held in the Northwest.

There is a short time between seed time and harvest for my work, and it is necessary that I make arrangements beforehand, so that I can serve as many different churches as possible during this short period.

I would be glad to hear from the churches wanting a series of singings while I am in the Northwest.

Joseph Studebaker, Music Teacher.

A WORD TO THE CHURCHES OF MICHIGAN

As a member of the District Ministerial Board, authorized by the Conference of 1917, I would like to urge you to refer at once, upon reading this, to the Minutes of Annual Meeting of 1917, pages four, five and six, and read carefully the report relating to the ministry.

When you have carefully noted your duty in all the foregoing articles, please take a look also at the end of article five (management), section seven, and see the relation between your Board and the churches. You will see that the Board should be in possession of some information, which, of conrse, could be obtained much more satisfactorily if the churches could be visited. At the same time some inspiration might be imparted, but we were not sure that you would want us to incur the expense to adopt that method.

Therefore, if there could be some coöperation by correspondence, in relation especially to the distribution of elders and ministers,—keeping us as a sort of bureau of information.—we might, in some degree, serve the purpose designed. We are anxious to be helpful if we can, in this great work of creating, perpetuating and distributing the ministry. If we will all enter into this work, with the enthusiasm of which it is worthy, it will be no little help to the "Forward Movement," and so to the advancement of the Kingdom of the Blessed Christ.

The members of this Board, besides the writer, are Elders Geo. F. Culler and John M. Smith, both of Woodland, Mich. Bro. Culler is our secretary. These brethren will give you all the help they can, if called upon.

Prescott, Mich. Samuel Bowser.

WEST JOHNSTOWN CONGREGATION, PENNSYLVANIA

From our annual "Church Directory," recently from the press, we glean a few of the many interesting facts: There were thirty-five additions to our membership by baptism, and four by letter. We lost four by death and five by letter. Our present membership is 520. From the pastor's report we note that he preached eighty-nine sermons, officiated at nine funerals, nine anointings and five marriages, and made 486 visits.

The various treasuries show splendid balances. The money raised by the church and her auxiliaries amounts to $4,712.37. Of this amount $772.78 was given to missions and benevolences. This is encouraging, especially when compared with the $572 of a year ago, and the $176 of two years ago. But this is not as good as we hope to do. The patient teaching of the past years, the reading and study of missionary books and papers, and the earnest pleas of returned missionaries are beginning to bear fruit. Our people are awakening to the world's needs. As an evidence of this growing missionary spirit, we are glad to announce that our school has pledged itself to support a missionary in the foreign field, and we believe it will not be long until we will support two. Nothing that our school has done for a long time has caused as much favorable comment as this one act, and we gladly give the credit to the Berean (young sisters') Class, for taking the initiative in the matter, and throwing out the challenge to the rest of the school. Our Missionary and Temperance Committees are planning for more and better things this year.

Our newly-elected chorister, Sister Ella Lannon, is taking up her work in a way that promises good results. She has organized a singing class, which meets for practice every Thursday night. We are now practicing a cantata for Easter.

On Sunday evening, Feb. 16, we had the pleasure of listening to a missionary program, given by four members of the Juniata Volunteers, viz., Brethren Foster Statler and Maynard Cassady, and Sisters Grace Stayer and Nettie Gregory. It was good, and much enjoyed. This was Bro. Maynard's first visit to our church since the family moved to Huntingdon,—more than four years ago,—and his many friends were glad to see him back and to hear him speak for missions.

The Seal Course Class has finished "The Child for Christ," and begun work on Old Testament History. A new teacher-training class has been formed with about eight in the class. Jerome E. Blough.

The above report shows a balance of $16.33 in treasury. There is, however, a bill of $95 now due,—$78.67 more than the amount we have on hand. Expenses for printing have been high during the past year. There has, however, been such a demand for our "1918 Bulletin" that we have had to have a second edition of 5,000 printed. We believe this literature is being used to good advantage. Let us rejoice together in the prospect of a dry nation, and continue to work together in the dissemination of truth, so that it may be dry not only in name, but also in fact. We hope to receive some liberal donations during the next few weeks, so that we may clear up the above-named deficit before making our full report for the year at Conference.

J. Carson Miller,
Treasurer General Temperance Committee.

MRS. HENRY BAKER

Katie Baker, nee Diermyer, was born Feb. 2, 1853, in Bucyrus, Crawford County, Ohio. In 1862 she, with her parents and four children, younger than herself, moved to St. Joseph County, Ind., the journey being made overland with team and covered wagon.

June 23, 1872, she married Henry C. Baker. To them were born five daughters and four sons, who survive. All were present at the funeral but one. Sister Baker also leaves twenty-three grandchildren, two brothers and one sister. Two sisters preceded her. She also leaves four nieces and one nephew. The latter lost his mother when but three years old. Sister Baker took the little boy into her home, caring for him and bestowing on him the wealth of a mother's love, while also caring for her own family.

Bro. Baker and family moved from Indiana to Peru, Wis., in 1878, and in March, 1891, to their farm in Albany, where they have since resided.

The sudden death of her husband, Eld. H. C. Baker, which occurred over two years ago, was a great shock to her, and one from which she never recovered. She gradually declined till Feb. 3, 1919, when, following an attack of heart failure, her spirit took its upward flight to be forever with her Lord. She was a charter member of the Albany church. She was a spiritual mother to all and always had their welfare at heart. Together with her husband, she labored faithfully for the good of the cause. The church will greatly miss an efficient worker and leader. The loss comes doubly hard, following so closely the death of her husband. The children have lost a kind and loving mother,—one who was always thoughtful of them and did all in her power to promote their welfare. The loss of their father is still keenly felt, for his thoughts were always for those nearest and dearest to him. May their spirits continue to guide those who mourn! The good seed sown by them fell not on barren soil. Forty-four years ago she was baptized and her faith in the Divine Father has never wavered, but grown stronger and brighter as she neared life's sunset.

The funeral was held on Monday in the Chippewa Valley church, where she had worshiped for the past twenty-five years. Services were conducted by Bro. J. M. Myers, of Stanley, assisted by Brethren Root and Salsbury. Mrs. D. T. Cripe.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Covina.—Sunday, at 11 A. M., Bro. Leroy Smith occupied the preaching hour in the interest of the "Pocket Testament League." He laid the importance of this work before us impressively. At the close there were 125 Testaments subscribed for. These books are of the best leather binding, costing $1.50. The daily carrying and reading of the Bible can not help but create greater spirituality and usefulness among our membership. Why should not every member of the Church of the Brethren daily carry and read the Bible? Yesterday Brother and Sister Wm. Aschenbrenner celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Floral decorations rendered was very appropriate. About seventy-five were present.—Mrs. Tempie S. Funk, Charter Oak, Cal., Feb. 19.

Fresno.—Since the last report all services have been resumed. The influenza seems to be on the wane. Feb. 2 consecration services were held for Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers. Feb. 9 Bro. Brubaker, of Raisin City, preached the Baccalaureate sermon to thirteen graduates in Books 1 and 2 of teacher-training.—Mrs. O. M. Whitlow, 2061 Harvard Avenue, Fresno, Cal., Feb. 11.

LaVerne.—Our pastor, Eld. R. H. Miller, called a meeting of the elders of the church, in connection with the officers of Sunday-school and Christian Workers, to consider certain phases of the Forward Movement. This meeting was held about ten days ago. Our pastor and our elder (Bro. J. P. Dickey) have divided the territory, covered by our membership, into sections and are placing each section under the supervision of two workers. These workers, in turn, are to appoint other workers (or "assistants" if one for each block) who, from a religious standpoint, are to acquaint themselves with the condition of all people living on their particular block. In this work we aim to have three goals,—the encouragement of Bible study and the erection of "family altars,"—deeper consecration on the part of the Christian and the conversion of the sinner. Yesterday our pastor and elder called this band of section workers together and gave them specific instructions about this work. He urged that they begin at once. We were delighted to have Eld. D. L. Miller with us once more. He preached for us both morning and evening yesterday, Feb. 23.—Grace Hileman Miller, LaVerne, Cal., Feb. 25.

COLORADO

Antioch church met in council Feb. 15. Five letters were received and two were granted. Bro. H. F. Crist, of Colorado Springs, was elected elder; Bro. R. C. Lake, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Nellie Nice, correspondent and "Messenger" agent. We extend a hearty invitation to all members, wishing to change location, to come here.—W. H. Bryant, Yoder, Colo., Feb. 22.

ILLINOIS

Bethany congregation met in council Jan. 29. Bro. Ezra Flory was present and Bro. Richards, our pastor, had charge of the meeting. New officers were elected and by a unanimous vote we reelected our pastor for another year. His report of the work during the past year was interesting. Church attendance is increasing and arrangements have been completed for special services for children on Sundays. Last Sunday was a real Pentecost in our Chinese Mission. In the morning Bro. J. H. B. Williams brought us a message which stirred our hearts. At the opening of the Chinese Sunday-school, Bro. Moy Wing, of Detroit, baptized three men. There were fifty Chinese men in Sunday-school. In the evening we met Mr. Moy for a Chinese love feast. Moy Gwong, of North Manchester, officiated, assisted by Bro. Moy Wing. It is beautiful to see the spirit of reverence and joy which the Chinese manifest in these services. Two have been baptized since the last report.—Mrs. Allie Eisenbise, Chicago, Ill., Feb. 20.

Champaign.—At our last members' meeting we considered the question of a pastor for the year, with the result that Brother and Sister J. W. Kinsel will continue their work at this place. Conditions seem more favorable now, and we are expecting a prosperous year. We have recently organized a Home Department, with Bro. Wm. Roney as superintendent. The church has decided to build a parsonage. Solicitors have been named and a site selected. Actual work on the building is to begin March 15. Sister Hettie Barnhart has tendered her resignation as mission worker at this place. Her work among us for the past three and one-half years, has been greatly appreciated. Sisters Ritzon and Heckman were the committee on arrangements for a homecoming, held Friday evening last, in the interests of the Sunday-school. A short, program was rendered and light refreshments were served. Our missionary committee gave a splendid program Feb. 9, after which Mey Stoner, of Chicago, gave a fine talk. The offering of $26 was given for the work in South China. We expect to hold a love feast and communion March 16.—F. H. Christner, Champaign, Ill., Feb. 23.

Elgin.—One of the finest things in church life is the comradeship between the men and boys. This was illustrated Friday evening, Feb. 21, when the "fathers and sons" of the "little church an Highland" met for social fellowship. The men were boys again, and the real boys were in a happy mood to listen to several of their elders, who did not altogether "preach" at them. The decorations of the room were Chinese, as the occasion was decided as a reminder of the opening of our mission work in China a decade ago—in 1908. The way to save the boys to the church is to tie them fast with ropes of friendship. . . . At the Sunday-school session on Sunday morning of Feb. 23, the enlarging of our China Hospital was emphasized by several stereoption views, and by unanimous vote our birthday offerings hereafter will go for that needy philanthropy. Bro. Merlin Miller, of the Bethany faculty, conducted the devotional. . . . At 11 o'clock Dr. Michael W. Emmert, Dean of the Bible Department of Mount Morris College, filled the pulpit. Many old friends here greeted him publicly. . . . In the evening the Men's Brotherhood put on a particular program in which several brethren made addresses, during which our church attendance for the last ten months was checked up, discussed, and suggestions offered for amending our slackness.—Adaline H. Berry, Elgin, Ill., Feb. 24.

INDIANA

Anderson.—Our church met in her regular quarterly council, Feb. 23. Quite a number of business items were disposed of. Two love feasts will be held this year—May 3, and Oct. 4. We also decided to do quite a lot of repairing and cleaning this spring. Recently an elderly lady came out for baptism after our II A. M. services. The influence is deeply felt in our city. Our Sunday-school, as well as other services, are all doing good work. We are now anxiously looking forward to our revival, which will be held in April by Bro. B. F. Heckman, of Dayton, Ohio. Steve Shively will assist us in our song services during the revival.—Levi Wise, 1927 Jefferson Street, Anderson, Ind., Feb. 20.

Bethel church met in council Feb. 21, with Eld. Manly Decter presiding. Two letters were granted. The following officers were elected: Bro. Manly Decter, deacon; Bro. D. A. Schol, trustee; clerk; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent. We decided to hold a love feast May 31, at 7 P. M. We are making an effort to start a Mission Study Class.—Ethel Schol, Bethel, Ind., Feb. 22.

Kewanna.—Feb. 7 Eld. Geo. E. Swihart, of Roann, Ind., began a series of meetings. He preached nineteen doctrinal sermons. The interest was fine, and the attendance good in spite of the bad weather and roads. One accepted Christ. Feb. 21 we met in council, with Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh in charge. Bro. Swihart was also present. We decided to hold our spring love feast May 3. Brn. Roy Mishler was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting.—Myrtle Mishler, Kewanna, Ind., Feb. 25.

New Bethel.—Feb. 23 Bro. E. O. Norris gave us two splendid sermons, which were appreciated very much. Our quarterly council, which was to have convened in December, met just before the evening services. Through the illness of a brother, who has an electric plant, our trustees were able to put electric lights in the church, which we appreciated very much. Bro. John Miller was chosen elder; the writer, Sunday-school superintendent, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. Our love feast will be held May 24, at 8 P. M.—Mrs. Stella White, Connersville, Ind., Feb. 24.

New Salem church met in council Feb. 15. Nine letters were granted. Church officers were elected as follows: Elder, Bro. E. Jones; clerk, Bro. C. Weybright; "Messenger" agent and correspondent, the writer; trustees, Bro. John Hoover, Bro. J. C. Stout was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Sister Maud Jones, alternate. We decided to have preaching services each Sunday evening.—Dora A. Scott, New Salem, Ind., Feb. 22.

Pleasant Valley church has enjoyed three weeks of revival services, conducted by Bro. Walter Gibson. Eight were received into the church by baptism and one reclaimed. Eld. J. L. Mishler and wife have returned from Florida. Bro. Mishler's health is not much improved.—Carrie Kindy, Middlebury, Ind., Feb. 24.

IOWA

Franklin County.—Feb. 16 Bro. J. R. Allen gave a stirring address on the subject: "Giving to One's Self." The offering at the close of the service was lifted for the benefit of famine-stricken India, amounted to $351.42.—Harvey W. Allen, Dumont, Iowa, Feb. 21.

Salem.—Since our last report the influenza epidemic has subsided and our Sunday-school has taken on new life, with a much better attendance. In January an offering of $306.97 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. The school has an earnest corps of teachers, and a workers' conference is held on the first Sunday of every month. Our pastor, Bro. Wm. Wagner, has been giving splendid sermons, filled with truth. Our brethren, who are in the Army Corps in Asia, are turned home, for which we all rejoice.—Mrs. Chas. Wray, Prescott, Iowa, Feb. 21.

KANSAS

Fredonia.—Our work here has been greatly hindered ever since October. The regular business meeting was not held until Feb. 23. Bro. Ralph Quakenbush was with us and several church officers for the year were elected. Bro. W. C. Watkins, of Grenola, was unanimously chosen as elder. Other matters were attended to. Bro. Smith, officers were chosen for the next four months, with Bro. W. H. Sell superintendent. The District having secured the services of Bro. Heckman, we are anticipating some revival services in April. We have Sunday-school regularly and our ministerial services. We are trying to secure a minister to locate here.—Mrs. W. H. Sell, Fredonia, Kans., Feb. 25.

Morrill.—Feb. 9 our church conducted missionary services throughout the day in the different departments. Our pastor, Bro. Smith, preached excellent missionary sermons, both morning and evening. An offering of $42 was lifted. The Christian Workers' offering was over $6, all of which will be used for general missionary purposes. At a recent meeting of our Sunday-school Board we decided to recognize our missionary and temperance committees one Sunday during each quarter, hoping thereby to infuse into the different departments a deeper activity and to make more efficient work along those particular lines. It was also decided that the Primary and Junior superintendents review the Sunday-school lesson one Sunday of each month. Our teacher-training class is progressing nicely, under the efficient leadership of the teacher, Sister Argo. We are trying to work up to the interest we had prior to the epidemic.—Mrs. Delilah A. Maxey, Morrill, Kans., Feb. 23.

MARYLAND

Glade View Sunday-school met Jan. 26, to install new officers for the year. The charge was given by Bro. W. L. Teets. The school took a collection for the Armenian-Syrian Relief. Bro. Teets preached on the subject of "Rock Christians."—Mabel V. Fike, Oakland, Md., Feb. 24.

Long Green Valley church met in council Feb. 16, with Eld. W. E. Roop presiding. Two letters were granted. Our love feast will be held May 10, at 4 P. M. Bro. R. W. Schlosser is expected to hold a series of meetings here some time this summer. Eld. W. E. Roop will represent us at Annual Meeting. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren J. M. Frigel and C. P. Breidenbaugh; alternates, Sisters W. E. Frigel and Rena Breidenbaugh.—Bertha L. Neuhauser, Gittings, Md., Feb. 24.

NORTH CAROLINA

Fraternity.—Feb 7 Bro. Virgil C. Finnell began a series of lectures on Sunday-school work. He closed on Monday evening, having given ten lectures in all. We realized how far behind we are in Sunday-school work. Many lasting impressions were made and we resolved to do better work in the Sunday-school.—J. P. Robertson, Winston-Salem, N.C., Feb. 24.

MISSOURI

Kansas City.—During the epidemic of influenza two of our number were taken: Sister Mary Duncan and Bro. Norman A. Conover. We have the pleasant memory of Bro. Conover as our brother and shepherd, and now that we remember the good he accomplished and his love for the work, we must put forth our strength to carry forward the work of the Master. We could not have public services during the months of November and December, but, beginning Jan. 1, we have had regular appointments of Sunday-school and preaching services each Sunday. Jan. 26 Bro. C. B. Rowe, of Dallas Center, Iowa, gave us two inspiring sermons. We met in council Feb. 19, with Eld. Elmore presiding. Two letters were received and two were granted. The reorganization of the different departments was effected with Bro. M. F. Hale, superintendent of the Sunday-school; Sister Ethel Sollenberger, president of Christian Workers; T. C. Ninninger, elected president of Temperance and Missionary Committees were appointed. We are making plans to do our part in the "Forward Movement" program. With our people well organized we hope for a successful year. The opportunities for doing good are many, but means and workers have not been available.—J. A. Wyatt, Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 25.

Mound church met in council Feb. 17. Eld. Ira Witmore had charge of the meeting, and was chosen again as elder for another year. Bro. Ira Witmore was elected president of Christian Workers' Meeting, and Merle Witmore, Sunday-school superintendent. We sent $65 to the Armenian sufferers. The children in the Primary and Intermediate departments are working money to give to the needy in India. Our Sisters' Aid Society is meeting regularly again.—Fern M. Wagner, Adrian, Mo., Feb. 17.

OHIO

Bakar church recently took a collection for Armenian-Syrian Relief. The total from the church and Aid Society was $237.25. We held our first Christian Workers' meeting, Feb. 2. Bro. John Telser is the president. Our young people are taking an interest in the meetings.—Minnie M. Snider, Lima, Ohio, Feb. 24.

Beech Grove church met in council Feb. 22, with Eld. Sylvan Bookwalter presiding. Visiting brethren present were B. F. Sharp, Jos. Longenecker, E. S. Hollinger and Frank Brown. Bro. Orville McKee was elected Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Edna Hollinger, president of Christian Workers' Meeting; the writer, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. Sister Ida Dist District Meeting are Brethren Orville McKee and Irvin Reger; delegate to Annual Meeting, Bro. Andrew Petry. Bro. Jonas Royer was elected to the ministry. He is in France, but we are hoping he will soon return. Our love feast will be held May 24, at 10 A. M.—Hettie Rife, Hollansburg, Ohio, Feb. 25.

Bellefontaine church met in council Feb. 22. One was received by letter. The pastor, Bro. Wm. J. Tinkle, was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. J. E. Yeary and Sister Ida Tinkle were elected delegates to District Meeting. Feb. 25 Bro. Tinkle spoke to men and boys on the subject of "Purity and Strength." The same evening, Sister Tinkle spoke to women and girls on the subject of "Womanhood." We feel the Brotherhood to work much more systematically and actively for the Purity Cause.—Lula B. Tinkle, Bellefontaine, Ohio, Feb. 26.

Brookville church met in council Feb. 19, with Eld. Fidler presiding. Several letters of membership were read. The church decided to install a baptistry, which will be done at once. We elected our delegates as follows: For Annual Meeting, Brother and Sister Fidler, and Bro. Reuben Boomershine; for District Meeting, Brethren Fidler, Hinton and Boomershine. Brethren decided to hold a home communion on Easter Sunday, April 20. A collection of $8.64 was taken for the Aid Society. Our sisters are doing a splendid work. We are having a ten days' song service, conducted by J. C. Couser, preparatory to a series of meetings to be held in the spring.—Mrs. Ruth Boomershine, Feb. 23, with Bro. Van B. Wright, evangelist.—Mrs. Arthur Hay, Brookville, Ohio, Feb. 21.

Lower Stillwater church met in council Feb. 19, with Eld. L. A. Bookwalter presiding. Bro. Jacob Garver is to hold a home communion. Bro. Bookwalter was reelected presiding elder for two years. Bro. O. C. Denlinger was reelected clerk. We expect Bro. Norris to be with us March 1, to conduct a two weeks' series of meetings.—Maude E. Crook, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, Feb. 25.

Ludlow church met in council Feb. 15, at the Pitsburg house, with Eld. N. W. Binkley presiding. We were pleased to have with us a number of visiting ministers, who proved helpful in the work. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. Jacob Garver, Bro. N. W. Binkley was chosen elder for the coming year. Elders N. W. Binkley and J. C. Bright were elected delegates to Annual Meeting, and Elders N. W. Binkley and J. C. Bright and Bro. Edw. Miller to District Meeting. A collection for the Pittsburg Sunday-school, amounting to $125, was given for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Mrs. J. W. Eikenberry, Arcanum, Ohio, Feb. 18.

Marion.—Eld. J. L. Guthrie, of Upper Sandusky, began a series of meetings in this place Feb. 16, continuing Feb. 23. The attendance and interest were good, considering the amount of sickness. Bro. Guthrie's sermons greatly encouraged us and built up the church work. One was baptized Feb. 23. Feb. 22 our council meeting was held, with Bro. Jacob Garver in charge. Bro. Bowsher and his wife were duly installed in the office of deacon. Bro. Geo. Deardorff was chosen as delegate to District Meeting, with Sister Ida Deardorff, alternate. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, with Bro. Geo. Deardorff as superintendent. The attendance is splendid and the interest good.—Rachel Bowman, Marion, Ohio, Feb. 23.

New Carlisle.—Feb. 22 we met in council. Our elder, Bro. D. S. Bridge, presided. Two letters were received. We decided to support a child in missionary work in India. Bro. Bridge was re-elected elder for the coming three years. Brethren D. S. Dredge and J. Howard Eidemiller are delegates to Annual Conference; Brethren Drue Poundstone, Roy Leach are delegates to District Meeting. Sister Eva Trostle is to be with us April 27.—Ruth B. Shroyer, New Carlisle, Ohio, Feb. 27.

Notice to the Churches of Northwestern Ohio.—The District Meeting of Northwestern Ohio will convene at the Pleasant View church, in Allen County, March 18 to 20. The church is located between Lima and Beaver Dam, near the Western Ohio Traction Line, a few rods from the Lewis stop. The Elders' Meeting is to be held on Tuesday evening, March 18, beginning at 7:30. Services as follows: 9 A. M., 7: 30, 11: 45, 1: 45 P. M., and every two hours, until 7: 45 P. M. Leave Findlay at 8: 45 A. M., 7: 30, 9: 30, 11: 30, 1: 45 P. M. and nearly every two hours in the afternoon. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Bring your "Kingdom Songs No. 2."—Ada Miller, Lima, Ohio, Feb. 26.

Pleasant Hill.—Feb. 21 our pastor, Bro. Chas. L. Flory, closed his six years of work. Bro. Flory is a man of God and has been constantly faithful to the Lord's work. In the evening a large crowd met in the basement of the church for a farewell meeting. Refreshments were served, after which short talks were given by a number of brethren and sisters, expressing their appreciation for the faithful services of Bro. Flory and his wife. Several weeks ago an offering of $190 was given for the Armenian-Syrian Relief; $23 was donated by the Sunday-school. There were baptisms recently. We are glad for the return of several of our young men who were in service.—Mary West, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, Feb. 25.

Pleasant View.—Sister Eva Trostle was with us Feb. 15 and 16, and gave four inspiring talks. Her messages were all very instructive and highly appreciated. Members of the congregation met in council Feb. 22. Our elder, Bro. David Byerly, presided. We decided to adopt the envelope plan of giving. Bro. W. D. Landis was elected delegate to the Annual Meeting. Three delegates were elected to District Meeting. Our love feast will be held May 31. Our Sunday-school sent an offering of $89.39 to the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Ada Miller, Lima, Ohio, Feb. 24.

Portage.—On account of the influenza last fall we had to close our series of meetings. Beginning Feb. 9, we continued them for one week, with a fair attendance and very good interest. Our pastor had charge. Our services have been hindered very much this fall and winter on account of sickness. Bro. Moss is our delegate to District Meeting.—Ota E. Moss, Prairie Depot, Ohio, Feb. 22.

Sugar Creek church met in council Feb. 15, with Eld. Samuel Driver presiding. We elected Bro. S. J. Driver as delegate to the Annual Conference, and Bro. Samuel Hoover as delegate to District Meeting. A committee was appointed to secure a minister to hold a series of meetings. We decided to have a love feast some time in October. We have been collecting for the Armenian-Syrian Relief since our last report. The total amount is $78.50.—Carrie B. Early, Lima, Ohio, Feb. 26.

West Milton.—Feb. 9 Bro. J. W. Norris, of North Manchester, Ind., began a series of meetings, which continued for two weeks. Two were baptized Feb. 23. We had fine weather, large audiences and excellent preaching. In the midst of such times as this, it was indeed a relief and a blessing thus to meet, sing and pray together and listen to the messages as delivered by our brother. May God bless the work to the unifying and strengthening of his church and people, and to the salvation of souls.—J. Henry Showalter, West Milton, Ohio, Feb. 25.

OREGON

Newberg church failed to hold the December council on account of the influenza. All the officers will serve until our next council, at which time a new organization will be effected. We recently had two missionary meetings, and took an offering of $42.50, to be divided between Armenia and the sufferers in India. The Sunday-school also took a special offering for India, amounting to $25.83.—Sarah A. Van Dyke, Newberg, Oregon, Feb. 20.

PENNSYLVANIA

Akron church will open a series of meetings on Saturday evening, May 3, in charge of Eld. H. B. Yoder, of Lancaster. May 11 a missionary program will be rendered in the Akron church in the afternoon. May 24 our love feast will be held. An offering of $136.05 was lifted in our church for the Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our regular spring council will be held on Saturday, March 8, at 1 P. M.—David H. Sauder, Akron, Pa., Feb. 23.

Altoona.—Feb. 23 the Altoona Sunday-school sustained a real loss when its superintendent and co-worker, Bro. A. E. Wilt, was forced, by failing health, to ask to be released from all duties and responsibilities in that capacity. Bro. Wilt has always been a faithful worker both in the church and Sunday-school, and his kindly advice and help will be greatly missed. He has also been our District Superintendent for quite a number of years. Those of the District, with whom he has come in close contact, will surely feel

We have had many calls for an easy-to-read Bible with larger type than the usual minion black-faced type. Our Onyx Black-faced Self-pronouncing Type meets this very need. We recommend it to all who want an especially readable type in a Bible that is still convenient to carry.

You can get this easy-to-read Bible in either a Reference Edition or in a Teachers' Edition; the Bible is printed on a fine grade of white Bible paper and on Nelson's famous India paper.

These Bibles are all in the American Standard Version. This version is the most accurate, the simplest and the clearest of versions. The Editor of the Sunday School Times writes: "In view of its clear revealing of the meaning of the text, the most thoughtful Bible student of today does not feel really safe in studying a Bible passage unless he works with the American Standard in hand."

New Large Type Reference Bibles

An entirely new edition printed from new plates, made especially for this Bible. The type is a large heavy face with all proper names marked for pronunciation, remarkably easy to read. Contains 12 colored maps with index, and 25 outline maps throughout the text.

sorry to learn of his illness. We ask an interest in their prayers in his behalf.—Mrs. Elma G. Rogers, Juniata, Pa., Feb. 25.

Chickies church began a series of meetings at the Mt. Hope house Feb. 1 and closed Feb. 18, with Bro. Thos. Patrick, evangelist. He gave us twenty-one inspiring sermons. Six stood for Christ. Feb. 9 we had our local Sunday-school Meeting at the same place. The talks were interesting and well prepared. We met in our first quarterly council for 1919, following the annual church visit. The various departments of the church gave very favorable reports, especially the Christian Workers and the Aid Society. Eld. S. S. Eshelman presided over the meeting. Our former elder, Bro. Henry Zug, was also present. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren S. S. Eshelman and P. C. Geib; to District Meeting, Brethren B. G. Stauffer, M. B. Ginder, and E. F. Stauffer. Our love feast is to be held May 14 and 15, at the Chickies house.—P. C. Geib, Manheim, Pa., Feb. 24.

Covcotry.—The Men's Organized Bible-Class gave a very interesting program at the opening of the Sunday-school. A fine tribute was given to Lincoln by one of the class, while another gave a reading on the "Life of Roosevelt." The class contributed $25 to the Armenian Relief fund. Our pastor, Bro. L. R. Holsinger, followed with a very inspiring sermon. Feb. 23 the Live Wire Class gave a program consisting of an address on "Washington" and several musical selections. Bro. J. H. Cassady gave us a very helpful sermon.—Mrs. R. E. Harley, Pottstown, Pa., Feb. 24.

Harrisburg.—Feb. 9 the missionary committee rendered a very inspiring program during the Christian Workers' Meeting hour. Feb. 12 about fifty people gathered at the church for prayer service, preparatory to the meetings which are now in progress, with Bro. S. I. Bowman, of Harrisonburg, Va., as evangelist. The interest is good. Feb. 16 the Christian Workers' Meeting hour was inspiring. The topic was "Mountain-Top Experiences" and many took part. Feb. 13 an educational program was rendered by several classes at the home of Brother and Sister Graybill. Various topics were discussed and the attendance was good. At one of our Sunday-school meetings, the superintendent appointed a committee to visit the sick and shut-ins. March 2, at 2:30 o'clock, our people will again hold services in the prison, with Bro. S. I. Bowman in charge.—Sallie E. Schaffner, Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 24.

Hollidaysburg.—The church here has received four more by baptism since our last report, making eleven in all since the New Year. Ten of these are heads of families. Bro. J. J. Shaffer has been doing some effectual pastoral work and preaching. Feb. 23 we lifted an offering of $61 for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Mrs. H. M. Sell, Hollidaysburg, Pa., Feb. 24.

Manor congregation met in council Feb. 22, at the Diamondville house, with Eld. W. N. Myers presiding. The reports of the financial and auditing committees were received and approved. Total offerings for 1918, for all the different activities, including the Sunday-schools of the congregation, amounted to $2,439.47. Bro. W. N. Myers was elected elder for one year. Delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. W. N. Myers; alternate, Bro. D. R. Berkey; delegates to District Meeting, Brethren E. E. Holsopple and S. L. Fyock. Committees were appointed to arrange for a series of meetings at each preaching appointment. Eld. W. N. Myers preached at the Purchase Line house Feb. 23. An offering of $90 was taken for the famine sufferers in India. A Mission Study Class was organized at Purchase Line, with twenty members. The book to be used is "Christian Heroism in Heathen Lands." We are glad to know that Bro. O. A. Holsopple and family will move into our congregation in the near future. Our spring love feast will be held at the Penn Run house May 25.—Catherine E. Fyock, Clymer, Pa., Feb. 25.

Maple Grove church met in a business session recently with Eld. D. P. Hoover presiding. The pastoral committee appointed at the last business session, canvassed the membership and gave a very favorable report. We trust that in the near future the church may be under pastoral care. Officers for the year were elected: Bro. A. B. Varner, church clerk; Sister Anna Link, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. At a previous meeting, Bro. S. M. Varner was reelected superintendent of our Sunday-school. During this quarter two special offerings have been lifted—one of $25.05 for Armenian-Syrian Relief; the other of $26 for the India Famine Fund. —Mrs. D. P. Hoover, Salix, Pa., Feb. 25.

Pittsburgh church, under the leadership of Eld. C. Walter Warstler, for the past six months has been progressing along many lines. Twelve have been received by baptism and six by letter. Notwithstanding the fact that the church was closed for five weeks, during the epidemic, our Sunday-school and church services have rallied and we are again having a large attendance. Several new classes have been formed. Bro. Warstler has paid particular attention to our Christian Workers' Meetings, which have proved a wonderful success. Every Sunday evening we have had excellent programs, well attended. This also adds to our evening church attendance. Feb. 16, under the direction of Prof. L. E. Holsinger, we had a musical program, consisting of several numbers by our own church talent, congregational singing and a reading by Miss Sadie Johnson. The spiritual atmosphere of our Christian Workers' Meetings means a great deal to the growth of the church. Each Sunday, during the month of March, Bro. Warstler will conduct evangelistic services, both morning and evening. We hope that much may be done for the advancement of Christ's cause.—Mrs. A. O. Horner, Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 20.

To the Members of Middle Pennsylvania.—Was there ever a time when so many calls for help came to us? I think not. It sometimes seems that a call to help far away, is more interesting than one near. One of the very important things, quite near, is the Child Rescue Work. Shall we not heed the call that comes to this Middle District of Pennsylvania? There is great need for the Children's Home at Martinsburg, and those who have the work in hand are ready for our contributions. We have answered many calls, but here is one that certainly concerns us. It is a great mittake to neglect the children, and that is what we have been doing. Let us begin now to plan something definite for this cause. Help the needy both far and near.—Eleanor J. Brumbaugh, Huntingdon, Pa., Feb. 23.

TENNESSEE

Meadow Branch church met in council Feb. 22. Not many members were present, and we decided to postpone electing an elder. Bro. Garst could not be with us, and Bro. W. C. Gammon gave us a talk on Saturday night and Sunday. We had Sunday-school for the second time this year. We elected Bro. J. W. Isenberg superintendent of the Sunday-school.—Cora A. Gammon, Tate, Tenn., Feb. 26.

VIRGINIA

Barren Ridge church met in council Feb. 8, with Eld. Geo. Phillips presiding. Four letters were granted. We reorganized our Sunday-school with Brethren V. A. Phillips and C. M. Key, superintendents. Bro. Geo. Phillips was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting, and Brethren J. W. Harshberger, N. W. Coffman and J. H. Gochenour, delegates to District Meeting.—Walter Crickenberger, Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 24.

Brick.—Bro. Virgil C. Finnell came Feb. 15 and gave us seven very interesting lectures on Sunday-school work. During his series of lectures an offering of $50 was taken in behalf of the Sunday-school work. We feel that our church has been much strengthened by having Bro. Finnell with us. Bro. C. D. Hylton has been with us recently, working in behalf of the Daleville College endowment fund. He preached an interesting sermon Feb. 9. Jan 12 an offering of $126.70 was lifted by our Sunday-school for the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Lizzie Peters, Wirtz, Va., Feb. 24.

Bridgewater congregation met in council in the College Street church Feb. 19. Eld. H. G. Miller presided. The council was called especially to hear the report of the Pastoral Board. The Board's recommendation of Bro. A. B. Miller, of Hagerstown, as our pastor, was accepted. Bro. Miller will begin his work here about Sept. 1.—M. A. Good, Bridgewater, Va.

Fairfax church met in council Feb. 8, with Eld. I. M. Neff presiding. Superintendents for the different Sunday-schools were elected as follows: Bull Run, Bro. Howard Myers and Sister Eva Miller; Dranisville, Brethren D. S. Roller and Harry Stover; Oakton, Brethren J. S. Wine and I. B. Miller.—Maggie Miller, Vienna, Va., Feb. 27.

Salem church met in council Feb. 15, with Eld. L. R. Dettra presiding. One certificate of membership was received. Our council collection amounted to $71.16, $55.90 of which is to be sent to the Orphans' Home at Timberville, and the remainder to World-wide Missions. Delegates to the District Meeting are Brethren Cephas Fahnestock and Simon Hamsbarger, with Bro. Walter Yates and Sister Ethel Funkhouser, alternates.—Mitylene B. Dettra, Stephens City, Va., Feb. 22.

Smith River.—We have just had with us Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, of Elgin, Ill. We feel that we have been greatly benefited by the new ideas given us for Sunday-school work. We organized our Sunday-school while Bro. Finnell was here, and expect to begin April 1. We hope that we can have Bro. Finnell with us again.—Lily Agee, Buffalo Ridge, Va., Feb. 17.

To the Sub-secretaries of the Ministerial Board of the Southern District of Virginia:—The Ministerial Board desires to keep in touch with the different churches of the District, in regard to any suitable young brethren for the ministry, and where the churches desire to hold an election. Give, also, the names of any who are thinking of taking up mission work, either in the home or foreign field. (See Minutes of Annual Meeting of 1917, page 6, section 5, under management.) The Board is anxious to do its bit in carrying forward the great Five-year Forward Movement, urged by the General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren. The sub-secretaries, where they have been appointed, will please write to the undersigned, giving any information regarding the Board's work. This will also help in making out our report, to be rendered at our District Meeting.—J. F. Robertson, Secretary, R. D. 1, Winston-Salem, N. C., Feb. 25.

WASHINGTON

Richland Valley church began a series of meeting Feb. 15, with Bro. J. O. Streeter, of Chewelah, Wash., evangelist. We have much hopes of their success. The meetings will close with a love feast.—Ida McNamee, Centralia, Wash., Feb. 18.

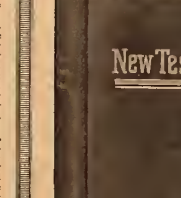
5993 CONVERTS BAPTIZED IN 1918
ARE YOU CONSERVING THESE GAINS?

NEW TESTAMENT DOCTRINES, by Elder J. H. Moore, gives a brief and interesting treatment of all New Testament Doctrines. Churches will find it an excellent book to put into the hands of all who have recently been added to the church.



WHY USE THE NEW TESTAMENT DOCTRINES---It is not enough to stop with baptism---converts should be taught "to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

The New Testament Doctrines treats over 100 subjects in such brief and inviting ways that the book is sure to be read.

The church needs growing members who "press on unto perfection." A copy of The New Testament Doctrines in the hands of every young Christian will prove a long step in this direction.

Churches have used less helpful books with splendid success. Why not use New Testament Doctrines?

It is a handsome, clearly printed, cloth bound book, 75 cents, postpaid.

If you have just closed a revival, if you are in the midst of one, or if you are planning a series of meetings, just remember that a copy of New Testament Doctrines should be in the hands of every convert.

The Church at Kadesh-Barnea

ONE year was ample time for the journey from Egypt to Canaan. In fact, that is about all that was used in going forward. The other thirty-nine were spent in going nowhere—just camping and wandering around.

And this was all because they threw away their chance at Kadesh-barnea. They might have gone right on and have taken possession of the land at once. But they listened to the prophets of disaster, and disaster was their portion, sure enough.

The church is at Kadesh-barnea now. The Boards are urging us to push right on up into the land of conquest, the land of greater service to the world we live in, the land of greater glory to our God. And some of the spies are saying we can do it. And some of our churches are already doing it.

There are others,—but not in the ratio of ten to to two, we hope,—who say it is too hard. The difficulties are too great. We can not overcome them.

Shall we listen to these croakers? Shall we let slip this golden opportunity, and wander about in the wilderness for another generation? Shall we repeat the fatal error of faithless Israel?

The Lord help us to hearken to the voice of Joshua and Caleb.

Youth, Years and the Gospel

YOUTH is vigorous, hopeful, self-confident. It plans and purposes, decides, resolves, begins. It is sure that when it gets to going properly, things will be different. The world will not be the world it is much longer. It will be a better world, a much better world.

As the years increase, the tone becomes more moderate and modest. It begins to look as if much of what you have planned to do yourself will have to be left for some one else. You are not quite so masterful a person as you had supposed. You have a growing respect for those who have fought on life's battlefield before you, and a growing sense of the limitations of human wisdom and strength. And you find increasing comfort in the thought that God's appraisal of you takes account, not only of what you do, but also of what you would do if you could.

Thank God for the patient humility and steadied trust which years and experience engender! Life would be unbearable without them.

How wonderfully wisely the message of the Gospel is fitted to these facts in human nature!

First to enlist our chief interest is its ideal way of life, its perfect standard of human relationships as exemplified in Jesus, the Object of our faith. What a strong appeal this makes to the self-confidence of imaginative youth. Of course it will make this ideal way its own. It will make the principle of unselfish service,—the law of love,—the ruling passion of its life. It will build for itself a Christlike character, and, by the very power of its magnetism, will compel the world to see the beauty of the Christian ideal and adopt it.

And then, by and by, there comes the rude awakening, the realization that ambition and accomplishment are not the same. You see how far you are falling short of the Christ standard, and it begins to dawn upon you that to reach it you would need to live much longer than Methuselah. And then it is that you appreciate, as never before, that other side of the Gospel Message, which is not another side of it but the very heart of it.

For now you are less fascinated by the prospect of your own attainments. You have looked into the Gospel more deeply and your confidence has found a better basis. You rest your hopes on "Jesus' blood and righteousness." Which means, that you have found out that God loves you, that he is pleased with what you meant t

Holding to the Tenor of t

AMONG the thirty-two decisions made at the General Conference of 1882 there was one to the effect that all questions for which no direct "Thus saith the Lord" could be found, should be decided "according to the spirit and meaning of the Scripture." It was further provided that these decisions, no less than those based on direct Scripture statements, should be "mandatory to all the churches," or, as modified the following year, "the rule of all the churches."

Although the sentiment of the Conference was overwhelmingly in favor of the decision, the discussion of it was not without a sharp conflict of opinion. There were those who felt that this was carrying things too far, that it involved an undue exercise of ecclesiastical authority.

We do not care to argue this point here, nor to dwell upon the steady growth of this sentiment during the years that followed. What we wish to point out is that this decision, born though it was in an atmosphere of controversy, did contain a principle that is unquestionably sound. Whatever fault there was with it was certainly not in the purpose to decide things "according to the spirit and meaning of the Scripture." On this point our old brethren might have gone farther than they did. For even when they based their decisions on specific Bible language, they might well have asked whether the application made of it was "according to the spirit and meaning of the Scripture." This is the final arbiter always. This is the check against any improper uses of the Scripture.

There is danger, of course, in trying to answer questions, about which the Bible does not speak directly, according to the general tenor of the Scripture, that we may answer them instead according to the tenor of

That Jesus Christ, as the Son of God, is a complete Revelation of God is another great doctrine of the New Testament. There are plenty of texts. One thinks of "The express image of his person," "The fulness of the Godhead," "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," and many more. But the strength of the doctrine is that it lies at the very heart of the Gospel Message. The Gospel of John, in fact, is built upon this proposition.

It is manifest that no interpretation of Christian doctrine can be accepted which conflicts with this fundamental truth. And yet, unconsciously no doubt, such interpretations are sometimes put forth. The atoning work of Christ has often been explained in a manner which implies that the character and attributes of Jesus are not exactly those of God himself,—that God's attitude to sin and sinful men is different from that of the more sympathetic Jesus.

And so we might go on at great length with illustrations of the principle for which we are contending, which is that the general tenor of the Gospel, "the Spirit and meaning of the Scripture," as the brethren of 1882 called it, is a much safer basis of Christian doctrine than detached passages, taken here and there, without regard to their historical connection. We feel very sure that mistakes were made in the application of this principle, but this fact must not blind us to its validity. There is urgent need right now of more attention to it.

Faithful Teachers

Some months ago there appeared in the Messenger a call for a minister, sound in the faith, and in full sympathy with the principles held by the Church of the Brethren. On reading the notice we wondered about the necessity of wording a call after that manner. Then, we wondered why we should have any other kind of ministers. In fact, what use has the church for preachers who are not sound in the faith, and who are not in full accord with the principles held by the church? There might be some reason for having, in our congregations, members who are weak in the faith, or members with whose mistakes we must bear from year to year, but why have an active official who can not be depended upon to teach the Word as set forth in the New Testament?

The New Testament has a good deal to say about sound doctrine, and being sound in the faith. Titus was told to rebuke sharply the Cretians, that they might be sound in the faith (Titus 1: 13). This may not refer to ministers, for more was expected of them. Their being sound in the faith of the Lord Jesus Christ was taken for granted. Paul instructed Timothy to commit the word to "faithful men," able to teach others (2 Tim. 2: 2). That is, to men sound in the faith,—men who will teach sound doctrine. He was further told that in his teaching and life he should "hold fast the form of sound words" (2 Tim. 1: 13). This means nothing short of sound teaching, sound doctrine, and sound in the faith. Notice what Paul, in Titus 1: 9, would require of the bishop, or elder: "Holding fast the faithful word as he has been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers."

Now, notice the clincher to Titus, and an elder, on this point: "But speak thou the things that become sound doctrine" (Titus 2: 1). One more scripture along this line will be in place,—one which applies to ministers in every age and clime, no less than it was meant to apply to Timothy, a young elder in the church: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2: 15).

Here we have it,—"commit the word only to faithful men," men who would speak the things that become sound doctrine,—men sound in the faith, and who will study the Word, hold fast the form of sound words, that they may know how rightly to divide the word of truth in teaching the people. They were further told to "preach the word" in the very face of the coming time when people "will not endure sound doctrine" (2 Tim. 4: 2, 3). Not only so, but the faithful teachers were warned of the approaching period when those who could no longer endure sound doctrine would select teachers to suit their fancy. Committing the Gospel to faithful teachers,—these preachers teaching only the things in keeping with sound doctrine, and continuing in a careful study of the Word,—was looked upon as the real solution of the problem. And, yet, in spite of all this, men not sound in the faith got into the ministry, and played havoc with the faith of not a few. But read the story of the "Seven Churches of Asia" and notice what steps the Lord took to weed out the influences that were leading his people astray.

We go back to our first consideration: Why do we have men who do not thoroughly believe in the doctrine of the church that entrusted them with the ministry? If they are not in sympathy with the way the church understands and applies the New Testament teachings, how can they, in faith, serve in the ministry? Is a man real honest with his God, honest with himself and honest with his people, when he knows in his heart that he can not accept some of the cardinal principles of the religious body that has invested him with the ministry? And, to make matters still worse, he will, now and then, teach just enough of the contrary doctrine to poison the faith of a few, but not enough to get himself into trouble. Is this honesty? Is it treating the church fair?

This reminds us of a circumstance in a conference, presided over by a bishop of intelligence and strict loyalty to his church. The pastor of a local congregation had been cited to the conference for teaching some things not in keeping with the doctrine held by the Methodist Church. He was allowed to present his case, to give reasons for his teaching, and, like most of such ministers, he emphasized the leadership of the Spirit in the light that had come to him. The way the bishop set the man straight for posing as a duly-authorized minister of the Methodist Church, and, at the same time, teaching the doctrine of another religious body, was enough to make every ear in the house tingle. He was told that a Methodist pastor, in his teaching and life, was expected to live right up to the teachings and regulations of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, furthermore, that the doctrines and rules, governing the pastors of the Methodist body, had been settled in conference much higher than State conference, or local congregations, and that it was his business, as bishop, to see that the rules of these upper conferences were duly respected in his State conferences.

The manner in which the minister was rebuked for his erroneous teaching, not only did the man good, but helped the other ministers and their wives who were present. Had the pastor in question called for a letter of dismissal, in order that he might unite with the church holding the new doctrine that he was teaching, his request would have been granted. That would have been considered honorable. But for him to pose as a Methodist pastor and teach some other doctrine, was looked upon as disloyalty and hypocrisy.

In view of that which will be for the best in the long run, we are wondering if we, as a people, are sufficiently careful in impressing on our ministers the importance of strict loyalty to the principles of the Church of the Brethren. There was a time when the importance of ministerial attire, and the nonuse of tobacco were a little more than ordinarily emphasized,—and should continue to be emphasized,—but little attention has been given to the doctrines and rules of the church in general. The acceptance of these has been taken for granted,—a custom that works well enough when no one is disposed to take advantage of the faith imposed in the ministry.

To illustrate: The church holds the doctrine of close communion. A minister becomes so liberal that he not only engages with other churches in the communion services, but he teaches the doctrine of open communion. Has he not departed from the faith of his church? Another instance: The church has always held to the fundamental doctrine of baptism, preceded by faith and repentance, for the remission of sins. A minister teaches that sinners are saved by faith alone, that his sins are remitted the moment he, in faith, accepts Christ, and that baptism cuts no figure in salvation. Is this minister sound in the faith? Does he teach sound doctrine?

During the war, so far, there has been a lot of sound teaching regarding our nonresistant doctrine. Then, on the other hand, there has been considerable loose teaching, and no small amount of very loose practice. But one more illustration: The church in her Conference, and out of it, has invariably opposed membership in secret, oathbound orders. In spite of this, ministers may quietly become members of such orders, and even justify themselves and others in the act. Can this be considered loyalty to the church and her claims? Do men of this type, by their life and preaching, teach sound doctrine? Are they sound in the faith?

One might easily multiply illustrations, but what about the remedy? There is just one, and one only is needed: Commit the Word to "faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also" (2 Tim. 2: 2). This is the rule in supplying officers for the army. Only loyal and efficient officers are entrusted with a body of men. Faithful and efficient officers insure the highest order of efficiency in the army. The principle holds good for the church. Commit the teaching of the Word and church leadership to none but faithful and competent men and you will hear very little complaint about disloyalty in the rank and file of the membership. How to do this is our problem. By loyalty to sound principles we do not mean different views regarding open and unsettled questions. We mean the teachings of the New Testament, as accepted and applied by the Brethren. We mean the things that have been settled by us in open Conference and in other ways. To these we have a right to claim strict adherence by all of those who are set apart as teachers of the Word. But just how fully to maintain this condition is one of the problems of the hour.

The Prophet and the Legalist

The legalist always kills the prophet. Who is the legalist and who is the prophet? In the days of Jesus, the legalist was the scribe, the Pharisee, the lawyer, and those who were very scrupulous in keeping the letter of the law, but, in so doing, had no time to keep the spirit of the law, which was love, and justice, and mercy (Matt. 23: 23).

The legalist, at present, is like the legalist of old,—a stickler for the letter, for the traditions of the fathers, and for the things of the past, rather than for the future.

The prophets were always "preachers of righteousness" who had little or no interest in formal sacrifice and worship, but they always appealed to the moral and spiritual duties of man. The program of the prophet was (1) God is holy and righteous, and he demands righteousness and justice and mercy in his people. (2) The prophet denounced the sins of the people and assured them that the holy God would punish them for their sins. Their racial connection with Abraham would not save them,—only righteousness. (3) The prophet always appealed for repentance,—true repentance from all sin,—then God would be merciful and save Israel.

Why should the legalist find fault with the prophet who stands on such a platform? For at least two reasons: (1) The legalist usually has a number of sins which the prophet condemns. The prophet demands justice and mercy, which are of small account to the legalist. The legalist expects salvation by his strict observance of laws and traditions, and has little interest in ethics. (2) The prophet has just as little interest in cults and sacrifice, and the legalistic forms of worship, keeping the Sabbath and feasts, etc., as the legalist has in love and justice and purity. It is because he stresses lightly what is so dear to the legalist, that the stern legalist kills him,—either with stones, or with the cross, or with his tongue, or his vote, or, usually, by slander and calumny. The prophet and the legalist live in different worlds. Jesus was a Prophet, and he refused to conform to the legalist's notion of worship, so the legalist killed him.

There are many conscientious people today who are legalistic in temper and training, who are in great danger lest they, too, help to kill the influence of the prophets in their zeal for the "letter that killeth."

The La Verne Church and College

In what was said in these columns, several weeks ago, about the churches of Northern California, it was stated that the Empire church was the largest in the State. This was a mistake. It should have been said that it is the largest in the Northern District of California. The largest church, as to membership in the State, is at La Verne. It has increased in membership and in influence for good very rapidly during the last few years, and now numbers five hundred and two members, according to a statement given by the efficient clerk of the church, Eld. L. J. Lehman.

A few weeks ago we had the privilege of spending a short time at La Verne, and enjoying a season of divine services with the membership in their commodious house of worship. We enjoyed the visit and the services very much indeed. Recently they removed the chairs, used as seats for a number of years, and replaced them with comfortable, permanent seats. It is a very good improvement. The new seats are comfortable and the seating capacity has been largely increased. The services in the church were very enjoyable. The large audience room was crowded to its capacity, and it is apparent to an onlooker that a new and larger church building is required to accommodate those desiring to attend our services. Our brethren have very much the largest audiences in the town.

Our brother, J. P. Dickey, is the elder in charge, having recently succeeded Bro. England, who had been in charge for a number of years, and resigned. The church has secured Eld. R. H. Miller, the son of one of the pillars of the church in past years, as pastor, and he is doing good work. The workers of the church have been fully organized under his direction, and all who are willing to work for the advancement of the cause of the Master, can have an opportunity, and great good will be accomplished.

La Verne is the home of several of our aged brethren, whose names are household words in our Brotherhood. Eld. Andrew Hutchinson is known everywhere in our Brotherhood. He is now in his eighty-second year. He suffers from the disease known as "shingles," —a painful malady. He has, to some extent, given up preaching. He gives an occasional sermon to the great edification of his hearers. Eld. Edmund Forney is in his eighty-first year, looks well, and enjoys very good health. He requested that his name should not be placed among those who preach regularly. Then there is our brother David Norcross. He has been afflicted with paralysis, and for some time was unable to walk. Now he is able to take walks with a little assistance. He attends the services at church. Bro. Quinter Calvert also has his home in La Verne. He enjoys good health and looks well. He preaches as opportunity offers. We very much enjoyed visits and interviews with these brethren, whom we have known personally for many years, and whom we learned to love as fellow-laborers. Being with them for a short season, made the writer conscious of the fact that he, too, is being numbered among the aged.

La Verne College is also in a very prosperous condition. Eld. S. J. Miller is president, and the faculty is made up of wide-awake, scholarly teachers. They have made a remarkable success during the last few years. Meeting the students in the chapel, held in store a great surprise for the writer. The chapel was well-filled with a fine-looking body of students. Years ago I met the students in one of the recitation rooms, and then there were only fifteen or twenty. This year they have enrolled one hundred and fifty, and next year,—the president told me,—they hope to double the number.

Last year they erected a fine dormitory building,—one among the very best of its kind among all our schools. It has every possible modern convenience, and is very finely furnished. Those who managed the construction of the building, are to be congratulated on what they have accomplished. The church has need of a good college on the Coast. La Verne is firmly established, and will grow and meet all the requirements of these days. Our "Coast" Brethren can not do better than to give liberally to its endowment fund, and patronize their home college. D. L. M.

Only Thee!

BY B. F. M. SOURS

Only thee, my Lord and Savior,
Through the din of earth I see;
Noise of battle is around me,
Yet I worship none but thee.

Only thee, for me who suffered;
Thou art all; my heart must crave
Only thee, for years forever;
Thou my deathless soul must save.

Only thee! Oh, Christ immortal,
Nought is there to seek beside;
Thou art Friend and conquering Savior;
Thou for me wast crucified.

Only thee? Oh, Lord and Master,
May I seek thy grace alone,
Till, beyond the jasper portal,
I adore thee on thy throne.

$150,000 for 150-Decillion-Dollar Souls

BY J. A. VANCIL

One hundred thousand people to do it,—to give one dollar and fifty cents per capita. Can it be done? That isn't the question. Will we do it? That stares the church in the face just now. How can it be done? Well, that is the easiest thing in the world. All it requires is a little special consecration. If the Church of the Brethren enters into a real, thorough consecration, there will not only be a Becker Bicentennial offering of $150,000, but many times that much.

You ask: "How can it be done?" Perhaps you think I am the victim of an inflated imagination. Do not judge hastily, dear brother and sister, but let us look at a few things for a moment:

Perhaps you purchased Liberty Bonds. If so, you did it out of the surplus of your resources. Why not put those Liberty Bonds to work for the cause of Jesus Christ? It was really the Lord's money that purchased them, anyway.

Now here is a chance to bring good out of evil. Did you ever think or consider this thought, dear reader, that if the Christian church had really spent as much money and effort in the Lord's work, evangelizing the world during the past hundred years, as was spent in making the world safe for democracy during the last two years, the power of the Lord would have been so great, in the hearts and lives of men of all nations, that the devil could not have stirred up a fuss, and much less a fight? It has been said that seventy-five per cent of the expense of this war was paid by the Christian people.

The Christian church has sown a great harvest of neglect, and she has permitted opportunities for service to go by unheeded. She has withheld from the Lord unpardonably. Now she has had to reap the harvest. Repeated calls have come for each person to purchase Liberty Bonds, in order to raise funds with which to do, by armed force, what we have failed to do with the Sword of the Spirit. It is not too late to donate the money, invested in these Bonds and War Savings Stamps, to the service of the Lord. Why not consecrate these securities to the evangelizing of the world? Put them into the great Conference Offering. These were our surplus resources.

Is it not a fact that when the quotas were made out, by the war work solicitors, they placed their figures on a basis of five per cent of each man's valuation? We have had four Liberty Loan campaigns. If each person participated in them to the limit of his five per cent, each time, or if he averaged that amount for the four drives, he gave only what belonged to the Lord for two years.

We have approximately 100,000 members in the Church of the Brethren. This will mean about 33,333 families. How much money,—the Lord's money,—was raised by them for war work during the last two years? No doubt it was a vast amount.

In our County of Putnam, in Ohio, we have about six thousand families,—an estimated population of about 30,000. This county raised over $555,000 through the sale of War Savings Stamps alone. Besides, it went over the top in every other drive that was made for funds. Now, numerically, that only represents about one-fifth of the membership of the Church of the Brethren. In my judgment, the wealth of this county will not reach more than one-fifth of the wealth of the Church of the Brethren, at a very conservative estimate. If those Liberty Bonds were turned over to the church, there would be sufficient funds, from the accruing interest, to carry on all departments of the work of the church for the next five years. Then, at the maturity of these Bonds, there would be a vast available amount. What a wonderful opportunity the General Mission Board would have, to develop the work of the church at home and abroad as never before!

Now I wish that this message could be proclaimed from every pulpit in the Brotherhood until the hearts of our Brethren were stirred to respond with a turning over of these funds.

With the Liberty Bonds in the possession of our Brethren, our colleges could easily be endowed until equipped second to none. Our Educational Board would have the means to assist an army of worthy young men and women through school,—loyal workers who are willing to devote their lives exclusively to the work of the church. The District Mission Boards and the General Mission Board would have funds with which to support hundreds of workers. Think of the great amount of good they would have an opportunity of accomplishing, because of the consecration of the people backing them!

When such gifts are consecrated really and truly, the donors are going to have a personal interest to the extent that the gift will be followed by fervent prayers for the success of the Lord's work everywhere. May we have many of them!

Yes, we can easily raise the $150,000 offering,—if we will.

Church History and Polity

II. The Lay Minister

We have a very long list of ministers, in proportion to the size of our denomination; but the vast majority of them are really "lay ministers," as classified by the Government and by most other denominations, because they have other occupations. Altogether there are nearly four thousand on our ministerial list. Not five hundred of them, however, are on "livings," or "salaries" or "support." Many of our elders, even, are really lay ministers.

Now, landing right in the middle of my theme, what is the best and most acceptable policy to be pursued by the Brotherhood with respect to her non-pastor ministers? Well, surely the best thing of all is for them to fit themselves, if they are not already fitted, and for the church to assist them to fit themselves, if they are capable of being fitted to become pastors in churches now waiting for them. That's true, and no one will dispute it. But some are "too old to preach." Careful now! Let us not get too much in a hurry about this matter. Age should ripen a preacher, and the church should not "Oslerize" its ministry at sixty, or younger, or older. Spite of our great desire for an "educated ministry," let us not hastily set aside some real preachers for mere school-boys,—this, mind you, in no defense of some minister,—even if he be an elder,—who is and has been blocking the progress of some congregation by preventing the selection of a much-needed pastor.

Some of our ministers are really willing to become pastors, and are well fitted for the work, both by training and church experience; but they just can not afford the livings offered by our churches. Now it must be confessed that our salary basis, as a denomination, is above the average, as found in some other denominations; for, from all accounts, it would appear that we are averaging above a thousand dollars a year. But a few hundred dollars ought not to stand in the way of tying up some really capable ministers to really suffer-

False religion, composed of Brahmanism, Buddhism, Taoism and Mohammedanism, we believe to be the false prophet personified and mentioned in Rev. 16: 13 and 19: 20. The conflict between these false religions and the Gospel of the Prince of Peace, is now going on. Brahmanism in India is trembling before the Gospel of peace. Buddhism and Taoism in China and Japan are giving way to the Christian missionaries. The sixth epoch will be marked when the victory for the Prince of Peace over the false prophet will be won.

In the great future, the student of the philosophy of history will see that this "increase of government and peace" will have come about in the form of an evolution by successive stages, each one marked by a conflict and an epoch; that it developed like the stone cut out without hands, mentioned in Dan. 2: 34-45. That it began with two disciples on the banks of Jordan, in the days of John the Baptist and increased until the number reached one hundred twenty on the day of Pentecost, which number was suddenly augmented by three thousand, then five thousand more, after which it spread over all Europe and around the world, in spite of the fierce persecutions of Roman emperors and the Catholic hierarchy, so that Napoleon could say: "Alexander and Cæsar and Charlemagne and myself have tried to establish universal empires by means of the sword, and we all have failed, and today not a single soldier would die for any of us, while that lowly Nazarene, without the sword, has established a kingdom that surrounds the earth and today millions would lay down their lives for him." "Not by might nor by power, but by the Spirit of God" (Zech. 4: 6).

The Schooling of Joseph

BY D. D. THOMAS

THE curriculum of study, in the school to which Joseph went, differed much from the schools of today in spirit and method. Each attainment was not attributed to self-effort, but to the favor of God. Every noble act was not a subject for boasting and self-elevation, but for praise and thanksgiving. The candor and sincerity that are found in this young man, are not always in evidence in the typical modern student. In Joseph's case there was no fear of his brethren. He simply tried to do the will of God.

There seems to be here a noble determination to follow a Divine Leader by faith. He did not go to Dothan to be put in a pit. That was not a part of his program. He did not rejoice as one about to ascend a throne or to obtain a kingdom, when he saw them counting out the twenty pieces of silver. He was not preparing himself to deal in buying and selling corn when he worked in the house of Potiphar. His diplomacy was not that of a worldling. Surrounded by Egyptian darkness, he forgot not the light of heaven. Even in the hours of imprisonment,—cruel as they were,—he had a higher goal than any kingdom of this world. That was not what moved him to interpret the dreams of the butler and the baker. He longed for liberty. That, and that alone, made him plead to be remembered. The forgetfulness of the butler did not discourage him, and send him down the path of sin. Though his sphere was small, he was willing to work in that sphere to the glory of God.

Joseph's spirit was one of submission, and yet, in his submission, he labored. He submitted to his father, and as long as he could, ministered unto his brethren. His slavery in Potiphar's house was not beneath him, and he maintained his integrity there. He always seemed to think that God had something to do with his affairs, and was willing to trust and wait to see the outcome. His character was above reproach, and he showed himself a discreet and honorable man.

He had wisdom because he asked of God. He received it liberally because he went to the True Source to get it. If he had sought it in some story written by the hand of man, there is no likelihood that his history would be in evidence today. And, then, such a history as it is,—true, noble and good,—a type of the Christ to come!

Some of the history of Joseph, not recorded, would, it seems, be a pleasure to know. The nine years,—seven of which he spent in gathering grain, and two in distributing,—what startling events transpired in that space of time?

When, in Joseph's youth, Jacob sent him away to visit his brothers, he said: "Bring me word again." Did Joseph, in his later years, still remember his father's instruction? Did he keep in mind not only the safety of his brethren, but the salvation of his whole house?

Where strong faith is, worry is not apt to come. God had so wonderfully cared for him that he was persuaded he would also take care of his father. He had a good grade in his record, as to faith. Enough of his history has been written that we might believe.

Joseph also had another good grade. Away back there, seventeen hundred years before Christ, he had learned the essence of the "Golden Rule." It is against one's nature to submit to being bought and sold, but he overcame that. While testing the sincerity of his brethren, Joseph had the satisfaction of hearing his actions regarded as a due punishment for their sin, and hearing them express repentance, yet not one thought seems to have entered his mind other than that he might do them good. His rough treatment of them was more a matter of inquiry than anything else. By it he drew them out and with it he learned their true condition. That was his plan. He kept Simeon prisoner that they might bring Benjamin down, and eventually their father. It is very clear that he wanted to do enough for them before they knew who he was, to be sure that they would realize that he loved them.

It was no small task for Joseph to get enough, in seven years of plenty, to feed the world for another seven years. It was not so much that they could not be fed, but that, in those early days of civilization, they might submit to his plans, while he dealt out food sparingly to them, in order that it would last.

God prospered Joseph not only in Potiphar's house, and in the prison, but also endeared him to the Egyptians. His simple faith and trust in God made him a power among the people. His success depended upon genuine merit. The preservation of life was his theme, and the service and glory of God was his goal. He did not make his exalted standing prominent when he wrote his name, but it is certain that he had it, nevertheless, and one is made to admire him for that trait.

Coöperation in Church Work

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER

COÖPERATION along religious lines is under notice of some very fertile minds. I have resolved to join the investigators, in seeking a solution of this question:

I. Coöperation Is Exceedingly Helpful as Well as Needful Along All Lines of Human Effort.—The Church of the Brethren and a number of other churches have been exponents of temperance and have done some work along that line. Then we have the Prohibition party, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and a number of other temperance organizations. These have all done some work along temperance lines. But the date when these bodies united their efforts and became coöperative in temperance work, marks a new era in the growth of the temperance cause,—all due to coöperation.

The Church of the Brethren and about sixteen other anti-secret churches, coöperating with the National Christian Association in opposing secret societies, have met with the same marked success in demonstrating the evils of secrecy.

The recent victory on the battle-fields of Europe has been due to systematic coöperation.

II. The Scriptures Hold Up and Vindicate Coöperation of the Purest Texture.—When Christ came into the world, he found the elements of society at variance with each other. To the Jews were given the Oracles of God, yet from the Gentiles they were widely separated, and with the Samaritans they had no dealings. Christ broke down the middle wall of partition to make for himself one "new man," so making peace, that he might present to himself a glorious church. Here is the legal basis for coöperation. The union in this "new man," this "one body," this "one glorious church," is such that its parts are "framed," "builded" and even "knit together." Here, we are told, "all speak the same thing,—Christ is not divided." Christ chose his twelve, whom he taught, and then left them in the final care of this "new man,"—this "glorious church." These faithful servants closely coöperated with their Lord, for "by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body." Paul says: "Be ye followers of me even as I am also of Christ." Christ said: "My sheep hear my voice and they follow me." In these there are no elements of division.

The above outlines coöperation of the highest order, associated with the Holy Trinity,—Father, Son and Holy Spirit. God assured Isaiah of the foregoing thus: "I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people, . . . of every kindred, tongue and people." This is the Gospel standard of mutual coöperation for the salvation of souls.

III. Individuals, Societies and Churches May Cooperate and Do Much in Relieving the Physical and Moral Needs of Society and Yet Not Contribute to the Uplift of the Soul.—Paul said: "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, . . . and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." Our giving may be for a worthy cause along coöperative lines, but if it lacks the grace of charity, it is not up to the Gospel standard, and hence will not help the soul. Christ alludes to some distinguished clergymen, who will vainly appeal to the Master in the last day. These clergymen had doubtless done much, and had even wrought along the line of coöperation, but not on divine lines. Not having coöperated with the Trinity, it "profited them nothing."

Paul says: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Paul coöperated on Gospel lines and hence his efforts availed. But the coöperation sought today is a union,—an amalgamation or confederacy of churches,—with no effort for a Gospel basis upon which to operate.

Dec. 4, last, delegates from nineteen churches met in Philadelphia, seeking a union, that they might cooperate in their church work. The goal sought was worthy, but their methods were at fault. In that assembly was every mode of baptism,—even those who discarded every form of water baptism and every order of communion service. But Christ gave us only one order or method, while at the foregoing convention there was no effort to unify these on the Gospel basis. The goal sought seemed to be on a basis no higher than a mere union, a confederation in which each one would be allowed his own personal choice in faith and practice. These people sought a union in which they agreed to disagree. Such unions may do good on some very needy lines, but they will not reach the soul.

True, church federation is growing. Both the press and the pulpit give it encouragement, and the war has given it impetus. But, as seen, the coöperation is sought along lines which avail for a time only, but will be futile in eternity.

Considerable effort is given to secure more coöperation among mission workers in heathen lands. Unless such efforts are along Gospel lines, they may do something for the physical and moral needs of humanity, but will not contribute to the needs of the soul. A gigantic effort is being made to effect a union between the church and the world, and it bids fair to reach its goal.

I am at a loss to know how brethren can sit in such federated assemblies, in open violation of plain Gospel restraints, held and taught by the church. Our early fathers guarded this matter with care, for they knew that they could not retain their primitive faith while affiliating with those who teach and practice a fragmentary Gospel. Good wheat, mixed with a low grade, will all be marked low grade. John declares with emphasis: "If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him Godspeed; for he that biddeth him Godspeed is a partaker of his evil deeds." And Paul urges the same restraint in Gal. I: 8, 9. We need to remember the dire woe that God pronounced upon Israel through Isaiah: "Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help."

Sebring, Fla.

THE ROUND TABLE

A "Win-One-Week"

BY J. J. TAWZER

THROUGH the prevalence of the influenza epidemic many contemplated evangelistic efforts have been postponed or canceled, and, because of a lack of evangelists, many must give up their contemplated series of meetings. Such being the case, why not try a "Win-One-Week"? This means just what it says,—that each member of the congregation tries to "win one for Christ." Such an effort, to my mind, is literally the carrying out of Matt. 28: 19: "Go ye,"—not alone the minister,—but each Christian.

This method is not as difficult as it may appear. Let me suggest how it may be done: Let the congregation and its pastor or elder get together and arrange for a suitable time. Then arrange for a sermon each evening by the home ministers. Let each member give the name of one person whom he will try to win. Let these names be arranged on a prayer-list, each adopting his own time for personal work with his respective candidate.

Have a prayer meeting some afternoon, or in the evening, before preaching, to pray for those on the prayer-list. At that meeting let each one report the result of his personal work, or ask advice or assistance.

Do not place the stress on the preacher or preaching, but on personol work and prayer, and leave results with God. Many laymen will be surprised at the ability they have as personal workers, and the spiritual strength gained.

When one week is ended, they will be ready to go on with the work for a second week.

In my own experience and observation I am convinced that a "Win-One-Week" will, in most places, do as much good, for both saint and sinner, as the ordinary evangelistic effort. At this time of great things being accomplished in every other line of activity, let us not be slack in our work for "Christ and the church."

Could We Say This?

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

"And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp. And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered, and said, My lord Moses, forbid them. And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his spirit upon them" (Num. 11: 27-29)!

THE ability to prophesy was a special favor bestowed by God on one who acted as his messenger or mouthpiece, and when the young man found others in the camp, besides the specially-appointed ones, exercising this gift, he ran in alarm to Moses. Such an infringement of Moses' divine rights and prerogatives should certainly be suppressed at once. If allowed to go on, it would greatly weaken his position as a leader, or possibly he would lose it altogether.

But he is met with the astonishing reply of verse 29. Moses would have as gladly renounced any honor or prominence this gift gave him, as he did the pleasures of the court of Egypt, the better to serve his people, if all the Children of Israel could have been so filled with God's Spirit as to prophesy. Then there would have been no murmurings, no doubtings of God's protection and leading, and, greater yet, no forty years' wandering in the wilderness, for, like all unselfish acts, it would have come back a hundredfold in blessing to Moses. It would have been a joy indeed, instead of the great trial, which it now was, had he been able to lead a people so Spirit-filled.

Let us consider, for a moment, this trait of Moses' character, which is so unusual in people generally, for the wonderful spirit here shown is indeed worthy of special attention and constant emulation, because jealousy is such a common weakness and is the cause of more trouble than we may think. For the larger good, —for the benefit it would be to the whole people,— Moses would have unhesitatingly obscured his own individuality by sharing his gift with all.

Now, how about us today? Would we be as willing to share any God-given talent which, if multiplied, would more rapidly advance Christ's kingdom? Instead, if we have some special ability or talent that, we feel, places us a little above our fellow-man, don't we rather like to keep a corner on it, so as to be a little prominent? Could we keep from getting jealously angry if we knew that many others were given it too, though it was for the larger good?

Would to God that we could say with Moses: "We wish that all the Lord's people were gifted like the best among us, if it would be the means of saving more souls!"

The Consecrated Christian Life

BY LEANDER SMITH

"And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds" (Rom. 12: 2).

A CONSISTENT resistance to worldly rules and methods of life is the logical issue of a believer's consecration. It is binding upon all who present themselves as living sacrifices to God upon the altar of service, to show that they are superior to the shaping pressures and movements of an unbelieving age. The idea of separation from the world is indissolubly paired with that of self-dedication to the Lord's use.

Of course, these old similitudes of the altar and the sacrifice have to be translated into the terms of a spiritual dispensation. Separation does not mean a change of place for the body, but a new attitude of mind,— the turning towards new objects. The life presented as a tribute of worship in the temple loses its place in field or stall, and can no longer be bought and sold in the market. Its dedication in the one sphere implies its final removal from the other. The frequenter of idol shrines assumes that the victim has a double,—in virtue of which the finer essence of its life can be presented to the spirits, while the flesh remains at the service of its earthly owner.

Some Christians may be under the influence of the same idea. They act as if they had a duplicate life, one side of which can be surrendered to God, while the other is reserved to do the bidding of the world. It is true, the veil has been rent, and the secular has been made sacred by the great redemptive crisis; but the altar for the whole burnt-offering still has its mission in the unseen sanctuary, and still demands the undivided devotion of a life.

If you are servile to the will of the world, and it still drags you captive in its train, the sanctifying altar of the spiritual temple can not touch you with its efficacy. Fashion your habits and activities to meet the whims and caprices of the passing hour, and the altar will surely reject the poor figment of your dedication, as the riven altar at Bethel spewed forth the sacrifice placed upon it.

"Permanent Peace on Earth"

BY D. F. LEPLEY

How and when shall we have this peace?

Not by force, nor by legal enactments.

Not merely by a "League of Nations" and by universal policing.

Not while selfishness and greed dwell in the hearts of men.

Not while commercialism and nationalism are the mainsprings that actuate human endeavor.

Not while nations, countries and communities know selfish rulers and unwillingly ruled, higher, middle and lower classes, or "castes."

Not while the higher classes exploit the lower classes and profit by their ignorance, and while the middle classes remain the buffer between them to bear the burdens.

Not until the entire human race,—all nations, countries, communities and individuals, shall willingly and mutually determine that their every activity and endeavor shall be devoted to and for the comfort, health, welfare and happiness of each other, the whole world over without thought of race, class, color or condition, or without thought of power, rulership, position, wealth, money or remuneration of any kind, on the part of any one.

Not until there will be neither the desire nor the use for weapons, armies, navies or instruments of destruction, but all human thought, ingenuity, skill and energy shall be devoted to one great combined constructive effort for the betterment, uplift, comfort and happiness of the race.

Not until the heart of the race is regenerated, and righteousness and "the knowledge of God cover the earth as the waters cover the sea," and Christ reigns supreme in the hearts of all men.

Then, how long must we wait for peace and how shall it ever come to pass?

For an answer, I would have you ask God to tell you what the church is going to do about it,—the church which Christ established in the world for just this purpose.

If he will tell you how long it shall be until all the people who belong to church shall be "born again" and become truly converted (changed over into new creatures) and wake up to a vision of their mission and responsibilities in the world, then you will no doubt find a satisfactory answer.

Now, dear reader, what are you going to do about it, to hasten this happy and glorious event?

"Rich Without Money"

BY PERNIE HYLTON FAW

MANY a man is rich without money. Heart-life, soul-life, hope, joy and love are true riches. He is richest who is content with the least, for content is the wealth of nature.

Franklin said: "Money never made a man happy; the more he has, the more he wants. Instead of filling a vacuum, it makes one. A great bank account can never make a man rich." It is the mind that makes the body rich. He is rich or poor according to what he is, not what he has.

Some people are rich in health, in constant cheerfulness, in a disposition which floats them over troubles and trials enough to sink a shipload of ordinary people. Others are rich in family or friends. There are some people so amiable that everybody loves them. The human body is packed full of wonderful devices for the happiness and enrichment of the individual.

A rich mind and noble spirit will cast over the humblest home a radiance of beauty which the decorator can never approach. Who would not prefer to be a millionaire of character, rather than possess nothing but the vulgar coins of a Croesus? Whoever uplifts civilization, though he die penniless, is rich.

The man who has no money is poor, but one who has nothing but money is poorer.

Many of us, who think we are poor, are rich in opportunities, if we could only see them; in possibilities all about us, in faculties worth more than gold.

We can so educate the will-power that it will focus the thoughts upon the bright side of things, and upon objects that will elevate the soul, thus forming a habit of happiness and goodness that will make us rich. The habit of making the best of everything is a fortune in itself.

Paul was never so great as when he occupied a prison cell under the streets of Rome, and Jesus Christ reached the height of his success when, smitten, spat upon, tormented and crucified, he cried in agony, yet with triumphant satisfaction: "It is finished."

The object for which we strive tells the story of our lives. Men and women should be judged by the happiness they create in those around them. Noble deeds always enrich, but millions of mere dollars may impoverish.

Character is perpetual wealth, and by the side of him who possesses it, the millionaire, who has it not, seems a pauper.

Invest in yourself and you will never be poor. If a man empties his purse into his head, no one can take it from him. An investment in knowledge and goodness always pays the best interest.

There is untold wealth locked up in the long winter evenings and odd moments ahead of us. A great opportunity confronts us. What will we do with it?

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

SEBRING, FLORIDA

Our Bible Institute and evangelistic services, with Bro. A. C. Wieand in charge, closed on Sunday evening, Feb. 23. The attendance throughout was good, and the interest splendid. At the two meetings, last Sunday, the chapel was packed,—many of the wealthy tourists from the hotels being present. The simple services and sound Biblical preaching produced a most favorable impression on the minds and hearts of not a few. Several members from outlying sections were in attendance.

More members are spending the winter in Sebring than last season. Seven families will remain. Bro. D. H. Zigler and wife, of Broadway, Va., have purchased a nice residence near the chapel, and will spend their winters in the South. Since coming here, Bro. Zigler's health has greatly improved, and he now feels much encouraged.

The outlook for the Brethren interests, in this part of the Southland, is quite promising. The winter has been a very mild one, and inside of ten days the citrus trees will be covered with bloom. J. H. Moore.

SOUTH ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI

Since our last report, health conditions have improved, though we suffered an irreparable loss in the death of Sister Elma (Dellenbaugh) Miller, wife of Bro. Geo. A. Miller, and her little daughter, Naomi. She was a consecrated Christian, and an intelligent and faithful worker. Both were victims of influenza.

The work at this place is progressing in a satisfactory manner. Regular services are well attended. Last Sunday evening we had the largest gathering we have had since our work began. Sunday-school averages about fifty-three in attendance. New song books have added interest to the song service. The envelope system has been introduced to secure current expenses. All incidental indebtedness has been cheerfully and promptly settled. The audience room has been thoroughly cleaned and tastefully redecorated. No outside soliciting was done,—the money being contributed by the local membership with the exception of $10.

We now have a Young People's Class and a Bible Study Class which meets each Wednesday evening. We are studying the Book of Daniel. There are not many members,—speaking in the terms of active membership,—but those we have are faithful.

The church building is badly located, smothered as it is in the midst of a settlement of Polish Catholics, adjacent to their large church and school buildings. To make the work here effective we must either move the church onto "higher ground" and into a different atmosphere, or procure a Polish-speaking anti-Catholic missionary. Which shall it be? Some of us are casting sinister looks at a certain saloon that decorates (?) a lot upon which our church should stand. I never pass it without thinking long thoughts and breathing deep prayers. Why not? If our little church could only be up there, reaching out helping hands, songs of praise and heartfelt prayers for the salvation of the many, many young people, yes, and old ones too, who are being ruined by the present occupant of the desired location, what a blessing,—what a wonderful victory that would be!

Are we interested enough in our home missions? How many, in our own beloved District, think of us when praying with faces toward Jerusalem? Through your earnest prayers God will help you to assist us, that the desired results may be brought about.

St. Joseph, Mo. Mary Polk Ellenberger.

A TRIP TO THE DANGS

On the evening of Jan. 6 Miss Swartz and I left Dahanu for Ahwa, to visit Bro. Blough's. We went as far as Bulsar that night, and next morning went on to Kala Amba, from which place we went the rest of the way by tonga.

We arrived at Kala Amba about twelve o'clock. The cart for our baggage and the tonga were there, waiting for us, and in about a half hour we started on our twenty-mile trip overland. Our tonga was drawn by two bullocks,—very nice ones, too,—and noted for their swiftness, so much so that they carried us over the ground at the rapid rate of two miles an hour. About 3:30 we reached a small village where an Indian Christian and his family live. Having been told by Bro. Blough's when we would pass through, they were watching for us, and invited us into their house. We accepted the invitation. To our surprise, there stood, in the center of the room, a table, covered with a nice white cloth, and on it two cups and saucers, a pot of tea, a pitcher of milk, and a bowl of sugar. On either side were placed two cushioned boxes, to serve as chairs. Each of us drank a cup of tea, and, after thanking the people very kindly, we hurried forward on our way again, for we had to reach a certain place before night fall.

About sundown we reached this place, and put up for the night in the Government bungalow. We slept in one room of the house, and our tonga drivers slept just outside, and kept up a fire to keep the tigers away. We started out early the next morning, and for some distance our road lay between the river and a thickly-wooded jungle. In the soft ground of the road, for a distance of more than a mile, we saw the tracks of several tigers. Upon seeing them, Miss Swartz said: "How I would like to see one of the tigers that made these tracks, wouldn't you?" I am not quite as brave as she is, so I said: "Not I; the tracks are enough for me."

We reached Ahwa just at noon, very dusty and dirty,—just as one gets when out in a Kansas dust-storm. The Bloughs gave us a hearty welcome and a delicious dinner, both of which were greatly appreciated.

After a few days' visit,—a privilege very much enjoyed,—we started home. This time we started in the morning and made all but five miles of the trip in one day. We stayed all night in the village where we took tea on our way out. Our Indian brother had swept and cleaned up a little hut, in which no one was living, and as soon as we arrived had a vessel of water and fire wood brought, and started our fire for us. After cooking and eating our supper, we went to the house and visited with him and his wife as best we could, with our limited knowledge of Marathi. Before leaving we sang several songs, read a scripture and had prayer.

We left early the next morning and reached Kala Amba in time to meet the train on which Bro. Adam Ebey's came. After loading up their baggage and household goods on the carts which had been sent, they started out on the trip we had just finished. Sister Swartz and I reached Dahanu that night about 2:30. Ella Ebbert.

SIDNEY, OHIO

Last Sunday morning, Feb. 23, was a sacred day in the history of the church at this place. For the past fourteen years Bro. S. Z. Smith and wife have labored faithfully and earnestly with the people of Sidney, under the direction of the Missionary Board. The enrolled membership, at the time of their taking charge, was twenty-eight, and the Sunday-school attendance, for the previous year, had an average of eighteen. During the period since that time, over two hundred have been received into the church. At present our enrollment is over two hundred and sixty-five. The average attendance last year excelled any in the history of the Sidney Mission. While there has been a marked increase in membership, we are realizing a growth of Christian strength in our members, as well as financial strength.

The purpose of this called meeting was to consider the proposition of the Sidney church becoming self-supporting, and assuming all future responsibilities. After our pastor and elder, Bro. Smith, had made clear the purpose of the meeting, and revealed the method or plan, suggested by the official board, Eld. J. W. Fidler, of Brookville, foreman of the Missionary Board, followed with an earnest appeal to the members of the church, stating that the Board was ready to say that this church, in their mind, was in a very good condition to become an organization, fully equipped and legally authorized to perform the work of a local church, governed by Annual Conference. This is preparatory to the ratification by the District Meeting of 1919. An individual vote was taken that the Sidney church be made a self-supporting church, and that Bro. S. Z. Smith serve as pastor and elder for one year. The entire house, without a dissenting voice, answered in the affirmative. Bro. Smith and wife accepted the call with the response of appreciation, and solemnly said they were here for service in the uplift of men and women. We are looking forward to a larger church, a more active Sunday-school and a better people. Our motto is: "Helping to bring, in a larger measure, the Kingdom of God to this city, County and State, and without limit the whole world for Christ."

Bro. R. N. Leatherman, of Cincinnati, and Sister Nora Shively, of Plymouth, Ind., expect to be with us again next Sunday morning in a revival effort. Bro. Leatherman and Sister Shively spent a few days with us last fall but, on account of the epidemic of Spanish influenza, we were compelled to close the meetings. Bessie P. Schmidt.

FAMINE RELIEF

The second meeting of the Famine Relief Committee was held at Auklesvar Jan. 8. Besides the members of committee,—Brethren Stover, Ross and Long,—there were also present Brother and Sister Adam Ebey, Bro. Arnold and Sisters Miller and Himmelsbaugh.

At several of our stations the one meal a day village Boarding Schools were tried and reports of the first fifteen days of such schools were given. Bro. Stover reported two schools were giving one meal a day to children who came. In one village the teacher said that at present there was no need for it, as it was not appreciated. In another village about fifteen were fed daily, but only those children came who were too small to work. The reason is that at present and for the coming month, owing to the gathering of the juwar and cotton crops, there will be plenty of work, and wages are good. It was found that the people are not saving their money against the day of want, for in the evening crowds of them come to the village liquor-shops and their money is being spent as fast as they earn it. Hence, after the crops are gathered for three or four months, there will be no work for the poor people except what the Government may provide in the way of tank building and other constructive works. Then village boarding schools will be opened for the children, but the others in need of help may get it through Government relief work.

In place of one meal a day, sufficient will be given for each child's needs. Local agencies of Anklesvar, that are

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

Witnessing for Christ to Gain Others

John 1: 41, 42

For Week Beginning March 23, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) We are saved for SERVICE. God expects it, and gratitude and love should prompt it. (2) We may save others by being HERALDS AND WITNESSES. (3) As witnesses we testify to others of Christ, speaking out of the gladness of OUR OWN EXPERIENCES. (4) The testimony of the redeemed is GOD'S METHOD for the spread of his Kingdom.

2. Reasons for Your Faith.—Be able to state clearly a few reasons, at least, why you believe the Bible to be the Word of God. Present a clear view of the central doctrines,—of sin, the atonement, repentance, faith, instant and complete acceptance with God, the care of God for those who trust him. Note Paul's method,—"opening and alleging" (Acts 17: 3). Set the truth forth clearly, and testify earnestly to its importance. Note Christ's method,—clothe the truth in garments of illustration from common things so fittingly that the garments will seem to be made in the form of the reason for the hope that is in you (1 Peter 3: 15). The persons who are ready to accept clear and decisive Scriptural teaching, are likely to prove the most stable and useful when won.

3. Fishers and Hunters of Men.—Success in soul-winning is only given to skill, earnestness, sympathy, perseverance. Men are saved not in masses, but by careful study and well-directed effort. The personal touch counts. It is all-important.

4. Soul-Winning the Christian's Chief Business.—(1) Our Lord teaches us so in his last discourse,—"Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit" (John 15: 8). The nature of this fruit is made clear by verse 16: "I have ordained you that ye should go and bring forth fruit." (2) The commission under which we all labor, declares this matter most unmistakably,—"Go make disciples." That is the order. Christ died "that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations." (3) The endowment of power, given on the Day of Pentecost, was to the end that the disciples' testimony might be with great power, for the conversion of men. (4) The special preparation, which the first preachers made for their ministry, shows that they regarded this as their chief work. (5) The results of the early ministry show that the workers of that day considered soul-winning their chief concern. They went everywhere preaching, and everywhere they seem to have been blessed and successful in their work. (6) The example and record of the apostolic work shows it. Who are the men most famous in the early Gospel history? The great soul-winners,—Peter and Paul and Philip and Timothy and Titus and Apollos. (7) The apostolic exhortations show that it was the will of God that this should continue to be the great work of the ministry. "Take heed to thyself and to thy doctrine [an exhortation greatly needed now], for in doing this thou shalt save thyself AND THEM THAT HEAR THEE."

5. Improve Your Opportunity.—The Christian witness-bearer needs simply to hold himself in readiness, and the Holy Spirit will certainly make use of him as opportunity offers. He is the convicting Power. He gives life to the Word which will "pierce even to the dividing of soul and spirit."

6. Suggestive References.—Making use of our gifts (Rom. 12: 6-8). "Ye shall be witnesses" (Acts 1: 8). John's testimony (Rev. 1: 9). "We believe and therefore speak" (2 Cor. 4: 13). Examples (1 Peter 5: 3). Our light should "so shine" (Matt. 5: 16). Liberality stirred up others (2 Cor. 9: 2). "Shine as lights" (Philpp. 2: 15). Help the weak (Rom. 15: 1, 2). Restore the faltering (Gal. 6: 1). Edify one another (Rom. 14: 19).

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. J. A. Miller is to hold meetings during April in the Summitville church, Ind.

Bro. Michael Kurtz, of Richland, Pa., to begin June 7 in the Mingo church, same State.

Bro. Ralph G. Rarick, of South Bend, Ind., to begin April 6 in the Shepherd church, Mich.

Bro. Homer Blough, of Wichita, Kans., is to begin May 4 in the Paradise Prairie church, Okla.

Bro. B. D. Hirt, pastor of the Loon Creek church, Ind., to begin April 6 in his home congregation.

Bro. B. W. Smith, of Burlington, W. Va., to begin Sept. 13 in the Mountain Dale church, same State.

Bro. Herschel Weaver, of West Manchester, Ohio, to begin April 13 at the Sugar Hill house, same State.

Bro. J. F. Britton, of Bristow, Va., to begin April 5 at Blountsville, Tenn.; to begin April 26 at Lineboro, Md.

Bro. H. A. Clabaugh, of Bethany Bible School, is to deliver a series of illustrated talks in the Lower Stillwater church, Ohio, on "Conditions in Chicago and Bethany Work."

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. Saylor G. Greyer, of Toledo, Ohio, is to locate at Indianapolis, Ind., the latter part of May.

Bro. Ira H. Fox, who was in pastoral charge at Minot, N. Dak., is to labor in a like capacity at Brooklyn, Iowa.

Bro. Albert C. Schue, of New Windsor, Md., is to assume pastoral charge of the Red Bank church, Pa., his postoffice being New Bethlehem.

Bro. J. L. Bowman, late of New Bethlehem, Pa., where he was pastor of the Red Bank church, goes to the Indian Creek church, same State.

The Bethel church, Nebr., has completed its new parsonage, and one result of this is the change in address of the pastor, Bro. Geo. W. Hilton, from Bruning to Carleton, Nebr.

Bro. Isaac Frantz, of St. Petersburg, Fla., expects to return North for the summer's work about April 1. In the month of May he is to conduct revival services in the Oakland church, Ohio.

Bro. A. J. Beeghly, Route 2, Friedens, Pa., has arranged to give his time, after April 1, to evangelistic or pastoral work. Those desiring his services should communicate with him promptly.

Bro. S. M. Stauffer, of Carlisle, Pa., changes his address after March 24 to Newville, same State. We understand that he is, at this time, available for several series of meetings, if early application is made for the same.

Brother and Sister J. F. Graybill expect to sail from Christiania, Norway, March 15, on the Steamship "Bergensfjord," and expect to arrive at New York about March 26 or 27. They may be reached with mail at Palmyra, Pa.

Under the auspices of the Dress Reform Committee, Bro. J. W. Lear is delivering some excellent sermons on the subject of Christian Adornment to the churches of Northern Illinois, as he has opportunity to do so, in the midst of his school duties at Mount Morris College. The Elgin congregation appreciated his helpful ministrations on Sunday, March 9.

Both the Chairman of the General Sunday School Board, Bro. H. K. Ober, and the Vice-Chairman, Bro. S. S. Blough, favored us with interesting interviews on the occasion of the Board meeting last week. Incidentally we learned from Bro. Ober, who is also President of Elizabethtown College, that the institution is just launching a vigorous endowment campaign.

Brother and Sister Fred J. Wampler and Sister Anna V. Blough, from China, and Brother and Sister Jesse B. Emmert and children, from India, arrived by the Steamship "China," at San Francisco, March 4. Brother and Sister Wampler will lecture for a few days among some of the California churches. Sister Anna Blough will visit her sister at Delano, Calif., for a time, before coming eastward. Brother and Sister Emmert expect to spend several months at La Verne before coming farther.

The date of sailing for the Sunday School Commission, that is being sent out by the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, has been postponed three days. Accordingly Bro. J. E. Miller now plans to leave Elgin on Saturday, March 15, and New York, in company with the other members of the party, on Tuesday, the 18th. Bro. A. J. Culler, who is to direct the work in Armenia, has been spending "a few precious days" as he calls them, with his family and parents at Louisville, Ohio. The change above noted will probably affect Bro. Culler's sailing date to the same extent. God speed these brethren on their mission of mercy to the suffering people of the East, and make their way prosperous. And may he also keep safe and well the loved ones they leave behind.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

The result of the labors of the Bicentennial Committee, referred to last week, will be seen in the Program which is printed on page 172 of this issue, for the satisfaction of all concerned. And that means you, for we think you will be interested. The young people will plan to come early to the Conference this year, since the first part of the program has been arranged especially for them.

MISCELLANEOUS

Any family in Nebraska that may desire to give a good home to a young sister, twelve years of age, will please address Bro. J. R. Smith, Juniata, Nebr.

The Conway Springs church, Kansas, is looking for a pastor to take charge of the work at that place, beginning Aug. 1, 1919. Correspondence should be addressed to J. M. Obenchain, Conway Springs, Kans.

The Sebring "White Way" speaks at some length of the recent Bible Institute, conducted by Bro. A. C. Wieand, at Sebring, Fla. The remarks are very commendatory, both as to the quality of the instruction and the interest shown by the people.

Special Notice.—The District Meeting of Middle Indiana will be held in the Manchester church April 3. The Elders' Meeting will be held April 2, at 7 P. M. Because of conditions over which those in charge have no control, it will be regarded as a delegate meeting. Meals will be furnished at the church, beginning Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Aid Societies of the church.

The Antioch church, Colo., strongly urges that such of our members, as may be in search of a new location, investigate the merits of their section of the State. By addressing Bro. W. H. Bryant, Yoder, Colo., full information will be furnished.

Because of conflicts in time of District Meetings, with the regular time for the next General Mission Board Meeting, the meeting has been set for Wednesday, April 9,—one week earlier than the regular time. Those having business for the consideration of the Board, should have the same at the office by April 1.

We have an interesting letter from Bro. J. F. Graybill, our missionary at Malmö, Sweden, under date of Dec. 26, 1918. Our readers will enjoy this paragraph: "This is the most glorious Christmas we have enjoyed in Sweden. On the evening of Dec. 21 seven of our young people were buried with Christ in baptism. This makes fourteen for the year. Those baptized lately were the result of a revival effort in November, during which fourteen confessed Christ and one applied for reinstatement. There would have been more for baptism had not the parents interfered. The Spirit is still working, and others are laboring under conviction. We are praying for these and even others, who, as yet, have not manifested that the Spirit is striving."

RELIEF AND RECONSTRUCTION

A number of questions continue to pour into the office. I take this means of answering some of them.

It is not possible to secure the names of orphans to be supported in Armenia at present. Conditions are chaotic and the movements so rapid that the American Committee can not furnish you the name of the orphan. However, you can have the name of a French orphan if you desire. It costs $60 for an Armenian orphan for one year, and $36.50 for a French orphan.

The American Committee will be able to use a few of our workers in the near future. The number is not so large as some might think. Workers are required to sign up for one year. Our committee does not contemplate sending any one under twenty-five. Only in rare cases are husband and wife both sent. Children can not be sent under any condition.

The suffering is great, and the main need is means. Any who are considering going into reconstruction work should dismiss all idea of sight-seeing, opportunity to learn, and other personal, selfish ambitions. The work will demand men and women of strong character, physically and mentally trained, and able to stand tremendous strains. To travel in the Near East at present, for anything except for purposes of relief, would seem to be little short of criminal. Food and clothing are sorely needed. The Christian man, who has money to spend for a pleasure trip to the East now, might better give that for an offering to feed the hungry and to clothe the naked.

During my absence from the office, Bro. J. H. B. Williams will take charge of that part of the relief work which had fallen to my lot.

J. E. Miller,
Chairman of Relief and Reconstruction Committee.

THE "CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS"

The Government's Treatment of Pacifists Reviewed by the War-Time Commission

In response to numerous requests, committees from the "General War-Time Commission of the Churches" have made a careful study of the attitude of the Government towards the "conscientious objectors." Their report is as follows:

I. It is our firm conviction that no Government has made a more serious effort to deal fairly with conscientious objectors and to allow freedom in the exercise of the individual conscience than has the United States in the present war.

II. It seems clear, however, that a considerable number of men have been treated with undue severity, in a few cases even with brutality, by certain of the military authorities. We are glad to know that the War Department has now taken steps that have relieved the situation. The cases of brutal treatment have been due, in the main, to the policy of certain army officers, who believed the conscientious objectors to be insincere and who held unreasonable and extreme views as to what is required by military discipline.

III. The great majority of conscientious objectors were declared by the Government, after investigation, to be honest and sincere in their convictions. The majority also accepted non-combatant service in the army or other work of a non-military character.

IV. There are, at the present time, approximately 400 conscientious objectors in the military prisons in the United States, serving sentences of from five to thirty years, including both men who believe all war to be wrong and those who believe this war to have been unjustified. There are also in local jails or Federal prisons several hundred others who have been convicted under the Espionage Act for making statements contrary to the war policy of the Government.

V. Now that hostilities have ceased, we believe that these imprisoned conscientious objectors, who are beyond question sincere, should be granted amnesty at the time of the signing of the Treaty of Peace. After the war is over and the danger of a division is past, the best interests of democracy will not be served by carrying on further punishment against those whose honest convictions differed from the majority during the days of the war. To punish them further, in times of peace, would set an unwholesome precedent in a nation that has always emphasized the principle of the freedom of individual conscience.

VI. We believe further that the whole question of the treatment of political offenders in time of war should be reconsidered by Congress under conditions which make an unprejudiced judgment possible, and that a distinction should be made between those whose offense is loyalty to their own conscience, however mistaken the majority may believe that conscience to be, and those who have been guilty of criminal offences.

AROUND THE WORLD

Closer Bonds of Union

Man's genius and technical skill can do much to bring about more intimate relations between the different countries. A tunnel has just been completed beneath the lofty Pyrenees Mountains, hitherto a formidable barrier separating France and Spain. Plans are also again being developed for the long-discussed tunnel between France and Great Britain. Burrowing far below the waters of the English channel, a capacious tunnel is to provide ample room for double-track railway travel,—of immeasurable importance and convenience to both of the countries. As we read about the facilities thus being provided, we are led to hope that in a very real sense there may be still greater international harmony and coöperation.

Industrial Aid for Persia

Interesting news from Persia is furnished by the "American Committee for Relief in the Near East." Employment is being given to many of the women, which answers a double purpose,—helping the people to support themselves, and furnishing greatly-needed material for clothing. In one of the industrial centers, eighty women are spinning, fifty-four "combing," and about thirty looms are ready to begin operations. A number of quilts are being made,—nearly 1,200 having already been completed. This method of enlisting the services of those in need of help is most commendable. It avoids "pauperizing" the people, and also enables the Committee to help many more than could otherwise be reached by the available means.

Avoiding Duplication of Effort

In the great work of Bible distribution, the American Bible Society and the British and Foreign Bible Society have labored long and earnestly. In the interest of greater efficiency the two societies have recently agreed on a division of territory, by which only one of the organizations operates in a given field. In Korea, for instance, the American Bible Society leaves the entire territory to the British and Foreign Bible Society. On the Philippine Islands the American Bible Society is given sole control. In like manner adjustments are made in other countries where heretofore both societies have been operating. The same plan has been followed by missionaries in the allotment of territory, thus avoiding all duplication of efforts.

Educators Demand Cabinet Representation

At the recent convention of the National Education Association, in Chicago, a resolution was passed, calling for the establishment of a federal secretaryship of education, carrying with it a place in the President's Cabinet. The educators rightfully declared that recognition of education is just as essential as the recognition of agriculture, and that the "educating of children should be placed at least on a par with raising hogs." Other resolutions called for the eradicating of illiteracy, immediate Americanization of aliens, higher pay for teachers, with a minimum of two years' professional training required. Approval was given to the League of Nations on the condition that our national rights and privileges are safeguarded.

Growing Interest in Christianity

Old-time missionaries in India tell us that in the days of long ago it was almost impossible to talk to an audience in India for even five minutes without interruption on the part of some Hindu, Sikh, or Mohammedan. Conceited as to their own knowledge (?) these men were always positively certain that they knew a better way of salvation than that of the speaker. Another factor of discouragement was the deplorable inattention of the hearers. Nowadays, however, the closest attention is being manifested. Apparently the audience has abandoned its old-time beliefs and got rid of most of its prejudices. Over a thousand people were in attendance at revival services in Jalesar, a town of 14,000 inhabitants. This was the more remarkable because it was the first attempt of the kind at that place, and that, too, in a most illiterate community.

Religious Books for Libraries

In a previous issue reference was made to the fact that many libraries in cities and even the smaller towns are but scantily supplied with the better class of religious literature, though some of the "near-religions," as some one calls them,—such as Mormonism, Spiritualism, etc.,—are amply represented. One of our readers, alluding to this very matter, sees a real danger in this condition of affairs, and doubtless his words of warning deserve serious consideration. When there are scores of the really valuable religious books and periodicals that might be placed in the libraries, a failure to be alive to our opportunity is hardly excusable. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." If the churches in the community do not make use of every possible means of advancing the cause of righteousness, there is sure to be a loss. Why not see to it that every one,—both young and old,—has constant access, at the community library, to the great, constructive, forward-looking religious literature of the day? People are sure to be influenced by the books and magazines they read. Why should not the Christian people of every community consider it their sacred duty to supply the literature that will make for better citizenship in every way?

We Surprise the People of London

In many ways are the initiative and achievements of the United States a constant astonishment to the dwellers of staid old London. They can not comprehend how more than a hundred million people in America should do away with liquor so decisively and finally. It impresses them far more than the great Peace Conference. The Londoners consider the self-imposition of prohibition on a well-to-do and powerful nation as great a feat as was ever accomplished in history. But they need not be surprised if, ere long, the people of Great Britain should also rise to the exigencies of the present-day situation, and follow suit. Prohibition is in the air, and is bound to spread. Even Scotland reports gradually decreasing sales of the popular "Old Scotch rye."

Koreans Ask for Self-Determination

A committee of Koreans, living in China, has presented a petition to the American minister in Pekin, for transmission to President Wilson, asking him to intercede in behalf of Korea at the Peace Conference. The petitioners describe themselves as exiles, and say that, following the "violent seizure" of Korea by Japan, the Korean people were nearly exterminated. The petition continues: "From the depths of their bitterness, the Korean people beg that the Peace Conference take up the problem of bettering the condition of our voiceless nation, containing 2,000,000 oppressed people. It is further pointed out that since the beginning of the Japanese occupation, the people have been allowed no liberty of action, and have been denied any share in the administration of civic affairs."

President Wilson Returns to France

Leaving the sessions of the Peace Conference in Paris for a hurried visit to the United States, our Chief Executive attended to a considerable amount of business in connection with the closing sessions of Congress. He finds himself "in a strait betwixt two,"—his presence is undoubtedly needed here, and yet he is even more needed at Paris. He left the shores of America March 4, to resume his responsible place at the Peace Conference in Paris. The President regrets that the unreserved endorsement of the Senate was not given to the proposed plan of the League of Nations. It is contended, however,—even by staunch friends of the proposed measure,—that certain important amendments and reservations will have to be incorporated into the covenant, before it will meet the unreserved approval of our nation.

War's Penalty

Lt. Col. Searl Harris, of the United States Medical Reserve Corps, who has investigated conditions east of the Rhine, says that the German nation is bankrupt and the people actually starving. There are no eggs and no milk, and only one-half pound of beet sugar for each person per month. Working-girls have lost from ten to forty-five pounds in weight. Every one shows lack of vitality. Children wear paper sandals or wooden shoes to school. Black, gritty bread is being issued in limited quantities by ticket. Tuberculosis is increasing, and skin diseases, due to lack of nourishment and deprivation of soap, are prevalent. How true that those who are responsible for war, have unspeakable sins to answer for, and that those who presume to defend it, can not escape the consequences! Needlessly to imperil civilization by war or the threat of war, is prejudicial to the highest interests of humanity.

The Safeguarding of Armenia

Just now, when millions of dollars are cheerfully given to relieve dire distress in ancient Armenia, and to aid in the work of rehabilitation, many are asking: "What will be done by the allied nations to prevent a recurrence of the tragedies that have brought sorrow to every sympathetic heart?" That question has already been given considerable attention at the Peace Conference. Great Britain, with her varied interests in the Orient, is hardly ready to add to her burdens. France is to be in charge of Syria, which will probably be all she can manage with her depleted resources. The consensus of opinion, therefore, seems to be that the United States act the part of a "Big Brother," in shielding Armenia from all further harm, and furnishing needed capital for its development. As might be expected, such a program of helpfulness is not congenial to some of the narrow-minded and selfish of our land, who are bitterly opposed to altruistic efforts of any sort. That some country must take the responsibility of protecting Armenia's interests, and helping her to become self-sustaining, is evident, and doubtless America can more readily supply the needed aid than any of the war-drained countries of Europe. The very fact that the United States is sponsoring Armenia's future,—as is being suggested,—will have a salutary effect upon the attitude of adjoining countries. As we are giving to Armenia's sustenance at the present time, so let us safeguard her best interests in the days to come.

Sixty Per Cent of Prison Convicts Insane

Dr. Kirchwey, counsel for the Pennsylvania commission of penal legislation, has made an exhaustive study of conditions that lead to crime. His investigations convince him that sixty per cent of all convicts in prisons are mentally unbalanced. Of these unfortunates, some were born with "twisted brains," could not find their way, and never were guided. "Others," according to this specialist, "were brought up in institutions where there was nothing to form character, but everything to weaken it." Others, not insane, but with weak minds, unable to resist crime, are made insane by the shameful brutality that is called prison discipline. Surely, there is need of reform!

No Serious Danger of "Beer Strikes"

As indications are now, there is no immediate danger that a "no-beer, no-work" strike needs to be feared. There is some peril, undoubtedly, that some of the "baser element,"—anarchistic and bolshevistic in tendencies,—might cause industrial troubles, but it is not likely, with present restrictive measures, that their propaganda will be of much avail. The individual workingmen of the higher-class trades are largely in favor of prohibition. The measure could never have been adopted, had there not been overwhelming sentiment in its favor. Some of the outspoken liquor journals freely admit that "a strike against prohibition would be far more dangerous to liberty than the enforcement of the amendment," because "resistance to law is lawlessness, and a lawless country is doomed."

Missions Prove Their Worth

It is no idle conjecture to say that the missions to Mohammedans in Egypt were actually worth more to the success of the allied cause than a half million soldiers. Among the Mohammedans of the entire Nile Valley the missionaries of the United Presbyterian Church have wrought a wonderful work of transformation. Schools and hospitals have been established for some years now, and have so lifted up Christ before the followers of the false prophet that when orders were sent from Constantinople to wage a "holy war" against the "infidels," Egyptian Mohammedans flatly refused to obey. Had the call to arms been carried into effect, at least half a million of British soldiers would have been needed to defend Egypt against the revolutionists. As always, the value of missions was readily seen.

Making the Most Out of Our Resources

"There is enough waste land," says Secretary Lane, "that ought to be producing, to make seven States the size of Virginia. Such an effort would provide work for all the unemployed and would mean farm homes for thousands upon thousands of soldiers and others. There are hydro-electric propositions going to waste which would supply all New England with power,—without drawing upon the nation's supply of coal. There never ought to be a coal shortage again." With the development of these resources, the Secretary predicts the greatest era of prosperity this or any other country has ever seen. Quite logically, a similar development of available resources in the spiritual realm would produce wonderful results. Vast areas in the United States are either wholly or partially devoid of Gospel influences. In many parts of the South there are closed church buildings, simply because no one is ready to preach to perishing souls. Who is ready to build up the waste places in Zion?

An Early Peace Treaty Urged

Perhaps no man is more fully in touch with the general situation of affairs in Europe, then Gen. Foch, and when he, in all sincerity, urges that the Peace Treaty be signed by April 1, he speaks as one in full knowledge of conditions as they exist at the present time. Recent reports from Germany are exceedingly disquieting and,—in Gen. Foch's opinion,—the work of the Peace Conference should be speeded up, lest the situation become more perilous. He insists that the preliminary terms of peace should be communicated to Germany before April 1, so that the German delegates may be able to come to Versailles March 20. Then the actual signatures might readily be attached to the covenant of peace by April 1. It must be remembered, in this connection, that at each successive presentation of Armistice terms,—rigid as they are,—the revolutionary factions of the German population have broken out in more or less spontaneous semi-bolshevist agitations. How far the recent disturbances in Germany have been prompted by the stern stipulations of the tentative peace terms, as outlined by the Allies, can not, of course, be judged accurately. One thing, however, is certain,—according to the view of Gen. Foch,—unless Germany is given an opportunity to buy food on a larger scale than has been the case hitherto, there will be the undesirable risk that allied negotiators may find there is no one left in Germany, of sufficient authority, with whom to sign a binding peace. It is generally conceded that the German people,—though staggering under the immense burden of their own national debt,—can be induced to assume the payment of the vast indemnities, provided ways and means are devised to raise the funds by industrial and commercial enterprises. In the opinion of Gen. Foch, facilities to this end should be afforded them.

The Burning Bush in Its Literal and Emblematic Sense

BY JAS. A. SELL

The angel of the Lord appeared unto Moses on Mount Horeb in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire and the bush was not consumed. And Moses said, I will turn aside and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt (Ex. 3: 2, 3).

On Horeb's mount the Lord appeared
In a vehement flame.
He sought a leader for his work
And called the man by name.
The burning bush was not consumed,
A thing most wondrous strange,
And Moses turned aside, to see
What seemed beyond his range.

"Put off thy shoes from off thy feet
For this is holy ground."
And Moses felt that God was there,
His glory shone around.
He hid his face in reverent fear
To hear his Master's call,
Momentous issues are at stake
And he must rise or fall.

A chosen race is sore oppressed,
Their cries are heard on high,
The dawning of a better day
Is beaming in the sky.
The burning bush an emblem is
Of opposition strong,
That sure will follow in the wake
To make the battle long.

The Lord of hosts was in the bush,
It could not be consumed,
And thus it typified to all
The enemy is doomed.
The Lord had risen in his might
To make his people free,
And all the fires of earth and hell
Must yield to his decree.

From Horeb's mount the Lord still calls
In tongues of living flame,
He still needs workers in his cause
To go forth in his name.
The world is still in bondage held,
In ignorance and sin,
And many ills must be endured,
The victory to win.

Like Moses, we must turn aside
To learn God's holy will,
And show a willingness to go,
His pleasure to fulfill.
Our "nothingness" we all should feel,
But strike for truth and right,
And though the torch may be applied,
Keep victory in sight.

Grandmother Warren

BY BESS BATES

4. Mary's A B C's

GRANDMOTHER WARREN came up the walk slowly. She paused to look at Mary's flowers, to glance at the prim white curtains at the windows approvingly, before she started up the steps. Grandmother hated to admit that steps were getting to be too much for her, but before she had reached the first step, Mary had popped out of the screen-door and was giving her an arm.

"Why, Grandmother Warren, I'm glad to see you," she cried.

"It's such a nice day, Mary,"—Grandmother was almost puffing,—"I thought I must see how you and John are getting along."

Mary settled Grandmother in the most comfortable chair, and established herself on the couch among the serviceable cushions. It was Saturday afternoon and John did not have to work then.

"Where is John?" asked Grandmother, presently, after they had duly discussed the weather and Mary's chickens.

"He has gone back to town to buy a new suit," said Mary. "He needs something to wear to work."

"Yes," said Grandmother.

"I thought he ought to have gone to Morrison to get it but he said that he had always bought his suits here."

"Yes," said Grandmother, obviously waiting for more.

"His mother could come in today and she went with him to help him get it."

"Why didn't you go, too?" asked Grandmother.

"He didn't ask me," said Mary, and Grandmother knew that she had discovered the reason that Mary's eyes had not smiled a greeting when they had met on the porch.

"You are his wife. It is your place to help him," said Grandmother, watching Mary's averted face.

"That's exactly what I think," said Mary, turning to face Grandmother. "I thought we were married and I thought we would be so happy, but John tells me how his mother used to cook and save, and things like that, and now he never even asked me to help him buy his suit. I know something about buying clothes and I don't mind saying that I don't care for his mother's taste, either."

"Did you say anything to John about it?" asked Grandmother.

"No, I didn't," went on Mary, glad for a sympathizer. "I just let him go and didn't say a word."

"Um," said Grandmother. "Mary, did you ever notice how much you sit, resting your elbow on your knee and your chin in the palm of your hand?"

"Do I?" asked Mary, surprised at the change of subject.

"I can remember of you doing it ever since you were a little girl."

"I never thought about it," said Mary absently.

"It's just a habit. You are so used to it, you don't know it. That's the way it is with John. He has always asked his mother's advice about buying his clothes, and, I suppose, it never occurred to him that he should not do it now. He has the habit. The wedding ceremony doesn't change habits like that. It takes time. You should have invited yourself along. John would have been glad to have you. He just did not think of it. I am sure that he would not want you to stay at home with hurt feelings. Of course, you could not do that at first. You have not gotten the habit of assuming your own rights. You are used to John asking for your opinion and your company as a favor and you have loved to do as he asked on those grounds. So, when the time came that you should have assumed you had the right to go along, and he did not ask you, instead of taking that right, you stay at home and sulk. You are just in the A B C's of married life, Mary."

"Another thing, Mary. This is just between you and me. I guess most men sort of hold their mothers up to their wives as an ideal. It's a good thing they do that, too, for that loyalty will be transferred to you in time. But it does get on your nerves at first. It does not pay to get hurt feelings and sulk or quarrel about it, either. That would never do any good. There is a very simple remedy that is almost sure to help, though. If it keeps up and you can't stand it, why, just go away for a few days sometime, when his mother can come to take care of him. By that time John will be so used to your way of doing things, that he will not like another's style of doing things, no matter how good it might be. I know he will be glad to see you back."

Grandmother got up. "Well, I must go back and see after Sally," she said.

Mary ran to kiss her good-by. "I'm so glad you came," she said. "You always help so much. I'm going to like John's suit even if I don't."

"That's right," smiled Grandmother when she had safely gotten down the steps.

The Little Things of Life

BY NINA KATOR

IT was a hot July afternoon. Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. Brown and I were going to a funeral service. That night I was to lead the midweek service at our church. Mrs. Brown and I were leading lights in the church. Mrs. Tucker, a woman of many talents and splendid character, was not interested in churches. She seldom attended a service. I longed to see her in the church and I secretly hoped that my shining Christian example would blaze her way to the mercy-seat. So I invited her to attend my meeting that evening. I never lost an opportunity to invite people to our church services. I had chosen for the subject of the meeting "The Little Things of Life." I took for the Scripture lesson the story of Jesus washing the disciples' feet.

As we walked along, we saw a child about four years old sitting on the curb-stone. He was poorly clad. His face was very dirty; and he had the dirtiest nose I ever saw. He was crying as though his little heart would break. "You poor little fellow; I am so sorry for you," said Mrs. Brown, and passed on. "Is your heart breaking? Have you no friends?" said I, and walked on. Mrs. Tucker said nothing. Taking her clean linen handkerchief, she wiped the child's face and then his nose. "Actions speak louder than words," and that was the best sermon that ever came to my knowledge on "The Little Things of Life." Was it not exactly what Jesus would have done? I think so.

Mrs. Tucker did not attend the meeting, so I felt free to tell the incident in the course of my remarks. It brought forth a vigorous discussion, especially from the deacons. They were of the opinion that such acts of helpfulness were not for laymen; they were all right for social service workers. The world is different now from what it was in the days of Christ.

That lesson, however, had left its imprint on me and I have been passing it on ever since. I was surprised that so few seemed to grasp the lesson in its splendid spirit. I felt so much like a spiritual slacker and mouth artist that day, that I hardly considered myself worthy to lead the meeting. Mrs. Tucker seemed so much more a possessor of the Christ-spirit than I, who claimed to be such a professor. And so I think that we church folks, who are really sincere in doing the Master's bidding, often get our most valuable lessons,—the kind which make us take account of our spiritual stock, —from those whom we are trying to convert.

Thank you, Mrs. Tucker, for the lesson you so generously and unconsciously taught me. May I never forget it! Perhaps I may be a "star in your crown" when the awards are made "on that great day."

auxious to assist in famine relief, have agreed to pay all expenses that will be incurred by our village schools of this "taluka" in feeding the children.

With the exception of Vali and Ahwa, at our other stations similar conditions are prevailing as at Anklesvar, hence, at those places, there is no pressing need for relief work. Bro. Arnold submitted a very satisfactory report of two village schools, where one meal a day was given. The attendance at each school was increased,—the average being sixteen. In one school the cost per day, for each pupil, was one and a half cents; at the other nearly two cents. In the latter, the teacher and family of five ate with the children, as was their privilege, on account of the extra work to which they were put to feed the school; but in the former, a little grain was taken, in exchange for their trouble. There was some complaint that the amount of food for each child was not sufficient. It was decided to increase the amount, giving one full meal to each pupil daily, excepting Saturday, which will enable them to get along, even though they get little or nothing at home. Where the need is becoming urgent, other schools will begin feeding the children who come.

Bro. Blough reports that in the Dangs times are getting harder and harder. He can scarcely get laborers unless he feeds them. He could not get the schools started, since the influenza epidemic, until this month, to try the experiment of feeding the children who come, and he is satisfied it will be impossible to get the children in school this year unless we feed them. Hence the time is ripe there for the opening of twelve village Boarding Schools.

Sister Miller read a letter, recently received from the Bombay "'Christian Herald' and Mission Famine Relief Committee," whose work on this side is to allot money sent through the "Christian Herald" for famine relief. The money that has recently been cabled, was assigned to sixteen missions in Western India. Our allotment is rupees five hundred. Among other recommendations the committee stated: "For the present and until larger sums are received, the Christian community shall have first claim upon this fund." Complying with this request, our committee decided that the above sum should be divided equally between the Ahwa and the Vali stations, where our Christian people have the greatest need of help. Sister Miller was instructed to send our thanks for the gift to the secretary of the above committee.

The Foundlings' Home at Vali was opened Dec. 26. In her report Sister Himmelsbaugh stated there are seventeen children, which includes a few that are expected to be brought any day to the Home. Several children who were needing such a home, six weeks ago, died before arrangements could be made to care for them. One little baby, whose mother had died of influenza, was cared for by Sister Widdowson for several weeks, until it could be turned over to the care of the Babies' Home. When it was brought here by its father, it was so sick that it could not cry, but by careful nursing it became well, and was soon looking like a different child. The father was highly pleased when he came the second time and saw his baby girl looking so well and happy. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these least, ye did it unto me." The children received thus far have lost one or both parents because of the influenza. It is expected that many more will be brought during the next six months. All who come will be cared for.

NOTES FROM AHWA, INDIA

On the evening of Jan. 15 Bro. Adam Ebey and family arrived in their new home here at Ahwa, and the Ahwa church gave them a right royal welcome. We had been waiting for them quite a while already and so every one rejoices that they have been kept safe and well on their long journey, and are ready to take up the work of the Master at this station. The work at this station is new to them, but having had eighteen years of missionary experience, we are certain that they will find no difficulty in taking up this work. They know the Marathi language and so will find it easy in that respect. And now, since they are here, we will turn the work over to them and prepare to leave for America, as our furlough is due this year. Will you please remember, in your daily prayers, Brother and Sister Ebey, as they are left alone here in the jungle, to carry on the soul-saving work for which you sent them? Are there not some who will appoint themselves as their special intercessors,—an excellent thing to do?

At the beginning of the year we held a council, in which the new officers for the year were elected, and in which the report of the church for the past year was read. During 1918 we had thirty-five baptisms and five deaths, leaving the membership at the end of the year seventy-five. These deaths were all from influenza during the month of October.

The influenza epidemic swept over the Dangs like a forest fire, sparing but few, and continuing for over three months. It struck us the last of September and continued into January. Let me tell you how the influenza affected a country where there is no quarantine, no segregation, practically no medical help whatever, and where the people are extremely poor,—without sufficient food and clothing. And now, as I recall the heart-rending scenes which were before our eyes for many days, my heart again aches for the few whom we tried to help, and the many whom we could not help,—and who died without help.

The epidemic broke out first here among the police, and in a few days all the police were sick, and deaths began to be a daily occurrence. Then some people became frightened and ran away to other villages, or to the jungle by the rivers. This helped to spread the disease. Unfortunately for us, at the time, two of our teachers were in jail, and the police being sick, could not wait on them. Soon both were sick with influenza. I waited on them for several days, then I took sick and was kept from work for twelve days. During this time the disease spread over the whole town, and gained a foothold among our Christians. As long as I was sick, Sister Blough could not wait on very many, but as soon as I was well enough, we both gave ourselves daily to the care of the sick and dying. We gave medicine as we could, but it seemed that the greatest need was for food. Whole families took sick at once, and there was no one left to prepare food. Worse yet, many houses had no food at all, because, as soon as they quit work, their food was exhausted, as they have no reserve. So, three times a day, we supplied milk and tea and porridge, so long as our supply lasted.

I remember my first visit to one section of our town where five of our Christian families live. Inside of the houses and outside some twenty were lying around with influenza. It was a most pitiable sight. Medicine we had to give to them ourselves, else they would not take it. Here, among six houses, there were four deaths in one night. Are you surprised that the rest moved out of their houses as soon as they could? Thus it kept up for weeks, right here. Part of October and November Ahwa seemed like a deserted village,—everything at a stand-still. No work and no play. The children refused to play. Everybody was stricken with fear and wonder. Many times there were not enough well ones to bury the dead, hence many bodies were thrown here and there, in hollow places in the woods, and a little ground and leaves thrown over them. We lost five adults and seven children out of our Christian community. Two of my teachers died. Nearly all our Boarding School children were sick, but none died.

Now, what are the results throughout the Dangs? I have had a careful count made, here as well as in twelve other villages. The death-rate, right here in Ahwa, where people had access to medicine, is twenty-five per cent. In other villages it was eleven, fourteen, sixteen, twenty-one, thirty, thirty-four, thirty-seven, forty-three and forty-six per cent. I made the count myself in the last village and know it to be correct that forty-six per cent of the people died. Just think of it! In some families there is not a soul left to tell the tale. The houses are empty. Sometimes a child is left, or a parent. I saw one place where three brothers lived side by side, and in their families there were twelve people. All died save one. I know of a few villages, however, where there were no deaths at all. Really, our Christian village, a few miles from here, has not yet had the disease at all. We hope they may not get it. I think we are safe in saying that the Dangs lost one-sixth of its population, or 5,000 people, and perhaps more. Imagine our town of 400 people, reduced to 300 by death, in about a month and a half, and you can imagine what we experienced. Poor people and without Christ and hope! O God, that this may soften their hearts to accept the Christ of life and peace and rest!

And now we have famine. The rainfall was scarcely half the usual amount. Then, when the epidemic was on, there was, in many cases, no one at all to watch either the fields, or to herd the cattle, and so the cattle destroyed some of the fields, and the wild hogs invaded some others. Day by day it is getting harder for the people to live, especially those who must buy, for those who have a little, will not sell more than they just have to. The Government has brought in rice, but it is almost too expensive for the poor to buy. There is, however, plenty of work, and so we hope the people can manage in some way. Children and the feeble will need help.

We had twelve schools running nicely when the epidemic came upon us. Of course, all closed. The Ahwa school was closed only a month, but the others were closed two or three months, and a few are still closed, as I am short on teachers. In one school nine out of sixteen pupils died. It will be very hard to reopen the schools and carry on the work. We hope to give the children some grain every day and so, perhaps, they can come to school. Pray for the work in the Dangs!

DISTRICT NURSING IN BALTIMORE, MARYLAND

Our work, here in Baltimore, as members of "The Instructive Nurses' Association," is mostly among the poorer people who can not have a nurse, or, perhaps, even a caretaker for their sick. And so we go once a day, every two days or so, as the case may demand, and give nursing care. We also instruct the other members of the family in the care of the patient. Then, too, we give instructions, as well as demonstrations, on ventilation, cleanliness and general sanitation. For example, the mother may be ill, and there is no one to care for the children. We give the mother nursing care. Perhaps we bathe the baby, and then we show the older children how to keep themselves and the younger children clean.

The city is divided into districts, and a nurse answers calls in the district assigned her. The central office is in the Nurses' Home. There, also, is the supply room, where we get all the dressings and other necessary supplies for the bags which we carry on our rounds.

Now for a brief outline of a day's work. We meet for conference in the central office at 8 A. M., when the superintendent reviews our work of the day previous, and assigns new calls. Immediately after that conference, which lasts from 8 to 8:45 A. M., we take our bags, fully equipped for the day. The work of the writer of this part of the communication (Miss Lantz), is largely among colored people, although there are some white patients too. They may be German, Italian, Jewish, Slavonic, etc. Some of the homes are very poor indeed, and quite dirty.

Calling at a home in Wilmer Alley, I find it on a very narrow, dirty street, paved with cobble-stones. Here live a widow and five small children (colored). The home is untidy and dark. I need my flash-light to find my way to a room upstairs, where two little black faces peep at me from beneath very dirty bed-clothes. I take their temperature, examine throats and tongues, and find that they have very bad colds, and some pain in their chests. I instruct the mother as to applying mustard poultices to their chest, rub chest and back with camphorated oil, give them castor oil, and have them gargle with hot salt-water. Advice is given about diet and ventilation. Orders are given that children must stay in bed until I call the following day.

I next call at a place in Shields Alley. Here I go to a room in the basement, stooping to get in. The room is hot, and there is no ventilation whatever, but the place is reasonably clean. The patient is a nice old colored woman, who has bad gangrenous ulcers of the leg. Both she and her husband are glad that I came. I proceed to change the dressings. The wound is really bad, but I bathe it gently with an antiseptic solution and apply fresh dressings and bandages,—much to the comfort of the patient. She suffers intensely, and the doctor says there is only one ray of hope for her life,—an amputation above the knee. But the patient will not have it, and the doctor does not urge it, because of the probable result. So I can only make her last days comfortable, which won't be many, at the best.

Next I go to see Ella D., on the same street, who also has big ulcers. She has been taught to change the dressings herself, and does it very nicely. The ulcers are healing,—to her great joy. Her bumble home is neat and clean.

Next I go to a patient on Mosher Street, but find crepe on the door. I speak a word of comfort to the family and pass on.

Next is Margaret L., away out on North Fremont, a very nice white lady who has tubercular ulcers of the leg. She and her mother live alone in an humble home, but neat and clean. Both like to have me come. I change the dressings and cheer the two women a bit. The mother becomes discouraged, but the daughter is more hopeful, although she can never be well again.

At 10:30 A. M., I go to prepare Ida Y. (colored) for her trip to her home in C——. She is very ill with cancer, and the ambulance will be there at 11 A. M. I bathe her, dress her in a warm robe and wrap her in warm blankets. The men carry her downstairs, from the third floor, and place her on the stretcher in the ambulance. I get in and sit by her, and we are hurried through the crowded streets to the wharf. The patient is hurriedly carried to her state room. I make her comfortable on the cot, and leave her with her sister.

I go back to my district and stop at 903 Church Court, a narrow street with queer little low cottages all along. I ask about my patient and am told to come in. She is dying, and four Catholic sisters are kneeling by her cot, engaged in the mass for death. I stand with bowed head until they have finished. I find my patient pulseless and there being nothing that I can do, I pass on.

Next I am called to see a very sick colored man at 1414 Penn Avenue, in a tiny, dark room on the third floor, amid much filth. I find my patient pulseless and can plainly see that he is almost gone. Oh, the awful death scene! He gasps and struggles for breath until one can hardly bear to look on. He has not a relative or friend near him. We know nothing except his name. As I watch his death struggle I am made to wonder what his life has been. I stay until the struggle is over and I can do no more.

Next I go out to Carson Court, to send a very sick colored man to the hospital. He can not pay for an ambulance, so I call the police patrol, which comes in a few minutes. The police carry him to the ambulance, and the stretcher is firmly placed. Then I get in and sit by the patient, and the police get in last. I see that the patient is taken to the ward, and then I leave.

At one o'clock I have lunch and then I go to my dispensary until 4 P. M. Here we treat and prescribe for such of the patients as are able to come to the dispensary. Then we need not visit in their homes. Most of our patients are colored people.

After the dispensary hours are over, I make several more calls and then I come home, very tired, but feeling that the day has been well spent. And so it goes on from day to day. New and interesting cases come up, and the recovered patients are discharged.

These people, though poor, ignorant and dirty, love me, and I am often called "the doctor lady" among the colored people. The little folks follow me around, and are happy if I but talk to them and pat them on their heads. The little black babies coo and laugh just as much as our white babies do. They sometimes look at me so wistfully as I take them and play with them a few minutes,—much to the joy of the fond mother. I have learned to love them and am glad to be of help to them.

Now, if you will come with the other writer (Miss Sanger), she will take you to the Middle Western district of Baltimore, where there are all nationalities,—Germans, German-Hebrews, Hungarians, French, Irish, Italians. All religions are represented.

First we will go down on Pulaski Street to a Hungarian home, where the mother has been suffering intensely for a year with a skin trouble, caused by excessive use of radium. She is very grateful for the nursing care given,—an oil-bath, followed by a salve. She has been much troubled because her thirteen-year-old daughter had got away from home influences during the mother's sojourn at hospitals, etc. By the writer's visits, two or three times a week, the daughter has reentered school, and so is under better influences than by roaming the streets. Both conditions are improving wonderfully.

Next we visit an eighty-five-year-old Irish woman. I enter a room about as cheerless and unsanitary as you can well imagine. There I dress, with boric ointment, an eczema on the leg and bandage it. The son, an only support, squanders his wages for that which satisfieth not; hence the cause of this extreme poverty.

Baltimore, the stronghold of John Barleycorn, is going dry soon, and we shall notice a difference in our work, for drunkenness, and its consequences on the home life, cause many of the conditions we strive to remedy.

Next we go to a home in the center of a large cemetery, where we find a mother and her little wee one, to whom we give nursing care. And as it is next to impossible to get any help to stay in such an isolated place, our aid is much appreciated.

Down on Williams Avenue is a little old lady who for several years has been lifted from her bed to a chair, and

DEATH OF ELDER EDWARD LOOMIS

On Friday evening, Feb. 14, our dear brother, Edward Loomis, of the Mt. Zion congregation, near New Philadelphia, Ohio, passed over the river of death.

He was born in Knox County, Ohio, Jan. 24, 1839. He celebrated his eightieth birthday twenty days before his departure from this life. With his parents he moved to Tuscarawas County, Ohio, when seven years of age. With the exception of about nine months, spent in Indiana, Tuscarawas County has been his home. He received most of his education in the district schools. He attended the New Philadelphia high school several terms. For about twenty years he taught school,—mostly during the winter months.

Because of the opportunity to attend services, held by the United Brethren people, he became identified with that organization at the age of twenty-two.

In 1865 he was married to Martha Jane Sechrist. She was a member of the Church of the Brethren and has been a loving and devoted companion and helpmeet through all these years.

Through his marriage, the reading of the Brethren literature, and sermons which he heard, he was led to a more careful, prayerful, and understanding study of the Bible. As a result of this he became a member of the church. In 1874 he was elected to the ministry. Two years later he was elected to the second degree and two or three years later was elected to the eldership. He held meetings, or assisted in the holding of them, in nearly all of the congregations of Northeastern Ohio. He conducted meetings also outside of the State.

Many were the calls to solemnize marriages, and to preach funeral sermons. A large number of these calls came from people who were not members of the Church of the Brethren.

Bro. Loomis' ability to memorize and quote Scripture was a marvel to all who knew him. When preaching, his Bible frequently lay before him unopened, but his discourses were replete with passages from the Word of God that had been stored away, to be used when needed. In commenting upon Bro. Loomis' life, the editor of the "Advocate-Tribune," New Philadelphia, states that "up to the time of his death he was a close student of the Bible, and there has probably never lived in Tuscarawas County any person more thoroughly conversant with every chapter in the Great Book than Rev. Loomis."

Besides a loving companion, two sons, three daughters, one brother, and two sisters there is a large number of friends who will cherish many acts of kindness and many helpful and comforting messages that our dear brother has rendered.

Services Feb. 17, at 2 o'clock, at he Mt. Zion church. Elders A. F. Shriver and A. H. Miller conducted the services. The burial was made at Somerdale, Ohio.

Mrs. Jennie M. Shriver.

New Philadelphia, Ohio, Feb. 25.

WAYNESBORO, PENNSYLVANIA

Jan. 12 Bro. A. C. Wieand, of Bethany Bible School, came to serve as instructor in one week of Bible Institute work. He opened up the rich treasures of the Word of God, giving us a better vision of our relationship and duties to our Heavenly Father. Bro. Wieand laid a good foundation for a very successful revival meeting, which commenced at the close of the Institute and lasted three weeks, conducted by Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Huntingdon, Pa. Bro. Daniel J. Licbty, who is in the homeland from the India mission field, was with us a few days during the revival, giving increased interest to the services. He used a period before the regular preaching hour to tell of the condition and needs of the field. Sixty-four were received into the church by baptism, with others awaiting the rite. In all, there were seventy-eight decisions and several reclaimed. Sixty of them were under twenty years of age.

Onr quarterly business meeting was held Jan. 18. March 9, Eld. John C. Zug, of Palmyra, Pa., is expected to hold a series of meetings in Rouzerville, Pa., about three miles east of Waynesboro. Jessie Demuth.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIPORNIA

Santoe.—Feb. 23 we had our election of officers for church and Sunday-school. Bro. E. W. Pratt presided. The writer was elected church clerk, "Messenger" agent and correspondents Sister Pratt, Sunday-school superintendent. We decided to have a love feast some time this spring.—Anna R. Hyatt, Santee, Cal., Feb. 24.

FLORIDA

Sebring.—My father and mother, Elder and Mrs. Wm. Bixler, my husband and myself are spending the season in Florida. We have located at Sebring, bought a home on the lake front, and are enjoying the place, as well as the association of brethren and friends from various parts of the United States. Last Sunday afternoon we gave a public presentation of my new cantata "The Prince of Peace" to a greatly interested audience of more than 300 people. The chorus represented ten different States of the Union, Canada and England. I was glad that I could sing and do some class-teaching for the Chapel Sunday-school. I also had the opportunity of assisting Evangelist Charles Weigle in a two weeks' revival. I believe we should be about our Father's business everywhere we go. The world is the field. Florida is a part of it. It pays to keep busy. We can (Philpp. 4: 13).—Marguerite Bixler, Sebring, Florida, March 4.

IDAHO

Winchester church has just closed a three weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. M. Alva Long, of Weiser, Idaho, who commenced Feb. 2, and closed Feb. 23. The interest and attendance were good. Fourteen confessed Christ, twelve of whom were baptized.—Amanda E. Flory, Winchester, Idaho, Feb. 22.

ILLINOIS

Astoria congregation met in council March 1, with Eld. A. H. Lind presiding. Three letters were granted. We decided to have a series of meetings at South Fulton house, commencing April 27, closing with a love feast May 10 and 11. The Aid Society gave a report of the year's work, which was accepted. Eld. S. S. Blough was elected delegate to the Annual Conference, and Eld. C. A. Gruber, alternate. Our next council will be held May 3.—Goldie Eichenberg, Astoria, Ill., March 3.

Bethel church has met with a great loss in the death of her beloved pastor, Bro. S. R. O. Roose. Although he had resided among us but five months, we had grown to love him, and feel he would have accomplished much good in leading us to a higher spiritual plane. Services were held here Feb. 23, after which the body was taken to Indiana for burial. We are pleased that our former pastor, Bro. C. C. Kindy, has not left us as yet, and probably will be with us until June 1.—Estella B. M. Erb, Naperville, Ill., March 2.

Coal Creek congregation met in council Jan. 18. Church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers were elected. Three letters were received. Our offering for the Armenian-Syrian relief amounted to $65.30. Since our last report one has been added to the church by baptism.—Susie Vaneyekle, Canton, Ill., March 1.

Decatur.—Immediately upon the arrival and location of Eld. J. W. Grater and family, of Nappanee, Ind., to assume the pastorate at this place, there was an insistent demand for special evangelistic services, which were held for two weeks, closing Feb. 23. Brother Grater delivered n strong series of sermons on the general theme: "The Clothing of the Soul," Sister Mary Hoots had charge of the singing, and the attendance was large in spite of inclement weather and much sickness. As an immediate result of the meetings, two made open confession and were baptized at our last regular prayer meeting. There is a marked increase in attendance and interest in all departmental activities of the Decatur congregation, which gives us just reasons to rejoice. Since our last report several families of members have purchased property, and intend to locate here soon.—O. G. Davis, 251 E. Olive Street, Decatur, Ill., March 4.

Hickory Grove church met in quarterly council March 1, with Bro. G. G. Canfield presiding, in the absence of our elder, Bro. M. W. Emmert. Settlement was made for our parsonage. We found that $980 had been subscribed, most of which has been paid in by our small membership and by a number of the neighbors. We also got a few voluntary subscriptions from business men. The rest of the $2,000 purchase money had to be borrowed. We decided to hold our spring love feast on Sunday evening, May 11, at 6:30. Our dear sister, Mary Doty, has been to a hospital in Chicago lately, for treatment, and has returned to us. Her condition just now is not very good, but we ask an interest in the prayers of others in her behalf, that she may be restored to health again. We have had a few social gatherings in various homes this winter. This, we think, has proved a help in getting the church people in closer touch with the community.—Mrs. G. G. Canfield, Mt. Carroll, Ill., March 4.

INDIANA

Bethany.—We had our Christmas program Dec. 22, which was well rendered. The children sent a box to Chicago. At the beginning of the year we organized Sunday-school with Bro. Noble Neff, superintendent. The school has been growing steadily. We met in council March 1, with Eld. A. E. Clem presiding. There were seven letters granted. We expect to hold our love feast in the fall.—Mrs. Bertha B. Weybright, Syracuse, Ind., March 3.

Elkhart City.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. S. J. Burger, of Howe, Ind., closed on Sunday night with good interest. Five were baptized, three reclaimed, and one awaits baptism. One of the five baptized is a young man from Poland. He was making his home with one of our brethren, after his return from Camp, became converted and was baptized. Being an earnest seeker, he found what God promises to all who seek for divine truth and salvation. On the evening after his baptism he was granted a letter of membership to be presented to the church at Detroit, Mich., which is the hope he expects to make his home. Our song service was in charge of Sister Gladys Strickler, of Union Center, Ind.—Mrs. Cella A. Swihart, 720 Garfield Avenue, Elkhart, Ind., March 4.

Goshen City.—Great interest is shown in the Men's and Women's Bible Classes. Our pastor teaches the Men's Class and a special speaker is obtained for at least one class period in each month. Sister Morris, of Mishawaka, teaches the Women's Class and gives at their monthly class meetings, a series of lectures on "The Seven Churches of Asia." She also gave a lecture under the auspices of the Christian Workers' Society. It was entitled, "Changing the Jewish Sabbath to the Lord's Day." The Junior Christian Workers gave a patriotic program Feb. 23. Our pastor has just finished a series of sermons on "The Christian Life." These sermons increased the interest and attendance at our Sunday evening service. Our "Workers' Meetings," held each month, are devoted to the discussion of Sunday-school problems. A primary department has been organized, with Sister F. A. Myers as superintendent. As the head of this department of the Sunday-school, she is also in charge of the cradle roll. The Young People's class, formed by a recent combining of the Young Men's and Women's Classes, is now organized and at work. They have increased their enrollment and attendance in a short time and have voted to continue the support of an Indian Boarding School boy, begun last year by the Young Women's Class. Two more have been baptized since our last report.—Beulah Manahan, 234 W. River Avenue, Ashland, Ohio, March 5.

Huntington.—Thursday evening, Feb. 27, the Salamonie church met in regular council. Eld. J. W. Norris presided at the meeting. Twelve membership certificates were granted and seven members were received by letter. Bro. E. L. Heestand and family moved to our congregation Feb. 26, from Plymouth, Ind. Eld. Heestand began his work as pastor March 1. Health conditions are much improved, and attendance at all services is increasing. Eld. Heestand was elected delegate to Annual Meeting.—Hampton Zook, R. D. 6, Huntington, Ind., March 3.

Indianapolis.—After working for some time to secure a pastor, we have been able to segure the services of Eld. Saylor G. Greyer, of Toledo, Ohio, who expects to locate here about the first of May.—J. J. Kintner, 59 N. Holmes Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., March 5.

Loon Creek church met in council March 1, with Eld. D. W. Paul in charge. One letter of membership was received. Bro. Anderson Potts was elected church treasurer. Bro. Hoover, elder in charge, began his work as pastor March 1. Health conditions are much improved, and attendance at all services is increasing. Eld. Heestand was elected delegate to Annual Meeting.—Hampton Zook, R. D. 6, Huntington, Ind., March 3.

Indianapolis.—After working for some time to secure a pastor, we have been able to segure the services of Eld. Saylor G. Greyer, of Toledo, Ohio, who expects to locate here about the first of May.—J. J. Kintner, 59 N. Holmes Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., March 5.

Loon Creek church met in council March 1, with Eld. D. W. Paul in charge. One letter of membership was received. Bro. Anderson Potts was elected church treasurer. Bro. Hoover, elder in charge, began his work as pastor March 1. Health conditions are much improved, and attendance at all services is increasing. Eld. Heestand was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, Bro. B. D. Hirt, with Bro. D. W. Paul, alternate. Since the epidemic has subsided, our attendance at Sunday-school and other services has increased. Feb. 22 Sister Mildred Bowman, of Bethany Bible School, made home for a few days' vacation, and gave us two very interesting talks on mission work at the Hastings Street mission.—one during Sunday-school and one during Christian Workers' meeting. Feb. 26 the Juniors much appreciated by all. Our Aid Society sent $10; also other donations and a box of clothing, amounting in all to about $35.50. An offering was taken a few weeks ago for Armenian-Syrian Relief, amounting to $23.50. We also took an offering of $46 for the India Famine Relief. The Christian Workers' Society has already done some definite work, with much more that is planned to do. Our series of meetings will be held the last two weeks of March.—D. B. Hirt, our pastor. Our love feast was appointed for April 19.—Mae Hoover, Huntington, Ind., March 5.

Middletown church met in council March 1, with Eld. Roof presiding. We decided to have preaching every Sunday, providing we can secure a minister for each Sunday. Our present pastor has been filling a series of meetings two weeks before the communion, which will be held May 17. We hope ministers having occasion to pass this way will try to preach for us. Our Sunday-school is progressing very much. Bro. Carpenter preached for us on Sunday morning and Bro. Lewis in the evening. Our Sunday-school is quite interesting. We are taking the Book of Acts for our study in the cottage prayer meetings.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., March 3.

Mississinawa church met in council March 1, with Elder J. A. Miller presiding. Bro. Ira Shoemaker was reelected as clerk. Bro. Samuel Deweese was chosen trustee. The writer was reelected Publishing House agent. Sister Ray Pigott, church correspondent. Bro. Opal Browning were reelected as our Missionary Committee. Elder J. A. Miller was chosen as delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. Leo H. Miller as alternate. On Sunday, March 2, our pastor preached a good sermon, directing it primarily to our new converts. Text: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men, be strong." Our church was greatly strengthened by our late revival.—Alice E. Miller, Gaston, Ind., March 3.

Mississinawa congregation was expecting Bro. D. R. McFadden to come Feb. 2 and assist us in a series of meetings, but on account of sickness at home he was unable to be here. The home ministers began the meeting on the evening of the 2nd, however, doing the preaching. Bro. McFadden came Feb. 9 and preached every night until Feb. 26. We had a good attendance, and excellent interest was manifested. Twenty-one were baptized.—Alice E. Miller, Gaston, Ind., Feb. 27.

Pleasant Dale church met in council Feb. 22, with Eld. Frank Fisher presiding. Brethren I. F. Yaney and Jos. Baumgartner were elected delegates to Annual Meeting, with Brethren D. M. Byerly and O. V. Diller alternates. Our congregation took an offering of $91 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. An offering of $85 was sent to the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home at Mexico, Ind. We decided to build an addition to the church, to provide additional Sunday-school rooms, and a committee was appointed to solicit funds for the same. Our church services and Sunday-school have been irregular this winter, but are normal again, with good interest. None of our members have been taken so far, but the influenza is prevalent and the epidemic still prevails. Bro. Fisher remained and preached for us on Sunday, which we very much enjoyed.—Emma Miller, Decatur, Ind., Feb. 26.

Plymouth.—Eld. Manly Deeter, of Millord, Ind., came to this church Jan. 26 and remained until Feb. 9. The attendance and interest were good. Sister Deeter's visit was a spiritual awakening, strengthening to the church and appealing to the unsaved. During the meeting three confessed Christ. Feb. 16, before the preparatory service for baptism, Bro. Heestand gave a short sermon, asked for others to go with these, when six more came out, thus making a total of nine, as a result of the meetings. On Monday evening, Feb. 17, we had our communion. It was a very spiritual and helpful meeting. As Bro. Heestand is with his family, he has taken the work of the Salamonie church, of Middle Indiana, we will have a report of his work here. When Bro. Heestand came to us there were fifty-six members. Thirteen were received by letter, twenty-two were baptized, four reclaimed and one died. Fifteen were dismissed by letter. This leaves a present membership of seventy-nine. In appreciation of Brother and Sister Heestand's work here at this place, the members of the church and Sunday-school met in the spacious Heestand's home on the evening of Feb. 20. Each of the two young people's classes presented them with beautiful rocking-chairs. We regret very much to have been losen with our pastor, but the Lord so seems, and we must submit. We trust the Lord to send us a worker to fill Bro. Heestand's place in the near future, as we are left without a shepherd.—Edith Troyer, Plymouth, Ind., March 4.

Roann church met in council March 1, with our presiding elder, Bro. J. D. Rife, in charge. No letters were received or given. The report of the home department for the last six months of 1918 and also the total report for the year were given. The three brethren appointed to solicit subscriptions for the Sunday-school reported contributions of $50 in cash and $30 pledged, to be paid by Sept. 1. Eld. J. D. Rife was chosen as our delegate to Annual Conference. We decided to hold our joint meeting of the West Manchester, Ogans Creek and Roann Sunday-schools in the Roann church, on Sunday, May 18. We decided to send $50 of the Christian Workers' money to help support a native missionary. A committee was chosen, consisting of Brother and Sister Ray Pigott, Bro. C. C. Miller and Bro. Wilford Rife to push the missionary part of the "Forward Movement." Eld. J. D. Rife was reelected as our presiding elder for one year. Eld. Otho Wilson, of Mexico, Ind., and Eld. John F. Frantz, of Wabash, Ind., assisted in the work. Feb. 26 the Sunday-school took a special offering of $60 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Included in this amount is $15.35 from Sister Mary A. Heeter's class of seven primary scholars. She gave twenty-five cents to each pupil last spring to invest in any way desired, and to return the proceeds for relief work. Bro. Moy Gwong, a Chinese minister, of Manchester College, is expected to preach for us March 9, both morning and evening.—Sarah C. Seitner, Roann, Ind., March 4.

Rock Run.—Feb. 23 we lifted an offering of $45 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. A short time ago we raised $105 for the same cause. March 2 was missionary day. Bro. John E. Weaver preached, after which an offering of $32.58 was taken. Our total offerings for missions in full were $77.58. Feb. 26 one Sunday-school pupil requested baptism.—Mrs. Clarence R. Cripe, Goshen, Ind., March 2.

Shipshewana.—We held our quarterly council last Saturday forenoon, Bro. J. H. Schrock presiding. We decided to hold our love feast May 17. We have planned to have a revival and Bible meeting combined, some time near August. There were ten letters granted.—Velma Bollinger, Shipshewana, Ind., March 3.

Somerset church met in council March 1 with our elder, Bro. Elsworth Weimer, presiding. Bro. Elsworth Weimer was reelected elder. Our love feast will be held some time after harvest.—Ruby Tinkle, Somerset, Ind., March 4.

Sumerville church met in council March 1, with Eld. J. A. Miller presiding. The treasurer's report was very eneouraging. Three church trustees were elected: E. S. Surfer, O. Dawson and M. Shively. The writer was chosen church clerk and "Messenger" agent. It was decided to have Bro. J. A. Miller hold a series of meetings in April, if health conditions permit. A spring communion will be held in the near future. Brother and Sister Stanly were chosen delegates to Annual Meeting. Bro. Dawson baptized recently. Bro. H. B. Martin has closed his year's work at this place. We thank him for his interest and influence, and feel that through the help of the Father he has sown good seed.—Pearl Tomlinson, Sumitville, Ind., March 3.

Turkey Creek congregation met in council March 1, with Eld. Henry Wysong presiding. Bro. D. H. Anglemyer, of Union Center, was also with us. We decided to hold our love feast April 19.—Sarah Miller, Nappanee, Ind., March 3.

Washington.—In reorganizing our work for the year we retained Bro. Wm. Overholser as pastor and Bro. A. B. Whitehead as superintendent of the Sunday-school. The church is in a prosperous condition and the Sunday-school has good attendance and interest. Considering the fact that this church, only a short time ago, undertook to support itself it is doing remarkably well. We have secured the privilege of holding services in the Grange Hall. We expect a conference, and Brethren Wm. Overholser, L. M. Neher and A. B. Whitehead have been selected as the committee in charge of that work. Our spring communion has been set for May 10.—Bertha M. Neher, Warsaw, Ind., Feb. 28.

White church met in council March 5, our elder presiding. One letter was received. We reelected Bro. D. C. Campbell as our elder for the coming year; also as delegate to Annual Meeting. We will hold our spring love feast April 26. We expect a Bible class. An offering of $200 was taken up for Armenian-Syrian Relief Jan. 5. The Township Sunday-school Convention will be held at our church on Sunday, March 9. Our pastor will be in charge of the movement. On Saturday evening, March 15, also on Sunday morning and evening, we are expecting Bro. J. Homer Bright and wife, and Bro. O. E. Messmer, of Chicago, to render a missionary program for us.—Roy Coyner, Clarks Hill, Ind., March 5.

Yellow Creek church met in council Feb. 22, our elder, Bro. H. W. Schwalm, presiding. Elders H. M. Schwalm and Harvey Bowers were with us. Our regular business was attended to. Our officers for last year were reelected.—Irvin Miller, R. D. 5, Goshen, Ind., March 3.

Yellow River church met in council March 1. Our elder not being present, Bro. E. E. Shively took charge of the meeting. He was assisted by Bro. Floyd Leeper. One letter was granted. Reports of officers and committees were read and accepted. Bro. Floyd Leeper will represent us at Annual Conference, with Bro. E. E. Shively, alternate. We decided to hold our love feast May 31, beginning at 7 P. M.—Alma E. Hanawalt, Bourbon, Ind., March 3.

IOWA

Dallas Center church met for council March 1, with our elder, Bro. C. B. Rowe, presiding. Officers for the year were elected. Seven letters of membership were granted. We regret very much to have them move away, but while some go, others are moving in. Bro. C. B. Rowe was chosen as delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. M. W. Eikenberry, alternate. The time of our love feast was set for June 14 and 15, beginning at 7 P. M. An offering of over $100 was taken for the India sufferers.—Anna Goughnour, Dallas Center, Iowa, March 4.

English River church met in council Feb. 22. Our spring love feast will be held April 26. We are planning for a special program July 4. We expect Eld. D. L. Miller to be with us in a series of meetings this fall. Eld. J. F. Deaton was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. One letter was received and two were granted.—J. D. Bowser, South English, Iowa, Feb. 28.

KANSAS

Altamont church met in council Feb. 23, with Eld. W. H. Miller presiding. Officers were elected as follows: D. P. Neher, elder; Sister Miller, church clerk; Bro. Ira Gardner, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. B. S. Miller, Sunday-school superintendent. One letter was granted and one received.—Mae Gish, Altamont, Kaos., March 1.

MARYLAND

Fulton Avenue (Baltimore).—Since our last report three letters of membership have been received. Feb. 5 Bro. T. S. Fike, of Thurmont, Md., Chairman of the District Ministerial Board, preached for us. We are glad to report that we have secured a pastor, Bro. A. L. B. Martin. The attendance, both at church services and at Sunday-school, is growing. The attendance, March 2, at Sunday-school was 105. Our love feast will be held on Sunday, May 4, at 5 P. M.—Darius C. Angle, 911 N. Monroe Street, Baltimore, Md., March 5.

MICHIGAN

Elmdale.—Eld. J. C. Overholt, of Grand Rapids, met with the members at this place Feb. 1, in a special members' meeting for the election of a deacon. Two were chosen. Bro. Stephen Weaver, Jr., and wife were installed into office at this meeting. Bro. Wilbur Tyler and wife were installed at our regular members' meeting, held March 1, with Eld. C. E. Deardorff in charge. Our spring communion will be held April 26, beginning at 10:30 A. M. Bro. C. E. Deardorff was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. E. M. Stanbard, alternate. We decided to have a prayer meeting each Wednesday evening.—Emma Weaver, Ada, Mich., March 4.

MISSOURI

Centerview church met in council Feb. 27 with Bro. Amos Wampler presiding. One church letter was received and two were granted. Bro. Jason Boston was elected Sunday-school superintendent.—Mrs. Dollie Burgard, R. D. 36, Centerview, Mo., March 5.

Prairie View church met in council on Saturday, March 1, our elder, Bro. H. L. Holsopple, presiding. It was decided to have a teacher-training class and Christian Workers' Meeting each Sunday evening, at 7:30. Our Sunday-school is increasing in attendance and interest. Our church recently sent an offering for the Armenian sufferers,—$52 from the church and $11 from the Sunday-school, making $63 in all.—Alice L. Mohler, Versailles, Mo., March 3.

NEBRASKA

Wanted.—A good Christian home for a little girl twelve years old, and a member of the Church of the Brethren. Parties who adopt her must live in the State of Nebraska. For further information write the undersigned.—J. R. Smith, Juniata, Nebr., Feb. 28.

NORTH CAROLINA

Pleasant Grove.—Our Bible School closed, Feb. 26. It was uplifting and inspiring to those who attended. We trust that much good will come from the earnest efforts put forth by Bro. Clayton B. Miller, and that we may eventually have a band of strung church workers. Bro. Miller will remain with us till Sunday, March 2.—Emma Bryant, Brummet, N. C., Feb. 27.

NORTH DAKOTA

Minot.—Bro. Ira H. Fox, who has had charge of the Minot church during the past year, is now taking up his work in other fields. He is at present holding revival meetings at Cando, N. Dak., after which he will go to Brooklyn, Iowa, to take charge of that church. Bro. Fox has labored faithfully with us, and we appreciate what he has done for us. Bro. Shorb, who is now living in Minot, will take charge of the preaching services until we get some one to take up the work. We hope that we may have the prayers of the Brotherhood for the prosperity of the Minot church.—Beulah Steele, 442 First Avenue, N. W., Minot, N. Dak., March 4.

OHIO

Bear Creek.—We met March 4 for our quarterly council, with Eld. J. W. Beeghly presiding. Several members from adjoining churches were with us, and helped us in our work. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. J. W. Beeghly was elected delegate to Annual Conference, and Brethren Parker Filburn and Alva Richards to District Conference. The church decided to hold our love feast May 24, at 6 P. M. The Christian Workers' committee of 1919 are planning to render an Easter program.—Mandie Filburn, R. D. 4, Dayton, Ohio, March 6.

Blanchard church held her quarterly council March 1, Eld. D. P. Weller acting as moderator. Bro. William Hire was chosen trustee; the writer was elected "Messenger" agent and church correspondent; Bro. J. A. Vanscoy, delegate to District Meeting, Bro. E. R. Prowant, alternate; Bro. D. F. Weller, delegate to Annual Meeting, Bro. William Hire, alternate. Our love feast will be held May 31.—Edna Weller, Continental, Ohio, March 4.

County Line church met in council March 1, with Eld. David Byerly presiding. Two letters of membership were received and two were granted. Sister Cecil Davis and the writer were chosen as delegates to District Meeting, with Bro. Jacob Grant and Sister Edith Miller as alternates.—Bessie J. Guthrie, Lima, Ohio, March 3.

Donnels Creek church met in council March 1, with our elder, Bro. J. D. Sandy, presiding. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. Sandy is our delegate to Annual Meeting and Brethren J. D. Sandy and Cyrus Flora, delegates to District Meeting.—Elsie Winger, R. D. 1, Box 173, Springfield, Ohio, March 3.

Eagle Creek.—Our Sunday-school took an offering of $84.44 for the India sufferers, after which $15 was added to it, making $109.44. We raised $200.01 for the Armenians. We expect to have a series of meetings next June.—Pearl Rodabaugh, Williamsport, Ohio, March 4.

We appointed as "Messenger" agents, Mary Ellen Wenger, correspondent, Caroline Eberly; trustee for Bethel, Christ Snavely; secretary of Missionary Committee, Leo Wise; Christian Workers' president, Lucille Snavely; church clerk, Caroline Eberly; Annual Meeting delegate, Ruth Eberly; District Meeting delegate, Christ Snavely and Lloyd Dukes.—Mrs. Caroline Eberly, Old Fort, Ohio, March 3.

Lick Creek church met in council Feb. 22, Bro. David Lytle presiding. We had a good representation. Brethren Clyde St. John, and Wm. Kintner were chosen delegates to District Meeting; Arthur Sellers, alternate. Bro. Clyde Miller is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Geo. Sellers, alternate.—Mrs. John Kintner, Ney, Ohio, March 3.

Logan church met in council March 1, Bro. Berkebile acting as moderator. Bro. H. Z. Smith was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, and Bro. Leslie Yoder, with Bro. A. Miller alternate, delegate to District Meeting. We decided to have a love feast on the evening of May 17. We are expecting Bro. Moy Gwong, a Chinese minister, and sister Annie Etha Eby, returned missionary, to be with us March 9.—Mrs. Leslie Yoder, Bellefontaine, Ohio, March 2.

Poplar Grove church met in council March 1, with Eld. Noah Erbaugh presiding. Brethren J. S. Garr and Ezra Noffsinger were with us. Five letters were granted. Eld. B. F. Sharp was appointed as delegate for Annual Meeting and Eld. Noah Erbaugh and Bro. M. Blocher for District Meeting. Bro. H. M. Blocher was also reelected as trustee for the ensuing year; Levi Bowser, church register; Sister Nettie Huffman, superintendent of home department and credit roll. Our church sent an offering of $212 for Armenian-Syrian Relief, March 2 the Y. P. C. W. gave a short program in the evening. March 9 the Live Wire Sunday-school class will have the program for the Christian Workers' Meeting.—Meda Bowman, D. S., Greenville, Ohio, March 3.

Stonelick church met in council March 1. Bro. Claude V. Coppock, of the Middle District church, was with us. Bro. Aaron Coy, our presiding elder for many years, offered his resignation, which the church accepted. Bro. Claude V. Coppock was chosen to fill the vacancy. Bro. S. P. Gronendyke was elected delegate to District Meeting, and Sister Mary Carr alternate. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Sister Grossnickle, superintendent. Bro. Coppock remained over Sunday and preached for us. We appreciate the visits of our ministering brethren and the well-inspected sermons. Our Sunday-school has continued through the winter, although the attendance has been small. But we feel encouraged as the attendance is increasing now.—Mary A. Carr, Batavia-Stonelick, Ohio, March 3.

Sugar Hill church met in council March 1, with Eld. J. Franklin Brubaker presiding. Eld. J. F. Deaton, from an adjoining church, was with us. Three letters were granted and five received. Bro. J. Franklin Brubaker was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, and Brethren Noah Beery and Joseph Brower to District Meeting. Bro. John Good was called to the ministry. One has been added to the church by baptism since our last report. Bro. Herschel Weaver, of West Manchester, Ohio, will be with us in a series of meetings, beginning April 13, at the Sugar Hill house.—Mary Bowser, West Alexandria, Ohio, March 3.

Swan Creek church met in council March 1, with Eld. D. P. Koch presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected. Bro. D. P. Koch was elected delegate to District Meeting; Bro. Aaron Smith, alternate. It was decided to have a love feast June 28, at 10 A. M., in the East house.—Nancy Smith, 809 N. Fulton Street, Wauseon, Ohio, March 3.

OKLAHOMA

Paradise Prairie.—Our church held both a fall and a spring council in January. Bro. M. S. Gripe, from Big Creek, presiding. We decided to hold a series of evangelistic meetings May 4, and continuing two weeks, conducted by Bro. Homer Blough, of Wichita. We will hold our love feast May 10.—Cassie Carrier, R. D. 1, Coyle, Okla., March 1.

PENNSYLVANIA

Back Creek congregation enjoyed two weeks' series of meetings at the Brandt churchhouse, conducted by our home pastors, Brethren Wolf and Blough, assisted by Brother Swander. One confessed Christ, and one was baptized a few weeks prior to our communion. Attendance were very helpful and appreciated by a good audience every night.—Pearl Heckman, Williamson, Pa., March 1.

Germantown.—On Friday evening, Feb. 28, we held a Mothers' Meeting, when Mrs. Howard, a worker of Philadelphia, gave an interesting talk on "Peace with God." The Women's Bible Class gave $50 and the Mothers' Meeting $5 to the Armenian sufferers. The Annual Meeting of the Sisters' Aid Societies of this district will be held on Wednesday, March 26, at 1:30 P. M., in the Bethany church, Philadelphia. On Sunday, March 2, Bro. J. H. Cassady, of Hanford, Jr., was ordained for this work. Since our last report two have been received by baptism and one by letter.—Mrs. M. C. Swigart, 6611 Germantown Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., March 4.

Indian Creek church met in council March 1, with our elder, Bro. James B. Shisler, presiding. Our love feast will be held May 10. Preparatory services are to begin at 2 P. M. Our special spring council, before the love feast, will be held April 26. Bro. Ralph W. Schlosser, who was booked for a series of meetings with us through the month of May, can not be with us through 1919, on account of other pressing duties. A collection was held to replenish our church treasury. Our elder, Bro. Jas. Shisler, was elected delegate to represent us at our General Conference, and Brethren A. A. and J. A. Price are to represent us at District Meeting. Bro. Wallace back again in the evening, yet withal she is so cheerful that it is a bright spot in the day, just to drop in for a little chat. There is little I can do for her. She is cared for by an efficient colored maid. As we bowed as we case, we find her growing weaker, and as we dress the dreadful bedsores, her cry to me is: "Pray that I may go soon." We shall be glad for her when the Heavenly Father releases her from her prison house of pain.

A little farther down the street we come to a home where a father and two small sons are down with influenza. Mother has to do everything. We give baths, take temperatures, give nourishment and do anything we can to make them comfortable. Later in the week the father develops pneumonia, and has to be taken to the hospital, where he is convalescing nicely.

Next we come to a Jewish home. There the mother of nine is dying from complications following influenza. The aged, gray-haired grandmother stands with arms around her until there is no dimness upon the looking-glass, which had been held before the patient's mouth. Then we close the eyes and fold the hands and leave her to her long, last sleep. They are Hebrews of the high-strung, nervous temperament, and their outspoken grief is indeed heartrending.

The noon hour is spent at my district office, where I receive new calls. Today a mother came for help to get her sixteen-year-old son to the hospital. His development, mentally and physically, is like that of a twelve-year-old, and shows signs of epilepsy. He is a typical drunkard's son. I make all arrangements for his going, and the mother is very appreciative and much relieved.

Many of our calls come through the Metropolitan Insurance Agency, which gives this nursing service to all of their industrial policy-holders. We also coöperate with the public heneficiary societies of the city, Red Cross home service, and federated charities.

In my district there is a public-spirited club. The members keep my loan closet filled with necessary articles, such as sheets, towels, hot water hottles, etc., to loan during an illness. At Christmas they filled baskets with groceries, which were placed in fifteen different homes. A large number of toys and hooks, new and old, were also placed in homes where the necessities of life are barely found. They were so appreciative that never before did I more fully enter into the spirit of Christmas. Our people soon learn to love us, for they realize we try to help them and to do them good. Altogether our work is very interesting, and yet we see much sickness, sorrow and death. It only reminds us of the uncertainty of life and the surety of death. But there is always a bright side to be seen through the cloud. We can often bring spiritual comfort to these needy ones, and their gratitude is sincere.

Baltimore, Md. Viola Mae Lantz, Ella Mae Sanger.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

A Correction.—Inadvertently a slight error crept into the report of the Sisters' Missionary and Aid Society of Elgin, Ill., as published in last issue. Instead of "We have MADE 200 garments and 24 comforts to French Relief," read, "We MADE 200 garments, and MADE and DONATED 24 comforts to French Relief."

BROOKVILE, OHIO.—Report of Aid Society for 1918: We held 22 meetings, with an average attendance of 14. We quilted 9 quilts, made 4 comforts, pieced 5 comfort-tops and worked 2, made 54 prayer-coverings and 62 garments. We donated 4 comforts, 18 prayer-coverings, clothing and $49.40 in money. We sent out one mission box, valued at $20; gave $4.60 to the Red Cross; $5 to a sister; $7 worth of clothing to a family at a mission point; $15 to the Armenian sufferers; $15.25 to one minister's wife. Our regular collections amounted to $31.09; offerings, $20.57; other donations, $30.30; balance from 1917, $38.62; received during the year, $138.48; expenditures, $149.03; balance on hand Dec. 31, $28.08. Number added during the year $31; $25 of which was sent to the Armenian sufferers. Officers: Ollie Fidler, President; Dora Hay, Superintendent; Orpha Wogaman, Treasurer of Birthday Fund; the writer, Secretary-Treasurer.—Dora Zimmerman, Brookville, Ohio, Feb. 25.

FERNALD, IOWA.—Report of Sisters' Aid Society for 1918: We held nineteen all-day and two half-day meetings, with an average attendance of six. We had ten members enrolled. Work completed: 2 comforters, 180 garments, 43 bonnets. We also did mending and pieced quiltblocks. Total receipts, $66.46; expenses, $12.60; donated $53.86 to the church. Officers: President, Sister Robinson; Vice-President, Sister Winnie Mead; Secretary-Treasurer, the writer. —Sister Lettie Hankins, Zearing, Iowa, Feb. 22.

GREENSPRING, OHIO.—Our Sisters' Aid Society had twelve regular meetings during the year, with an average attendance of ten. The work done consisted of quilting, piecing, knotting comforts, making aprons, sewing carpet-rags, serving lunch at a sale, and making sun-bonnets. We had six meetings at which we made hospital garments for the Red Cross. Our regular offerings amounted to $16.55; received for mission box, $2.50; received for sewing carpet-rags, 45 cents; for knotting comforts, $2.75; for sale lunch, $23.10; total, $56.64. Our expenses were $8.61; sent for Mary Quinter Memorial, $25; to Central Service Committee, $20; balance, $3.04. Officers: President, Sister Fannie Sawtelle; Superintendent, Sister Clara Zimmerman; Secretary, Sister Mary Dukes; Treasurer, Sister Ethel Painter.—Lucile Seavely, Old Fort, Ohio, Feb. 24.

HAGERSTOWN, IND.—Report of White Branch Aid Society for 1918: We held 27 meetings; total attendance, 183; total collections, $11.07. We furnished lunch at three sales; sent boxes to the Marion and Hastings Street Missions for Thanksgiving; sent pillowslips and sheets to White Branch room at Dayton; quilt; box of goods to Mexico Home; pair of blankets to Old Folks' Home; gave Bro. Wright $10; sent "Messenger" to a sister. Officers: President, Sister Lizzie Hawkins; Vice-Presidents, Sisters Della Smith and Anna Bowman; Treasurer, Sister Kate Beeman; Secretary, the writer.—Mamie Bowman, Hagerstown, Ind., Feb. 24.

KITCHEL, IND.—Report of Four Mile Aid Society for 1918: We did surgical dressing work at the Hannah's Creek church each week. We had three meetings and three sales; average attendance at meetings, twenty. Amount carried over from 1917, $181.69; received during 1918, $199.66; expenditures, $226.80; balance, $154.55. We gave $30 to Mary Quinter Hospital Fund; $40 to flood sufferers of China; $30 to the Oneida Institute of Kentucky; $30 to Armenian-Syrian Relief. We also adopted four French orphans. We are making and donating garments to the French refugees. Officers: Sister Maggie Brower, President; Mrs. Myrtle Shrader, Vice-President; Sister Ruth Edgeworth, Secretary-Treasurer.—Edna Brower, Kitchel, Ind., Feb. 28.

Ziegler was reëlected janitor for one year.—B. M. Boss, Verofield, Pa., March 4.

Maple Spring.—Though our church and Sunday-school work has been hindered very much by influenza, the work is picking up again with good interest. Bro. J. W. Rummell has been elected Sunday-school superintendent. We remodeled the basement of our church, and made Sunday-school rooms, which are now occupied by the classes. One offerings for Armenian and Syrian relief amounted to $26. The "Sunshine Class" of our Sunday school is supporting an orphan in India. A committee has been chosen to arrange our Easter program. A Missionary and Temperance Committee was also elected. We hope for a bright and successful future, and that this may be the banner year of our school.—Anna Rummell, Hollsopple, Pa., March 5.

Mingo church met in council March 1, our elder, Bro. Levi Ziegler, presiding. One letter was received. Bro. Penn Ziegler was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, and Brethren Joseph Cassel and Samuel Hess, delegates to District Meeting. The officers for the Mingo Sunday-school were elected, with Bro. Penn Ziegler as superintendent. We also elected the officers of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Howard Ziegler is president. We expect to hold a series of meetings at the Mingo house beginning May 24. Bro. Michael Kurtz, of Richland, Pa., is to conduct these meetings. June 7 we will have our love feast, at 2 P. M., at the Mingo house. Our Bible Institute, which was previously reported to be held last November, but was postponed on account of the influenza epidemic, will now be held from March 14 to 16 at the Mingo house. We have recently organized our Young Folks' Bible Class.—Elizabeth Hunsberger, Limerick, Pa., March 3.

Moxham (Johnstown).—We began a series of evangelistic meetings Feb. 9. Eld. C. D. Bonsack, of New Windsor, Md., did the preaching and Bro. D. W. Boyer, of Chicago, directed the singing. Bro. Bunsack gave us splendid sermons. They were practical and all seemed to be very much helped by his efforts among us. Bro. Boyer directed our song service in a spiritual manner, helping us to feel what we were singing. We feel that we were much strengthened by their efforts. Six were baptized and one came to us from the Progressive Brethren church. The meetings closed on the evening of March 2.—Mrs. J. C. Flora, 538 Coleman Avenue, Johnstown, Pa.

Quemahoning church met in council in the Maple Spring house March 1, Eld. P. J. Blough presiding. On account of the influenza our churches were closed, and our December council postponed, which made this a busy day. The officials met in the forenoon and got ready for the afternoon meeting. The committees in charge of various departments of church work gave their annual reports. All officials of the coming year were elected. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren I. B. Ferguson and U. H. Blough. Four delegates go to District Meeting. The church also decided to elect young men to the ministry the coming year or two. Our church is very interesting talk at the close of the meeting.—Anna Rummell, Hollsopple, Pa., March 5.

Red Bank church is in Armstrong County, near New Bethlehem, Pa. Red Bank's greatest revival began on the evening of Feb. 5, and closed on Sunday evening, Feb. 23. It was conducted by Bro. George W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio. He began with a comfortably filled house, and closed with a house packed to the door. At no time was there a lack of deep, spiritual feeling, even on bad nights. He captured the attention of his audience the first night, and held it to the close. His preaching was thoroughly evangelical, and four square with the Word. Seventy-five consecrated themselves to the Master's service. Of this number some were reclaimed, some came from the Progressive Church, and others made their first start in the Christian life. Most of the baptizing has been done. Some, on account of sickness, will be baptized later. A few will not be baptized, on account of objections by in-laws. The little band of believers rejoices greatly on account of the splendid additions that came into the church as a result of the meetings. At the close a very highly spiritual love feast service was held, which was largely attended. The future outlook for the church is brighter than at any time in her history. We will have an election about the middle of April, and expect to cast our lot with the Indian Creek congregation. Bro. Albert C. Schne, of New Windsor, Md., has been chosen as my successor.—J. L. Bowman, New Bethlehem, Pa., March 4.

Rockton.—Our quarterly council was held March 1, in the Rockton house, with Eld. Geo. D. Cleaver as moderator. The following brethren will serve as our Missionary Committee: B. P. Huey, D. B. Kirk, J. B. Hollopeter. This committee will have charge of plans for the Forward Movement. Eld. Cleaver will have charge of the missionary work at the Greenville church, with authority to call to his assistance other workers there. Three members of the Board of Trustees were reelected for a term of three years.—E. W. Hollopeter, D. B. Kirk, B. P. Huey. We are looking forward to evangelistic meetings this spring, to be in charge of Bro. H. A. Brubaker, of Akron, Ohio, who was to come last fall but was debarred owing to the closing of public meetings by the Board of Health. The time is not yet definitely known, but will be announced later; also the date of our love feast. Delegate to District Meeting is Bro. J. B. Hollopeter, with Bro. E. W. Hollopeter as alternate. The spirit of the Forward Movement is beginning to be felt in the Christian Workers' Society and Sunday-school, and it is likely that the present year will see greater things attempted for God.—J. B. Hollopeter, Rockton, Pa., March 3.

Sipesville.—Our new pastor, Bro. Charles Blough, took charge of our church at the beginning of the year. The church is being built up to correspond to its new surroundings. Our building was dedicated last fall, and, owing to the influenza, our meetings were somewhat hindered. Geiger, Casebeer and Sipesville held a community program at Sipesville Feb. 20. The general subject was "Organization." Plans are under way to hold a similar meeting at the Geiger church soon. We are also planning a series of meetings for the near future. The church council met last Saturday, March 1, at which officers for the following year were elected.—Beatrice C. Edmiston, Acosta, Pa., March 3.

Smithfield church met in council Feb. 8, with Eld. W. H. Holsinger presiding. Bro. H. Stover Kulp, of New Enterprise, was also present and gave an excellent address on "The Forward Movement." We decided to hold our love feast at Mingo, May 4 & 5. Brethren Eli Hoover and C. B. Baker were elected to represent us at District Meeting. Bro. H. Stover Kulp will conduct an evangelistic meeting for us the coming fall. He just closed a series of meetings here on last Friday evening, preaching, in all, nineteen sermons which were spiritual, practical and impressive. Bro. W. H. Holsinger, assisted by Sister Elsie Longenecker, made the song services inspiring and uplifting. Bro. A. J. Detwiler, of Williamsburg, also assisted in making the meetings interesting. Five accepted Christ and were baptized. Our Sunday-school is now coming up to the "Front Line Standard." Our superintendent, Bro. E. K. Sollenberger, wishes to make the school what it ought to be.—Jno. Perrin, Barbara, Pa., Feb. 26.

TEXAS

Flowella.—Bro. D. G. Brubaker, of Nocona, Tex., came to this place Feb. 15 and preached five sermons. The meetings were appreciated and enjoyed by all who attended.—Mrs. A. Rupp, Flowella, Tex., Feb. 25.

VIRGINIA

Brick church met in council March 1, with Bro. J. W. Barnhart presiding. Brethren R. L. Reherry, T. W. Fisher and G. A. Barnhart were elected delegates to District Meeting. We raised $42 for general missionary purposes, and $58 toward the support of Bro. I. E. Overholtzer, our missionary in China.—Zaida Barnhart, Wirtz, Va., March 3.

In the Field.—I have just returned from a trip to our Nottoway County (Va.) missioo. A number of our members have moved away from the mission and those who still live in the country are very much scattered. If the members would locate near Crewe, we could look after their spiritual wants more adequately. We baptized two on this trip.—C. D. Hylton, Troutville, Va., March 4.

Schoolfield congregation met in council March 1. A short discourse was given by Bro. H. J. Woodie, the elder in charge. All members were found to be in union. While with us, Bro. Woodie preached three soul-cheering sermons. There being one applicant for baptism, the rite was administered on Sunday evening.—A. T. Prather, Box 304, Schoolfield, Va., March 3.

WASHINGTON

Outlook.—Our church and Sunday-school work has been somewhat hindered on account of the prevalence of influenza, but the epidemic has, in a degree, subsided, and we are pleased to see our attendance increasing. Nothing was done for the Sunday-school work in our small house, we are building a basement, which will provide available rooms. Feb. 16 the Sunday-school lifted an offering of $31.34 for India sufferers.—Mrs. C. A. Wagner, Outlook, Wash., Feb. 23.

WEST VIRGINIA

Maple Spring.—Feb. 22, Bro. John Helmick, who has been ill for some time, was anointed. The following evening the Junior Band met at Bro. Jesse Pike's for Christian Workers' meeting. On this morning of Sunday, Feb. 23, we met for preaching at Bro. Peter Pike's. Services were conducted by Bro. John Fike. In the afternoon Bro. Fike went to Bro. Christ Miller's to conduct a meeting for the benefit of Sister Miller, who is not able to go to church. We met at 3 P. M. for Sunday-school at Maple Spring, and at night we met for a Child Rescue program. It was bandied very nicely. We took up a collection of $9.30 for that work. At this we met for our quarterly council. Bro. John S. Fike presided. Two letters were read and accepted. The German Settlement church asks the District Meeting of the First District of West Virginia to consider the advisability of owning a Receiving Home for homeless children and, if advisable, to arrange for the establishing of the same. Bro. John S. Fike was appointed as delegate to Annual Meeting. We have decided to hold our love feast Aug. 30. Five brethren were elected as deacons. Three of them were duly installed. Two ministers,—Bro. Ollie P. Jones and Bro. Charlie Vought,—were installed into the ministry. An offering of $55.65 was taken for the suffering Armenians.—Goldie Judy, Fellon, W. Va., March 3.

Mountain Dale church has selected Bro. B. W. Smith to hold our series of meetings, which will begin Sept. 13. Bro. Geo. W. Van Sickle delivered a fine sermon here Feb. 23.—Jeremiah Rodeheaver, Hazelton, W. Va., March 4.

Pleasant View.—We met in council Feb. 22. Eld. J. S. Zigler presided. The treasurers read their yearly reports. Offerings for missions $905.73, for church expenses $700. Brethren W. F. Rogers and W. D. Rogers are our Sunday-school superintendents for this year. We decided to have our love feast May 17.—Cynthia E. Fox, Fayetteville, W. Va., March 3.

...EDITORIAL...

Why We Are Against It

We are absolutely opposed to the program of universal military training, not because we think some of us are entitled to escape obligations which others must assume, but because of our conviction that such a policy will do the nation much more harm than it can possibly do good.

Even granting that the nation may have to fight again some time,—which God forbid,—the advantages of universal training, as a measure of preparedness for such a contingency, are not so great as has been claimed. That was clearly proved in the late war. The technical training necessary is acquired in a short time. And forgotten in a short time. This means that if universal training is to be really effective, in making the nation ready for war at a moment's notice, the country will have to be so thoroughly militarized as to be kept practically on a war basis. Who is willing to pay such a price for preparedness for war?

Even the advocates of this policy are not willing for this, or they try to make it appear so, for they are careful to say that universal training need not foster the war spirit. Such talk is an insult to ordinary intelligence. Military training that does not breed war spirit is of little value. Ask any soldier in the late war.

Mr. Bryan's remark about a million men springing to arms overnight, if necessary, was laughed at a good deal, and it was, of course, a rhetorical exaggeration, but it was nearer the truth than the contentions of those who would show us how to make efficient soldiers out of all the youth of our country without filling them and the country with the spirit of war. We have no patience with such nonsense.

Universal military training will either be such a tame thing as to be worthless for its purpose, or it will so absorb the interest of the country as to interfere very seriously with the normal activities of peace time and, at the same time, constitute a constant menace to peace.

If a man believes that the liability to war is so great that preparation for it should be the nation's chief business, let him be honest enough to say so. But let him understand what that means, and let him be willing to pay the price. We do not so interpret the signs of the times. In any case, we prefer to run the risk of any emergency that may arise, rather than to embrace the certainty of militarism.

We intend to expect peace, to think peace, to talk peace, to plan for peace, to pray for peace, to work for peace, and trust the issue with God. And we intend further to do what we can to persuade other people to adopt the same course.

But What Is Premise Number Two?

Every "therefore" which introduces a legitimate conclusion is based upon two facts. The logicians call them premises. In formal logic these are always both expressed, but in ordinary discussion one of them is usually so clearly implied that it is not specifically mentioned,—not, at least, in immediate connection with the conclusion.

The words of Jehovah to Joshua after the death of Moses are an instance: "Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people." The death of Moses was one fact. That was stated. But how could that constitute a reason for going over Jordan? What was the missing premise?

Is the conclusion drawn here the one you would have looked for? Would you not rather have understood fact number two to be something on this order? "This sad event changes the whole situation. We can do nothing without Moses." And the conclusion, something like this? "Our proposed conquest of Canaan will have to be abandoned."

But how different from this is the divine method of making syllogisms! Obviously that missing member must have in it some rare kind of cogency. What could it be? Read on a little farther. Yes, here it is: "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee."

That supplies the missing link completely. Now we get the force of it: Moses is dead; but I am with you just the same; therefore, go ahead.

Do you see what a strategic place that second premise holds? How the conclusion turns upon it? Has something happened which threatens to upset your plans? Your congregation was about to undertake some new and greater service, possibly. Something, at any rate, to he then misfortune leader was taken the situation has

Conversion and Perso

Personality consists of intellect, feeling, will, and unity and identity of self-consciousness. But psychologists tell us that we are not one self, but many empirical selves. What do they mean by this statement of our many, or our varying selves?

With very little thought or reflection, we recognize different selves or association complexes in ourselves and in others. The business man, in his office, is different from what he is with his family at home, or at the club with his friends, or at church, where an entirely new set of ideas, memories, emotions and sentiments make up his conscious self. He is another self at the baseball ground; a different one when he is angry; and yet another when he enjoys nature, and beauty.

A psychological self is the complex of associations, ideas, and emotions that make up consciousness in any particular state or habit of life. Each individual has many or various selves, even in normal, healthy life.

There are also pathological cases where these selves are so entirely dissociated that one self is not conscious of the other. Prof. James records an incident of this kind that I shall mention. Jan. 17, 1887, Rev. Ansel reality, a different self in these different relations. Some people do not hesitate to rob the government, or the railroad, or the public, who would never, in the least, injure a private individual. Some are optimistic and cheerful in one set of activities, and melancholy and gloomy in others. Many persons have a completely different self in public from that in the home. The kind neighbor may become a snob at the fair. The politician is more courteous as a vote seeker, than as an officer.

In daily life, most of us have different and often conflicting selves. There is the self of the home, or family life; the business self,—where we earn our living; the social self,—our relation to our neighbors; the recreative self,—when we relax and recuperate; the self that enjoys nature and music and art; the religious self that is conscious of a relation to, and dependence upon, God; and the ideal self,—a vague longing for a bigger, better, larger personality. It is perfectly normal, and not pathological, to speak of these different mental complexes as selves. Prof. James speaks of these various selves in his characteristic way: "I am often confronted by the necessity of standing by one of my empirical selves and relinquishing the rest. Not that I would not, if I could, be both handsome and fat, and well dressed, and a great athlete, and make a million a year, be a wit, and a bon-vivant, and a lady-killer, as well as a philosopher; a philanthropist, a statesman, warrior, African explorer, as well as a 'tone-poet,' and saint. . . . Such different characters may conceivably, at the outset of life, be equally possible to man. But to make any one of them actual, the rest must more or less be suppressed."

How can these different selves be united into a personality? Is not everybody a personality? Not in the highest sense. All are individuals, and candidates for personality. Personality, in the truest sense, demands a unity and harmony, and continuity of the self, which is more than a medley of selves, isolated from each other. Many individuals never see any relation between their empirical selves. True personality demands a unity, a harmonization, and a welding of all human experience into one life, into one personality. How can this be done?

Conversion is the unifier of the distracted and dissociated life. The many interests must be lost in one supreme interest. All must be ennobled, lifted up into a higher self, or be lost. The Christian becomes a person, a son of God, a unified self, who is no more divided into conflicting selves and interests, but is one with himself,—"He comes to himself." As his personality gets in tune with God, it finds itself. This new harmony and unity give the peace and joy that pass all understanding.

The new unity gives a point of view that is a revelation. All things become new. The different selves and interests, which seemed so important before, now find their true value and place in a proper perspective, as they become parts of a larger, nobler, unified self.

Many so-called Christians are not truly converted, for their lives are not unified, not harmonized. The different selves are not subordinated to the one, and the conflict of interests is still raging. We must surrender to conquer. "Conversion is the expulsive power of a new affection." The new love casts out the love of the worthless. Conversion is the great unifier of life, the harmonizer of the divided selves to God, and this harmony results in a new and larger self or person.

The unconverted man,—whether in the church or out,—puts his affection, his interests, upon business, or pleasure, or honor, or family, or his lower instincts. This causes conflict and sorrow. Peace and joy come only when one comes to himself, and subordinates, surrenders, all to the one Supreme Cause.

One of the distracting influences in our modern life is the division of duties into "religious" and "secular." The true Christian has no secular duties, for the work of the farm, or kitchen, or shop, or profession becomes unified with the supreme cause, and all legitimate work becomes religious. The farmer should farm for God, and be conscious all the time that he is a co-worker with God for the cause of the Kingdom. Why should not our recreations, our pleasures, our socials, and our business be so ennobled by finding a place in the supreme cause? Unless all our thoughts and actions are in tune with God, they should not be at all. If they are right, then they are a part of his plan. True conversion unites all selves and all interests into the one, and all else has value only as it contributes to the highest good. This unity and harmony of the many interests into the supreme cause, constitutes true personality.

God is the perfect personality. The sons of God are made in his image. Sonship means God-likeness in character and nature. As long as the individual is divided by conflicts, and life is made up of scraps of selves, there exists no true personality. True conversion creates a personality, a unified soul, in tune and in harmony with the Infinite. God has revealed the perfect person in Jesus Christ. Christianity means Christ-like persons.

The Late War,—The Last War

One of the gravest dangers now confronting, not only the nation, but the world, is the propaganda (how deep-laid or far-reaching we can not say) working toward a system of universal military training with its inevitable concomitants of a constantly-expanding army and a rapidly-developing navy. If the true lovers of righteous peace, and particularly the members of the Church of Jesus Christ, but fairly appreciate the situation, a far-sounding protest, born of determination, will go forth ere it is too late.

Let no one be deceived. Great newspapers, those mightiest of opinion-formers, from one end of the country to the other, are sowing sentiments that, if not opposed, will take deep root and spring forth as tares in the harvest of peace. The Navy League is busy. Certain political leaders of both parties are determined that the army and navy so rapidly and effectually developing into an unconquerable military machine, shall not only be kept at their present standard but rendered even more effective. In the church itself are not a few misguided ones who have been led to support such a militant program.

The temptation, it is granted, is strong. By the expenditure of billions of dollars, the creation of a score or more of vast camps, capable of housing millions of men, the manufacture of munitions and ordnance sufficient for a great army, the training and inuring of 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 young men in the science of war, and, above all, the creation of a military spirit almost as defined as that of certain European countries,—these facts and conditions have laid the foundation for an argument favorable, apparently, to the continuation of a system of military training and preparedness. To discard the machine before it has hardly had opportunity to display its real strength or capacity, seems to suggest an utter waste of energy and money.

If ever the world stood at the parting of the ways, it is today,—the day after victory, the day before the setting up of the new order. We know of no organized influence in the country, outside of the church, to which we can with assurance turn to save us in this crisis; and what steps the church is to take are yet problematic. If we are to burden America with a system of universal military training, march and countermarch our young men, create an enormous navy and maintain a vast standing army, justifying such a course by the late war, then will the struggle, so recently closed, have been waged in vain. The argument for a continuation of armed forces is falsely posited: "What has been will always be. We have had wars from the beginning of time, and it reveals a mental weakness to fancy that conflicts of arms will cease very far this side of the millennium."

In answer we would comment remindingly that a sufficient number of human customs and selfish demonstrations have been banished within the past century or two to suggest, not only the possibility, but a probability, if not absolute certainty, that war may be relegated to the museum of extinct forms of crime. There comes a time, in every age-long contest between right and wrong, when the final blow is struck and the benediction, writ in fire, is subscribed on the page of history; and we have the assurance upon every hand that the monster which has hitherto stalked up and down the highways of nations, scattering death by the sword, has at last received its fatal blow—that is, if high-minded and God-fearing men sit about the table and consent to have the Prince of Peace stand at the head.

With Germany, the exponent of power, crushed, and her philosophy totally discredited, with the universal consciousness that a new day has actually dawned, and a realization that a League of Nations for the establishment and maintenance of peace is not only possible, but within reach, the spirit that would demand a continuance of armies and navies on an ever-ascending scale of proportions and effectiveness, hurls insult at the memory of those heroes who gave themselves for a universal peace.

Again we say, this war will be accounted the most wicked and unpardonable contest of all times if it shall develop that the victory our armies fought for and obtained has failed in practical application. The great need at this moment is an unequivocal note of protest arising from the church against the forces now operating to foist upon America (and undoubtedly upon others of the Allies) a military system that will only mean another war in the not distant future.

We have purchased a world peace at the price of millions of our noble men. They fought to bequeath peace to the world. They have strangled the dragon of militarism. The way is clear for such an international understanding and coöperation that war may immediately become an anachronism. The establishment of a "League of Nations for the Maintenance of Peace," based upon the principles of justice, is within the power of the world today. But the church must speak.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Excursions in Bookland

"The Riddle of Nearer Asia," Matthews, $1.25

"The Riddle of Nearer Asia" is an unusual book. It must certainly have been an extraordinary volume or Viscount Bryce would hardly have written the introduction for it. The Bookman found that it was indeed an unusual book when he dipped into "The Riddle of Nearer Asia," in order to see what it was all about.

It is not often that the Bookman stops in the midst of other pressing tasks just to read a new book. This is not as paradoxical as it may at first seem, for most new books are just one more, and will wait their turn. But "The Riddle of Nearer Asia" would not be put off until the more convenient season. When the Bookman picked it up, he was soon drawn into a vortex of interests that could not be escaped from until "The Riddle of Nearer Asia" was finished.

"The Riddle of Nearer Asia" deals with the significant problems that have arisen out of the collapse of the Turkish Empire. All of this vast decayed empire is historic land; much of it is holy ground. No other similar area has bulked so large in all of the past history of the world, and perhaps no other holds such vast potentialities for the years that are to come. The subject peoples of Nearer Asia are about to have another chance. Is the grandeur of their past an index of what the world may expect when these peoples again come into their own?

The author of "The Riddle of Nearer Asia" comes to his study of this land and its peoples with the enthusiasm and insight of the student who has first-hand knowledge of his subject. He has traveled up and down the highways of the Nearer East until he has become thoroughly conversant with present conditions. He is also a student of history. When the author wrote his history of St. Paul's great adventure, entitled, "Paul the Dauntless," he showed how much was to be gained by combining the results of first-hand investigation with the facts of history. He has followed the same plan in writing "The Riddle of Nearer Asia."

The present problems of the broken Turkish Empire are deeply rooted in the long past. A man has, therefore, to know past history as well as present conditions in order to obtain a key to the riddle of the Nearer East. The author wisely devotes considerable space to the historical background of the land and its people. Across the pages of a few brief but brilliant chapters troops an historical pageant of the Nearer East.

After the historical foundation is laid the author discusses the hopes and capabilities of the mixed population of the Nearer East. The Jews, the Arabs, the Turks, the Armenians, as well as lesser peoples, are sympathetically introduced by one who is as familiar with their past history as with their present life. All those interested in the problems growing out of the collapse of the Turkish Empire will find "The Riddle of Nearer Asia" a most concise, fascinating and informing volume.

Sing

BY B. F. M. SOURS

Sing, for the joy of life is yours,
Sing, for the night is gone;
Sing to the paling morning-star,
Sing to the glowing dawn.

Sing, for the heart is full of song,
Sing, it will cheer the way;
Sing, it will make the road more bright
For others, all the day.

O, if the frowns would change to song,
Happy the world would be,
Gliding, o'er ways of loveliness,

The World's Open Door

BY JOHN R. SNYDER

It is said of Francis Xavier, the Apostle of the Indies of the sixteenth century, that he once stood outside the great wall of China, anxious to enter and tell the story of the Cross, but the gates were closed and he could not enter. In great anguish of soul he cried out: "O rock, rock, when wilt thou open to my Lord and Christ?" But the rock did not open then.

Not long since the writer saw a picture which illustrates the same thought. The church was outside the great wall of heathenism, praying that it might enter. The outside of the door had above it the legend, "Opportunity." The church kept praying for the door of opportunity to open. At last the great door, so long closed, swung open and the church could enter, but as the door swung round, it no longer revealed on its inside panels the legend, "Opportunity," but the greater thought: "Responsibility." When the door of opportunity swung open, that feature was hidden by responsibility.

This, it seems, is our position as a church today. For years we have been praying for the opportunity to enter certain fields. We have felt that there was a great need and that only the Gospel could fill that need. Long the "great wall" stood in the way, and the door would not open. But this is all changed. Today the walls have crumbled, the doors have opened and practically the entire world is open to the Gospel.

We are entering upon a new year, a new epoch, a new age. Never again will the world be as it was, a short five years ago. Whether it will be a better world or whether world conditions shall reverse and become chaos, depends largely upon the attitude and activities of the church of Jesus Christ. If the church gladly grasps the opportunity, and shoulders the responsibility, all will be well and the world will be a better world. But woe will it be if the church fails in the supreme crisis, and if anarchy, Bolshevism, blatant infidelity and ungodly men rule.

Practically all of the denominations,—our own included,—have formulated "Forward Movement" programs to meet the present emergency and future needs. The leaders have had a great vision. The plans are well made. They are based on the actual needs of the present crisis, with an eye looking to the future. It is up to the local congregations and individuals to meet the expectations of the various Boards and, instead of just reaching the goal, go "over the top" with the same liberality and enthusiasm that met the needs of the Government, in its crisis, with such abundance.

There is not a single feature laid down in the five-year program by our church boards, that the church can not meet. It is not so much a call for finance as it is a call for service and consecration. If we, as a church, have a real vision of the open doors, as they appear today, and are willing to lay all on the altar of consecration, the funds for their support will be forthcoming.

The war has brought great problems, as well as simplified many. It has brought the church face to the Word, for teaching the principles of the Gospel of Christ, the Prince of Peace.

Continental Europe, with all its temples, cathedrals and churches, has been almost entirely without the Gospel. What has been posing as Christianity has been so encrusted with tradition, formalism and priestcraft that the real Christ has been hidden. Now, in the distress of travail, she is crying out for help, that the new nations that shall be born, shall be free. And if Christ shall make them free, they shall be free indeed. It is their only hope.

Evangelical Christianity has her opportunity in Europe now. The responsibility is upon her shoulders, and the future of the new-born liberties of these nations hangs in the balance. No more can priestcraft or ceremonialism satisfy. A real, living, vitalizing Christianity, that practices as well as preaches the Galilean Gospel, is the kind that will prevail if given the opportunity. Their hearts are open now, as they have never been before. They who are left in the ravaged, stricken lands, are waiting for something better, something different from the husks on which they have been feeding. Other denominations are planning to enter, and there is a field for our own.

Not only is there an open door in Central Europe but the Great East is also opening. With the fall of the Ottomans, the great Mohammedan world is open as it has never been to the Gospel of Christ. No longer can they conquer by the sword. To bring them to the Christ is the only safety of the nations from the "Terrible Turk."

Then there is the open door in South America. We ought to be represented in that land, by all means. The need is great, the field is large and the door is open. It has called and we have not answered. Mexico and Central America are just as needy and open. Neglected, downtrodden, ignorant and superstitious, their only hope is in Jesus Christ whom they do not know.

Look at our own Southland! A wonderful field for evangelization! It has a form of godliness but the power is gone. It needs a Gospel that will touch home, farm, shop, school and church. Our Secretary of the General Board of Missions has recently been there and has told us something about it. It is an open door.

And what shall we say of our cities,—these seething, uncertain, whirling, sinful, careless masses of humanity,—the world all in one? Their cry comes up to heaven for something, they know not what. But it is the old, old cry of a soul's need for Christ, and perhaps they realize it not. It is a foreign field right at our door. Our debt to them is the Gospel of the Son of God.

As a church we have taken pride in the principles for which we stand. Is it not possible that we may have been "standing" for them too long? Is it not time for a "forward" move? The "five-year plan" is a good one. Maybe we will have gotten such a start in the five years that we will just keep on going until the "whole, wide world" has been won for Jesus and we will be ready for the coronation day.

In this, the bicentennial of our beginning in America, let it be the year of our greatest service, not for denominational glory or churchly honors, but for the glory and honor of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who "giveth us the victory."

Yes, it is the day of the "open door" and we may enter if we will.

In the discussion of the Forward Movement, and the Sunday-school's part in the same, the Secretary reported that the Secretaries of the three General Boards had secured large wall posters, a copy of which will be sent to every church and Sunday-school in the near future. These posters set forth the goals before us for five years. It is hoped that when your school or church receives this wall poster it will be given a conspicuous place, and that you will bend your energies in doing your part in realizing the goal set.

Considerable other business was transacted. The work looked to the future, and was constructive. The Christian Workers' Societies were given proper consideration, for the Board is determined that these Societies shall be pushed, as well as the Sunday-schools.

The Spirit's Dwelling-Place

BY S. S. BLOUGH

"Know ye not that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you, which ye have from God? And ye are not your own; for ye were bought with a price: glorify God therefore in your body" (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20).

Most people seldom stop to consider what it means to live in this present world. We do not think seriously on what we are. Paul made a study of human life and has left us some fine statements as to what we are and what is expected of us. When I remember that my body has come from God through the laws of life, and that, in a sense, I was created in his image, I must conclude that there has been a great and eternal purpose in it all.

When Adam and Eve were created in that same image and placed in the Garden of Eden, they were told to "be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it" (Gen. 1: 28). In other words, God had a great work in mind for them. We also find that "the Lord God . . . breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and he became a living soul" (Gen. 2: 7). Thus the body becomes the home of the soul. It is the instrument by means of which man's spirit works during this present existence.

According to Paul the body has been made to become the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit. Through Ezekiel God said: "And I shall put my Spirit in you and ye shall live." This is in harmony with Acts 1: 8: "But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you." In our bodies, then, the Holy Spirit and our spirit dwell in unity, if all is well. All is open before the Holy Spirit. In his presence our thoughts and affections walk to and fro, like consecrated priests of old. If they are not all right, he is grieved.

In impressing the truths, contained in the figure, let us make a comparison with the Jewish temple. This building was used by the Jews, but it was owned by God. In it God met with the people and blessed them when they were faithful. There was the Most Holy Place,—in it the ark, upon the ark the cherubim, between the cherubim the mercy-seat. There God had declared that he would meet with his people through their representative, the high priest. He would meet with them not once but many times. In this comparison our bodies are a temple. Jesus, at one time, spoke of the temple of his body, which gives us additional authority for the comparison. Paul says that this body is not our own but is owned by God. The regenerated individual has consented that it shall be given to the Holy Spirit for his own use. In this temple is also a mercy-seat where he meets with the soul, but here God meets the individual without a priest,—only through the medium of the Holy Spirit.

An illustration may impress the truth more firmly. A hard-working woman sat musing by the fire. She was poor and old, tired of the hard burdens of life. As she mused, her imagination was busy. Her poor room enlarged into a large, beautiful one. Fine tapestries adorned the walls and beautiful carpets covered the floor. Beautiful paintings were hanging all about her. She imagined her poor dwelling a veritable palace, —a temple. The lesson that I wish to impress is, that we do the reverse with our bodies. We consider them just plain bodies,—so much flesh and blood, bone and sinew. We can do with them just as we please. We often incline to abuse them for the sake of self and sin. We are very much mistaken and shortsighted. Instead of being merely a body, man is a temple of the Most High,—the dwelling-place of the Holy Spirit. Instead of a simple body only, it is the home of the immortal soul during its stay here in the earth. Were we to stop long enough to consider this, we might often act differently from what we do.

Once the temple needed cleansing. The priests did not feel the need of it, but Jesus did. His scrutinizing eye saw its condition and he was interested. He was the Son of the Owner, and he cared. He entered the temple and compelled them to put the uncleanness away. He cleansed the temple of their God which, for the time being, was being defiled by them. Imagine the mercy-seat so littered over with filth that God could not take his appointed place, and meet with his people. How sad when God can not come into his own!

Our bodies need cleansing as well. The Jews had made the temple a place of merchandise, filth, grime and sharp bargains. Our bodies are made the agents and receptacles of all manner of evil. They need cleansing,—they need it badly. Again we hear the inspired apostle say: "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service" (Rom. 12: 1). How can a pure, clean spirit dwell in a foul body? Such a place will not only drive the Holy Spirit out, or keep him from coming in, but will not even be a proper place for the soul. Evil thoughts, wrong motives, filthy habits, impurity of life, —these are the things which God's Spirit can not fellowship.

Think of what we are,—the temple, the home, the dwelling-place of the Holy Spirit! Shall we keep him out of that which is his own by making our bodies a charnel-house, a place of iniquity and defilement? There need not be a veil between our spirits and God's Spirit in their communion in this temple. If there is, we place it there. Were a whole race to see this matter as God sees it, I dare say there would be a sudden and tremendous change through the power of the convicting and converting truth of his Word. Come now, and let us consider together that we are the temple of the Holy Spirit! "But if any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." The Spirit will not dwell in a defiled temple.

Whispering Winds

BY WALTER M. KAHLE

Lonely? Yes, the wind may have sounded a little lonely last night but perhaps that was due to your mood when you began to listen. But if you were in no hurry to be off to sleep, its message was one that you should not easily forget. At first it seemed to blow softly, then louder, and finally your thoughts were suddenly swept right out of your grasp and away they went, racing with the wind. Self was soon forgotten and you became deeply absorbed in others,—blessed predicament! In every country of the world you saw folks who were sad. The demon of war has taken his toll from a multitude of homes, while influenza has been an unwelcome guest in thousands of others. These agencies of destruction, with many others of lesser seriousness, have swept over the world like a great storm which has literally drenched every community with bitter tears.

As you thought, you suddenly realized that you belonged to a great brotherhood of sorrow, and your heart went out to all who have passed through a like experience. But has sorrow been all that you have felt in your experience, my friend? Could you see nothing else, as the death angel paused in your home or sped silently away from that of your neighbor? Ah, yes, thank God, we have seen many things in our recent experiences aside from the sorrow which almost overwhelmed us. Many of them are claiming your attention but the wind seemed anxious to have you think of just one other phase of your experience. How soft and soothing were its whispers. If you thought it was tugging at the cover, it was only pulling on your heart-strings, as it repeated over and over "sss-sympathy, sss-sympathy." Then there was a calm and again your thoughts were quite busy.

First you thought of yourself as a recipient of sympathy. How gladly you welcomed it and how it soothed and softened your aching heart! After this kindly ministry had been extended, you did not feel quite so lonely, nor quite so much apart from the world, but very close to it and,—and just a little closer to God. You felt much stronger for the next experience, too, and your heavy sorrows were almost forgotten as you smiled through your tears and tried in vain to find words to express your appreciation. Too bad you could think of nothing to say as you silently pressed the hand of your sympathizing friend, but don't worry, because he understood after all,—because you did the natural thing. Then you thought of the many others, whose hearts have been lightened through the ministry of sympathy, and you thanked God that folks thought to offer this healing balm when it was so sorely needed.

The wind had changed by this time, and you began to think of those who have been extending sympathy. Can it be possible or have our eyes deceived us? Why, we have been seeing these folks for months and even years, in the various activities of life, but we never saw them before as they have appeared lately. Most of them have been just commonplace people,—so commonplace that we were hardly conscious of their existence, until they appeared as ministers of sympathy. In fact, we have often wondered if they were really capable of anything worth while, but now they have suddenly shown that they are unusual folks and capable of great things. What strength they have shown, how considerate they have been, and how ready to make the most unexpected sacrifices! They appear altogether unnatural! Possibly so, but wouldn't it be nearer the truth to say that they have been rather unnatural in the past, and that they have suddenly become natural,—have suddenly entered into their own?

Yes, it has been a great pleasure to come in touch with these suddenly-discovered GREAT people, and we shall never forget their influence but,—wooo-oooooo! Now, please don't go to sleep yet, dear friend, for your thoughts have not gone far enough, even if they have been all the way to Europe and back. Pinch yourself, if necessary, but stay awake a little longer. The wind isn't saying "woo," but it is whispering "you-oooooo." What do you expect to do in the future? What part will you play in the activities of life tomorrow? Of course, you are hoping that you will not need the sympathy which was extended yesterday and you are trusting that your newly-found friends will continue to be "Large" and "Helpful," but what about yourself? Do you realize that those who have helped you, as well as others, are going to need sympathy in their experiences, and do you appreciate the fact that unless you extend help, it may never come and, as a result, some life may miss much of its joy and progress because you failed to play your part? Of course you enjoy singing: "Help Somebody Today," and "For You I Am Praying," but these songs will never fire your very soul nor draw the curtains from before your eyes, so that you may see life in a large way until you face about and put them into practice. And while you have been greatly strengthened by receiving sympathy and love, you will never be your natural self, you will never know the joys of the surrendered life,—the abundant life, the Christ-life,—until you personally become a minister of sympathy.

And now for the wind's final whisper. As you have observed, it has suddenly begun to move around and around, instead of racing away over the hills and plains. That is to impress you with the fact that you need not necessarily join the Red Cross work or the Y. M. C. A., or to become a missionary, to extend sympathy. For once lower your eyes and look around you. Sympathy may be needed in our own homes, even if there has been no actual death. Then there are our neighbors,—the poor, the aged, the down-and-outs, the lonely, the young Christian and a host of others, who will be more than glad to accept some real sympathy, even though they do not advertise for it. "Freely ye have received, freely give." Let's do it, let's lay aside our doubts and our selfishness for 1919 and give the Master a real chance in our lives!

Meeting of Committee on Dress Reform

BY LYDIA E. TAYLOR
Secretary-Treasurer of the Committee

The regular meeting of the Committee on Dress Reform was held Saturday, March 1, at Chicago, Ill., with the Chairman, Bro. E. M. Studebaker, presiding. This meeting had been postponed one month on account of the influenza epidemic.

All the members were present except Bro. J. J. John, of New Windsor, Md. Finding his attendance not possible, he kindly sent us a written message on the "problems" facing us in our work, which was read at the meeting and greatly appreciated by the members present.

Much business came before the Committee for consideration. A suitable constitution and by-laws for the use of the organization, having been "in the making" for some time, was duly considered and adopted,—this work being in charge of Bro. E. M. Studebaker.

The Special Christian Workers' outlines in the interest of our work, are continued in the hands of Sister Mary P. Ellenberger, with the privilege of calling to her assistance competent help whenever necessary.

The field work of the Committee having been greatly hindered by the prevailing epidemic, it was found necessary, last December, to postpone all District work for three months. With a number of requests of this nature claiming attention, the Committee took steps to arrange for some help outside of its own members in meeting that need.

The work of the "Information Bureau" was discussed. This work having started in a small way less than two years ago, has had a remarkable growth. This growth, while adding to the burden, because of increasing correspondence and demands ou limited time, affords a most hopeful and desirable outlook.

In order to facilitate our work of investigation,—especially along the line of what others are doing,—the Committee decided to call to its aid some additional outside helps, but our people are encouraged to continue their coöperation. All queries of interest to the work will be cheerfully answered. Likewise all clippings on the subject, for our files, will be greatly appreciated.

The subject of the standardization of women's clothes was carefully gone over, both from the standpoint of our own people and others. This work is growing at a sweeping rate the last few months and it is gratifying to feel that we are having at least some part, by way of coöperation in this great cause of moral and spiritual uplift.

Through the kindness of the manufacturers of the standardized suits for women which we have had in contemplation for some time, these three suits were before us for inspection, and were readily approved by the Committee as the first step in a plan to place before our women, and others, something sensible and durable in the way of suits, instead of the extreme freaks now displayed in the shops, many of which measure only twenty-seven inches at the bottom. The announcements of this departure are about ready. Further particulars will be given soou in our own and other publications.

It was the unanimous decision of the Committee to endorse heartily the "Forward Movement," and to use every available means to help carry out the plan of the Boards as outlined, trusting that everywhere among us a deeper spiritual life and consecration may result.

Several other books for reading, having been approved by all the Committee members, were added to our booklist, while plans for work in the various methods of teaching were considerably enlarged. To carry out these plans it was decided to call upon the churches for the necessary funds through "voluntary contributions" (See Annual Meeting Minutes, 1914, page 5). Article 5 reads:

"That this work be supported by voluntary contributions from the churches upon the request of the Committee, or as may be otherwise provided by Conference."

We earnestly request our churches to come to our assistance in carrying out plans, as yet undeveloped for want of funds. A few churches have contributed to this work, but we hope for a liberal response from many congregations to this the first "general request of the Committee" in its five years of existence, that the plans now under way may move forward.

With the feeling that we had enjoyed a most helpful and spiritual meeting together in the interest of things pertaining to the Kingdom, we adjourned to meet at Winona Lake in June.

Another Meeting

At 7:30 P. M., on invitation of Bethany Bible School, a meeting with students and friends of the institution was held.

This meeting was in charge of Sister Eva Trostle. After an inspiring song service, and prayer by the pastor, Bro. H. F. Richards, the following subjects were discussed by Committee members: "Advantages of the Simple Life," "Effectual Living Out of Simple Life Principles," 'response was most satisfactory, and we could not help wishing we might some time be permitted to hold such a meeting in every college in the Brotherhood. There is nothing like "young life" to add emphasis to any movement for righteousness and, after all, "a mutual knowledge and understanding" is the crying need among us in every form of Christian endeavor.

Notes From Our Correspondents

CALIFORNIA

Butte Valley church met in council March 1, Bro. H. F. Maust presiding. We decided to hold a series of meetings some time this summer, when a minister can be secured. Eleven letters have been granted. Our collection for Armenian and Syrian Relief was $83.70.—Adaline Moore, Macdoel, Calif., March 4.

Chico.—Eld. S. E. Decker and wife, of Ashland, Oregon, were with us March 2. Bro. Decker gave us two splendid sermons. We have recently organized a Mission Study Class, with our pastor, C. Ernest Davis, as teacher. "Christian Heroes in Heathen Lands," is the text-book. Our Sunday-school elected Sister Bertha G. Kerr and Eld. C. Ernest Davis, delegates to the Butte County Sunday-school Convention, to convene in Chico, March 7 and 8. Much interest is shown in our Christian Workers' Meetings.—Grace H. Davis, Route A, Chico, Calif., March 4.

Delight in Truth.—On Sunday, March 2, being at the home of Bro. John Minnich, at Hemet, Calif., his neighbors met in his home in the evening and a most enjoyable hour was spent in preaching, and asking and answering questions on the great things of God. There were twenty-four present. There are still those who love the simple life and search for unmixed truths.—M. M. Eshelman, Glendale, Calif., March 6.

Inglewood church met in council March 1, with our elder, Bro. Wertenbaker, presiding. We decided to hold our love feast May 18, at 7 P. M. We will resume our Wednesday night prayer meeting, which was discontinued for a number of years. Sunday morning, Feb. 23, Bro. Masterson, of Long Beach, gave an illustrated talk to the Sunday-school which was impressive and helpful. Several new classes were formed in the Sunday-school the first of the year, and the work seems to be progressing nicely. The "Willing Workers' Class,—a class of Junior boys, having made the best record for attendance during the month of January,—were privileged to have charge of the opening exercises of the Sunday-school some morning. March 2 they provided an exercise and song which added to the interest of the school. Bro. Wertenbaker gave us a splendid sermon on Sunday morning, March 2, on the theme, "Americanization from the Gospel View-point," showing what our privileges and duties are, as a church, toward the Government of our country. His Sunday evening themes on some of the vital doctrines, taught in the Bible, have been quite instructive. Our church continues to grow, and we hope we may fulfill our part of the big "Forward Movement," as outlined for the Brotherhood.—Susan Stoner, Inglewood, Calif., March 3.

Pasadena.—Our quarterly council was held on the evening of Feb. 27, with our pastor and elder, W. E. Trostle, presiding. Our love feast will be held May 17. In the meantime we are planning for a great revival, as well as some splendid meetings by some of our returning missionaries. On Sunday morning, March 2, Bro. J. P. Dickey, of La Verne College, delivered a splendid address on "God's Triumph in Human History." Text: Isa. 55 : 10, 11. An offering of over $95 was then taken for the Armenian and Syrian sufferers. Bro. Dickey preached for us again in the evening. We also had with us Sister Harriet Christian Vollmer, who favored us with her inspiring program. An offering of $45 was taken after this meeting, the same to be used as our apportionment towards a scholarship to some worthy young person who will be willing to give his life work to the ministry or to the mission cause.—Mrs. Alice Vanlman, Pasadena, Calif., March 6.

Patterson church met in council Feb. 16, with Eld. J. B. Deardorff presiding. He was elected elder for another year. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. J. H. Kreps as superintendent. One letter of membership was received. Bro. S. J. Miller, of LaVerne, was with us Feb. 16 and gave us a much appreciated sermon.—Mrs. Emma Follis, Patterson, Calif., March 5.

COLORADO

Denver church met in council March 5, that being our regular quarterly council. Brethren Conrad Fitz, Geo. W. Burgin, Chas. Shively and H. C. Long, our ministers, were present. Bro. Love, owing to the infirmities of old age, is often absent. Bro. Geo. W. Burgin was chosen elder and assistant pastor for the coming year. We are glad to say that the Denver church is getting on a substantial basis, supporting its own pastor, with Sister Blanche Long as our Sunday-school superintendent, with Sister Mary Culler as our missionary leader, and with Sister Katie Burgin as our young people's leader. They arrange fine programs for each service. Our young people are very much interested in their work. We have every reason to be thankful and encouraged as to the outlook of the Denver church. A young woman and man came out on the Lord's side last Sunday. Many members are moving here. Bro. Jarboe, of Chicago, will commence a series of meetings on Sunday, March 9, with a love feast to follow. The writer was requested to act as Denver church correspondent.—W. R. Cline, Denver, Colo., March 5.

IDAHO

Moscow.—During the past week a series of sermons has been delivered by Bro. M. Alva Long, of Weiser, Idaho, who is a member of the Mission Board. Although weather conditions have not been very favorable we had a fairly good attendance. Many regretted that weather conditions would not permit Bro. Long to continue his meetings. On Sunday an offering of $17 was taken for missions. The influenza epidemic is raging here again, and we have been obliged to close the Sunday-school. We are earnestly praying that this terrible disease will soon be stamped out.—Arrie Lyon, Moscow, Idaho, March 4.

Notice to the Churches of Idaho and Western Montana.—The minutes of last District Meeting were in error as to dates for the District Meeting for 1919. Complying with the wishes of the Nezperce church, where the meeting is to be held, we have decided on May 13 and 15 as the dates for the meeting. All churches and program committees will please see to it that all matter, intended for publication in the programs, is in my hands not later than April 10, as we desire the programs to be in the hands of the churches thirty days before the meeting.—Fred A. Flora, Clerk of District Meeting, Moscow, Idaho, March 12.

ILLINOIS

Cherry Grove church met in quarterly business meeting March 6, Bro. I. R. Young, our elder, presiding. Three letters were granted. We have decided to hold our love feast June 1, at 6:30 P. M. Bro. Geo. Wolfensberger was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. Isaac Hawbecker is our missionary solicitor. Bro. Elmer Bolinger is solicitor of funds for Relief and Reconstruction Work in Armenia and other foreign countries. THE ROUND TABLE

Stranded

BY S. Z. SHARP

It was a fine-looking young soldier, with gentlemanly manners, but of sad countenance, whom we met in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. His home was in Oregon, but he was discharged honorably in Indiana. All the way to Colorado he tried to get a job, but failed. His money was spent and he was stranded.

We met three other soldier boys in a second-hand store. They had had neither supper nor breakfast, and had slept in a stable. The day was cold and the thermometer registered near zero, yet they offered to sell their overcoats that they might get money enough to pay their fare to Utah, to work in the mines. They were stranded.

Another soldier, whom we once met, had six bullet holes in his body. He knew he must soon die. He was not prepared. The future looked dark before him. He acknowledged that once the Savior had knocked at the door of his heart, and he had denied him admittance. Now he was gone forever. He remembered that the Savior said: "He that will deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father and his holy angels." He was like the foolish virgins who failed to take oil in their vessels. He had provided none, and his lamp was going out. He was on his last journey and was stranded. Why not obtain gold, "refined in the fire" (Rev. 3: 18), and avoid being stranded?

Will America Decide to Foster Militarism?

BY H. K. OBER

One of the strange features of public opinion is the fact that it is easily swayed from one extreme to the other. This long-established principle of extremes is manifested by the wave of sentiment which now seems to be sweeping over the country in favor of enforced military training. The great cry, from the beginning of the war, was that militarism must be defeated, and now, before the Peace Treaty is fully signed, which is expected to conclude the great war and thus end the reign of militarism, we find ardent advocates of enforced military training all over our country. In many of the State Legislatures, bills are being introduced, with a view of making military training compulsory in our schools, colleges and universities.

It is, indeed, on the verge of an absurdity to sum up the arguments that are advanced in favor of this enforced military training. Germany is an apt illustration of what takes place when the militaristic spirit predominates. The psychology of the whole matter is: Training in the art of war, fosters the spirit of war.

From all the Cantonments come the same reports, with reference to the changed attitude of the boys in camp toward military training. Each one acknowledges that no amount of regulations or orders by the officers could put the same spirit and zeal into the drilling after the armistice was signed, as was manifested by those same young men before the armistice was signed. The officers universally explain that the best drilling was only accomplished when the young men could look forward to the hope of actual participation in war, and so it easily follows that learning the arts of war is impossible without injecting the spirit of war.

We are fully aware that military training has some very commendable features as a health measure, coupled with the purpose of manifesting promptness, obedience, respect for authority, attention to details, etc. Military training in our schools would bring some very fine results, but with these come the other disastrous effects. First, those who have any conscientious scruples against learning the arts of war, could not participate in these military tactics without making themselves liable to engage in the same, in time of war. They must realize that this participation would remove any opportunity for exemption from entering upon active service in times of war. This would prevent all our loyal brethren from taking up this work.

In case enforced military training becomes a law, it would mean that the children of the Church of the Brethren will be put under the most embarrassing and critical tasks in every public school, high school, college, and university. It takes a young man of strong conviction to be able to stand back when the tide is all in favor of this training.

We believe that it behooves our brethren to be on the alert, with reference to these military bills that are being introduced in the various State Legislatures. They should acquaint themselves with the same, and should enter their timely protests through their representatives. It is with the hope of awakening interest and study of the situation, that these few lines are inserted here. May we all take note! Think soberly and act prudently in these times, when we are especially put to the acid test of our conscientious convictions.

I Was Glad

BY PAUL MOHLER

One reason why I am so fond of the Psalms is that in them I find a reflection of every mood and every experience of God-blessed human nature. Just now, at the lifting of the ban on public assembly, my own mood is best expressed in Psa. 122: 1: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go unto the house of Jehovah."

I am glad because there are others that feel as I do about it, that I do not have to be the only one to move in that direction. This would be a sad world for me if I were the only Christian in it. How long could I hold my faith if all around me were unbelief? Would I be as Abraham, the only one of a hundred million to know and believe on God, yet so sure of him that I could leave the land of my fathers and go to a land of which I knew nothing, at his bidding? There are not many Abrahams. Would I be one? I am glad that I don't have to try, that there are others with and around me to say: "Let us go unto the house of Jehovah."

I am glad for the house of Jehovah. No one realizes what our churches are worth until he lives awhile where there are no churches. Burn down all the churches and forbid their rebuilding, and you will change this nation in one generation so completely that government of the people, for the people, and by the people will perish within its borders. A nation without churches is not capable of self-government. Turn our churches into lecture halls, amusement palaces, or schools of politics, commerce and industry, and you are heading us toward national decay and moral destruction. What we need is the house of Jehovah in every community, where men and women and children may congregate in the name of Jesus Christ, commune with him and with one another under the shadow of his Presence, where they may hear his messages, warm, throbbing, searching, dividing asunder soul and spirit, joint and marrow; where the Spirit of God may shed abroad the love of God in their hearts, to the end that they may love him supremely and their neighbors as themselves; where righteousness is exalted and every heart hungry and thirsty for it; where every one present feels that he is in the vestibule of heaven, enjoying a foretaste of heavenly association with Christ and the redeemed.

This is the kind of meeting-places our nation needs, and the kind we can have if we want them. God will come half way,—all the way,—and make his house just what we need.

The Courage of Jesus

BY G. W. TUTTLE

He who had all power was to be as though he had no power! The Lion of the tribe of Judah was to be led like a lamb to the slaughter! The hands that had been uplifted in blessing and healing were to be pierced with the cruel nails! He that had done no evil was to suffer the ignominious death of the cross! Tell me not that that which was human in my Master did not dread the cross, yet he set his face as a flint toward Jerusalem, even though his goal meant pain instead of joy.

It was his supreme power,—the power of choice that was his now, even as it was when Satan tempted him in the beginning of his ministry,—that shed its white light upon the courage of Jesus Christ. He deliberately chose the way of the cross that there might be for you and for me a way of cleansing, a way of holiness, a clear highway to God.

How blind were those who stood by and mocked, saying: "He saved others; himself he cannot save." And Power hung suffering on the cross and listened to the mocking of the powerless,—all for you and me, that we might be delivered from the power of sin and the bondage of sin.

The Master saw all this as his feet pressed the Jerusalem road, as he faced toward the city of God that had become the city of hypocrisy, and where they were crying out for his innocent blood. Vicarious sacrifice! The Son of God slain by the sons of men! The Glory of heaven fast-nailed in the shambles of earth! Was ever courage like his courage? "My Lord and my God!"

What about our courage in the light of the courage of Jesus Christ? Will our courage fail when our feet press some duty path where difficulties, and discouragements, and pain must needs await us? Jesus Christ was the personification of courage. If we abide in him, that fine courage of his will have right of way in our lives. Only as we keep our eyes fixed on the Christ, he who said, "It is I, be not afraid," will we be strong.

Keep Your Hearts Free From Infesting Weeds

BY LEANDER SMITH

People, as well as gardens, get too crowded. One thing chokes out another in our lives, and too often it is the best that gets choked out. We are living so fast,—we have so much to do, so many interests! As some one, telling the disadvantage of the "hurrying," said: "I am in danger of being jostled out of my spirituality." It is a real danger, and one that threatens us all in our rushing life, in these days. Cares, worries, distractions, seem to grow in our hearts as naturally as weeds in a garden. Some people think that worries are quite harmless, but Christ spoke very strongly against them as being most potent for evil in our lives, in the way of crowding out the good. He warned us strongly against all anxiety. He said plainly that it can add nothing to our stature, possessions or success, but, instead, does us harm and grieves our Heavenly Father, who, all the while, is caring for us.

There are two things, at least, about which we should never worry. First, the things we can't help. If we can't help them, worrying is certainly most foolish and useless. Secondly, the things we can help. If we can help them, let us set about it, and not weaken our powers by worry. Weed your garden! Pluck up the smallest roots of worry! Yes, watch for their first appearance above the ground, and pluck them while they are small. Do not let them get a start, or they will crowd out all the beautiful things that ought to grow in your hearts.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

AN APPEAL

The Child Rescue Home, organized in connection with, and under the management of, the Trustees of the Morrison Cove Home for Aged and Infirm, at Martinsburg, Pa., is now a fixed institution, and solicits the interest and assistance of the friends of homeless children everywhere, and especially in Middle Pennsylvania.

A Detention Home will be built as soon as conditions demand and circumstances permit. Endowments, annuities and donations are solicited and will be properly cared for. The management especially invites correspondence and communication with persons in the matter of securing permanent homes for children in Christian families, as well as the knowledge of children in need of homes.

Just now a little boy, "Chester Paul Glass, four years old," bright and interesting, is in need of a home. For the present he is being cared for in the home of Adam K. Frederick, near Martinsburg, but for reasons that are justifiable, he can not remain there. He is looking the world in the face and saying: "Please, can I come into your home?"

Correspondence with reference to this little boy may be had with Eld. J. C. Stayer, Woodbury, Pa., or with Eld. M. R. Brumbaugh, Martinsburg, Pa., or with any of the trustees of the institution.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES FROM INDIA

Evangelistic Work Among Women at Dahanu

Sister B. Mary Royer reports as follows on her work among the women in the villages, prior to the holidays: "Dec. 3, the writer, a Bible woman, a cook and his wife pitched their tents at Chikli, a village about six miles from the mission compound at Dahanu, and close by the sea. The Christian teacher of the village had secured a nice place for our camp. It was a small field, surrounded with a cactus hedge and within view of the sea. Here we stayed for three weeks. Sister Anna Eby, who is now in America, labored in the villages of this district. So we were not entire strangers.

"Our first aim is to reach the women. To do so we must go to their homes. They are among the working classes and the best time to meet them is during the noon hour. Of course, at that hour of the day the men are also at home. So, many times, there are as many men as women in our audiences.

"As a rule, the people listen well. They say they believe that our message is true. They admit that idol worship is false, but they are so bound by custom, ignorance and superstition that to change their religion looks utterly impossible to them.

"One day an elderly man said to us: 'We know you speak the truth, for you come to our village frequently. Deceivers go to a place only once.'

"On one occasion we were speaking to a group of about thirty men and women. One man seemed particularly interested. He apparently accepted everything we said, and admitted that there is nothing to be gained through idol worship. We stayed in the home over an hour, telling about the true way. At such times the missionary, with limited experience, is likely to build his hopes high, and to feel much encouraged. But if he has not already learned the nature of Asiatic politeness, he may be disappointed. The Indian is not the least polite of the Asiatic peoples. If there is no real gain in opposing you, why should he not agree with you? So, the next day, this friendly gentleman, who acknowledged that our message was true, and idol worship false, was seen most devoutly engaged in idol worship.

"Another scene was in the home of the man who owned the field in which we were camping. The Bible woman was telling his wife and little daughter-in-law the story of the raising of Lazarus, of the resurrection of the righteous and the home that is being prepared for them. In the meantime the man of the home came in. He contradicted the Bible woman, and I thought he would put us out of the house. But, instead, he went himself, and left us to complete our message in peace. The day we left the village he was evidently in a better mood, for he came to the tent, to see us off. We thanked him for the nice camping place and expressed our hope that he would avail himself of the beautiful home the Lord Jesus is preparing for those who love and obey him.

"It seems that many of the people, among whom we work, would be willing to add our Lord to their list of gods whom they already worship. But when they learn that to follow him means to forsake all others, then it is a different story.

"We never ask ourselves the question: 'Is it worth while, after all?' But the evil one often attempts to tell us it is not. There is joy in planting and watering. We ask you, reader, to pray that we may do our part faithfully and in due time God will give the increase."

Sister Royer wrote the above from Vangaon, seven miles south of Dahanu, where she set up a tent on Saturday, Jan. 4. Because Indian helpers are often untrustworthy, and because a railroad official's expectation of a bribe, which is a universal weakness among station-masters in this country, Sister Royer explains why she was delayed in reaching her second camping place: "It took me two days to set up my camp here. First, because one of our Christian men at Dahanu evidently thought some other work was more important than that I should get off on the noon train on Friday, hence he took the bullock man off the job while I had my back turned. Second, some of the luggage that was booked and paid for on Friday noon, the station-master saw fit to keep back until Saturday noon. The boy tells me there was plenty of room in the van, but there was no bribe in sight."

Evangelistic Work at Vada

Sister Powell usually begins tenting in November, or in early December, but this year she did not go out until in January. The reason is that Bro. Kaylor used the tent before the holidays. Taking an Indian evangelist with him, he pitched his tent in a village about ten miles southwest of Vada. One of his best Christian teachers had been doing good work in this village for the past eight years, and he was favorably known in the surrounding villages. Owing to ill health he had to leave the work. As Bro. Kaylor and his Bible man went from village to village, preaching to the people, they were often asked who they were. In reply they stated that they are of the same people as Jiven Master, whom they knew and respected. Thus his influence continues for good, as it became the medium of a common acquaintance and friendship with the people. Without it many would have been suspicious and afraid.

The phonograph was used, as it is helpful to bring a crowd together in a village. After a few pieces are played, the speaking begins. The people usually listen well for a time, but so often, when the preacher begins to tell the people of their sins, of righteousness and of the life beyond the grave, they become restless, and one by one begin to leave the meeting. In one village there was a marked difference in this respect. This people listened eagerly until the close of the meeting. One man, who was not there, was told of the meeting. He became interested, and followed the speakers back to their tents, that he might learn more of their message. He asked them to come to his village for another meeting. They went, and were listened to with marked interest. Surely, "they shall see, to whom no tidings of him came, and they who have not heard shall understand." Yes, they shall hear and they shall understand, but WHEN? That is for you and myself to answer. God is ready to do his part.

Evangelistic Notes from Anklesvar

Early in December Sister Ziegler set up her tent at Diva, a village two miles out from Anklesvar, where she remained ten days. During the day she spent some time in the homes, but the main feature of her work was the large open-air meetings in the evenings before her tent, which was placed under a large banyan tree just outside the village. From two hundred to two hundred and fifty people attended these meetings each evening. Being close to Anklesvar, Bro. Stover was able to get out several evenings to talk to the people. Govenji, our Indian minister, and the teachers of the schools, also assisted in the meetings, which are quite as informal as the street meetings in the cities of America. As the people sat on the ground, the speaker frequently remained sitting on his chair, as he talked to them. At a temperance meeting those who do not drink liquor were asked to hold up their hand. The number was comparatively small. A number were induced to take the pledge to quit drinking. At the last meeting Bro. Stover urged the people to accept Jesus and to begin the Christian life NOW. There are a number of Christians in this village and others are seeking the way of life.

The next village where Sister Ziegler camped was at Sugapurbata, which is five miles from Anklesvar. Though we have a Christian teacher in this village, there are no Christians among the people, and it is the first time that tent meetings were held there. Bro. Stover and family went out on Tuesday and remained at the tent with Sister Ziegler until Saturday, to assist in the meetings. The forenoons were spent in visiting the surrounding villages. There was much interest in the evening meetings,—probably three hundred at times,—nearly the whole village coming out. Each evening a few selections were given on the phonograph, which is always of interest to the village people. Much interest was aroused in the temperance meeting, at which a number took the pledge. On Saturday, Dec. 21, the tents were taken down and all were brought to Anklesvar, thereby closing the evangelistic work until after the beginning of the new year. Dec. 31, prior to the love feast at Anklesvar, eleven were baptized.

Sister Ida Shumaker has charge of the work among women, also the station work at Jalalpor since Bro. Emmert and family sailed for America Jan. 10. Sister Lillian Grisso has moved from Bulsar to Jalalpor, where she will continue her language study. Sister Himmelsbaugh, owing to her medical work and the care of the children's home, will be able to do only a limited amount of work among the women at Vali. Bro. Long, owing to his station work and the editing of the Gujerati Sunday-school Quarterly, finds it difficult to give time to the evangelistic work among the villages about Vyara. In fact, it may be said that most of our men are so occupied with station building and other work that they are unable to give the time they should to evangelistic work. There is great need for more foreign and Indian evangelists to reach the people with the Gospel Message! Will you continue to pray the Lord of the harvest that these workers may be forthcoming?

AT WORK IN THE VINEYARD

The year just closed has been one of the busiest and most strenuous of our experience. The various war activities and the influenza epidemic have added multiplied duties. Regardless of the many irregularities, the Heavenly Father has abundantly blessed and crowned our work with success. Never before has the Mount Carmel congregation realized such an ingathering of souls as during the past year. Ninety-two were added to the church by baptism.

In summing up the year's work, I find that I have taught the Sunday-school lesson sixty-five times, held thirty-five prayer meetings, visited five Sunday-schools in the Eastern District of Virginia, attended four Sunday-school Conventions, made nineteen Sunday-school and other addresses, and assisted in four series of meetings. I also had charge of a teacher-training class, nine Red Cross meetings, and several meetings with our boys before going to Camp.

Five hundred and sixty-three visits were made during the year. I made one hundred and seventeen prayer-coverings, seventy bonnets, and eighty-seven other garments. Our girls assisted in the sewing. I distributed quite a bit of clothing among the poor and needy. I hereby express our gratitude to the Sisters' Aid Societies that helped us with clothing, bed-clothing, etc.

We opened school Oct. 1 and taught two days, when we had to close on account of influenza. We closed school for twenty-eight days,—Greene County being severely affected by the epidemic. Many of the men and boys were away at work and, rushing home, scattered it everywhere.

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation.

A Leader Who Never Fails

Heb. 12: 1, 2

For Week Beginning March 30, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) Christ died to make our salvation possible,—to put it within our reach. This makes him the "Author." (2) He lives to lead the redeemed into fuller and richer experiences of his saving grace. He is the "Finisher." (3) Our unvarying attitude should be one of reverent contemplation and readiness to respond to his guidance: "Looking unto Jesus." (4) By looking unto him, and faithfully following him, we grow like him.

2. Put Absolute Trust in Your Leader.—Paul says: "I know whom I have believed." Not a thousand doctrines, but one Person. That was all he needed, and it is all that we need. We can almost do without every other certainty if only we have this assurance. There are times when a man distrusts everything and everybody. Those are terrible hours, yet even then he will be saved from despair and moral suicide if he only turns to the Man of Nazareth and Calvary and says, "There is truth in him. He never deceived any one. He never will deceive." There are times when every other hope is shattered, when disappointments meet us in the very path where we have walked and labored with most confidence, when the dearest supports on which we have leaned are broken. Even then our world will have sunshine in it and promise, if, in the thick darkness, our eyes still see the face of the Son of God. Believe that whatever he did was right, and that whatever he said was true, that in him there was no spot of sin, or possibility of error. Believe that in his hands are the destinies of this poor world which he came to save.

3. Christ a Personal Savior.—It is not a proposition that saves our souls, but a Person. It is not in some abstract way that Christ becomes a Savior to us, but we, as persons, must enter into close contact with the One "Altogether Lovely" and the "Chief among ten thousands." We find that in the early days of the church the apostles never went anywhere, in their function of preaching the Word, to proclaim their own theories. They went everywhere preaching Christ,—Christ a personal Savior, not a mere phantom of their imagination.

4. Follow Your Leader.—Truly it has been said that a shepherd never "drives out his sheep." That is not the manner of a shepherd. He does, however, lead them, going before to call them after him,—leading them into paths that he has trod, and dangers he has met, and sacrifices he has borne himself, calling them gently that he may lead them to a place of safety. No disciple is a real disciple till he becomes a follower, going after the Shepherd, as one that follows by name, and as one who is drawn by love.

5. Do Not Lose Sight of Your Leader.—Every man has his periods of discouragement,—the greater the work, the more terrible the strain of fighting against them. It is a comfort to think that Christ himself knew the power of these temptations, so that he can be "touched with the feeling of our infirmities." No Christian need ever despair.

6. Suggestive References.—Christ our Example (Mark 10: 43-45). Christ our Pattern (Rom. 15: 3-7). Obedience to Christ's leading means true discipleship (John 8: 31). Christ's leadership always yields strength (Gal. 5: 1, 10). We must walk in the Christ-appointed way (Col. 1: 10, 22, 23). Christ is able to keep (2 Tim. 1: 12). Let Christ's grace abound (2 Tim. 2: 1). How we may enter Christ's Kingdom (2 Peter 1: 10, 11). We must grow in the knowledge of Christ (2 Peter 3: 18).

Bro. Daniel S. Flohr, heretofore residing at Waynesboro, Pa., should now be addressed at R. D. 10, Chambersburg, same State.

When last heard from, Bro. D. L. Miller and wife were planning to leave California for the East on the twenty-fifth of this month. They are to stop off in Kansas for a short time.

REMEMBER
THE STARVING OF INDIA

Amid the multiplicity of calls for assistance that come at this time,—calls for relief, reconstruction, missions,—we trust that the need of food for the starving peoples of India, who dwell right at the doors of our own mission stations, will not be overlooked.

Our workers asked for $10,000. The need was extremely urgent and the Board felt it wise to authorize the expenditure of this sum, feeling sure that the Brotherhood would respond liberally. At this date scarcely more than half of the sum has been received at our office.

We appreciate all that has been done for relief, and we can not express our admiration sufficiently for the manner in which our churches respond. Nothing like it has ever been witnessed among us. We therefore feel sure that merely to mention the need of our own field in India will remind our brethren of what they may do, fully to meet the calls of our own mission. May God bless every one who hears these calls of starving humanity!

Most fraternally,

General Mission Board.

The address of Bro. Jesse B. Emmert and wife, lately arrived from India, will be 752 Herkimer Street, Pasadena, Calif., until further notice, instead of La Verne, as was incorrectly stated last week.

Pres. D. W. Kurtz, of McPherson College, dropped into the "Messenger" office for a very few minutes, last Monday morning, as he was on his way to Detroit, Mich., to attend a meeting of the Religious Education Association.

Bro. H. J. Beachley, of 326 Crescent Street, Harrisburg, Pa., engaged in teaching during the school-year, informs us that his services will be available for evangelistic work during the months of July and August.

Bro. A. T. Hoffert, writing from Anklesvar, India, under date of Jan. 31, says: "Cholera is very bad in Bombay now. Nearly four hundred deatbs a day. The outbreak at Dahanu in the Boys' Boarding School has been checked."

God bless all our readers who, in recent months, have been bereaved of loved ones. Alas, they are so many, but He knows them all. Our aged brother, D. H. Baker, of Abbottstown, Pa., writes us touchingly of his grandson who was among the many slain on the battle-fields of France. A grief-stricken sister in the Far Northwest is asking for solace because her beloved husband has been taken by the pneumonia pestilence. And every week brings in its heavy freight of tear-stained messages, which fill to overflowing our obituary columns. We wish we knew the word that would bring comfort to all these sorrowing hearts. God bless them all! God bless them!

Human plans are subject to quick changes. Our last week's issue had been on the press but a few hours when Bro. J. E. Miller received notice from the American Committee for Relief in the Near East that he should come to New York at once, as the date of sailing for the Sunday School Commission had been changed again. Accordingly he left Elgin, Wednesday morning, the twelfth. A night letter, received last Saturday morning, states that the party, including Bro. Culler, had sailed from New York, on Friday, the fourteenth, at four o'clock, on the "Mauretania," for Southampton, England. Mail for Bro. Miller or Bro. Culler, if sent not later than Monday, March 24, should be addressed in care of the American College, Beirut, Syria. After that date, care of W. W. Peet, American Bible House, Constantinople, Turkey.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

The District Meeting of Idaho and Western Montana is to be held May 13 to 15 in the Nezperce church, Idaho. See Bro. Fred A. Flora's announcement among the Notes.

On page 187 we publish the program for the Sunday-school Meeting, Educational Meeting, and other gatherings of Northeastern Kansas, to be held April 6-8 in the Ozawkie church.

MISCELLANEOUS

The District Meeting of Eastern Maryland is to be held April 22 and 23 in the Frederick City church.

In publishing the interesting note from Sebring, Fla., in our last issue,—as sent us by Sister Marguerite Bixler Garrett,—the last part of her name was inadvertently omitted while the item was being put in type. With this explanation, the matter will be set straight, we trust.

Minot church, N. Dak., has about one dozen "Kingdom Songs No. 1" which are not in use. These books will be donated to any congregation in need of them, if we are informed to that effect. Most of the books are in good condition, and some are practically new. Address Beulah Steele, 442 First Avenue, N. W., Minot, N. Dak.

For some years a number of our members have resided at Stanley, Wis., holding their membership in the two near-by congregations. Feeling the need of having church services in their own town, the members have now secured a house of worship, and it is to be hoped that by this means new impetus will be given to the progress of the Kingdom at that place.

A close reader of the Notes from the different churches, as published from week to week, will readily see that the "Forward Movement" is being given much attention, and that various methods are made use of to make it effective. In this, as any other undertaking, it is well to adopt a plan best adapted to local conditions, but be sure to remember that even the best of plans are of little value unless personal and persistent efforts insure their success.

TEMPERANCE BULLETIN

The temperance battles are not all won. We must continue to educate and propagate. The cigarette evil is growing and other intemperance needs to be checked. Order at once the 1918 free "Temperance Bulletin" from the Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Ill. A copy ought to be in every home in the land, and the material used in temperance programs and addresses. Enclose postage with your order at the rate of $2 for each hundred wanted, unless you order them by express. The Committee.

ARMENIAN AND SYRIAN RELIEF NOTES

With the sailing of Brethren J. E. Miller and A. J. Culler for the Near East, the contemplated relief work of our own church, among the peoples of Armenia and Syria, begins to assume definite form. Inasmuch as we are approaching the time that has been planned for a special campaign of giving for this work, there are just a few points that might be restated.

A very careful organization is being perfected for the campaign, and it is intended that this shall reach into every church. However, the organization can only succeed if it is fully supported by all.

The campaign is to begin with Sunday, April 6,—that day being designated as Armenian Sunday. A special sermon should be preached in every church on that date and the campaign started. It will work easier, and all will feel better, if it can be concluded as early after that time as possible. Under no circumstances should it extend into May, for no one desires this work to interfere with the Conference offering this year, for which we know the church is planning her most serious effort.

We have given liberally to War Work efforts; we have subscribed to Liberty Loan campaigns; and soon a Victory Loan is to be placed before our whole citizenship. The present effort of our church is a matter of life for many people.

In lifting the offering, your cash will be appreciated, but your pledges will likewise be very acceptable. All donations for this work should be sent by draft, check, express or money order, to the Relief and Reconstruction Committee, Elgin, Ill. Make your exchange payable to this committee. A receipt will be sent to you for your remittance and the amount acknowledged.

Bro. Culler goes to the field with the intention of making wise and careful investigation. He expects to report the number of workers needed for the task. Doubtless, among the workers that will be needed, will be some with knowledge of masonry, carpentry and agriculture.

A call will be issued for workers as speedily as possible. We will want to get our funds to work at once. We shall be glad, therefore, for such able-bodied folks as can assist in this work abroad for a year or more, to be thinking definitely on the matter, so that if you are needed, when the specific call comes, you can apply. Some have volunteered, offering to pay a large part of their expenses, serving without salary, but, aside from Bro. Culler, no workers have so far been appointed. The task for which workers will be called will not be a holiday venture, but, oh, what recompense!

We shall appreciate your willing coöperation in this work, authorized by Conference,—a work worthy of the highest and best endeavors of a mighty Christian host of 100,000 people. We do not yet know what we can do when we work together on such a worthy project as this.

Relief and Reconstruction Committee,

J. H. B. Williams, Secretary.

AROUND THE WORLD

After the Saloons Close

While there is much discussion as to what may eventually prove the best saloon substitute,—so far as providing an opportunity for social intercourse is concerned,—it is well, no doubt, to make ample provisions to that end. In a strategic Chicago district, where sixty-five drink emporiums will soon close their doors, the Y. M. C. A. has already leased ten of the most advantageously located saloon properties. These are to be remodeled into reading-rooms, and other helpful phases of uplift. Thousands of men pass these places daily, as they go to and from their work, and we may rest assured that the ever ready Y. M. C. A. workers will do their best to enlist their interest in the new social centers.

Italy Wants No Divorce

One of the few countries that never allowed the introduction of divorces, with their long train of most deplorable consequences, is Italy. Recently a most determined effort was made to have the Chamber of Deputies pass an enactment that would allow dissatisfied marriage partners to have the bond of union dissolved by due process of law. The question was discussed at length, and while the advocates of divorce offered their best arguments to have the desired liberty granted, the legislators voted almost unanimously to maintain the sanctity of the marriage vow. Those who have made a study of marital conditions, as found in Italy, and those prevalent in other countries, declare that by far the best showing is made in the land without divorces.

Ministerial Endorsement of Prize Fighting

One of the really surprising things,—even in this period of greatly-relaxed ethical standards,—is the outspoken clerical endorsement of proposed legislation, reviving prize ring brutality in several of the States. In attempting to justify the stand they take, these ministers maintain that "prize fighting is necessary (?) to manliness, and indeed a noble art." Perhaps these "would-be" spiritual leaders might well ponder a recent utterance of a prominent daily, which assures us: "Prize fighting is dishonest, as a matter of course [referring to Johnson's 'selling out' to his opponent, Willard, in the recent Cuba prize fight]. It is degrading to the public. It collects thieves and criminals of all kinds." Should not this condemnation be all-sufficient?

Bread Upon the Waters

One of the greatest rewards of earnest endeavors in the task of Gospel dissemination, is seen in the fact that there is always a fruitage, sooner or later, that verifies God's most gracious promises. When John R. Mott, in his stirring campaign in China, brought Christ very near to the hearts of the people, he did some sowing that was bound to produce a gracious harvest. One evidence is seen in their readiness to give liberally to every good cause. When they were asked to contribute $100,000 to Red Cross and other activities, they responded by giving $1,200,000,—twelve times the amount asked for. Does it not show most clearly that the right sort of sowing always brings a harvest to correspond, and that a spirit of liberality is truly blessed?

Spiritual Reconstruction of France

While commendable progress is being made in the reconstruction of the devastated area of France, we should not lose sight of the fact that the spiritual needs of the country should be given earnest and considerate attention by the Christian forces of our land. It is a pressing invitation of the "Go ye" that can not be spurned. It is not generally understood, perhaps, that France, while regarded as a Catholic country, has only nine million adherents of that faith, in a population of about forty million. Only 650,000 are nominally Protestant. This means that the vast majority of the French are not affiliated with any church. Does not this constitute a clear call to the Christian forces everywhere, to proclaim the Gospel to these people, who are so greatly in need of it?

Our Island Possessions Want Independence

It was to be expected, perhaps, that the insular dependencies of the United States should be touched by the world-wide longing for autonomous national existence. Porto Rico, by legislative action, declares that unless given statehood, with all the privileges included therein, she will insist upon complete independence. A commission of forty-one senators and representatives of the Philippine Legislature and other island officials, headed by Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Senate, and former commissioner to the American Congress, will arrive in this country about March 23, to instill a better knowledge of the Philippines and to preach practical application of the President's doctrine of self-determination. The mission has the approval of the American Government, which is bringing the delegation to this country on the army transport "Sherman." The whole question at issue, so far as the people of Porto Rico are concerned, is summed up by one of the commissioners as follows: "If we can not be a vital part of the nation we love and want to serve, and if that concession can not be granted to us by the land that is always the friend of the helpless and small, then we must demand that the American people give us the freedom that is our God-given right. We have but two alternatives,—statehood or independence."

The Inter-Church World Movement

Much is being said, nowadays, about "the combining of all the forces of the Protestant churches and allied movements to bring Christianity to all the world." Combined Protestantism, we are told, is going to make a survey of the world, as to the need of man power and money. Just what amount of money will be required for the combined drive for missionary activity, which is to be set on foot in 1920, has not yet been determined, but some are talking of $700,000,000 or more. Looked at from any angle you choose, it is a gigantic undertaking,—undoubtedly the most extensive missionary movement ever attempted. Granting that the stupendous amount of money can be raised, where will the managers secure the required number of qualified workers?

What Christianity Has Done for Filipino Women

One of the most striking evidences of Gospel transformation in Oriental lands may be seen on the Philippine Islands. The women of that realm are today so far in advance of their sisters, in other less fortunate countries, that the Filipino woman is really in a class by herself. Civilization has done much, but teaching by Christian missionaries has done infinitely more. Principles of righteousness have wrought a wondrous change. While, of course, only a small number of the women, comparatively speaking, have fully identified themselves with the native churches, the influence of Christian principles reaches far and wide, and many make a practical and personal application of religious tenets, though not affiliating themselves, as yet, with the religious organizations.

The Bible in Japanese Prisons

As a persistent and judicious distributor of the Living Word, the American Bible Society is probably unexcelled by any institution of that kind. Some time ago, permission was obtained from the Japanese Government to place a copy of the Bible in each prison cell, and thus 25,000 inmates of the penal institutions in the Nipponese Empire have been given access to the Bible. What has thus been so efficiently accomplished, might be duplicated in scores of other places, by providing the Bible in sufficient quantities. A visitor in the county poorhouse of a Middle Western State was asked recently to read a passage from the Bible for the aged inmates, but a copy of the Sacred Volume could not be found in any of the rooms. How deplorable that this country fails to provide its dependents with the Blessed Book!

Ruskin's Sensible Suggestion

John Ruskin, the eminent English author and social reformer, was greatly worried, in his day, because his own nation, and France as well, spent ten million pounds a year for military preparedness. In an endeavor to point out a better way he asked: "Now, suppose, instead of buying these ten millions' worth of panic, annually, they made up their minds to be at peace with each other, and buy ten millions' worth of knowledge annually; and that each nation spent its ten million pounds a year in founding libraries, art galleries, museums, botanical gardens, and places of rest! Might it not be better, somewhat, for both French and English?" What would Ruskin say today, if he could come back, and find England planning for eternal world peace, but simultaneously appropriating £440,000,000 for her army during the first year of the Peace League?

Severities of Early Colonial Days

It may not be generally known that the same administrators of public affairs in early colonial days, who showed enlightened care for the rising generation by establishing free schools, also punished transgressions of children with pitiless severity. Those who are inclined to exalt the rigid child-training of the "good old days" as something vastly superior to present-day methods of greater leniency, might profitably study some of the stern mandates of two centuries ago, as referred to in a pamphlet, published by the United States Children's Bureau. According to the provisions of a statute, passed in Connecticut in 1672, any child above sixteen years of age that would "curse or smite its natural father or mother" was "to be put to death," unless a serious neglect on the part of the parents, or needless provocation, could be proven. Then, too,—according to Prof. Wm. B. Bailey, of Yale University,—the death penalty was imposed on children for a dozen other offenses, including blasphemy, witchcraft and idolatry. These laws were not passed to meet possible exigencies, but the penalties were actually enforced. The stocks, the pillory, flogging and branding were penalties for minor offenses. About the time Yale College was being founded, any person, more than fourteen years old, convicted of perjury, was ordered to be "set on the pillory by the space of one whole hour, . . . and have both his ears nailed," among other punishments. For older children, lying was punishable by fine, or the stocks, or whipping "on the naked body not exceeding ten stripes for a first offense." Even children under fourteen years of age, convicted of lying, had summary punishment administered unto them. Swimming on the Lord's Day by young or old was regarded as a crime, and punished accordingly. For more than fifty years (1773-1827), Connecticut had an underground prison in an old mining pit on the hills near Symsbury, which equaled in horrors all that was ever related of European prisons. "Here the delinquents were crowded together at night, their feet fastened to heavy bars of iron, and chains about their necks, attached to beams above. These caves reeked with filth. Men, women, boys, girls, idiots, lunatics, drunkards, the innocent and the guilty, were mingled pellmell together." Such were some of the penalties inflicted by officials who knew no mercy.

A New Red Cross Campaign

Plans are now being made for an International Red Cross organization, led by the American Red Cross, to wage a fight against disease and its ravages, and to relieve suffering in general. Dr. Livingston Farrand, newly appointed chairman of the central committee of the American Red Cross, has sailed for France to prepare for a preliminary international conference in Geneva, thirty days after the signing of peace. At this meeting the necessary steps for a world organization will be taken. "The war," said Dr. Farrand, "has shown that the great possibilities of the Red Cross lie in times of peace, and we now propose that the allied Red Cross organizations shall all unite in an international movement for the prevention of disease. Problems of mortality, child health and tuberculosis will be taken up and thoroughly considered."

Mexicans Moving into Texas

A steady stream of Mexicans has been pouring into Texas of late, and it is now estimated that there are 600,000 of them. Still others continue to come. Only a few years ago, church workers in the United States were lamenting the fact that the new Mexican constitution practically cut off all opportunities for mission work in that country. Now the difficulty has been swept away by the people coming to us. Under the providence of God, more work at less cost can now be done among them than by sending missionaries into Mexico. It is much easier, at this time, to induce the people to attend services, since they are freed from the dominance of their priests and the old superstitious atmosphere. Another incentive for active work among them is the fact that many will return to Mexico, and carry with them the impressions received.

China's Toilers Behind the Battle Lines

Much has been said and written about the soldiers who struggled in the great onslaught upon the forces of autocracy, and who finally gained the day. Few persons, however, really know that China, too, has played a big part in winning the world war. Early in the struggle France imported 160,000 Chinese laborers, intending to use them mainly in that capacity alone. But long before the war was over, most of these men from China became experts along many lines. They will return to their native land as competent chauffeurs, mechanics, road builders, etc. Incidentally they have been brought in touch with many phases of civilized life, administrative affairs, and a wide sweep of Christian helpfulness. Upon their return to China they will play no small part in the governing of that land in the future. American church workers have been helping them while in Europe and will continue to do so.

Why a Real League of Nations Is Needed

It is one of the leading aims of the League of Nations, when its comprehensive provisions have been fully worked out, that excessive armaments and preparations for war must be done away with. That is, undoubtedly, a most far-reaching move. No matter what may be claimed by the advocates of military preparedness, the fact remains that the leading incentive to war is seen in the ever-ready armaments,—not in vexatious disputes. It has been demonstrated that disputes can be settled otherwise than by arms, and that they would be so disposed of, as a general thing, if there were not the constant invitation to resort to an armed force because preparations have been made along that line. With the nations armed to the teeth, every dispute is a menace to war, and there is but a step from the menace to the actual entrance into war. The Kaiser, we say, caused the great war in August, 1914. But is it not true that he could only make that move because the accumulated armaments were there, on each frontier, and that a mere word sufficed to set them in motion? A spark can create an explosion to destroy a wall, but only if the powder or the dynamite has been placed there for instant use. Had all of Europe been wholly without armament in 1914, the war could not have started. This is, admittedly, an obvious truth, and it is strange that humanity has been so slow to perceive its implications. When, by a general adoption of the League of Nations plan, as finally worked out, general disarmament is brought about, war will be made practically impossible, —its vital factors will be lacking.

HOME AND FAMILY

A Cup of Cold Water

Selected by Mrs. T. U. Reed, Seips, Montana

'Twas only an earthen pitcher
  She brought with a cooling draft;
'Twas cracked in a dozen places,
  And many who saw it laughed;
The little one's sweet lips quivered
  And her smiling eyes grew sad:
"You wanted a drink of water,
  And that pitcher was all I had."

The king bent low from his saddle,
  And said, as he deeply quaffed:
"Than this I have never tasted
  A more refreshing draft."
He turned to his smiling courtiers,
  And his handsome face grew stern
As he said,—and his nobles wondered,—
  "'Tis a lesson we all may learn.

"We are bidden to serve each other,
  We are bidden to give our best;
But we think, since our gift is simple
  It needs to be richly dressed;
We scoff at the earthen pitcher;
  For the garland cup we call,
Forgetting the gift is the water,
  And never the cup at all."

The courtiers listened in silence;
  The little one's eyes of blue
Grew round and wide as she faltered:
  "I didn't know it was you;
'Twas just that you said you were thirsty,
  So I ran to the old spring-wall
And dipped in my pitcher and brought it,
  'Twas not for the king at all."

So, then, to the eyes of the nobles,
  He sweetly, strangely smiled
As he said to the little maiden:
  "Yea, this is the gift, my child;
'Twas not that you brought the water,
  Thus thinking your king to please;
'Twas just that you served me even
  As 'one of the least of these.'"

A Sheriff's Sale

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER

"WHAT was the beginning of our troubles?" asked Sallie Chapman.

Her husband shook his head gloomily. He was cold, chilly, tired and beaten. "We got along until the year when the barn burned down, and the drouth starved us out. What's the use of talking about it now?"

The two of them had just come in from the barn, where Sallie had milked her one cow. Joe had fed his two horses and four pigs. Joe had put some corn fodder around the stable doors. It was going to be zero weather, he thought, before morning. Sallie put another piece of wood in the stove. Then she sat down close to Joe. These two were too troubled to worry each other with their fears, so a wall of silence stood between them on this evening.

They had done well enough until the barn burned down. Joe had secured a mortgage on the farm then, but when the crops failed and some cattle died, they hardly knew what to do. One year they lost all their chickens; also their hogs. Joe had hoped to pay part of the mortgage when he sold his hogs. His plows were broken, his wagons unsafe. For one thing and then another, the money for the mortgage on the farm began to drip, drip, drip away, like so much water. Then he told Sallie she must save more. They must stint themselves a good deal, for he could not make up his losses, try as he would.

Joe looked at her as if dumbly imploring her to do something to save them. Her nature responded to the wordless appeal of her husband. What could she do to avert, as long as possible, what was inevitable? It was before her of nights, and disturbed even such unquiet dreams as she had; it made her restless during the day.

"If our Joey knew it, maybe he'd come home and help?" she suggested.

"He was tired enough of Coleman Center,—that's why he's never come back," answered Joey's father.

"I know. I've thought sometimes 'at we didn't know how to keep our one boy. I never knowed much about fun and having good times. Joey wanted what we couldn't give him here."

"We're his parents. We'd ought to have come first," contended father stubbornly. "He shouldn't 'a' left us with the mortgage and,—" A man of few words, he trailed off incoherently in concluding.

Things were coming to a yet poorer pass. The world was using them more cruelly still. It lay upon them both as a tremendous weight. In a state of alarm and trepidation Sallie wrote to Joey. The catastrophe that threatened could not be delayed more than a month or so. Joe was hardly suited to find a remedy. His was not the mind for a crisis. If their son Joe were at home, he might have done what was needed, but Joe Senior was different. His was not a bold fighting nature that would struggle before it would die. He would surrender tamely, and without a blow. Poor suffering souls! Theirs was not the spirit of youth, fertile in devices, daring and vigorous. And so they were hurried along through the gloom and shadows, to the day of reckoning.

Then, one day, when Joe was in the far pasture, a man rode up to the farm. He dismounted and walked up to the kitchen door. Sallie knew that their hour had come, even before the fluttering piece of paper was put in her hands. The paper sbook in her hands, so that she could hardly read the notice of the "Sheriff's Sale," to be held on their place thirty days from date. Sallie's wits nearly deserted her at first. Then came back to her, with extraordinary force and vitality: "If I can get word to Joe, he'd want to help. Why, he should help!"

With their creditors like cruel wolves waiting for their money, what could be done? Dark care sat beside Joe and Sallie as they wondered how to avert the Nemesis that hung over them.

The day of the sheriff's sale came at last,—the saddest day in the history of any home. All the years of toil are lost! All the pitiful economies of daily living are in vain. The hopes and aims of the early days are gone. Only failure lies at the door. Only poverty can be their fate for some time to come. Sallie realized this when the men and women of their community came to the sale. Only a few household articles were claimed. The old, worn furniture was mercilessly exposed for sale. Even the old-fashioned cradle, in which Joey had slept and been cuddled down as a child, brought ninety-five cents. Sallie saw that Mrs. Forney bought it. That was a bit of comfort,—Mrs. Forney loved her babies.

But why go into the details of this sheriff's sale, when every hour of it was one long-drawn agony, for Sallie and Joe? They remained in the empty house that night. They sat alone,—the wall of silence higher than ever between them. Sallie knew that so far as in him lay, Joe had done his utmost. She had managed as well as she could. But she was not one of the women of whom we read, who can turn their hand to almost anything, and make a living after some financial disaster. She could keep house economically, but she never had much luck with her chickens, so she blamed herself equally with Joe for what had occurred.

The next morning, after breakfast, she stood by the sink in her kitchen. The dish-pan was filled with hot water, the few dishes were stacked in orderly piles, but Sallie's arms hung at her sides and her gray eyes looked yearningly out of the window. She leaned closer. A man had emerged from the woods at the brow of the hill. Was it? Oh, it must, it must be Joey. Trembling all over, she hurried out to meet him.

"Now, now, don't you cry, mother. I've been a long time coming, but I have come to take care of you now," was Joe's comforting greeting.

Then father came, and Joe talked to him, as he had talked to his mother. He explained that he had intended coming back to see how they were, but there never seemed to be time. He had supposed that the home was secure and his parents comfortable. He had not received his mother's letters.

"What made you come now?" asked his father.

"Been planning to come for six months, and to think I came the day after everything is gone! But I am glad of it. I want you with me. So we can start tonight. You can get ready, can't you, mother?"

Joey must have forgotten that his mother never had expected to live anywhere else. The distress of the past years made her say: "I'll be ready in a few hours."

"I know a house, just outside of Exeter, with two acres of land. I have it in charge now, and was going to find some responsible family to move there. We'll move into it ourselves. You shall cook for me again, and we'll have a better time than we ever had in Coleman Center."

So their few belongings were soon packed. Joey helped in every way. He talked of the new home, of their new neighbors. He told them of a mission church within a square of the house,—"a church of the Brethren, mother. You'll be glad to go." So the time passed, and it was about sunset when they closed the farmhouse. Joey locked the door.

In the new home with their boy, Sallie forgot the fear, the terror of the past months. Father was so busy, planning to raise vegetables, to make chickens pay. Every evening Joey began many long talks with: "When I was little." They were so tremulously happy, so relieved, that Joey could scarcely do enough to make up to them for all they had suffered. He asked the pastor of the mission church to visit them. It was on that occasion that Sallie told more than she had done before. The pastor said:

"It comes to this: If I trust God, can I depend on him? Will he back me up? You were in trouble, your home was sold, but here is a better one. You have your son with you, and all are happy. We believe that God never fails us. If he does not give us what we ask he gives something better."

"I have proved him, I shall always trust him," said Sallie.

Why a Children's Home-Finding Society?

BY RAY S. WAGONER

Superintendent of the Child-Saving Mission of Oklahoma

THE strenuousness of modern life keeps the most of us so intensely engaged that we never have time to think of the things that are not brought forcibly to our attention. Not because we do not sympathize with good movements or endeavors to better society and the church, but just because we are busy,—and it would be a crime if we were not busy these days.

I am not so vitally concerned as to Germany's ability to turn out cannon, or England's ability to turn out ships, or France's ability to turn out fine machinery, nor even to our own ability along like lines. The one great fundamental upon which all others must eventually rest is the moral fibre of the general public. The burning question of today is: "Are we turning out true, genuine, Christian manhood and womanhood?" Give America the best boys and girls in the world today and she will just naturally take her place at the head of the nations tomorrow. For every human enterprise must depend upon the moral fiber for its success. No business can be complete without it. The doctrine of "the survival of the fittest" is a fact.

The boys and girls of today will be the men and women of tomorrow, unless death intervenes. They will be a part of the great life of tomorrow. This is as inevitable as is the rising of tomorrow's sun. They are a part of tomorrow without questioning. And being a part of tomorrow, they are a part of the real future,—greater than any state documents or international treaties.

Proper child-training and proper environment for America's children today are far more essential to the future of the nation than navies or armies or even commercial enterprises. All of these must depend upon the children of today in the tomorrows to be. Morality, civic righteousness and public sentiment are the things that are determining the destiny of nations. And childhood is the place where destinies are determined. No matter who the children are, or where they came from, nor the circumstances surrounding life or origin, we must recognize every one of them. To neglect their proper training is to allow them to develop into a negative force for the future.

Children are the property of society in general,—especially dependent children. But there are many children today, with both parents living, who are, in many ways, worse than homeless, for their parents are neglecting the "one thing needful." What a calamity! But, nevertheless, they will be a part of the human life of tomorrow.

There are not only a few, but hundreds of parents who are not worthy to be custodians of the immortal souls of children, so helpless to combat their early influences. And the divorce evil and the dictates of modern society are rendering the parents and children of the land less and less able to combat the great enemy of mankind. Yet these homes are producing children who will be the future men and women of our land. What America needs today is not more, but better children.

The greatest foe to the progress of the world is neglected childhood, and our unwarranted belief in the claims of heredity. Such erroneous teachings lead to aristocracy and a peasantry. The blood of Jesus Christ can cleanse the soul of every individual and make it a constructive part of society. What the nation needs most, is the application of the blood of Christ. And the proper home influence will do more to apply it than all the preaching of the ministry.

To develop the home life of America, and to secure the right influences for the homeless and improperly cared for children, is one of the greatest tasks confronting the Christian church today, and one that is fraught with the greatest possibilities.

During the quarantine we nursed a mother and baby, and filled out fifty-seven questionnaires of the September registration, having filled out quite a number before.

The quarantine was lifted and churches were opened on the first Sunday of November with a very small attendance. The doctor thought best not to resume our schools for a week. We reopened Nov. 11 with a small attendance but gradually increased as the epidemic subsided. The school has been larger than any previous year, due to the compulsory school law which came into effect this year. Sister Helen Sandaal, of Prince William County, is my assistant.

A second outbreak of influenza the first of the new year caused the schools to be closed again. However, the disease seemed to be in a much milder form. My assistant and I having contracted it, were kept at home for several weeks. We reopened school Feb. 4, with a smaller attendance than before. The people seemed to be excited and afraid.

Our church services have been greatly hindered on account of the epidemic. Eld. G. A. Maupin filled the regular appointments for us on the fourth Sunday,—the first good crowd that we have had for a long time. We are thankful that things seem to be getting back to their normal status.

We have organized a Home Bible Class, which meets each Tuesday evening. We find it quite interesting and helpful.

The Evergreen church is getting ready to add two Sunday-school rooms and a basement to the church.

We desire to make this year the banner year for our work here, and we also want to do our part in the Forward movement for the church. Nelie Wampler.

THERE IS GREAT DANGER

"Pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall" (Prov. 16 : 18).

We are making history at a rapid rate. The tide has changed and may change again as rapidly as a March storm. One can not predict what the morrow will bring forth. Just a few months ago, looking from this angle of the compass with a pessimistic spirit, one could almost conclude that the Kaiser of Germany would celebrate Christmas of 1918 in Paris, and that he was but four years behind his original program. But the tide changed. The change was so rapid and thorough that it almost seemed to be a miracle. Instead of the Kaiser, President Wilson is the man to celebrate Christmas in Paris. And not only so, but a few weeks ago it looked as if the President of the United States might celebrate Christmas of 1918 in Berlin. This great change, at so critical a period, has caused the whole world to stand in awe.

Our daily papers come out with headlines that strike a tender chord with American citizens. "The United States" and "President Wilson" are most conspicuous. The eyes of the whole world are turned upon the man who has turned the tide, and in whose hands the destiny of the nations of the world are resting, as in no other. America's great men of the past, who have laid the foundation for a great nation, and whose brains have made possible what its citizens now are enjoying, are almost forgotten as the man of the day is foremost on the scene.

Not only do the citizens of the United States credit our nation with winning the war, but those of neutral countries also well understand that the wresting of the world from autocracy must be attributed to the country that flies the stars and stripes. We have met men, who severely criticised President Wilson's actions of less than a year ago, but who, since the war is won, speak words of praise.

There is, however, still a question, in the minds of at least the Scandinavian people, as to the President's sincerity. His points are considered right and just, but the question is, Will he carry out his program to a finish? These men, who shall bring order out of chaos, need Divine guidance. It is our duty to pray for the President and his associates, who have undertaken this great task. Our prayer to God is, that the President's message to Congress, before his sailing to Europe, may be realized, and that righteousness and not vengeance may prevail. President Wilson has the privilege to elevate his nation to a height it never before attained. It is up to him to exalt to the world the ideals for which his nation stands. We trust he may have true courage for his task and succeed in it. This will constitute the supreme victory. Were this done properly and in the fear of God, it would cause the world never to forget what has been won by the best American blood of the twentieth century.

Who shall receive the honor for this? President Wilson? He surely deserves much. Those who have offered their lives for the great cause of democracy? They certainly deserve a great part of the honor. No, not these, but to God be all honor. This is just where the great danger lies,—attributing to man the honor that belongs to God. Great nations have fallen because they became proud of their own achievements and what they thought they had accomplished in their own strength, and attributed the honor to themselves instead of to the Almighty.

We have a good example of this in Nebuchadnezzar. He was a scourge in the hand of God to punish the Children of Israel, but he failed by taking the honor to himself: "Have not I built this city, and won great victories?" Because he exalted himself, God humiliated him so that he might learn the source of his victory and confess: "Now I praise and extol and honor the King of heaven, all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment, and those that walk in pride he is able to abase." The king could repent, but his kingdom was doomed to fall. May the victorious nations of our day learn a good lesson from this haughty king, and even of great rulers of less than a year ago, and not fall after the same example of self-confidence and pride.

It may be hard to keep humble when everything is lifting, and when the feet no longer are firmly planted on terra firma. May God spare the American nation from such a curse! May the world war not only have humiliated the losing nations but also those to whom it has pleased God to give the victory. If this war will cause nations to understand that it is not safe to trust in the arm of flesh, but rather to walk in closer communion with God, the blood will not have been shed in vain. May the spirit of David, the great king of Israel, possess the rulers and statesmen of our day. Then the King of kings and Lord of lords will be honored and glorified! Rulers of this world will be humble in the sight of men, but exalted in the sight of God. J. F. Graybill.

WAYSIDE NOTES

Nov. 5 wife and I and little daughter left our home in Fairview, Mo., for our old home place in East Tennessee, where we were to hold some meetings. We left there sixteen years ago, when we were starting out in married life.

We were permitted to meet many relatives and friends, but our hearts were made sad because of the absence of many of the dear ones who had crossed over to the great beyond.

Our first meeting was at the Pleasant View church. Here was the home of Eld. F. W. Dove in his early life. Here we saw part of his old mill still standing. This was also the home of Eld. Andy Vines. They have both gone to their reward. The church is now in charge of Eld. Jesse D. Clark and Bro. Robert Edwards.

Our next meeting was at the New Hope church, our old home, where wife was born and grew to womanhood. It was here that she gave her heart to God early in life. We saw many vacant seats here. Especially did we miss Eld. S. H. Garber, who was, at one time, one of the leaders of this church. Well do I remember his parting message to me when we were about to leave Tennessee the first time. He said: "Be an honest man, and whatever the church asks you to do, do it with all your might." This has been a great help to me. It has enabled me to take up the work and to try to do my best. This church is now under the leadership of Elders A. M. Laughrun and J. B. Hilbert.

The next meeting was at the Pleasant Valley church. It was here that I attended my first District Meeting, nineteen years ago. The church is now in charge of Elders Austin Diehl and S. W. Beals; also C. H. Diehl.

I then went to Smith's Chapel in West Virginia, where I spent my boyhood days. It was here that Walter M. Kahle, pastor of the Troutville church, Va., and the writer, with others, were baptized by Eld. G. W. Hutchinson.

Here I was permitted to meet a great many of my relatives whom I had not seen for years. It was here that my Father, J. H. Argabright, was chosen to the ministry and did a great deal of his ministerial work. I also visited an uncle, near Roanoke, Va. He was under great affliction, but I found him in the living faith.

On account of influenza we did not hold as many meetings as were contemplated, so we closed our labors and returned home.

Any one desiring my help in a series of meetings, will please correspond with me here at my home, as I intend to devote my time to evangelistic work this year.

BETHEL CHURCH, CALIFORNIA

We met in special council Feb. 15, at the home of Brother and Sister G. E. Wray, to discuss various business matters. The most important of these was the construction of a church building. We are only an infant church yet, but we are growing. We have received the sincere milk of the Word for over a year, and feel now that we need a church building. We had been worshiping in the Mennonite church until the meetings were closed on account of the influenza.

A building committee was appointed at this meeting to draw up plans and to ascertain the approximate cost of a small building. There was a site offered by Bro. J. A. Wyatt, if we choose to build in the country. Another was offered by the United States Land Company, if we choose to build in town. Four letters of membership were received. Church officers have been retained for another year. A vacancy in the office of "Messenger" agent will be filled by Sister Lucinda Stutsman. Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year.

It was decided to open our services again and meet in the homes.

Another council was called Feb. 25, at the home of Brother and Sister J. J. Reppert, to consider unfinished business. Plans and costs were presented for our church building. These were discussed pro and con, and then a finance committee was appointed. A free-will offering was taken to pay our share of the District Mission work and District expenses.

A third council was called for March 4, at the home of Brother and Sister William Stutsman, to decide on a location for our church. The sites offered were freely discussed, as to the advantages and disadvantages of city and country churches. A spirit of brotherly love has predominated in all of our meetings, and we are trying to work together to the honor and glory of God. We took

A NEW CHURCH, STANLEY, WISCONSIN

The folks who stand by and say: "It can't be done," sometimes are forced to stop and catch their breath when almost in an instant there are shown that it can be done. For some time a number of our members have been living in Stanley, Wis., where there is no organized church in town. They have been holding their membership in either the Worden or the Maple Grove church, each of which is out from Stanley about eight miles. These members have felt that they would like to have services in town, but had no place in which to meet.

A short time ago a committee, appointed for the purpose, started to secure funds for the purchase of a church. In one week's time the entire amount needed to pay for a church was raised in the community, and they purchased the Synod Lutheran church, paying $3,000 for it. They are now ready to do business for the Master in their own comfortable building.

They met for the first time last Sunday, in this new church home, and got their Sunday-school started. Bro. J. M. Myers, who is pastor of the Worden and the Maple Grove churches, lives in Stanley and has rendered valuable assistance in getting this work started.

Thinking of the folks who say that things can not be done in Wisconsin, one can only smile and say: "They have never been there."

May the Lord bless the work of these devoted people, who have so resolntely set their shoulders to the wheel. Any members, contemplating moving into a desirable community, will find it worth while to investigate the communities in the vicinity of Stanley, Wis.

meeting. The church met in quarterly council March 6. Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker was chosen to represent the church at Annual Conference. Our love feast will be held May 25.—Clarence Branson, Muncie, Ind., March 11.

Pleasant Valley church met in council March 8, with our elder, Bro. J. L. Mishler, presiding. Elders J. H. Schrock and Will Hess were also present. We decided to hold our love feast May 10. Two young brethren,—Homer Hess and Ralph Bowman,—were called to the ministry.—Carrie Kindy, R. D. 4, Middlebury, Ind., March 11.

Portland church met in council March 4, with Eld. D. M. Byerly, of Magley, Ind., presiding. One letter was granted to Brother and Sister Harold Gibbs. They are moving to Logansport. It was decided not to locate a pastor here at the present time. Our Sunday-school is doing well. Brethren D. A. Hummer and Jacob Heller will fill the pulpit for three months. Sister Stella Stump was elected delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. Jacob Heller as alternate.—Marie Stump, R. D. 4, Portland, Ind., March 9.

Fyrmont church met in council March 8, with Bro. D. L. Barnhart presiding. Four letters were received and five were granted. Various matters were made known. Bro. D. L. Barnhart was chosen elder for another year. He is also to represent us at Annual Meeting, with Bro. Willard Hufford, alternate. Our series of meetings is to begin in April, with Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, Ill., evangelist. Bro. W. Carl Rarick, of Muncie, visited us during February. If the interest of the Old Folks' Home. We have a good Sunday-school, with a continual increase in attendance. One Sunday the attendance reached 150.—Mrs. Claude Cripe, Rossville, Ind., March 10.

South Whitley church met in council March 8, with Bro. G. E. Swihart presiding. Four letters were received and two were granted. One young man awaits the rite of baptism. Bro. Walter McConnel was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Sister Carrie Neff, alternate. Bro. S. Burger, of Howe, Ind., is to begin a series of meetings here March 16. We are looking forward to this meeting with interest, that the members may be strengthened and that the church may be built up. We are looking forward to the time when we will have a resident minister here, of which we are greatly in need.—Mrs. Henry J. Neff, South Whitley, Ind., March 8.

Spring Creek church has been enjoying some spiritual blessings of late. A good lecture was given by Bro. Ezra Flory, of Bethany Bible School. The four discourses, Feb. 14 to 16, were all very helpful for those present. Much sickness, bad roads and unfavorable weather kept many away. The third lecture was given March 6 by Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown, Pa. A large crowd was present, and the evening will be long remembered. Bro. Ober is among the best speakers of the Brotherhood. Our next lecture will be given April 16 by Bro. T. B. Gnagey, of South Bend, Ind.—M. Amanda Rosher, Pierceton, Ind., March 7.

Union Center.—The Smith Union Church enjoyed a very spiritual two weeks' revival meeting, held by Bro. Christian Metzler. He preached the Word with power. Three came out on the Lord's side. The attendance was very good. We held our council March 8. Our elder, Bro. John Frederick, presided. One letter was granted and one letter received. Our delegate to Annual Meeting are Brethren Eli Roose and David Miller; alternates, Bro. John and Jonas Frederick. We decided to hold our love feast May 24, at 7 o'clock. We will have a week's series of meetings previous to the feast.—Mrs. Homer R. Weldy, B. D. 1, Nappanee, Ind., March 6.

Upper Deer Creek church met in council March 1, with Eld. Ira Kreider presiding. Our series of meetings, which had been postponed since October, because of influenza, is to begin some time during March. On the afternoon of March 9 two Bethany Bible School students and Sister Hutchison, a missionary on furlough from China, gave us a very interesting program.—Mrs. Geo. R. Murphy, Lincoln, Ind., March 9.

Wabash church met in quarterly council March 6, with Eld. F. S. Brubaker presiding. Three letters of membership were granted. Eld. Brubaker was elected delegate to Annual Conference. Our Sisters' Aid Society was reorganized, with Sister Mary Frantz, President, and Sister Lucinda Cromrine, Secretary and Treasurer. We decided to hold our love feast some time after harvest.—Barbara E. Fulley, R. D. 8, Wabash, Ind., March 11.

West Eel River church met in council March 8, Elders Amos Freed, C. F. Eller, Emanuel Leckrone and T. D. Butterbaugh being with us. Reports were given by a special visitation committee. The first Sunday in August was chosen as a permanent date for our Harvest Meeting. The first Saturday in May was agreed upon as the date for our love feast. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren Benjamin Johns and Roy Kline. Several weeks ago an offering was taken for Armenian relief, which amounted to over $200. —Miss Ruth Metzger, Claypool, Ind., March 11.

West Marion.—Because there is no business of importance, we have decided not to hold our March council. Sunday, March 2, two letters were granted, these members being our Christian Workers' president and vice-president, respectively. Sisters Ring and Wilson were elected to take their places. Feb. 20 about thirty of the members gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Rife for a farewell party, as they are leaving this place,—a fact that we deeply regret. At present we are without a pastor, and the appointments are being filled by any whom the Mission Board may send, but we are praying that we will soon have a regular pastor.—Mrs. Della Hileman, 1617 W. First Street, Marion, Ind., March 6.

IOWA

Des Moines Valley.—Our work this year has been greatly hindered by the influenza epidemic and three of our members have died, but our work is moving along again. Our church has just secured a lot in property, originally owned by Bro. S. M. Goughnour, for a parsonage, and our pastor is now located near the churchhouse. Our Sunday-school and all its departments, together with the church, have been at work for funds for Armenian-Syrian Relief Work. Last Sunday marked the commencement of the work and our pastor delivered a stirring address, after which an offering of $10.76 was taken. Thirteen met in a missionary council Sunday. Our present pastor, Bro. J. F. Burton, has been retained. He was also elected as our elder. Bro. Jefferson Mathis was elected delegate to Annual Conference, with Sister Emily Burton as alternate. Our love feast will be held May 17 and a series of meetings will follow.—Our church has endorsed the five-year "Forward Movement," and we are laboring to do our part in this great work.—Esther M. Hildreth, Ankeny, Iowa, March 8.

Iowa River church met in quarterly council, March 9, at 1:30 P. M. Bro. F. M. Wheeler was elected as elder for the ensuing year. He has very much improved in health, which, he believes, was in direct answer to prayer. We are greatly rejoicing over the locating of Bro. Earl Jarboe and wife, here in our midst. We need his assistance in the ministry, and pray that they may be a great uplift to our church and community. We are looking forward to June, when Bro. Otho Winger, of Kansas, will begin our revival. Our love feast will be May 31, at 2:30 P. M. The old people, here at the Home, are all very well, considering their advanced age. We have had no deaths since the last May. We enjoyed our Sunday evening by listening to an interesting talk, given by Bro. Tommy Smith, concerning his experience overseas.—Susie Kinzie, R. D. 7, Marshalltown, Iowa, March 10.

Kingsley church met in quarterly council today, considering especially the future good of the church. We have, for the present, closed our two country churches and are meeting regularly in a rented churchhouse in town. A committee was appointed to look into the building problem and advise us in the next few days. All branches of our work are prospering nicely. We have just closed an illustrated lecture course, continued for nine evenings by Detective O. G. Carroll, of Chicago, which greatly awakened many to a righteous need, and we cannot measure the good that will result. Our work outgrew our building. We then went to the largest churches in town and filled them through the worst of weather. Detective Wigrd is not only a lecturer but a preacher, and his life and lecture abound in testimony for Christ. Recently we have sent offerings from the church and Sunday-school to the relief of Armenian and Syrian sufferers. The pastor was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. Our love feast is set for May 4.—S. S. Neher, Kingsley, Iowa, March 6.

Prairie City church met in quarterly business meeting on Saturday afternoon, March 8. One letter was granted. We have given much for relief work this winter, but decided to do our part in the great effort. Bro. Ira Buck was elected elder for 1919. Eld. F. F. W. Brubaker was chosen to represent us at Annual Conference, with Bro. John Fouts, alternate. Sister Kate Colyn was reelected a member of the Mission Board. Sister Lucinda Cromrine was elected on the Temperance Committee. Bro. E. M. Brubaker was reelected church truster; Bro. B. F. Buckingham, church clerk; the writer, correspondent. Eld. F. W. Brubaker was unanimously chosen elder in charge for another year. Our love feast was set on Saturday evening, May 17, beginning at 6 o'clock. We expect Bro. Oscar Diehl, of Beaver, to be with us in a revival meeting in September.—Nellie L. Bowie, Prairie City, Iowa, March 12.

KANSAS

Appanoose church met in quarterly council March 1. Eld. C. W. Shoemaker presided. An offering of $66.85 was lifted for the India Famine Fund and also $25.03 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. More is being raised now and will be sent in the near future. One letter of membership was granted. Bro. Ira Buck was appointed to serve as minister, to hold a series of meetings here this fall. Christian Workers' Meeting was reorganized March 9.—Ethel Morgan, Pomona, Kans., March 11.

McLouth.—On Thursday evening we met in the church to baptize two of our Sunday-school boys. Two more are awaiting the rite. On Friday evening we met for members' meeting. We elected a church treasurer and church clerk. Sister Lucas was elected delegate to District Meeting. Sister Crist was elected delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting. She resigned as superintendent of the home department and cradle roll. Sister J. R. Kimmel was elected. A pastoral conference was held, preparatory to looking for a pastor. April 15 two years of very pleasant work as pastor will end for the writer, and soon after that time he expects to go to the Bethel church at Middletown, Ohio, to labor there as a worker with others who are there. Unless there should be an opening in Northeastern Kansas as pastor or missionary, we will make the Bethel church our home for the time being. After having lived in Northeastern Kansas ever since it has been settled, and after having served as pastor here for twenty years, we are loath to part from this pleasant field of work.—J. H. Crist, McLouth, Kans., March 8.

North Solomon.—We met in council March 8, our elder presiding. It was decided to hold our love feast May 10. Bro. E. E. Throne was chosen delegate to Annual Conference, with Eld. R. F. McCandless, alternate. Dr. D. W. Kurtz, of McPherson, Kans., comes to Ottawa on Friday evening, March 14, under the auspices of the "Men's Patriotic League," to give his popular lecture on "Education in Reconstruction."—Olive M. Wheeler, 722 Olive Street, Ottawa, Kans., March 10.

Richland Center church met in quarterly council March 6, with our elder, Bro. R. A. Yoder, of Sabetha, Kans., presiding. Four letters of membership were granted. A readjustment of the Christian Workers' Society was made, by which it is hoped to get the work more fully into the hands of our young people, with Sister Frantz as president. At the same hour the older people conducted a prayer meeting in the main audience room of our church, with Bro. Ira Frantz as superintendent. Brother and Sister Ira Frantz, whose home was formerly in this congregation, returned from Ohio Feb. 11, to take pastoral charge of the church. At Bro. R. A. Yoder's own request, he was relieved of the oversight of the church, and Bro. Frantz was appointed elder. Our Sunday-school attendance for the last few months has been about fifty, but with the return of good weather and roads, and improved health conditions, we expect a large increase during the next quarter. Bro. C. A. Eshelman, of McPherson, Kans., has been engaged to conduct our revival next fall. Our love feast will be held on the evening of May 29, at 7 o'clock.—Mrs. Clara Miller, Beattie, Kans., March 11.

Salem church met in council March 1. One letter was received; also one granted. We have secured Capt. Ward to lecture for us May 1-8. We appointed a committee to work out a plan for a perpetual cemetery endowment. Our services have been greatly interiered with by the influenza epidemic, but the work has now been taken up with renewed interest, and we are all enjoying the excellent sermons given by our pastor. Our love feast will be held May 11, in the Salem church.—Mrs. B. S. Trostle, Nickerson, Kansas, March 5.

MARYLAND

Baltimore (Woodberry).—Sunday-school and church raised $83 for reconstruction work. The Sunday-school decided to support three natives in the India Orphanage in Bulsar. On Sunday evening, Jan. 19, Bro. S. F. Rairigh, one of the resident ministers, preached for us. On Sunday evening, Feb. 2, Bro. T. S. Fike, one of our District Ministerial Committee, preached for us on "Heaven and the Way," from John 14: 6. On Sunday morning, Feb. 9, a Temperance meeting was held and we were addressed by Mr. A. J. King, representing the Anti-Saloon League. Total amount, paid and subscribed to the work of the League, was $63.00. On Sunday morning, Feb. 16, Bro. E. C. Bixler, our District Committee on the Simple Life, preached for us on "The Simple Life in Dress." Text, Rom. 12: 1. Our Thursday evening Bible Class is now studying the Book of Revelation, with Bro. Carroll Wine doing the teaching. March 3, a Sunday-school business meeting was held, when quite a number of items of interest were disposed of. A class for the training of teachers was decided upon. We arranged to have an Easter program. We also decided to have a conference on Sunday afternoon, April 6. Our series of meetings is to begun April 13, conducted by our pastor. Our love feast will be April 27, at 5 P. M.—Flora A. H. Babylon, 1206 W. Thirty-sixth Street, Baltimore, Md., March 6.

Bear Creek church met in council March 8, with Eld. S. A. Miller presiding. Bro. A. C. Spoerlein was reelected superintendent of our Sunday-school this summer. We expect to hold our love feast June 14, with a week's series of meetings previous to the feast.—Bertha E. Spoerlein, Accident, Md., March 9.

Brownsville.—Sunday morning, March 9, Bro. S. Spitzer gave us a talk on "Child Rescue Work," after which a collection of $28.85 was taken for this work. We have decided to hold our council meeting April 5, and our love feast May 24 and 25, beginning at 1:30 P. M.—Mrs. Nellie S. Kaetzel, Brownsville, Md., March 9.

Green Hill church met in council March 8, with our elder, Bro. W. M. Wine, presiding. Officers were elected for the year. Bro. W. M. Wine was reelected elder. Bro. J. N. Thompson was reelected superintendent; Bro. J. S. Showalter, delegate to District Meeting; Bro. I. N. Thompson, alternate. Sister Lomie Hartman was elected "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. Bro. W. E. Roop and Bro. Bixler, of Westminster, Md., were also with us. Bro. Bixler preached for us on Saturday night, using for his theme, "The Simple Life in Dress." His talk was enjoyed by all. Bro. Roop also preached on Sunday morning. The presence and discourses of these brethren were an inspiration to us all. Bro. Paul Eby, of Mount Morris, Ill., has been preaching for us since the departure of Bro. Miller, in January.—Lelia A. Showalter, Westover, Md., March 11.

Sharpsburg.—Feb. 16 Bro. S. A. Sanger, of Free Union, Va., began a series of meetings at this place, continuing until March 2. Much good seed was sown and all were encouraged to labor more faithfully in the Master's vineyard. Three have been baptized. One awaits the rite and others are thinking seriously.—Ruth Otto, Sharpsburg, Md., March 7.

Union Bridge.—Our Sunday-school superintendents for this year are Brethren Frank T. Shriver, and Scott Y. Garner. The school is doing excellent work. Recently we contributed $53 to Armenian-Syrian Relief; also $53 to India sufferers. Owing to the bad roads we have closed our week-day prayer-meeting, which was held in the homes of the members. These meetings have strengthened our social ties and made us better acquainted with each other. We expect to hold a series of meetings, beginning about April 13. The first week will be Bible Institute and the second week will be evangelistic services, in charge of Bro. Wm. Kinsey, Bible instructor of Blue Ridge College.—Carrie L. Garner, Union Bridge, Md., March 10.

MICHIGAN

Woodland church met in business session Feb. 22, with Eld. J. M. Smith presiding. Ten letters of membership were received and two were granted. Bro. Harley Townsend was elected delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. J. M. Smith, alternate. It was decided to hold our love feast on Saturday, June 14. Steps were taken toward securing an evangelist for the fall of 1920. At the request of the church the Townsend cemetery was dedicated and services held on Sunday evenings, in preparation for our revival in October. At the reorganization of our Christian Workers' Society, in January, Bro. Orville Waddell was chosen president for one year. One of our ministers visits a group in Barker's Creek school house, the first one Sunday of each month.—Mrs. Nora Christian, Woodland, Mich., March 5.

MINNESOTA

Worthington.—We met March 8 for our quarterly council. The meeting was presided over by our elder, Bro. J. A. Eddy. We will have Captain O. O. Ward with us for one week's lectures. He will start his work May 26. We will have a two weeks' series of meetings following his work, conducted by Bro. J. A. Eddy. Our love feast will be held June 14. The teachers of the four adult classes will have charge of the Fourth of July program. The church purchased an acre of ground near the churchhouse.—Ruth Eddy, Worthington, Minn., March 12.

MISSOURI

Shoal Creek.—We met in council March 8. Bro. E. J. Reece presided. We decided to hold our love feast May 10. Bro. L. W. Reece and Sister Nancy Bowman were appointed a committee to secure an evangelist for our series of meetings this fall. Bro. W. R. Argabright, who has just returned from the East, where he has been engaged in evangelistic work for the past four months, preached on Sunday morning, March 9, on the "Forward Movement," using for his text, Ex. 14: 15. He also preached on Sunday night after Christian Workers' Meeting.—Virgie Argabright, Fairview, Mo., March 10.

Smith Fork.—We met in quarterly council March 8, with our pastor, Bro. M. M. Bohrer, presiding. We had a short but very interior service, both for the local church and the "Forward Movements." Some committees were chosen for local duties. One of these is the procuring of a parsonage. Our love feast will be held May 31, and our revival meeting will begin on Sunday, June 8, to be conducted by Bro. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans. Beginning April 6, we will have a course of lectures by Capt. O. O. Ward, to continue for one week. This was a part of our lecture course arrangement for last fall and winter, but was interfered with by the prevailing epidemic and very inclement winter weather. This has made our roads almost impassable much of the time. A Mission Study Class, composed of twenty-two of our senior boys and girls, has been conducted by the pastor during the winter; also an advanced teacher-training class of twelve. These classes meet on Tuesday and Thursday evenings of each week, separately, and are both inspirational and instructive, as well as a force in uniting our workers for better work. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. Brubaker was chosen pastor for another year,—his work having been most satisfactory for the year he has been with us. Bro. Bruhaker will represent the church at the Winona Conference this year.—Ada Sell, Plattsburg, Mo., March 10.

NEBRASKA

Kearney church met in council March 5, Eld. J. J. Tawzer presiding. Our Missionary Committee is planning on more and better work. Plans have been made for an Easter program. Mission work at home is to be done, and the lives of some of our shut-in members are to be brightened. Influenza ravages made a decrease in attendance during the winter, but we are hoping for better things as spring opens up. A collection of $33.50 was sent to the India famine fund by church and Sunday-school; $36 to Armenian and Syrian Relief; $25 to the support of Sister Powell, by our Sunday-school since our last report.—Mary F. May, R. O. 1, Box 41, Relief, N. C., March 10.

NORTH CAROLINA

Poplar.—Brethren J. H. Griffith and Vance Tipton began a series of meetings here Feb. 25, and preached ten sermons. Much good was done. We organized a Sunday-school of thirty-two, but that much good may be accomplished. Brethren passing this way are invited to stop at here. Upon arrival at Poplar, inquire for Bro. R. N. Willis or Bro. E. Peterson.—Dove Peterson, R. O. 1, Box 41, Relief, N. C., March 10.

OHIO

Ashland (First Church).—It is good to be drawn away from ourselves, to take a near view of the sufferings, the privations, the efforts and the difficulties of others. This blessing has been visited with good results upon our little band of workers here. In the years to come, memory will recall many trials, with many things to discourage and retard progress. Nevertheless, the pages of its record will bear witness to a most commendable spirit of giving in both money and service. Our Sunday-school raised $56.46 for Armenian Relief Fund alone. This is but one offering of a number, lifted during the year, besides money and service for local relief work. Bro. D. A. Cassel, general manager of the county Armenian work, reports $9,000 raised by the county. Our quota was $5,200. This speaks well for our churches, here in Ashland County. Sunday, March 2, our pastor, Bro. Leckrone, going for his subject, "What It Meant to Israel When the Ark Came," added the further encouragement of giving us a clear and convincing vision of what facing to the rear instead of the front means to us of the present time. We have reason to rejoice that none of our number were taken during the influenza epidemic.—Oma Karn, 908 Orange Street, Ashland, Ohio, March 6.

Deshler church held her quarterly council March 8, at 1 P. M., Bro. David Lytle presiding. Our trustees were reelected and also our corresponding secretary. Our Aid Society is planning on more and better for another year. Delegates to District Meeting were chosen. The "Sower" collection envelopes were ordered for another year. We find them promotive of a more systematical way of giving.—Esther Dishong, Deshler, Ohio, March 10.

Fostoria church met in council on the evening of March 6, Eld. David Byerly, of Lima, Ohio, presiding. The various committees of the church reported commendable progress. Especially noteworthy was the splendid report of the Missionary Committee. Their president, Sister Eva Byerly. The pastor, Bro. E. E. Eshelman, was chosen elder in charge for the ensuing year. Bro. J. J. Lindower was reelected church clerk. The Aid Society requested permission to redecorate the walls of the church, at their expense. The report of our Temperance Committee was changed to "Purity and Temperance Committee." Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren E. E. Eshelman and J. C. Waratler, with Brethren H. Keller and J. B. Basehore as alternates. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. E. E. Eshelman, with Bro. J. C. Waratler as alternate. Eld. Byerly appointed our pastor as solicitor for Relief and Reconstruction Work. During the past month our minister gave two special sermons on "The Five Year Forward Movement" and on "Social Purity." Our two new class-rooms are completed, and the Junior Boys' Class is raising money for a rug. Sister Ethel Hoover, who is busy with their teacher, Sister Florence Sellers, for Mission Study, and with our chorister, Sister Eva Byerly, for music practice. "The Scripture Chapter and Verse Reports Plan," suggested by our Christian Workers' desk booklets secured by our Evening Edition, is in use on Sunday evening. A few weeks ago a brother, who has been out of the church for nearly twenty-five years, was reclaimed. Lost Sunday evening another requested full fellowship. Plans are being made to attain to greater efficiency in singing, Bible study and prayer, preparatory to our series of meetings, to begin on Easter Sunday.—Anna H. Eshelman, 1126 N. Union St., Fostoria, Ohio, March 10.

Greenwood church met in council March 8, with Eld. G. S. Straubaugh presiding. A brother and sister were granted their letters. Officers were reelected for the coming year. Bro. G. S. Straubaugh was again elected as our elder. Sunday-school evening was given to see about a term of music.—Bessie Cooperrider, R. O. 6, Box 95, Thornville, Ohio, March 11.

Harris Creek church met in council, with Eld. Charles Flory presiding. Eleven letters of membership were granted and five were received. We expect to have our love feast May 17. We decided to secure Bro. O. R. McFadden for our evangelistic meetings next December. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Eld. D. Berkebile, alternate, Bro. Roy Wagoner. Delegates to District Meeting, Eld. O. G. Berkebile and Bro. Roy Wagoner. We were pleased to have with us on Sunday, Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown, Pa., who filled the appointment on Sunday evening. Our church was specified to see about a term of music.—Bessie Cooperrider, R. O. 6, Box 95, Thornville, Ohio, March 11.

Harris Creek church met in council, with Eld. Charles Flory presiding. Eleven letters of membership were granted and five were received. We expect to have our love feast May 17. Hicksville.—The church at this place just closed a two weeks' series of meetings, held by Brethren Bro. D. J. Rothman, of Beaverton, Mich. He came to us Feb. 22, and closed his meetings March 9, preaching in all seventeen soul-stirring sermons. Two gave their hearts to God in baptism. Many others are counting the cost. We have an evergreen Sunday-school, averaging about fifty-five, mostly children of fourteen years and younger, but we have no resident minister. Bro. John Sponseller, of Sherwood, Ohio, preaches for us every two weeks, but we have numerous applications for a resident minister, to look after the work at all times. If some congregation, that has several ministers, could share with us, we would be very grateful. All ministers passing this way are heartily invited to stop off and preach for us.—Mrs. Bertha Williams, Hicksville, Ohio, March 12.

Lower Miami church met in council March 6, Eld. J. O. Garst presiding. A number of visiting brethren assisted us in the meeting. The writer was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. John Garst and M. E. Book represent us at District Meeting. Our sisters made the first annual report of their work. It was very encouraging. We expect Bro. Oliver Moyer, of Greenville, to begin a series of meetings for us April 20. Our Sunday-school has been working up to the plans of the "Forward Movement" this spring. Our superintendent is Wm. Furry. Recently Sister Anna Eby gave us an interesting talk on "Life and Labors in India." An offering of $8.00 was taken for the Famine Sufferers of India.—Jesse Noffsinger, R. O. 6, Dayton, Ohio, March 10.

North Star church met in council Feb. 25, with our elder, Bro. S. Z. Smith, presiding. Eight letters of membership were granted, and eight letters of the preceding council. The few remaining members regret the loss of so many active members. Our minister, Bro. H. Jesse Baker, having accepted a pastorate in Virginia, we deemed it wise to discontinue services except on the first Sunday in March and April. A paper, signed by the members, as to whether we will abandon the work or not, will be sent with our elder to District Meeting. Bro. Riley McCorkle, of the Loramie congregation, filled our pulpit March 2, which was very much appreciated. Eld. Smith will be with us on Sunday, April 6.—H. B. Shellabarger, New Weston, Ohio, March 11.

Oakland.—Our church met in council on the evening of March 1, with our elder, Bro. Chas. Flory, presiding. Several letters were granted and several received. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren Hugh Miller and I. M. Young. To District Meeting we chose Brethren Hugh Miller, I. M. Young and R. T. Waggoner. We decided to hold our love feast May 24, at 6 P. M. Our elder, Bro. Chas. Flory, stayed over the following Sunday and preached an inspiring sermon. In the evening we dismissed our services and went to the Harris Creek church, where Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown, Pa., on "Faded Orange Blossoms."—Mrs. R. T. Waggoner, Bradford, Ohio, March 10.

Price's Creek church met in council March 8. Our elder, Bro. H. S. Weaver, presided. Five letters were received; sixteen were granted. Church officers for the following year were appointed. Elders Joseph Longahecker and H. S. Weaver are our delegates to Annual Conference. Elder C. C. Petry, H. S. Weaver and Andrew Miller will represent us at our District Meeting.—Alma Miller, Eldorado, Ohio, March 10.

Sand Ridge church met in council March 8, Bro. L. H. Prowant acting as moderator. Bro. O. O. Thomas, of Latty, Ohio, was also present and preached for us. The church decided to secure Bro. Geo. E. Deardorff for a series of meetings the last of September. Our love feast is to be held at the close of the series of meetings. We recently organized a Mission Study Class with five members.—Mary E. Prowant, Hamler, Ohio, March 10.

Upper Twin church met in council March 6, our elder, Bro. Aaron Brubaker, in charge. Three letters were granted. One letter was received. The committee reported the cost of electric lights at the Gratis house. There being a surplus of money, after the lights had been installed, the committee recommended that "Building Songs No. 2," and needed supplies for the primary class in the same house. Report of the committee for the Twin Valley church was read and accepted, as was also the report of the Temperance Committee. We chose Bro. Aaron Brubaker as a member of our publishing committee for two years. The auditing committee reported the books of the church treasurer and of the poor fund treasurer as being correct. The church treasurer's report and the poor fund treasurer's report were accepted. It was decided that ministers be exempt from serving as Sunday-school superintendents. It was also decided to reorganize the Sunday-school at the Wheatville house, April 1. The present superintendent, Bro. Jacob Gratis, to serve. Sister Ella Gratis was chosen as clerk. As a member of finance committee Bro. E. J. Rinehart was chosen for five years. A request for a Sisters' Aid Society at Wheatville was granted. A vote was taken for a Christian Workers' Meeting each Sunday evening was granted. The church decided to begin a series of meetings on Sunday evening, May 4, with Bro. O. M. Garver in charge. Delegates to Annual Meeting, Bro. E. F. Keller, alternate, Bro. Jacob Gratis; delegates to District Meeting, Brethren Levi Rinehart and William Oeatoo; alternates, Sister Levi Rinehart and Bro. B. F. Petry.—A. M. Riechart, R. D. 10, Estoo, Ohio, March 10.

West Dayton has planned to begin a revival the first week of April, to be conducted by Bro. George W. Flory, of Coviogton, Ohio, with Bro. J. Yoder, of Philadelphia, Pa., as song leader. We have been working up interest for the meetings. The Aid Society has had social gatherings at the homes of the members. Before baptismal services are attended, and we feel that good has been accomplished by way of promoting good fellowship. If the one hundred thousand members of our church would be fervent in prayer, a mighty work of evangelism could be accomplished for the Master. He could use us to a better advantage. The "Forward Movement," now on, depends out so much upon great and loud shouting from the house tops but upon the hearts of the people. Let everybody pray. Let the individuality of our entire membership will go far in helping us to reach the desired goal. We would be in favor of "Prayer Day," at a set time when all the church will be in the earnest and devoted mood in our prayers? That will accomplish much.—N. B. Wise, 1534 Germantown Street, Dayton, Ohio, March 10.

Woostar.—Aside from the usual mission work of the Sunday-school, the first missionary effort of the year was a campaign to raise funds for Armenian and Syrian Relief. In 1918 we had two little war orphans were adopted,—one, by the young ladies' and young men's classes; the other by Brother and Sister A. C. Buchwalter. Our quarterly collection was held March 22, at which time Bro. M. M. Brubaker, presided. The present Missioonry Committee, Sisters Letha Holmes, Edna Gerber and Miriam Fetter, were appointed to serve until November of this year. Bro. S. S. Shoemaker has been secured for a series of meetings, to be held the latter part of May or first of June. The present church correspondent was retained for the year. Bro. David Shank, who has been our janitor for a number of years, was reappointed to adjoining congregation. For the present Bro. A. C. Buchwalter is operating the services. Our Sunday-school is rapidly regaioing its normal attendance since the epidemic of the winter has seemingly passed. Although a number of members have moved away during the year, we are more than gratified to report that it has not proveo fatal to any.—Miriam Hoff Fetter, R. D. 2, Wooster, Ohio, March 10.

OREGON

Portland church met in quarterly council on Wednesday evening, March 5, with Eld. G. C. Carl presiding. Two letters of membership were granted. The church decided to advance the church premises by planting shrubbery and trees. Many good suggestions were offered for the betterment of the Sunday-school, and stimulating missionary interest. Our love feast will be held on the evening of May 10. Another important work of the meeting was the liquidation of our church debt. Our house of worship is now free from all encumbrance. The meeting was well attended, and the spirit manifested was good.—Grace W. Hewitt, 1181 Bortwick Street, Portland, Oregon, March 6.

PENNSYLVANIA

Akron church held her spring council on Saturday, March 8, at 1 o'clock. The following officers were elected: Sunday-school superintendent, Eld. David Snader, Sr.; Christian Workers' superintendent, Geo. B Hoff; missionary solicitor, A. F. Longenecker; delegates to District Meeting, David H. Snader, Jr., and Susie Hackman. Our love feast will be held May 17, at 6 P. M. Our Sunday-school evening to begin May 3, in charge of Eld. H. B. Yoder, of Lancaster. A Missionary Meeting will be held on Sunday afternoon, May 11.—David H. Snader, Akron, Pa., March 10.

Annville.—Our church met in council March 4, with Eld. A. B. Gingrich in charge. Eld. J. H. Longenecker and Eld. I. W. Taylor were also with us. Four letters of membership were granted. Bro. Simon Bucher was elected to the ministry, and Brethren Harry B. Longenecker and Aaron Z. Gingrich were elected to the deacon's office. They, with their wives, were installed. Eld. A. B. Gingrich was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, with Eld. A. O. Bucher as alternate. Brethren C. H. Winters and H. H. Gingrich were elected delegates to District Meeting, with H. B. Hollinger and Simon G. Bucher, alternates. An offering of $175 has been taken by our Sunday-School for Armenian-Syrian Relief. We have the promise of Bro. S. G. Meyer, to begin a series of meetings in Annville March 9. These meetings were postponed from a previous date on account of influenza. We decided to hold our love feast April 26 and 27, at 10 A. M.—Fannie Kreider, R. O. 4, Lebanon, Pa., March 7.

Bethacy church has just closed a series of revival meetings, conducted by Bro. M. J. Brougher, of Greensburg, Pa. During his stay many souls have been led to accept Christ. Bro. Brougher, accompanied by our pastor, Bro. C. G. Hess, visited 125 homes, which included the homes of many of our members and also the homes of kind friends. He was given a hearty welcome by all. During the revival he held seventeen meetings, which included three services on Sunday (morning, afternoon and evening). His thrilling sermons were food for the soul and those who knew not God were touched by his wonderful messages. He also conducted an old-time service, like those held in the early days of the church, on Sunday, March 2. He also gave some very interesting sermons to the Sunday-school, during which quite a number of scholars gave their lives to Christ. There were forty-two confessions during the services. Seventeen of those who came forward are heads of families. Many have already been taken into the church by baptism, and others are to follow.—Margaret E. Rogers, 1833 E. Ontario Street, Philadelphia, Pa., March 10.

Clear.—The church met in regular council on Friday evening, March 7, at 7 o'clock. Ministers present were E. E. Dove and Taylor Oively. Eld. Oively presided. Brethren W. J. B. Claar and Taylor..Oively were elected delegates to District Meeting. Our spring love feast will be held on Saturday, March 29, at 6 P. M., followed by Easter services on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. A general invitation to these services is extended to all, especially the ministry. All are welcome.—E. J. Claar, Klahr, Pa., March 10.

Conestoga church met in council March 8, at the Bareville house, with Eld. S. H. Hertzler presiding. One letter of membership was granted. Our love feast will be held May 27 and 28, at 1:30 P. M., at the Bareville house. We decided to support a missionary on the foreign field. Delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. O. S. Myer. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren O. S. Myer, Hershey Groff and S. W. Martio. A few weeks previous an offering of $144 was lifted for Armenian-Syrian Belief.—Mabel A. Myer, New Holland, Pa., March 10.

East Fairview.—Our church met in council March 4, with Eld. S. B. Fahnestock presiding. Sixteen letters were granted to members moving to other congregations. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Eld. S. B. Fahnestock; Bro. J. B. Brubaker, alternate. Our delegates to District Meeting are Bro. J. B. Brubaker and the writer, with Brethren Jerome S. Long and John K. Miller as alternates. The writer was reelected Sunday-school superintendent. Our missionary solicitors reported $88.15 as having been received. The church decided to use half for home missions and the rest for foreign missions. Six of our converts from our revival have been baptised and one reclaimed. Our love feast will be held May 17 and 18. Bro. George Weaver gave us a talk on the "Five-Year Forward Movement," urged by the General Mission Board, and we are trying to do our part in helping this work.—H. A. Merkey, Manheim, Pa., March 10.

Elizabethtown.—Our congregation met in council Feb. 27, with Eld. H. H. Hertzler presiding. Very interesting reports of the past year, by the home department and Sunday-school superintendent, were received and unanimously approved. The offering for the India famine sufferers, reported Feb. 22, has since then been increased to $64.57. Brethren S. H. Hertzler and H. K. Ober were appointed to visit the next Annual Meeting, and Brethren J. H. Kiline, J. G. Myer, Ralph Schlosser and H. H. Nye at District Meeting. Sunday evening, March 2, Bro. Jesse Carper, of Palmyra, Pa., opened a series of meetings for us. His messages are delivered with great power, and are full, large and appreciative audiences. Eight Sunday-school scholars decided to "walk and talk with God."—S. P. Eegle, Elizabethtown, Pa., March 10.

Falling Spring.—March 1 we met in regular council. Eld. O. A. Foust was with us and opened the meeting, after which our elder, Bro. C. E. Oellig, presided. The committees, appointed at our fall council, reported. A committee of Sister Barbara Hershey was called to secure the privilege of building a concrete dam at Browo's Mill for baptizing. The dam is to be built in such a way that it can be drained and all the water removed before baptism. It was left in the hands of the trustees to lay concrete walks at the Shody Grove church this spring. Arraogements were made to have Bro. Flory, of Bethany Bible School, spend several weeks in the congregation during the summer, to teach and preach for us for a week or two at one or more of the churches. We unanimously retained Bro. Oellig as our elder for another year. Letters of membership were granted to eleven members. We elected Sister Barbara Hershey as our delegate to Annual Meeting. We decided to hold our spring love feast at the Hade meetinghouse May 17 and 18, to begin at 10 A. M. Bro. Daoiel S. Flohr, one of our ministers, wishes to announce that he has changed his address from R. F. D. 2, Chambersburg, Pa., to R. D. 10, Chambersburg, Pa.—H. N. M. Gearhart, Shady Grove, Pa., March 7.

First Church (Philadelphia).—Instead of our midweek prayer meeting for Jan. 1, we observed New Year's evening as a watch night service. Bible study on Wednesday evening, Jan. 8, was continued during the month of Jaouary. Jao. 4 his subject was "Prayer," Jan. 11, "Keys to the New Testamaut," Jan. 18, "Keys to the Old Testament," Jan. 25 Bro. Wm. H. Schnell, a missionary to Africa, was at New York City, gave a talk on her work. At our midweek prayer meeting, Jan. 15, Bro. W. E. Stroek gave a talk on "Grace." On Jao. 27 our church met in council with our elder, Bro. C. F. McKee, presiding. Bro. T. J. Sharkey was elected to the ministry. Our elder, assisted by Eld. L. R. Holsinger, officiated. Bro. Fretz is superintendent of the Christiao Workers' Unioo, 1511 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.—Mrs. Wm. H. B. Schnell, 1906 N. Park Aveoue, Philadelphia, Pa., March 8.

Indiana.—Bro. O. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Somerset Co., Pa., Secretary of the Mission Board of the Western District of Pennsylvania, came to Indiana the latter part of January, to look up members, and to determine if it would be advisable to start a mission at this place. Finding about twenty-five members of the Church of the Brethren and ten Progressive members who have decided to work with us, he called a meeting to be held on March 2, at the home of Brother and Sister W. H. Oavis, 1218 Philadelphia Street, Indiana, Pa., where plans were made to secure a suitable place for church and Sunday-school. A committee consisting of Brethren J. W. Miller, W. H. Oavis and Mr. McMillen, was appointed. A "Messenger" correspondent was also chosen. We are starting weekly cottage prayer meetings. Bro. Clapper preached for us on the evening of March 2, in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium church. He expects to be with us again in four weeks.—Lisle Oavis, 1218 Philadelphia Street, Indiaoa, Pa., March 5.

Juniata Park.—Accordiog to arrangements, Eld. C. O. Beery, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, began a revival meeting on Feb. 26, and continued each evening until Feb. 9, closing with a love feast service. The attendance throughout was very good. Much spirituality prevailed at the services. Six have been received and seven were baptized. Brethren, while among us, made many friends, and did a work that will not soon be forgotten. Several applicaots are awaiting baptism. From here Bro. Beery weot to the Riggels Gap church, to continue that part of the Juniata congregation for a few weeks more miles from the Juniata Park church. He opened revival services in this place on the evening of Feb. 10, continuing each evening until Feb. 16, closing with a love feast. This is in a country district. The roads were in bad coodition a good part of the time, but the attendaoce was splendid. We had a full house. Seven were baptised, with a number still awaiting baptism.—J. W. Wilt, 1210 Broadway, Juniata Park, March 10.

Mountville church met in council March 5, at the Mountville house, our elder, Bro. I. N. Musser, presiding. A number of certificates were granted. The missionary solicitors reported a collection of $58.69. Bro. Edw. Weber was elected on the Mission Board Committee. Bro. I. N. Musser was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Harry C. Neff, alternate, and Brethren I. N. Musser and Harry C. Neff, delegates to District Meeting, with Brethren Edw. Weber, alternate. A series of meetings at the Maoor house, beginning May 18. Bro. W. G. Group, of East Berlin, has promised to be with us. Our love feast will be held May 20 and 21, at 1 P. M., at the Mountville house.—Annie L. Neff, R. O. 1, Lancaster, Pa., March 11.

Mt. Pleasant.—Concerning an incident, referred to in a recent issue of the "Messenger," I would say: Only four of the older members are left at the Mt. Joy church, that witnessed the incident of the dove coming into the house, and lighting on the Bible while Bro. Stoner was preaching. He gently pushed the dove off the Bible and went on with his sermon. Not only on that occasion, but at all other a vote on the location and decided to accept the offer of the United States Land Company and to build the church in the town of Chowchilla. Trustees were also elected. With this much settled, we are ready to proceed with the work of building soon. We are on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad; also the State highway. Any of our members, traveling through the town, will find a welcome and an invitation to stop and worship with us. We are anxious to have more of our members, who are looking towards California, to locate here, and to help us gather the sheaves for the Master. Three letters of membership have been granted since our last report.

Chowchilla, Calif., March 4. Mrs. H. J. McDaniel.

times Bro. Weimer's sermons were good. He was liked by everybody. There was no invitation given, therefore none to be baptised. —A. W. Stahl, R. D. 4, Mt. Pleasant, Pa., March 6.

Pleasant Ridge.—Feb. 22 Bro. M. R. Flohr, of Shippensburg, Pa., began preaching for us. He preached eighteen inspiring sermons. While there were no additions, the church feels stronger. We have decided to hold our spring council April 5, to elect delegates to the District Meeting to be held in the Berkley congregation, Vancleeville bonse.—Irvin W. Garland, R. D. 3, Needmore, Pa., March 10.

Rockton.—March 23 the Local Missionary Committee will have charge of the Christian Workers' hour. The Friendship Bible Class is actively engaged in some very practical home mission work, helping a widow and family,—the latter having been taken by influenza. With an active president, Bro. Ralph J. Smith, ably assisted ena. With an active president, Bro. Ralph J. Smith, ably assisted by the other officers and members of the class, the church expects much good to result through the workings of this Bible Class. The church and community look forward to the coming of Bro. H. A. Brubaker, of Akron, Ohio, in the hope of a refreshing revival from the Lord. It is expected that a leader of song, from the Akron church, will also be with us to help in these meetings a success. —J. B. Hollopeter, Rockton, Pa., March 10.

Rouzerville church met in prayer services several evenings this week, to prepare for the approaching series of meetings, to begin March 9, which will be conducted by Bro. John C. Zug, Palmyra, Pa.—Mrs. Dollie Brown, Rouzerville, Pa., March 3.

Rummel.—Our Sunday-school offering for the Syrian and Armenian Relief Fund amounted to $150. We sent a barrel of clothing and $13.00 in money to the Hastings Street mission in Chicago. Our small Sunday-school classes sent the money to their missionary boxes (which amounted to $62) to the support of orphans in famine-stricken India. Our pastor leaves us March 24, to engage in a three weeks' meeting in the Greenburg church. We have at least will be held meeting in the Greenburg church. We have at least will be held June 1, at 6 o'clock.—Mrs. J. E. Murphy, Rummel, Pa., March 11.

Tulpehocken.—On Tuesday evening, March 4, the first series of meetings for the prescot year came to a close. It was held in the Richland house. Bro. Nathan Martin, of Elizabethtown, was in charge. Six came out on the Lord's side. On Sunday evening, March 9, Bro. Harrison Gipe, of Palmyra, Pa., commenced another series in the Myerstown house, to continue for possibly two weeks. Both these meetings had been appointed to be held sooner, but on account of influenza were postponed. On Saturday, March 8, our regular spring council was held in the Richland house, Eld. John Herr presiding. Five certificates were granted. Eld. Wm. H. Oberholtzer was elected to represent our congregation at Annual Meeting, with Bro. J. L. Royer as alternate. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Benjamin Zug, Wm. Dubble and Charles Ziegler, with Brethren J. F. King, Michael Kurtz and Emanuel Balsbaugh, alternates. May 13 and 14 was selected as the date of our love feast at the Heidelberg house, to begin at 10 A. M. At this council it was decided to divide our congregation into two parts. A committee was appointed to select a dividing line, their plan to be presented at our next council. For the present, however, our services will be conducted as before. The new organizations are not to be formed until after the August council. Several certificates of members moving into our church were received since my last report.—H. F. King, R. D. 1, Lebanon, Pa., March 6.

VIRGINIA

Cloverdale congregation met in council March 1, with Bro. E. C. Crumpacker presiding. Our delegates to Annual Meeting are Bro. C. W. Kinzie and wife. Delegates to District Meeting, Brethren W. E. Murray, R. E. Layman and R. G. Layman. We much enjoyed the joint Christian Workers' Meeting, held at this place Feb. 23. The speakers gave us very impressive thoughts along the line of social and health reform. Eld. D. D. Brower is to commence a series of meetings at this place March 9. We will have our love feast at the close of the meetings.—Mrs. E. L. Showalter, R. D. 1, Roanoke, Va., March 7.

Elk Run church met in council March 8, our elder, Bro. W. H. Ziegler, presiding. Two letters were granted. Bro. Ziegler was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. The District Meeting will be held at the Elk Run church May 1 and 2. Elders' Meeting, April 30, at 2 P. M. There will be a meeting of the Sisters' Aid Society May 1. Our delegates are W. C. Varner and D. H. Smith. All visitors who came to Staunton will please notify Bro. S. L. Huffman, Churchville, Va., at once. Those who wish to be met at Mt. Solon, will notify Bro. C. W. Zimmerman. No parties will be met later than April 30.—C. H. Smith, Mt. Solon, Va., March 9.

Lebanon church met in council March 1, with Eld. S. D. Miller presiding. Not being permitted, on account of influenza, to hold our council at the close of the year, the business for that meeting was deferred until this council, necessarily making much business to be disposed of. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. S. D. Miller; alternate, Bro. J. D. Zigler. Delegates to District Meeting, Brethren D. T. Cline and J. D. Zigler. Alternates, Brethren C. C. Wine and S. I. Cline. Bro. E. C. Wine was reëlected Sunday-school superintendent. Bro. F. J. Wenger was authorized to secure a minister for our series of meetings in August. A committee was appointed to devise plans and ascertain the cost of additional Sunday-school rooms. It was decided to get "Kingdom Songs No. 2" for our church. One paper was sent to Annual Meeting. Our love feast will be held Aug. 23.—Lilla B. Cline, Mt. Sidney, Va., March 3.

Midland church met in council March 1, with Eld. M. G. Early presiding. The membership was well represented, and much business was transacted. Several letters of membership were granted, among them being a letter to Bro. David Messick and wife, who have moved near Winchester, Va., leaving one less minister in the congregation. Bro. J. A. Hinegardner was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting and Brethren J. M. Kline and G. W. Beahm as delegates to District Meeting. J. W. Miller has been secured as evangelist for Midland, the meetings to be held during the latter part of August. Bro. A. C. Miller will begin a series of meetings at Mt. Hermon about Aug. 1. We decided to hold our love feast May 31 at 4 P. M. The writer was elected "Messenger" correspondent. Sister Densie Hollinger, of Hebron Seminary, is conducting a Bible Class at the Midland church every Sunday night.—Mrs. Leila Andes, Bealton, Va., March 4.

Pleasant Valley (Southern District).—Feb. 2 and 3 Bro. Virgil C. Pinnell was with us and delivered six helpful lectures on Sunday-school work. We feel much benefited. During the time an offering of $10 was taken for Sunday-school work. An offering of $43.85 was given by our Sunday-school for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Livie A. Delaney, R. D. 3, Floyd, Va., Feb. 10.

Red Oak Grove church met in council March 8, with Bro. Charlie Williams presiding. On account of sickness and bad weather not many members were present. As our presiding elder, Bro. W. H. Naff, died, we decided to elect another elder on the second Saturday in May. We met for preaching services on Sunday at 11 o'clock. Bro. Asa Bowman preached for us. We are expecting Bro. Virgil C. Finnell to lecture on Sunday-school work March 14.—Sarah Ella Bowman, Floyd, Va., March 9.

WEST VIRGINIA

Pleasant Valley.—The faithful little Sunday-school of Pleasant Valley, R. D. 1, Auburn, W. Va., is progressing nicely, with but a few older members to lead the way. We are all young people, but love to make the work here a success. Nearly everybody has had influenza, but we hope, ere long, to enter more vigorously upon the great work set before us. Only two of our dear Sunday-school boys were in military service. Both have returned home and are doing their best. We are having preaching on the second and fourth Sundays of each month by Bro. Henry Saunders, who is residing in our congregation. With Bro. Beecher Branner as superintendent of our Sunday-school we have tried to do what we can as God's children.—Mary Deane, Auburn, W. Va., March 6.

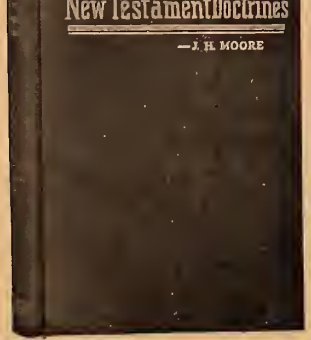
5993 CONVERTS BAPTIZED IN 1918
ARE YOU CONSERVING THESE GAINS?

NEW TESTAMENT DOCTRINES, by Elder J. H. Moore, gives a brief and interesting treatment of all New Testament Doctrines. Churches will find it an excellent book to put into the hands of all who have recently been added to the church.



WHY USE THE NEW TESTAMENT DOCTRINES---It is not enough to stop with baptism---converts should be taught "to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

The New Testament Doctrines treats over 100 subjects in such brief and inviting ways that the book is sure to be read.

The church needs growing members who "press on unto perfection." A copy of The New Testament Doctrines in the hands of every young Christian will prove a long step in this direction.

Churches have used less helpful books with splendid success. Why not use New Testament Doctrines?

It is a handsome, clearly printed, cloth bound book, 75 cents, postpaid.

If you have just closed a revival, if you are in the midst of one, or if you are planning a series of meetings, just remember that a copy of New Testament Doctrines should be in the hands of every convert.

Why God Deals With Us Thus

A MAN wrote a book not long ago, and though it was a little one he put into it a number of interesting things. One of them was this: "The object of God's providential ordering of the world is the formation of personal character."

Now the man did not say how he found that out. Possibly he had been reading what Paul said about the function of the various offices in the church,—to make full-grown men, of the stature of Christ. He might have been so struck with that statement that he just concluded that the whole course of God's dealings with men would be consistent with it. Anyway, it sounds very much as if it might be true.

If so, wouldn't it explain a lot of things? Or, at least, where it did not explain, make it easy for us to be content?

What difference would it make, in that case, if some people do have bigger houses or finer automobiles than we? Does that give them any advantage over us in building character? Not the slightest.

And how marvelously that would enlarge the range of providential happenings in our lives! You know that some things come into the lives of all of us, so strange, so wonderful, so helpful,—well, it looks as if God must have had something to do with it. But if God's purpose for us is not so much to rescue us from perilous situations as to provide conditions favorable to the formation of Christian character,—why, just about everything that happens every day must be providential.

How to Answer Bible Critics

SOME Christians are much disturbed by attacks on the truth of the Bible. They feel that something prompt and definite should be done, in such cases. Somebody should rise up in defense of the dignity and veracity of the Sacred Record, and put the assailant where he belongs.

Such a course may be advisable sometimes. Silence, in some cases, might work to the injury of the cause. But a little experience with life has convinced us that these cases are few and far between.

Straightforward preaching of Scripture truth, reenforced by a lot of faithful Christian living, is the best defense of the Bible that has ever been devised. When destructive critics criticise and challenge and denounce, answer them by paying no attention to them and going right on with your own positive and constructive Christian program. For final convincingness no argument in behalf of the Bible will ever approach that of the practical effect of adherence to its principles.

Nehemiah's method of meeting the challenge of his enemies (Neh. 6: 3) is a good one. He was busy at a very important task. He had no time to stop to refute charges of disloyalty. He preferred to let his work tell its own story.

Just so, what the Bible needs to vindicate itself, before the common-sense judgment of mankind, is a chance to tell its own story in the lives of men. Practice will do more than proof to protect it from discredit.

The Church and the Gates of Hades

"And the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it."

You recall these wonderful words of Jesus about the church he planned to build. That he meant by them to pay a very high tribute to the strength of that institution is evident. But in what way? Just what did he mean?

Hades is commonly in the New Testament, like Sheol in the Old Testament, simply the region of the dead, with no moral or penal implications, the place of torment being denoted by a different word, Gehenna. In accordance with this, these words of Jesus have been explained to mean nothing more than that the church would never die, the point of the figure being that the gates of Hades would never need to open to admit the church. It would always be too much alive.

But one can hardly feel that this interpretation does justice to the phrase "prevail against." The odor of conflict about these words is too strong. Add to this the fact that Hades does, in a few instances, notably in the story of the rich man and Lazarus, unquestionably denote the abode of the incorrigibly wicked, and we have a fairly strong case for another explanation. On this view Hades stands for the mighty powers of evil with which the church is in conflict, and the passage proclaims the final victory of the church.

Now let us notice the most interesting point of all. Is this victory one of assault and conquest or one of defense only? Is it a successful resistance, a deadlock, or real, complete and overwhelming victory?

The answer is apparent as soon as you reflect a moment on the part played by "gates" in ancient warfare. These were not instruments of attack but were built for purposes of defense. That is, the walls were so built, and the gates were the necessary means of egress and entrance, and likely to be the most vulnerable points of assault for an attacking enemy. It is Hades, then, and not the church, which is on the defensive. The picture is not one of the church withstanding the assaults of her enemy, but one of the church herself taking the aggressive against "the gates of Hades" which, however long they may hold out, can not "prevail against" her. They must fall.

To be sure, we must not make too much of a single metaphor. The rock foundation of the church does insure her inviolability against all assaults. But she must do more than resist successfully. She must carry the war into the ramparts of the enemy. Sometimes she may have to "stand still and see the salvation of Jehovah." But this is exceptional and temporary. Her chief business is to "go forward." That is her business now. These are the days of the FORWARD MOVEMENT.

One of God's Ways of Giving

THE gifts of God are infinite in number and diverse in kind. Some of them come to us without condition. Many of them are like his gift of Canaan to Israel. "Arise, go over this Jordan," he said to Joshua, "thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them."

But there was much to do before they got the gift. God gave them Canaan by giving them the opportunity to take it. He gave them the right to it and put the necessary means into their hands.

He is giving you and me a stalwart Christian character and great intimacy of fellowship with him in the same way. The chance is ours. The agencies and instruments are ours. The result is guaranteed, if we will use them.

He is giving his people the Canaan of unevangelized humanity. We have the title and the equipment, for the enterprise is backed by all the hosts of heaven. But the possession will not be ours, unless we take it.

Adorning the Body with Gold

A DEAR good brother, living in the Far East, and deeply interested in the church, writes concerning the unscriptural custom, now somewhat prevalent among our membership, of adorning the body with gold, thus violating the twice-given apostolic injunction against such a practice.

He says,—after referring to some articles in the MESSENGER on this subject,—"I am so thoroughly with you in this matter, and have had so much comfort in reading your occasional articles on the subject, that now I come to you. . . . I do not try to magnify things which are,—or may be,—in a minor relation, but I do confess that the disregard of the two apostolic injunctions on this subject,—adorning the body with gold,—by those whom I love, has been a source of unhappiness to me for thirty years, and is so increasing in evidence in the church, and among the teachers of our people,—the ministers and leaders of thought are so largely slipping over on the other side,—that I despair of ever seeing the old-time position of the church securely occupied again. The heads of many of our schools and the pastors of our large churches, to my certain knowledge, make light of it, and so it establishes itself more and more firmly." The brother also refers to the custom of performing the marriage ceremony with a gold ring, and this even by some of our ministers.

Recently an editorial appeared in these columns on the subject of setting aside the decisions of our Annual Conference. It was strongly held that we ought to carry out such decisions, otherwise it is useless to spend money to hold Conferences. It is the writer's settled conviction that when our Conferences, in which our local congregations are fully and fairly represented, pass decisions, we should not set them aside, if they do not happen to suit us individually. If we persist in setting them aside, there is but one conclusion inevitable,—it will destroy our present most excellent form of church government. Instead of a united body in Christ, we will become congregationalists,—every congregation doing as seemeth good in its own sight.

At this point a most important question arises: If we set the plain, simple apostolic injunction, given under the direction of the Holy Ghost, aside, how can we hope to have the decisions of Conference respected and carried out? Is it a reasonable conclusion that if we, who profess to obey that form of teaching to which we have been delivered,—adorn our bodies with gold and costly array, contrary to divine teaching,—we will keep the decisions of our national Conferences? When you adorn your body with gold, you are trampling on the law of God. The Englishman says that he that tramples on English law, tramples on England, and it may be said: "He that tramples on God's law, tramples on God."

The Holy Ghost inspired Paul to give this plain, simple injunction: "In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works" (1 Tim. 2: 9-10).

The Apostle Peter was also instructed, by the Holy Spirit, to emphasize what Paul said, and he gives it in simple yet strong language: "Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price" (1 Peter 3: 3-4). If we set aside these plain commands of the inspired apostles, the divine teaching of God, how can we expect our people to keep the counsel and advice of our Conferences?

At the Conference at Hagerstown, Md., in 1891,—of the Standing Committee of which the writer was a member,—the subject of the wearing of gold was discussed at length. A query, asking that it be forbidden, was before the Committee. Bro. R. H. Miller, one of our strongest leaders, took the position, and others stood with him, that, as there are in the Gospel plain commandments against the wearing of gold, we needed nothing more. The Gospel is all-sufficient. This view prevailed. It was held that you might as well pass a query maintaining that we must wash feet, as to pass one that we must not adorn the body with gold. The first is a command given by Jesus to be obeyed by his children. The second is a command given by the Holy Ghost, telling us not to do certain things. The one is just as binding as the other.

If you want to obey the Gospel, lay off your adornment of gold, costly array and immodest apparel, and adorn your soul with a meek and quiet spirit, which is of great price in the sight of God. D. L. M.

Babies in Church

THE few articles, recently appearing in the MESSENGER, about taking babies to church, forcibly reminded us of some observations and experiences in the years gone by.

As a rule, our people, especially in the rural sections, are in the habit of taking their children to church, and in this way keep them in close touch with the church and her interests. At first it may not be to the liking of babies to be disturbed and even made nervous by the singing and preaching, but they soon become accustomed to the conditions, and in time think as much of going to church and Sunday-school as do their parents. As boys and girls, young men and young women, the public religious gatherings become an essential part of their lives. It is all because they have been brought up that way. While church-going with them may become a mere habit, still it is a splendid habit, at any rate. It places them where the Lord can get in touch with each one, as he passes by.

Taking the right view of the custom, we are never going to be able to estimate the value of taking the babies to church. It is giving them a start and training along right lines. "Bring up the child in the way he should go," is the key-note in character forming. Get the boys and girls started to church and Sunday-school, and you have them headed in the right direction. You have them looking towards the Kingdom.

Considering the value of this kind of training, it will be well, for all those interested in the saving of the children of the Brotherhood, to make it as easy and encouraging as possible for mothers to take their babies to church, and, at the same time, enjoy the services. There are various ways of doing this, and it is with some of the methods that this article is meant to deal.

To start with, we are not in favor of creating, for the Church of the Brethren, a public consecration service for the small children of members. A movement of this sort would simply pave the way for child communion and infant baptism. All children born into the world belong, by virtue of the atonement, to the Kingdom of God, and it is the duty of the parents, as well as the church, to see to it that the little ones are not led astray. Their consecration service comes when they are sufficiently matured to apply for baptism and the layiog on of hands. It is the start that they get in the church-going habit that leads up to this and the further development in the Christian character. Hence, the importance of making it easy and practicable for mothers to give their babies the early church-going start they should have.

More than forty years ago, when in charge of the church in Lanark, Ill., it was no unusual thing to have a half dozen babies in church. Those were days when mothers took a pride in bringing their babies to church, and all of them received more or less congratulations when the little ones were extra good during the service. But now and then a baby attempted to assert its rights to be heard in the public assembly, even when everybody wanted it to be quiet. This, of course, would lead to the turning of heads, to the casting of side-glances, as well as to the embarrassment of the mother.

After studying the situation a few months, we decided to say something that would prove helpful to the mothers, as well as to the congregation. Watching for a time when all the babies were good, and the mothers looked pleased, we gave a little encouraging talk about babies in church, being careful to complete this part of the talk before there was any demonstration upon the part of the little fellows. We suggested that those in attendance do their part in making it as easy as possible for mothers in church. To do this we told the people that whenever a mother entered the church with her child, they should at once make room for her at the end of the seat, next to the aisle. Should her child, at any time, make a disturbance it would then be an easy matter for the mother with the crying babe to pass out to the rest-room for a few minutes. We also added, that, since the fathers had a full half interest in the babies, we did not see why they could not occupy seats by the side of their wives and share the responsibility of taking care of the children. After that it was interesting to see the mothers and the babies well lined up in the comfortable corners of the seats, next to the aisle. Of course, the change deprived some of the saints of their cozy corners, but it made it all the better for the mothers, the babes and the audience in general.

Another time we found that the pitcher of water on the desk for the benefit of the minister (an old custom) proved very tempting to the little tots, who grew the more thirsty every time they saw the preacher take a drink. Parents and children coming to the front to satisfy the thirst of little ones, proved to be an annoyance for the preacher as well as for the audience. Finally, we told the janitor to hide the pitcher and the glass, and we would see if the preachers could not set a better example for the children. There were no more thirsty children in church.

Much depends upon home training. Children that are permitted to eat every hour or two in their homes, will want something to eat in church. One child eating will cause every child in meeting to crave something to eat. The habit is annoying in any service, is far from first-class church ethics, and makes a whole lot of extra work for the janitor. "But," says some one, "it makes less disturbance for the child to eat during services than to cry because he is hungry." This, of course, is true, but why not give the child a bit of home training on good church manners? Most children can be made to understand that it is not nice to eat in church. Most mothers train their children that way, and the others could if they would only think so.

At any rate, take the babies to church, and let all the sensible people do their utmost to avoid making the situation embarrassing for the mothers. If those who have no children of their own, can not possess their souls in patience if a baby cries now and then,—and most of them can not,—then let them pass their hands deep down in their pockets and help the church to raise money enough to provide a cozy rest-room where the mother can retire when the baby disturbs the solemnity of the service. If all things work together for the good of those who love the Lord, we do not see why they may not be made to work enough to help the mothers a bit,—yes, even help them to a rest-room, if need be.

Balaam and His Donkey

I WONDER how recently you have read this story in chapters 22, 23 and 24 of Numbers. It certainly is one of the interesting stories of the Pentateuch. I told it to my children at family worship, the other morning, and they listened with breathless interest. Their father, too, had first of all been thoroughly interested in the story anew from his morning devotion. Long ago the story had made its first impression, but it is one of the striking stories of the Bible ever new, because of the large, universal truth at the heart of it, which is illustrated and exemplified so graphically in the story.

Here is a man who has unusual power as a prophet or seer of the true God. He has a reputation far and wide for this power. He is, in a sense, faithful and true to God, because he says repeatedly: "What the Lord himself shall command me, that must I speak."

But, under the force of the royal temptation, he yields in part to that which is wrong. God finally overrules it for good, but the seer almost loses his life in the attempt.

When the invitation comes from the king to the seer to come and curse the people of Israel, the prophet obediently goes at once to commune with his God. God tells him not to go (22: 12). Balaam is faithful in reporting God's message, and the messengers go back to the king.

Later the messengers come back with a new plea, and under these insistings of a renewed attack, Balaam begins to yield. Again he goes and asks God whether or not he shall go with them. God had already told him that he should not go, that he should not curse God's people because they are blessed; but Balaam, under the pressure of the temptation, disregards this command of the Lord. Then the Lord makes the best of what remains, and tells the man to go. But it is clearly God's second choice for Balaam, —made necessary because Balaam is not willing to live up to the highest ideal and to take the upper road which God had previously pointed out to him. This is one of a number of incidents in the Bible which indicate that when God can not have his first, best will, he will sometimes yield to our insistence and take second best,—but it is always at a terrible price to the people who are not willing to live up to their highest light.

It is this thought that is really at the bottom of the coming of the angel with the drawn sword, which caused the donkey first to run out of the way into the field, then to crush the man's foot against the wall, and finally to lie down in the way.

Through the providential interference of the Lord, it is made known to Balaam that he would have lost his life if the donkey had not been wiser than he.

Balaam, then, when he discovered his mistake, offered to go back and be obedient to God's first command. But it was too late now. God told him to go on, and so he had to face the difficulties of the future, which loomed up so alarmingly, until God overruled them for good.

And how often we must do the same sort of thing! How often do we disregard the gentle instruction and small whisperings of the Spirit of God, brushing them aside! And how we pile up for ourselves difficulties and burdens, which would not have been our lot, had we been willing more faithfully to listen to the first, best will of our Loving Heavenly Father!

Even so, of course, in his infinite love, our Heavenly Father does just what earthly parents do. He does not, once for all, abandon his children to destruction, but disciplines them as is necessary, and deals with them yet in love, overruling for the best and making the best of what remains. And yet, what a sad story that we do not love and trust our Heavenly Father sufficiently that he may deal with us as with sons, rather than discipline us in this way through sorrow and trouble.

A Winter Morning

BY JULIA GRAYDON

The sun peers over the hills so white,
And shines in the valley below,
And sheds far and wide its golden light,
On the top of the new fallen snow.

Clear icicles hang from the limbs of the trees,
Sparkling like diamonds bright,
And shake to and fro, when swayed by the breeze,
Making a glorious sight.

The sky overhead is a beautiful blue,
Its color reflects in the lake,
Far over the hills is a wonderful view
Oh! see the bright morning awake.

Church History and Polity

BY CARMAN COVER JOHNSON,

III. The Pastor

HE is the new factor in the scheme of our church work. There may be three hundred ministers or elders of the church who are known as pastors, on some sort of definite or indefinite arrangement, but a quarter century ago there were only three in the entire Brotherhood. It would be a very intimate paragraph, if even the names of the first twenty pastors of the Brotherhood,—practically all of whom are now living,—should be set down by me; and the story of these early beginnings should really be told, seeing that it is apparently not even guessed at by some of our newest pastors. But we'll not indulge in history any more for the present.

What I really want to get at is vital right now. Even if the pastor is an elder, should this in itself argue that he should also be the presiding elder of his congregation? Since the functions of the pastor and of the elder are so different in quality or nature, might it not be better always to have the elder in one person and the pastor in another? If not, then surely the brother who is both pastor and elder must be very well balanced in his priestly, advisory, admonitory and pulpit abilities on the one hand, and his "housekeeping" and administrative abilities on the other hand; or else either the one phase of his work or the other phase suffers.

I am wondering not a little about this matter just now, as it seems to me I see not only the partial but the total eclipse of the eldership coming on. I am not speaking of the fact that the typical ancient and worthy "fathers of the church" are getting to be scarcer in number; though no matter what may have been their tendencies toward certain severities betimes, they will forever remain in my admiration. What concerns me now is the passing of a phase of authority that may have been overdone in certain directions to be succeeded by something or nothing that is more disconcerting because it is more unripe and uncertain.

In short, the Church of the Brethren became a church, and not just a movement, just because Alexander Mack differed with Hochmann on the one point of organization and authority,—Hochmann seeing no occasion for any "authority." But even if, as some of our so-called most liberal brethren feel, the elder did develop too much of the autocracy of the "bishop," yet we should not now passively permit the elder to slip out of our polity just because the pastor is coming in. If the pastor is superior to, or indifferent to, the elder, even to himself as elder, and we just allow matters to drift so,—I, for one, as a confessed liberal in the church, frankly admit that I see no guarantees for really worth-while and wholesome discipline and congregational administration.

I am for the pastor as a pastor; and I do trust that within a very few years every congregation will be provided with a good one. Worship is still, and forever should remain, the loadstar of the church,—evangelism next, preaching next, and personal spiritual guidance next. These are distinctively pastoral functions, and until recently they all were at a comparatively low ebb in our churches. My previous parenthetical remarks concerning the relations of pastor and elder, were not intended as a reflection upon the pastor as such, nor even as a defense of the elder as such, but as a wedge driven in at a joint where real and natural and well-directed cleavage or definition of function should occur. We must define the field of the pastor, now that he is coming on so rapidly, both for his sake, the elder's sake, the sake of the other minister, and the sake of the church. We must work out some ideals in pastoral ethics, covering matters of invitations to try out before the congregation,—trial sermons, ministerial committees, offers, acceptances, tenure of office, reelection, what administrative duties are imposed and what retained by the official board, or by the elder, or by the congregation, and relationships to adjoining congregations.

Is all of this merely to go by caprice, or may we reasonably hope to avoid a "sea of trouble" by taking these matters up frankly? There is no sound of alarm intended herein, but there is at least the suggestion of processes at work. It would seem to be the part of wisdom to make our pastoral policy, rather than to permit it to make itself and by so doing unmake historically and spiritually vital phases of policy hitherto recognized as safe. Up to date, as a matter of fact, there can not be said to be any denominational policy of the Brethren, touching the office of pastor. He is in the Scriptures, however, and in some of our churches too—for all of which we rejoice.

The Abrahamic Covenant

BY E. B. HOFF

In Four Parts.—Part Three

Israel in Contrast to Her Contemporaries.—In reading the annals of history and making a fair comparison between the progeny of Abraham and the contemporaneous peoples of his day, we notice that Israel, the Abrahamic descendants, though far from being perfect, were yet far in advance of any nation in the world in moral integrity and genuine, religious devotion. The promise, as we saw in the earlier part of this chapter, contains two distinct parts: A national hope, and an international hope. The first part of this promise,—that which is merely national,—was being realized day by day in the development of the people from the small nucleus of the tribe of Abraham, wandering from place to place in nomadic life, until finally the people became settled as a strong nation in the Promised Land. It would have been even more fully realized, however, if all his descendants, or even a larger per cent of them, had been as faithful as their progenitor was. They frequently turned away from the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the high ideals of devotion and moral integrity he expected of them, and the strong promises he gave to them, to the current, idolatrous religions of the world. On this account, their blessings were often turned to curses, and instead of prosperity, they had adversity. The historical records of Israel are full of examples of this fact. We need but read of their wanderings in the wilderness, or their afflictions, as recorded in the Book of Judges, or their final captivity, in the lands of Assyria and Babylonia, to recognize this fact.

Isaiah's Lamentation.—Isaiah, the prophet, in pleading with Judah for loyalty, sadly laments that the people have not so lived as more fully to realize the promise God had given to Abraham. He says: "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and they that are escaped of the house of Jacob, shall no more again lean upon him that smote them, but shall lean upon Jehovah, the Holy One of Israel, in truth. A remnant shall return, even the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God. For though thy people, Israel, be as the sand of the sea, only a remnant of them shall return: a destruction is determined, overflowing with righteousness" (Isa. 10: 20-22). In the face of his lament, there is a hope,—a hope not so much in an outward national sense, as it is in the remnant of faithful ones that yet remain. Again he says: "Thus saith Jehovah, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: I am Jehovah thy God, who teacheth thee to profit, who leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go. Oh that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea: thy seed also had been as the sand, and the offspring of thy bowels like the grains thereof; his name would not be cut off nor destroyed from before me" (Isa. 48: 17-19).

Strong Exhortation of the Prophets.—Isaiah, Jeremiah, Hosea, and a number of other prophets, looked far beyond all the calamities that befell God's people, to a complete realization of the promise God made to Abraham. They could not expect it from a national sense, because the nation had proven itself unworthy of such a blessing. Their only hope lay in a faithful remnant of this great commonwealth of Israel, and they lent their efforts largely to keeping this remnant faithful. To this end Isaiah earnestly exhorts: "Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek Jehovah: look unto the rock whence ye were hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye were digged. Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you; for when he was but one I called him, and made him many. For Jehovah hath comforted Zion; he hath comforted all her waste places, and hath made her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of Jehovah; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody" (Isa. 51: 1-3).

Hosea, too, turning away from Israel, mangled and hopeless in sin, looks far out into the ages for a realization of the Abrahamic promise. He says: "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which can not be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass that, in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God. And the children of Israel shall be gathered together, and they shall appoint themselves one head, and shall go up from the land; for great shall be the day of Jezreel" (Hosea 1: 10, 11). Paul, in writing to the Christians at Rome, quotes this text and applies its fulfillment to the ingathering of Gentiles into the Christian church. In other words, he says that Christianity is enlarging the nucleus of the remnant of Israel in the fulfillment of the Abrahamic promise (cf. Rom. 9: 25, 26). Jeremiah likewise looks forward from the disappointment and confusion of his own age, and says: "As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me" (Jer. 33: 22).

Democracy and the Future Church

BY QUINCY LECKRONE

MUCH has been said, of late, about a world democracy. The thought is filtering even into the minds of many who, a few months ago, had set for their goal a universal autocracy, and had high hopes of achieving their purpose.

Superiority in physical power goes a great way in fixing standards of right for humanity. But the world has doubtless laid aside forever the old adage: "Might makes right," and has accepted, in its stead, the better truism: "Right is might."

However long it may be in coming, patient waiting has demonstrated that right is powerful, indestructible, and is bound, in the end, to prevail.

Men and nations hail the coming of democracy as a species of liberty wherein men will be free to express and exercise their judgment in things pertaining to their temporal welfare and happiness. Instead of a dictator who assumes the prerogative of knowing what is best for the people, the people themselves are to become the dictator.

Different nations and peoples, living under widely different environments, will doubtless establish widely different standards of living, which, to them, will be wholly agreeable, for men enjoy most that which pleases them best.

Pleasure is a matter of education. We enjoy the thing most that we have been taught is best for us. When every fiber of the body and every bent of the mind fully harmonize with our environments, we are happy.

The good that democracy may, therefore, bring to the world, depends, after all, upon how well the world is prepared for it. If, in a democracy, the ruling majority should be inclined to introduce laws and customs, pernicious and detrimental to the welfare of the people, and, by reason of superior power, enforce them, the nation will suffer. But if, on the other hand, the ruling majority should enact good and wholesome laws, and enforce them, the nation will be blest.

Men, left free to act at will, will act according to the dictates of their conscience, which is a matter of education. The gravest question confronting us is this: Has the church, teaching the wisdom of God, made such an impression on the world as to make it safe for men to decide for themselves what shall be their standard of living? Is the world ready for democracy? We believe it is. Centuries of experience, through which civilization, culture and refinement have steadily made progress, have taught men universally to recognize the things that contribute most to their welfare and happiness, and they are qualified and ready to put these things into practice.

It is man's God-given privilege, as well as his duty, to seek his greatest earthly good, to become self-sufficient in maintaining himself with the gifts that God has placed at his disposal. For that purpose we were given reason, judgment and dominion over the things of the earth.

The privileges of democracy are the highest mark of honor God could bestow upon man. God thus expressed his confidence in us, giving us free and unlimited liberty to formulate our own policy of government.

But while democracy is the ideal and legitimate form of government in temporal affairs, it is neither ideal nor legitimate in the affairs of the church,—the spiritual affairs.

A democracy recognizes no authority but what it creates itself, while the church recognizes no authority but that which created it. Democracy is, therefore, not feasible for the church in spiritual matters,—matters of doctrine.

The collision is too sharp and abrupt. The church is the Kingdom of God in the world, and if democratic liberty, fraternity and equality were the sum total of moral humanity, here in the world, what place would be left for man's first duty of obedience, with all his heart, soul, strength and mind?

In the affairs of the world, men are no longer pioneers. Perhaps, in the ancient day, a kingdom was the only safeguard men had from utter destruction by enemies, with whom they were not able to cope, but it is not so now. Since man has trodden the path of learning and experience, he has become self-sufficient.

In the Kingdom of God we are but pioneers, groping in much blindness, seeing as through a glass darkly. Men can not legislate in matters of the spiritual kingdom, since they lack spiritual insight.

If it were given to the church to legislate in spiritual things, and exercise a democratic polity, then might the atonement be set aside, likewise the sovereignty of God, and also that sacrifice and service which are man's first duty to God.

In temporal things man may well ask: "What shall I do for my own temporal good?" and then proceed to answer it as his knowledge, wisdom and judgment may dictate. Thus he would create for himself his own service. But not so in spiritual things. He dare not select what may best please him and discard what does not please him.

In the church, man is not lord over the things by which he is to be controlled. He is a servant, and not a master, and therefore can not enjoy a democratic liberty, such as he does and should, in a political government.

It is to be noted also that the more "pioneer-like" the issue is, the more likely are mere majorities to be in the wrong.

At no time did Christ intimate that he had come to set up a millennial state of democratic liberty, giving his followers freedom to choose the spiritual fundamentals of their religion.

The church cannot enter into a federation, or union with others, if it be found that by so doing it must set aside some of the principles of faith it now holds as fundamental doctrines, necessary to salvation. To illustrate: We believe that the ordinances of baptism, feet-washing, the Lord's supper, and the communion of the bread and cup, are fundamentals of faith and doctrine, divinely appointed and exemplified as matters of polity, unchangeable except by the Authority creating them. They are articles in the church's "Magna Charta," given to it by Jesus, our King. They are not mere matters of policy, hence they can not be altered by any legislation of man's enactment, and therefore the church, in this respect, can not become democratic.

If, however, in our investigations, stimulated as they are by the present wave of democratic liberalism, we discover that other denominations of Christians hold in common with us the same fundamentals, but differ only in methods or policy, then church federation and union becomes a mere matter of adjusting differences of practices, which are wholly within the rights of a free and democratic people. But when we assume to change the fundamentals, then we make ourselves the authors and finishers of our faith, and equal with God, and Christ, and Inspiration.

Our outbursts of animosity, against autocracy in political governments, should not prejudice us against a Divine Autocracy, exercised by the triune God over the subjects of his Kingdom.

Christianity, fully developed in man, makes him fit to rule himself in the affairs of his temporal life, but should this democracy be extended to the spiritual fundamentals of the church, then loyalty to Christ must cease, for democracy can recognize no authority it does not create.

So long as Jehovah is to be our God, and Jesus Christ the Head over the church, so long must there be a Divine Autocracy recognized, with full and unlimited power, to rule in the hearts of men.

The Nature of God

BY D. WARREN SHOCK

"God is a Spirit." A spirit is a person, and a person is a being who has self-consciousness, a self-determining will. God is a Person, whose attributes are infinite. "They that worship him must worship in spirit and in truth."

We read also that "God is light," but what is light? That is a mystery. The Bible tells that "light is that which makes manifest." That tells us what light does, not what light is. Every ray of light is capable of being analyzed into the seven prismatic colors of the rainbow. Blend the seven colors of the rainbow, and you have rays of white light. Blend all the seven attributes of God, and you have the God-light,—the whiteness of Deity.

"God is love." What a glorious Being God must be, whose very nature and name is love! Love is not so much an attribute of God, as it is the sum of all his attributes. In a sense, all his attributes flow out of love, and twine around and beautify and glorify his love. His attributes all flow out of love, just as the seven prismatic colors flow out of the white ray of light.

For example: God would have no attribute of holiness, were he not love. Holiness means wholeness or perfection. God would not be perfect without love. God would have no attribute of justice without love. God loves justice and hates injustice. God would not have the attribute of righteousness without love. God loves righteousness and hates iniquity. God would not be omnipotent without love. God could make a world without love, but he could not redeem a world without love. God would not be omniscient without love, for love knows some things that God would not know, were he not love. God would not be omnipresent without love, for he could not dwell in a human heart were he not love. God could not be merciful or gracious without love. So all God's attributes flow out of love. They are so many different forms of love.

Now to present the subject in another way. All God's attributes twine about love. His is an infinite love, an eternal love, an omniscient love, an omnipotent love, an omnipresent love, a holy love, a righteous love. Thus all his attributes flow out of love and twine around love.

Now, if all God's attributes are so many forms of his love, it is easy to see that God is love and nothing but love in his nature and character. Love is written on all the mountain tops and flashes in the evening stars. The deep, heavy sea rolls its music and every note is love.

Love waves in the fields of corn. Love is in the morning dew. Love comes in the musical drops of the shower. The fact is, all nature is one gigantic flower and its world-wide perfume is love. Love dances in all the harps of gold, breathes in all celestial songs, glistens in the jasper walls, and sits upon the great white throne. The thoughts of God are love. His will is love. His dispensations are love. His judgments are love. His words are love. His labors are love. His joys are love. His tears are love.

Man was made in the image and after the likeness of God. Therefore, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself. This do, and thou shalt live" (Luke 10: 27-28b).

When Tears Are the Measure of the Man

BY RALPH G. RARICK

THERE is some conjecture as to whether Jesus, in his life among men, ever laughed, though I think he certainly must have done so. Be that as it may, there is no occasion to doubt his weeping, and his being a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. There are tears in his upbraidings, in the words spoken about the impending doom of the unrepenting cities where most of his mighty works were done. It was more than surface sympathy that he tendered the broken-hearted, and because of the fact that his compassion was so deep and genuine, we are possessors of that wonderful verse, precious to us all, "Jesus wept."

There are times for tears, and at such times they evidence what manner of men we are. There may, of course, not always be literal tears, but the attitude, at least, must be grave and in harmony with the situation. To quote Thackeray: "A man is seldom more manly than when he is what you call unmanned,—the source of his emotion is championship, pity and courage; the instinctive desire to cherish those who are innocent and unhappy, and defend those who are tender and weak."

It will be understood, of course, that I speak not disparagingly of fitting times for laughter, for, as one says: "God made both tears and laughter, and both for kind purposes." But it is also true, in the words of another: "Laughter costs too much which is purchased by the sacrifice of decency." A person classes himself with the foolhardy, whenever he laughs at that which calls for naught but tears. Surely, there are times when we would better weep.

Two men of religious profession were at one time visiting in the old home neighborhood, where their gladsome boyhood days had been spent. Not the least of their interests was the old home church which, in the days of yore, was the weekly rallying place of the people miles around. But both experieneed a sad surprise when they came to the loved spot, and found the old sanctuary deserted and dilapidated, while the little white city of the dead, close by, was scarcely recognized amid the wilderness of weeds. "Perhaps though," they ventured to remark, "another church has been built somewhere here in its stead." But such was not the case, as they learned from a passing stranger. He could only tell them that the church had been disorganized some years ago. It had gone the way of many a country church.

The silence was broken finally by the one who seemed to be less affected by the scene before them. Said he, with the semblance of a smile: "Well, I guess we might as well laugh about it as to cry." But that was as an arrow piercing the soul of the second, whose face bowed to the covering of his hands. It was not so much by reason of a different temperament, as by reason of a profounder concern, that he replied: "Oh, no; I think we would better let our tears fall here!"

Every individual, carrying on his heart a great concern for God's cause, is verily somewhat like Nehemiah. What would be our estimate of Nehemiah if, when he received the news of his afflicted brethren and of desolate Jerusalem, he had gone on about his cupbearing with the spirit of "never touched me"? We would strongly suspect that love for God's cause was lacking, don't you think? But he himself says: "I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days; and I fasted and prayed before the God of heaven." Those tears were not indicative of weakness but of strength of character. They hindered sorrow from becoming despair. They obscured not his vision of God and the good in life, but, on the contrary, his eyes saw all the better because of his tears. The sowing was in tears, but, blessed consequence, his reaping was, as ours will be, in joy!

"There is a sacredness in tears," said Washington Irving. "They are not the mark of weakness but of power. They speak more eloquently than ten thousand tongues. They are the messengers of overwhelming grief, of deep contrition, and of unspeakable love."

Yes, tears, genuine and honorable, emanate from love. When Jesus had somewhat to say unto Simon, he called attention to the fact that the tears and love of the devoted woman made her more worthy of divine favors. "And turning to the woman, he said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thy house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath wetted my feet with her tears, and wiped them with her hair. . . . Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much" (Luke 7: 44-47).

It is well indeed if we can truly say with the song writer: "I love thy kingdom, Lord." When, therefore, we stand in the presence of a forsaken church, where the cause once prospered, we will be sure to feel that we are stepping on "holy ground." In days gone by saintly persons here assembled with reverence to God. They sang songs feelingly and prayed really. They rejoiced with those who were happy, and wept with the sorrowing. Perchance, here also came many souls, who upon hearing the sweet and sacred Story of the Cross, were won to Christ. Why not, then, respond in a prayerful mood if some one asks us to join in singing:

> "For her my tears shall fall;
> For her my prayers ascend;
> For her my cares and toils be given
> Till toils and cares shall end."

Do any of us fail to respond, in compassionate sympathy, to the sorrowful throbbings of the myriad hearts in the wake of war? Surely, heaven and God are best discerned through tears; scarcely, perhaps, are they discerned at all without them.

Aaron Burr's Essay on Honor

BY OLIVE A. SMITH

AMONG other interesting things, which histories have not disclosed, is an essay on "Honor," written by the man who has always been called the greatest of traitors to his country. The manuscript is one of an autograph collection which was owned, about twenty years ago, by John Boyd Thatcher, of Albany. For more than fifty years the paper was in the possession of the Rev. Dr. Wm. B. Sprague, who had access to the private papers of Mr. Burr shortly after his death, and from him it was passed to Mr. Thatcher.

Aaron Burr's father, it may be remembered, was the founder and first president of Princeton University. His grandfather was the celebrated preacher, Jonathan Edwards. The contents of this manuscript are worthy of attention, mainly as an illustration of the way in which a life, apparently well grounded in all that should make for the best things possible, will eventually fail of good results, if its possessor begins to play with the fires that are always burning to attract youthful spirits.

Intellectually, Burr was a brilliant boy. At eleven years of age, he asked for admission to Princeton. Being refused on account of his youth, he studied independently for two years; then applied a second time. His case was made an exception to the rules, and he was admitted as a sophomore at thirteen. He was a brilliant student, graduating at the age of sixteen. He fully intended to enter the ministry, and, after two years of post-graduate study, he went to Bethlehem, Conn., to study with Dr. Joseph Bellamy.

At that time, a great wave of skepticism was sweeping over the entire world, and the universities of this country and England were especially affected by it. Burr spent five months at Bethlehem. Then, with all the sublime self-sufficiency which sometimes characterizes youth, he announced that he had rejected the religion of his ancestors, "after a calm and full investigation." "The road to heaven is open to all," he asserted, and we find ourselves wondering whether that was more than a refutation of the doctrine of predestination, as it was then taught.

The style of the composition is so much more verbose than that in vogue now, that it is difficult to select passages that are sufficiently brief to be interesting, but here are a few quotations taken at random:

"As man is formed for action, so he is calculated for honor and praise: and according as his actions are good or evil, laudable or base, so he is esteemed or despised, applauded or abhorred. Thus we see some men the objects of singular esteem and regard, and others the subjects of universal hatred and displeasure. Such is the attachment we have implanted in our natures to that which is excellent and noble, and such the aversion to that which is contemptible and base.

"Happy it is, that man is, in some measure, acquainted with the worth and excellence of his nature. . . . The man who possesses the superior faculties of the mind, regulated by principles of reason and honor, whether ruler or counselor, appears like a kind of guardian angel to the people with whom he resides, busy to avert and suppress every incident of evil, and careful to secure them in peaceful enjoyment of all the comforts and blessings of society. On the contrary, the man who possesses the same faculties, unregulated by principles of honor, should he take part in public life, the effect is of a different kind. He appears like a minister of divine vengeance, whose course is marked by slavery and oppression, by ruin and destruction."

In another essay on "Passion," Burr actually seems prophetic in regard to his own future, for it was said that his temper was always ungovernable, and he was very stubborn and self-willed:

"Do we not frequently behold men of the most sprightly genius, by giving rein to their passions, lost to society and reduced to the lowest ebb of misery and despair? In such cases, the most charming elocution, the finest fancy, the brightest blaze of genius, and the noblest burst of thoughts, call for louder vengeance, and damn them to lasting infamy and shame."

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARIZONA.

Glendale.—Our series of meetings began March 2, with the dedication of the remodeled church, and closed March 16. Bro. Caslow was with us. The members were strengthened and seventeen accepted Christ, fifteen of whom were baptized, one was reclaimed and one awaits baptism. Our Sunday-school is growing in numbers and interest. Sisters Addie B. Gillett and Pearl Collett, with Bro. Harold Kurtz as assistant, were elected to help in the Sunday-school at the Phoenix Mission, March 15 we enjoyed the love feast, at which eighty were present. Since our last report two have been received by letter.—Emma T. Whitcher, Glendale, Ariz., March 16.

CALIFORNIA

Fresno.—March 10 Dr. and Mrs. Fred Wampler conducted the service. Mrs. Wampler exhibited curios and spoke interestingly about China. Dr. Wampler entertained us with stereopticon views and told of his medical work. A full house enjoyed the evening with our splendid missionaries and we wish them God-speed. An offering of $7.72 was taken. March 13 Fresno church met in council. Among other items, a system was adopted for raising the yearly budget. March 16, in the absence of our pastor, Bro. J. H. Stover, Bro. E. Edgecomb conducted the morning service. Just now our Sunday-school is busy preparing an Easter program. Our communion will be held May 4.—Mrs. O. N. Whitlow, Fresno, Calif., March 17.

Golden Gate Mission.—Our church officers were all reelected for 1919 except our auditing committee. Our Sunday-school offering for Armenian Relief amounted to $40. We are glad to have our pastor and wife home again, after a few weeks spent in Washington. March 4, we had the privilege of meeting our home-coming missionaries: Brother and Sister Emmert and family, from India; Dr. and Sister Wampler and Sister Anna Blough, from China. March 6 Bro. Emmert gave us a lecture on the work in India, and March 8, Dr. Wampler gave an illustrated lecture on the medical work in China. Both lectures were enjoyed very much. Recently we received a check for $10 from a friend in Hawaii, and $11 from a young brother,—a soldier,—for our new churchhouse. It is encouraging to know that others are interested in our mission here. At our council, March 10, we decided to put the Sunday-school collections for the second Sunday of each month into the fund for our churchhouse. We also decided to hold our spring love feast April 27.—Ivy Walter, Oakland, Calif., March 11.

Live Oak church met in council Feb. 28. Four letters were received and five were granted. Arrangements were made to have Bro. M. M. Eschman hold a series of meetings, beginning April 6, and closing with a love feast April 19. March 2 one was baptized and Sister Millham was anointed.—A. Crites, Live Oak, Calif., March 11.

Reedley.—March 8 we met in council, with Eld. M. H. Miller presiding. We decided to hold a love feast April 26, beginning at 10 A. M. On the evening of March 11, Dr. Wampler, missionary from China, gave us an illustrated lecture on the medical conditions of China. Bro. P. E. Robertson, from Lindsay, Calif., has been with us for four weeks in a revival effort, and meetings are still in progress.—Mabel Armantrout, Reedley, Calif., March 13.

COLORADO

First Grand Valley church met in council March 8. Letters were granted to Bro. E. Frank Weaver and wife, who go from here to Chicago, to attend Bethany Bible School. Our spring love feast will be held April 26, at 6 P. M.—Mrs. Minerva Hixson, Grand Junction, Colo., March 20.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Washington.—The Sunday school of the Washington City church, which has an average attendance of about 200, recently raised more than $225 for India Famine Relief. On Sunday, March 9, a members' meeting was held in the morning, at which time the annual visit was made in a beautiful and inspiring manner. The chorus presented the cantata "The King of Israel" on the evening of the same day. At the close of the services of March 15, in the evening, three were baptized, all of whom asked for admission to the church during the course of the ordinary Sunday services.—Chas. E. Reaser, Washington, D. C., March 16.

FLORIDA

Bartow, Fla.—On Sunday morning, March 9, Bro. C. G. Winey and wife, Bro. H. J. Shallenberger, Bro. Abram Hershey and wife, Bro. Banks Basbore and wife, and Bro. B. F. Lightner and wife, started for Arcadia. We arrived there at 9:45 A. M., in time for services. We attend Sunday-school and preaching services. Then we were pleasantly entertained in the home of Brother and Sister Ball. There are about twenty members in the Arcadia church. I do not see why we should not have a strong church at Arcadia, which is a very lively place. They have a nice little church house. Of course, to have a strong congregation there should be a resident minister. We left for home about 4 P. M., traveling a distance of 112 miles. There are good hard roads all the way from our door to Arcadia, which is quite an item in Florida. Eld. A. C. Wieand and family, of Chicago, are visiting with H. J. Shallenberger and wife this week. Thirty-five of our members gathered in their home last evening, the 12th, when Bro. Wieand gave us their experience while among the Arabs, about eight years ago. They certainly had an experience that not many of us would care to undergo. We expect to leave here April 1 for our northern home.—Ida M. Lightner, Bartow, Fla., March 13.

Information Wanted.—I would like the readers of the "Gospel Messenger" to send me the names of all members of the Church of the Brethren, or children of Mount Haven or Ritts. Flo; also to give, if possible, the direction and distance from the postoffices of all such parties. I want this information with a view of getting together for church work. This part of Florida is fast becoming a fine agricultural section. Brethren who have visited this locality during the winter, were favorably impressed. Inquiries, with stamp enclosed, from parties interested, will be promptly and cheerfully answered.—J. W. Chambers, Mount Haven, Fla., March 14.

IDAHO

Boise Valley church met in council March 8, with Bro. Ullery acting as moderator. There was considerable discussion along the lines of general advancement and improvement, and also of ways and means of creating greater interest and growth among the young people. Sister Jennie Brower and Bro. G. W. Flory were elected delegates to District Meeting, with David Betts and Viola Betts, alternates. March 9 our churchhouse was somewhat damaged by fire, but by the hearty response of neighbors and friends the blaze was soon extinguished. Our love feast will be held May 3.—David Betts, Nampa, Idaho, March 15.

Twin Falls church met in council March 14. Brother and Sister Fahrney were chosen delegates to District Meeting, to be held at Nez Perce. We appointed a committee to investigate the building of additional rooms for Sunday-school purposes. Our work is moving along nicely, under the efficient leadership of Eld. C. Fahrney. We have been unable, as yet, to secure a pastor. Our love feast will be held May 25.—Mrs. H. A. Swab, Twin Falls, Idaho, March 17.

ILLINOIS

Batavia.—A fortnight ago we closed a two weeks' series of meetings by Bro. L. H. Root, of Mt. Morris, Ill. He proved an eloquent speaker, and from the first evening had an interested audience. His vivid word-pictures, clear logic, and fervent appeals held the undivided attention of old and young alike. Although many hearts were deeply touched, only one made a public acknowledgment. We feel, however, that the good seed, if faithfully and carefully sown, will some day take root and grow. He did well his part.—Nellie K. Netzley, 184 N. Van Buren Street, Batavia, Ill., March 16.

Chicago.—Sunday morning, March 9, Bro Emmert, of Mt. Morris, preached to us at Bethany on the "Call to Special Service." At 2:30 P. M. we held our election for ministers, resulting in the following being elected: Neils Esbensen, F. O. Shank, John G. Hershey, C. D. Ruple, Merlin Shull and Russel Shull. Bro. Esbensen, with his wife, and the young men were duly installed. At the same time there were six ministers and one deacon's wife installed.—Mrs. Allie Eisenbise, Chicago, Ill., March 19.

Okaw congregation met in council March 1, with Eld. G. W. Miller presiding. It was decided to hold a communion at the La Place house May 29. Bro. Jacob Wyne was chosen as delegate to Annual Meeting, and Bro. Geo. W. Miller as alternate.—Laura M. Crain, La Place, Ill., March 17.

Sterling church met in bimonthly council on the evening of March 3, with Eld. C. M. Suter presiding. Election of Christian Workers' president resulted in Sister Jennie Hoak being elected. The spirit of our membership is deepening in interest and unity, and as a church we are much encouraged with our work. Our pastor and wife are working patiently and persistently in promoting our spiritual interests.—Mrs. D. Bru. John W. Lear gave two very strong sermons on "Dress Reform" and "What the Church Stands For." On the following Sunday Geo. W. Dewing, Professor of Economics and History, in Aurora College, Aurora, Ill., gave an excellent lecture on the "Victory of Prohibition and Our Present Responsibilities."—Mrs. Olive Dearmie, Sterling, Ill., March 12.

West Branch church met in council March 12, with Eld. S. S. Plum presiding. One letter was granted. Bro. Wm. H. Cordell was chosen delegate to Annual Conference; Bro. S. S. Plum, alternate; Brethren Frank Long and Lee Fry are our delegates to District Meeting. Our love feast was appointed for June 14 and 15, at 2:30 P. M. Feb. 9 Bro. J. W. Lear, of Mt. Morris, gave us a splendid sermon on "The Simple Life." An offering of $107.11 was sent to the Armenian Relief. Some of the members are also supporting orphans over there.—Mary Fry, Polo, Ill., March 20.

INDIANA

Auburn church met in council March 13. Eld. Walter Swihart was with us. Bro. C. C. Cripe, our pastor, had charge of the meeting. Nine letters were granted. We are sorry to have so many of our

REPORT AND QUERIES FOR ANNUAL CONFERENCE

I. COMMITTEE REPORT

Qualifications and Duties of Deacons and Formulas for Installing Church Officials, Etc.

Annual Conference Query of 1918

The Spring Creek church asks Annual Meeting of 1918, through the District Meeting of Eastern District of Pennsylvania:

(e) To appoint a committee of three, whose duty it shall be,

1. To revise Article 6, 1879, "Revised Minutes," page 9, and give a clear ruling on feet-washing, fully in accord with the teaching and example of Christ.

2. To revise our present rules on qualifications and duties of deacons.

3. To draw up suitable formulas for installing deacons, ministers, and elders.

4. To report to the Annual Meeting of 1919.

Answer of Annual Meeting

We decide that a committee of three be appointed to do what this query asks to be done. Committee: S. B. Hoff, Jesse D. Mohler, A. J. Culler.

Annual Conference Query of 1918

10. Since the instructions to be given to deacons at the time of installing them in office date from the 1835 Annual Meeting (see "Revised Minutes of Annual Meeting," article 15, pages 58, 59), and since the said decision is, according to present-day usages, in some particulars somewhat obsolete: Therefore, the Roanoke City congregation brings the matter to the attention of the Annual Meeting, through District Meeting, asking that the Annual Meeting give, in a restatement, a form of instructions that will cover the duties of deacons, as they should serve the church in the present day.

Answer of Annual Meeting

Referred to committee appointed on query from Eastern Pennsylvania.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE, 1919

To the Annual Conference of 1919, Greeting:

We, your committee, beg to submit the following report:

I. FEET-WASHING

We believe that feet-washing is a symbol of humility and service, and that every member of the church should participate in it, that they may follow the example and teaching of our Lord (John 13: 14, 15); that they may enter into the spirit and blessing of the service (John 13: 17); and that they may be more fully prepared for the supper and communion services to follow. We, therefore, recommend that the brethren and sisters separately wash and wipe one another's feet, following each other in order, the last one in any group washing the feet of the first, in harmony with our present practice, as the best method of observing the teaching of our Lord (John 13: 1-17).

II. DUTIES AND QUALIFICATIONS OF DEACONS

1. Qualifications.—The office of deacon is a worthy one and merits faithful and conscientious service. Brethren chosen as deacons should be faithful and loyal to the church, sincere and spiritually minded, with wisdom and judgment in all the work of the church (Acts 6: 3; 1 Tim. 3: 8, 9). The wives of deacons should likewise be examples in these Christian virtues.

2. Duties.—The duties of the deacons divide themselves into two general classes:

First, they bear the responsibility of looking after the temporal interests of the church. (a) They should look after the needs and temporal interests of the poor and unfortunate in the church. (b) They should make all arrangements for love feasts, baptisms, or other services of the church, conjointly with the pastor or elder. (c) They should assume any other duties of trusteeship or obligation which the local church may deem wise to place upon them.

Second, the deacons should ever be ready to assist the pastor or elder in spiritual ministry when called upon, or to be responsible for such, in the absence of the pastor or any ministering brethren.

They should willingly assist in visiting the members before the love feast or at other times, the sick, or any as need may arise, either with the pastor or elder, or in their own right when the ministering brethren can not adequately care for it.

III. FORMULAS FOR INSTALLATION OF DEACONS, MINISTERS AND ELDERS

1. Installation of Deacons

Read the following passages: Acts 6: 1-10; 1 Tim. 3: 8-13.

Dear Brethren: In order that the work of the church may prosper, God has appointed men in the church to serve in their several capacities, each one according to his gifts and calling. To the church he has therefore given commandment that, led by the Spirit, they should separate men to look after the temporal interests of the church and to labor with the ministering brethren for the spiritual welfare of the members. Such are called in his Word "deacons," and, as their name indicates, they are to serve. Brethren who are called to this worthy service must be faithful and loyal to the church, sincere and spiritually-minded, and possess wisdom and judgment in dealing with the affairs of the church. Their wives should also abound in these Christian graces, that they likewise may be examples in Christian work and life.

This, the ..... (Name of the church) ..... having full confidence in the faithfulness and loyalty, and the wisdom and spirituality, of ... .. (Names of brethren and sisters) ..... has, according to the polity of the Church of the Brethren, called them to the office and work of the deacon.

(Here the brethren and their wives shall stand before the elder and answer these questions and receive their charges.)

Do you accept the Bible as the inspired Word of God, believe in the Deity and atoning sacrifice of Christ, and promise to live in harmony with the doctrines, principles, and practices of the Church of the Brethren?

Dear Brother: God has called you into a worthy office, which demands your most cosecrations service. You are called to special service in the church, and as such you will have a larger influence among the members and in the sight of the world than otherwise. We trust that you shall, by your sincere and faithful Christian life and your loyalty to the teachings and practices of the church, reflect credit on the body of Christ. The church authorizes you, in the first place, to be responsible, conjointly with the elder or pastor, for the temporal interests of the church. You are to look after the needs of the poor and unfortunate, to make all material arrangements for baptisms, love feasts and such other services, and ever to be willing to assume any other duties of trusteeship or obligation which the church may deem wise to place upon you. In the second place, you are to assist in the spiritual work of the church, and, in the absence of the elder or pastor or other ministering brethren, to take charge of services of worship. You should also assist in visiting the members before love feasts and at other times, as you may be called upon by the pastor or elder, or in your own right in the absence of pastor or elder.

Dear Sister: You likewise are called into a very definite service in the church. The church authorizes and expects you to assist in the preparation for love feasts, baptismal occasions and all other duties of your position. You should also be willing to labor for the spiritual interests of the church, in visiting the sick and giving comfort and help wherever needed. You will have especial opportunity to be an example and help to the younger sisters of the congregation, to lead them to the higher spiritual life (1 Tim. 3: 11). Do you willingly and freely accept the office and work of the deacon from the love of God and a desire that the church may prosper? Do you engage to be faithful and diligent in the work of the church and always to labor for the unity and progress of the Kingdom?

(The brethren and sisters shall then kneel and be consecrated to their work by prayer by one of the elders present, and shall be received by the church with the right hand of fellowship and the salutation of love.)

2. Installation of Ministers

Read one or several of the following scriptures: 1 Tim. 3: 1-7; 1: 18-20; 2 Tim. 2: 1-4; 3: 15-17; 4: 1-8; Titus 1: 5-9; Eph. 4: 11-16; Isa. 6; Jer. 1: 4-19; Ezek. 2; Matt. 9: 35 to 10: 42.

Dear Brethren: God, by the Holy Spirit, calls men to serve him according to the gifts bestowed upon them; and to chosen servants he grants the grace of preaching the Gospel. Unto the church he has given commandment, not only to pray for the increase of the ministry, but also to call those who, having proved their fitness and sincerity, may serve in the sacred office, in order that men of pure heart and good conduct shall speak unto the edification of believers and the building of the body of Christ. It is proper that all who are thus called should receive the approval of the church and an interest in the prayers of the members.

This, the ..... (Name of the church) ..... having confidence in the religious conviction and experience, the sincerity of purpose and character, and the sufficiency of mental and spiritual gifts, has, according to the polity and forms of the Church of the Brethren, called ..... (Name of the brother) ..... to the sacred office of the ministry.

(Here the candidate or candidates shall arise and stand before the elder, until called to kneel in prayer. If married, the wife also shall answer questions and is to be given the special charge indicated.)

Do you accept the Bible as the inspired Word of God, believe in the Deity and the atoning sacrifice of Christ, and promise to live in harmony with the doctrines, principles and practices of the Church of the Brethren?

Dear Brother: God has by the Holy Spirit called you to the ministry, and you have declared your acceptance of his truth and your promise to abide in the teaching of the church. We therefore exhort you to a remembrance of the dignity and worth of the service to which you are called. We trust that you shall, by God's grace, give yourself wholly to this work to which God has called you, that you may be an ensample to the flock and a pattern for the people to follow. It will be your duty to preach and to teach, to admonish and to exhort, to feed and to provide,—in full, to be an undershepherd of the flock of Christ. The church authorizes you to preach and appoint preaching services, to administer the ordinance of baptism; to serve the communion in the absence of an elder, or at his or their request if present, to solemnize the rite of marriage; and, in brief, to perform all the duties of a minister or pastor and all those of an elder, except that you have no authority to install officers in a church, nor to preside at council meetings where official members are dealt with, nor to do work in the territory of an organized church without the consent of the church or elder. You are invited to participate in the work of the church at large, except that you may not preside at a District Meeting, nor act as a member of Standing Committee.

While investing you with much authority you should not use it in an arbitrary manner but submit to the church and older ministers with a proper and due humility.

In accepting the ministry it is to be your purpose to be true to your calling, to maintain the dignity of the pulpit and the honor of the church, to serve, as far as possible, in the most needy fields, to be the servant of your Lord whose disciple and apostle you are.

To the wife: Dear Sister: You, with your husband, are likewise specially called into the service of God and the church. In the duties and responsibilities that fall to him, you are to be a true helpmeet and colaborer in service. In your home you should, by your devotion and loyalty, strengthen the heart of your husband and make a good report among all for him and his family. We exhort you to sincerity and holiness in life, that you may likewise be an example to the flock. You will have large opportunity for leadership and service in the church, especially among the sisters of the church, as you help them in their special problems, strengthen them for their special temptations, and increase the spirit of holiness in their lives. Thus you will also share the rewards and joys of a faithful servant (1 Peter 3: 1-6). Do you willingly and freely accept this, the ministry of God, from a love of God, a hunger for souls, and a desire for service? Do you engage to be faithful and diligent in the work of the ministry and labor at all times to maintain the purity and peace of the church?

To the Church: You have been led of God to call these young men into the ministry of the church. It is your duty, as a church, and it is incumbent upon the church at large, to make it possible for them to give the fullest measure of service to the Kingdom. Thus you should provide them with the necessities of life, that they may devote themselves to the Word of Ministry, to sustain them in the bonds of love and fellowship, to strengthen their hands with prayer; and to work with them as colaborers in Christ in the work of the church for the promotion of his Kingdom.

(Here the candidates and the church shall kneel in prayer of mutual consecration. At the close of the service they shall be received by the members with the hand of fellowship and the salutation of love.)

3. Ordination of Elders

Read one or several of the following scriptures: Acts 20: 18-35; 1 Tim. 3: 1-7; Titus 2: 1-8; I Peter 5: 1-4; Acts 14: 23.

Dear Brethren: God, by his Spirit, not only calls men into the service of the ministry but, when they are found efficient and faithful, he rewards them with a larger task. Therefore, unto the church he has given commandment, not only to set apart godly men to the ministry, but, when they have been proved and tested in service, to give them a larger field of usefulness. It is proper that those who are thus advanced and given heavier responsibilities, should receive the approval of the church and a consecration to the larger service.

This, the ..... (Name of the church) ....., knowing the efficient and faithful service in office and the continued growth in spirituality and ability to serve, has, according to the polity and procedure of the Church of the Brethren, called ..... (Name of brother and sister) ..... to be ordained to the sacred office of elder.

(Here the minister, to be ordained with his wife, may stand or remain seated, as desired, until called to kneel in prayer. The sister should answer all questions and be given the special charge.)

Do you again declare your faith, as when installed into the ministry, and accept the Bible as the inspired Word of God, believe in the Deity and atoning sacrifice of Christ, and promise to live in harmony with, teach and uphold, the doctrines, principles, and practices of the Church of the Brethren?

Dear Brother: You have been called to the ministry and been found faithful. You are now ordained as a full minister, known in Scripture and among us as the elder. We trust that you may be conscious of the worth and responsibility of the office, and that this may induce in you a proper humility and a larger dependence and trust in God. We trust that you shall, by God's grace, give yourself wholly to this work, to which God has now ordained you, be an ensample to the flock, and godly in the sight of all men. The church authorizes and expects you to be responsible for the spiritual interests of the flock. You are the undershepherd of your Christ. It is your duty to preach and teach, to feed the flock, to perform all the ordinances and rites of the church, to comfort and anoint the sick, to have the oversight and general management of the church when chosen as presiding elder; to train and help your younger ministering brethren, and apportion such work to them as they are fitted for by experience and ability, to install officers and preside at any and all meetings. In the local church you are to guard and be responsible for the interests and work of the church. In the church at large you are equal with any elder, and may serve in any capacity to which the church may deem wise to call you.

While the church confers large powers upon you, may you be exhorted to use all of them always as one guided of the Lord, the one Head of the church whose we are, and with due respect for the opinions and work of your colaborers in the ministry. The true servant of God must always labor for the peace and unity of the church, ever willing to subordinate his own judgment and feeling for the progress of the Kingdom.

To the wife: Dear Sister: You have likewise been faithful in service and, with your husband, share the rewards of a larger opportunity. In the new duties and responsibilities that fall to him you will share as a true helpmeet and colaborer. We exhort you to a continued increase in holiness and a renewed willingness to be used in service. In a larger sense now than before you will be an example to the flock, and you will be called upon for help in many ways. You will be entrusted with special tasks in giving help and counsel to the sisters of the church, with whom you will always labor for an increase in holiness. Thus, as you are faithful, you will also share in the joys and rewards (1 Peter 3: 1-6). Do you willingly and freely accept the full ministry of the church from a love of God, a hunger for souls and a desire for service? Do you again, as when you entered the ministry, promise to be faithful and diligent in the work of the ministry and labor at all times to maintain the purity and peace of the church?

To the Church: Knowing the service and faithfulness of our brother and sister, you have called them into the full ministry. It is your duty now more fully to sustain them in their work, so as to make it possible for them to give the fullest measure of service to the Kingdom. You should continue to provide them with necessities of life, sustain them in the bonds of love and fellowship, and to strengthen their hands with prayer. As you now invest them with a greater responsibility, by that same act you promise such loving coöperation as becometh the children of God. It must be your purpose to labor with them in all love and unity.

(The brother and sister to be ordained, together with the congregation, are now to kneel in prayer. The ordaining brethren shall then, with the laying on of hands, pray that God may consecrate and anoint them for the work to which they are called. At the close of the service they shall be received by the members with the hand of fellowship and the salutation of love.)

It is deemed wise that in all cases where church officials are married after their installation or ordination, their wives shall be installed into their respective offices at an early and convenient opportunity.

E. B. Hoff, Jesse D. Mohler, A. J. Culler, Committee.

II. QUERIES FROM STATE DISTRICTS

1. Southern California and Arizona

Feeling that the Christian Workers' Society constitutes a very important branch of our church work, and realizing the great need among our societies for a more thorough and systematic organization and a larger development, we, the La Verne church, petition Annual Meeting for 1919, through District Meeting of Southern California and Arizona, for the creation of a General Christian Workers' Board, which shall have general supervision of the Christian Workers' organizations, and shall seek to unify and systematize the work of these societies with a view of promoting a greater degree of practical Christian life and service. Passed.

2. Northern Indiana

Inasmuch as the teaching of certain of the evangelists of the Church of the Brethren is such as to set aside New Testament teachings and the established order of the church, thus causing disorder and dissatisfaction in the churches, we, the Auburn church, petition Annual Meeting, through District Meeting of Northern Indiana, to devise some plan by which the church can control and direct the work of our evangelists.

Granted, and passed to Annual Meeting.

3. Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas

Whereas, Accepting civil offices, in disobedience of the duties of which the nonresistant principles of the Gospel are violated (Min. A. M., 1825 and 1918), affiliation with secret lodges (Min. A. M., 1859 and 1893), musical instruments in churches (Min. A. M., 1890 and 1918), worldly games manifestly sinful (Min. A. M., 1892), sisters wearing hats (Min. A. M., 1867, 1898 and 1911), brethren or sisters wearing neckties (Min. A. M., 1898), or gold or pearls in the adornment of the body (Min. A. M., 1853 and 1911), is not in harmony with the established principles of our church and the Gospel, therefore, we, the Cabool church, ask Annual Meeting, through District Meeting, to decide (1) that disloyal churches in which these evils and irregularities are tolerated, shall be labored with by a committee of elders from Annual Meeting, and all brethren and sisters who indulge in the aforementioned evils and irregularities and will not desist, shall be dealt with as disloyal members and shall be handled according to Matt. 18. (2) That such elders, pastors and evangelists, as by their example and their teaching, either in private or in public, shall encourage or uphold any of the above-named evils and irregularities shall, upon conviction thereof by competent witnesses, be, by the said committee, deposed from the ministry. (3) That such school officials and teachers, as by their example and teaching shall uphold and encourage those evils and irregularities, shall, upon conviction thereof, be asked to resign, and upon failure to do so shall be deposed by the said committee. (4) That any other evils and irregularities may, in like manner, be brought before this committee for adjustment. (5) That Standing Committee shall appoint and perpetuate through its Moderator, a committee of five competent elders, to be known as the Committee on Loyalty, who shall constitute the foregoing committee, any three of whom may constitute a quorum, but their action to be final must be concurrent. A minority in any congregation, or six petitioners in case of individual offenders, may call for the help of this committee, but action against offenders must be taken in the congregation where the offending party holds membership. Expense of this committee may, at its discretion, be paid out of the Annual Meeting treasury.

Answer: Paper, as amended, passed to Annual Meeting.

4. Washington

The Loomis congregation asks the District Meeting of Washington to petition Annual Meeting to change the time of holding the various meetings held at the time of Annual Meeting, so that all such meetings, excepting the Bible Institute and Missionary Meeting, be held after the Conference proper.

Passed to Annual Meeting.

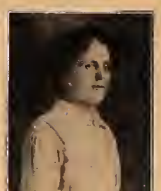
DEATH OF SISTER CORA FUNK

No greater loss has ever come to this community than that sustained in the death of Sister Cora Funk, Feb. 27, 1919. For four years she, with her family, had resided in the Wiley church, where her husband is pastor. This church has enjoyed a remarkable degree of prosperity, and no small degree of the growth has been due to the untiring, devoted, earnest efforts of this noble woman. Every branch of the church work received inspiration from her good admonitions, safe teaching, and earnest prayers. Many have been led to the Master through her direct influence. Only a short time ago a young man came into the pastor's home and told of the great help that had been received from her talk the evening before.



Sister Cora Funk

Sister Funk was born near Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 24, 1878. She died at the age of forty years, four months and three days. When but a girl she, with her parents, came to Kansas, locating in Sumner County, near Conway Springs, where she grew to womanhood. In 1900 she was united by marriage to Jacob Funk, her former playmate and schoolmate. Both gave their hearts to God at the same time and were baptized the same day. Sister Funk being thirteen years of age at the time. She was the mother of three children, Lloyd Victor, Hazel May and Earl Jacob. As a monument to her worth as a Christian mother, and largely through her influence, Lloyd is a volunteer for the ministry, having been ordained last spring. He will enter college as a student minister after graduation from the high school. Besides her residence at Conway Springs, she has lived with her husband at Wichita, Kans., seven years, Peabody, Kans., three years, and Wiley, Colo., four years.

Sister Funk enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout the Middle West, and everywhere she was honored for her noble Christian traits. Her death was caused by pneumonia, brought on by influenza. Funeral services by Eld. David Hamm, of Rocky Ford. Bro. Homer Ullom, elder of the Wiley church, so keenly sympathized with the family that he was unable to engage in that work. Bro. Hamm was assisted by the home ministers and the pastors of the other churches. Flags were lowered at half-mast, every business house in the town was closed, and the floral offerings were very numerous. Thus was laid to rest, in the Wiley cemetery, one of God's noble women who lived and loved, while here below, as one of those who knew her God and was willing to follow where he led.

INDIAN CHURCH ITEMS; BAPTISMS IN 1918

The number of baptisms at our different stations during the year 1918 is as follows: Dahanu, 1; Vada, 5; Jalalpor, 6; Vali, 20; Bulsar, 23; Ahwa, 35; Anklesvar, 92; Vyara, 117; making a total of 299. Four were reclaimed at Vali. The losses through death, on account of influenza, were larger than usual the past year. An accurate list of the losses through death and of those who have fallen away, is not in hand. As usual, this will come out in the June "Visitor."

At the love feast, Dec. 14, at Vyara, 166 communed. Others were not able to commune for lack of room in the house. We have no churchhouse, but ought to have one, as you can see from this. It was an inspiring feast to us. Our native minister led in the services for the first time.

The love feast at Bulsar was held on Saturday, Jan. 11, and 137 communed. Bro. Adam Ebey conducted the serv-

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

Visions and Tasks

Joel 2: 28, 29; 2 Chron. 24: 1-11

For Week Beginning April 6, 1919

1. Introductory.—As will be noticed, our topic has two texts. The one from Joel tells of what God will do, and the result of it. The other citation shows what man can do when actuated by proper motives.

2. The Things God Will Do.—He says he will pour out his Spirit upon all flesh. Surely, that is the one thing which all flesh stands in need of,—the Lord's Spirit. Man, left to himself, is prone to evil. It is always easier for him to go down hill than up, but it is far more risky. Proper direction, therefore, is all-important. At the outstart in life all things come to the mind fresh and new, and leave their impressions,—these wonderful first impressions that sometimes abide with us through life, and even give direction and tendency to all our activities. At especially that period there is need of careful guidance that right impressions may be made, that correct principles may be fixed, that proper direction may be taken. This critical stage, too, imposes a duty upon those who are older, and have learned more thoroughly from the Great Teacher,—they should counsel and instruct the younger, and suggest noble aims. Then the path of the young Christian may well be as the path of the just, that "shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

3. The Spirit's Outpouring God's Gracious Act.—It is not yours, nor mine, nor that of any one else,—"I will pour out my Spirit." If we would obtain this directing Spirit, we must go to God for it. The habit of prayer is here invited. It is the open highway to God, and to the indwelling of this all-guiding Spirit.

4. The Logical Result of the Outpouring.—It is prophesying, the dreaming of dreams, and the seeing of visions. It is worthy of note that Joel includes the daughters with the sons, as equal sharers in the blessing,—"Upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit." The women are equal sharers with the men,—God is no respecter of persons. How gratifying to note that in these latter days women seem to have this prophecy so abundantly fulfilled in themselves, in their wonderful activity along all lines of church work, in the Sunday-school and, most of all, in world evangelization! All this activity, however, comes through the Holy Spirit,—the Source of all power. Without him we can do nothing.

5. The Inspiring Example of Joash.—By reading the account of his career in 2 Chron. 24: 1-11, we can learn what one determined, divinely-directed man can do by going about his task in dead earnest. Indeed, he had not yet attained to a man's estate. He was but a mere boy when he began to do things, and a small boy at that,—only eight years old. As he grew older, the doing of big things came as a natural result. One of the things that troubled him was the condition of the old church home, and he decided to repair it. He laid definite plans, and insisted upon the coöperation of others. Priests and Levites were told to solicit funds, but failed. Then he hit upon the simple expedient of a box, placed in the temple, wherein all might conveniently deposit their gifts. His influence was so contagious that the box was soon filled. Then it was emptied and returned to its place. Filled again and again, it furnished all needed funds. Joash's self-imposed task was a wonderful success.

6. Suggestive References.—The need of visions (Prov. 29: 18). Daniel's understanding of visions and dreams (Dan. 1: 17). Jacob's vision (Gen. 28: 12). Jacob's vision at Beersheba (Gen. 46: 2-4). Joshua's vision (Josh. 5: 13-15). Isaiah's wonderful vision (Isa. 6: 1-8). Ezekiel's vision of the abounding waters (Ezek. 47: 1-12). The vision of Peter (Acts 10: 9-18). Paul's task of pressing towards the mark (Philpp. 3: 12-15). Our task (Col. 3: 1-17).

Thirty-six were baptized, three await the rite, four were received on their former baptism and two were reclaimed in the Leamersville church, Pa.,—Eld. C. O. Beery, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, evangelist.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. John A. Robinson, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, to begin in May in his home church.

Bro. H. D. Michael, of Garden City, Kans., to begin March 30 in his home church.

Bro. Saylor Greyer, of Indianapolis, Ind., to begin April 6 in the Buena Vista church, Va.

Bro. M. M. Eshelman, of Glendale, Cal., to begin April 6 in the Live Oak church, same State.

Bro. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans., to begin in September in the Panther Creek church, Iowa.

Bro. Jos. Spitzer, of Summitville, Ind., to begin April 6 in the Markle congregation, same State.

Bro. J. H. Fike, of Middlebury, Ind., to begin some time in June in the Laporte church, same State.

Bro. Ray S. Wagoner, of East Enid, Okla., to begin March 30 in the Hoyle Creek church, at Ames, same State.

PERSONAL MENTION

We have received word from the American Committee for Relief in the Near East that the Sunday-school party, which sailed from New York on the "Mauretania" on Friday, March 14, arrived at Southampton safely at noon on Friday, the twenty-first.

Bro. E. F. Sherfy, now in attendance at McPherson College, Kans., has been secured as pastor for the Morrill church, same State.

Bro. J. Harman Stover has changed his address from Route J, Box 171, Fresno, Calif., to 223 White Avenue, same city and State.

We are informed that Bro. Harvey Snell, of Mount Morris, Ill., will be available for engagements in evangelistic work after May 30.

Bro. Earl Jarboe, late of Quinter, Kans., has located in the Iowa River church, Iowa, and should now be addressed at Marshalltown, same State.

Bro. W. H. Yoder has resigned from the pastorate of the Monitor church, Kans., and expects to assume like duties in the Morrill church, same State.

Bro. T. E. George, of South Bend, Ind., has been chosen as pastor of the Manchester church, same State, and will enter upon that work in the near future.

Bro. George Manon has moved from College Hill, McPherson, Kans., to 203 East Tenth Street, Abilene, Kans., and requests his correspondents to address him accordingly.

Bro. David Byerly, of Lima, Ohio, was selected at the recent District Meeting of Northwestern Ohio, to represent that District at Winona Lake. One paper is sent to the Conference.

Bro. D. J. Lichty, whose illness had been referred to in a previous issue, is slowly gaining strength,—so we are told by our correspondent at La Place, Ill., where Bro. Lichty is sojourning at the present time.

Bro. W. R. Argabright, of Fairview, Mo., proposes to devote his entire time to the holding of evangelistic meetings. Any churches, desiring to secure his services should address him at their earliest convenience.

Bro. C. E. Schrock, late pastor of the Larned City church, Kans., has received a call to return to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and has responded to the invitation. Owing to that fact the series of meetings, announced to be held in the Larned City church, has been postponed.

Bro. Chas. M. Yearout is now at Chowchilla, Calif., where he expects to locate, and where his correspondents should hereafter address him. He is in a position to assist a number of churches in series of meetings. Should his assistance be desired, early application should be made to secure the desired dates.

The address of Bro. D. L. Miller, from now on, throughout the summer months, will be Mount Morris, Ill. If previous plans have not miscarried, he and Sister Miller are already on their way eastward. The meetings at Covina, Calif., closed March 16, with nine additions by baptism and others almost persuaded.

Bro. Jesse B. Emmert and wife, of India, temporarily located at 752 Herkimer Street, Pasadena, Calif., are visiting all the Sunday-schools of Southern California, under the direction of Bro. J. W. Cline, Sunday-school Secretary of the District. They expect to complete this work by May 11, after which they are to start eastward, aiming to reach Winona Lake in good time for the Conference.

Bro. P. S. Miller, who for many years has been the efficient pastor of the Roanoke church, Va., recently requested to be relieved of that work. Bro. B. B. Garber, of Waynesboro, same State, has consented to take charge of the pastorate so ably cared for hitherto by Bro. Miller, and has already entered upon his duties. The work in that city is in a prosperous condition, with an excellent outlook for the future.

Bro. Paul E. Wingerd, of Clarence, Iowa, grandson of our aged brother, John Zuck, of the same place, was chosen to the ministry and duly installed in May of last year. His name, however, was not reported for either the "Messenger" or Yearbook, as he was called to Camp, and a permanent address could not then be given. He is now located at the address above given, and we suggest that those interested enter his name in the Yearbook for future reference.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Bro. J. W. Chambers, of Moore Haven, Fla., makes a request among the Notes that should be responded to by those who may be able to give the desired information.

MISCELLANEOUS

Several of the lengthier communications from the churches are crowded out of the present issue, but will appear next week.

The District Meeting of Southern Ohio is to be held May 8 in the Pleasant Hill church, Pleasant Hill, Ohio. The Elders' Meeting will be held May 7. All business to come before the meeting should be in the hands of the Secretary, Bro. S. Z. Smith, Sidney, ten days prior to the meeting.

The little band of members at Dorrance, Kans., has been without a minister since Oct. 1, last. The members are anxious to secure some one who is able to attend to their spiritual needs. Any one who may be impressed to respond to this call, is invited to correspond with Bro. D. M. Shenk, Box 205, Dorrance, Kans.

We are informed that LaVerne College, Calif., has just decided to enter at once upon a campaign for $50,000 for another new building,—a men's dormitory. Other things are said to be in prospect, too, immediately after that little task is out of the way.

The District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania is to be held in the Spring Creek church, at Palmyra, April 30 and May 1. Elders are requested to note that matter for the District Booklet should be in the hands of the Clerk, Bro. H. K. Ober, not later than March 31.

Sister Alice E. Miller, Gaston, Ind., desires to correct a statement she made in her communication in "Gospel Messenger" of March 15, 1919. Instead of the wording, "Twenty-one were baptized," etc., she meant to say the following: "Nineteen were baptized, one was accepted on former baptism (trine immersion), and one was reclaimed."

Bro. John R. Snyder has been asked by the Committee of Arrangements of our next Conference to take charge of the "Daily," He will spare no pains to make the undertaking the success it ought to be, but obviously this can not be done without the coöperation of the entire membership. In our next issue we hope to publish his special announcement, bespeaking for it the considerate attention of our readers. It is none too early to have the subscriptions entered NOW, as he suggests.

Notice to Members of Southern Illinois.—The Mission Board of Southern Illinois will hold its regular quarterly meeting on Friday, April 4, at the home of the Secretary, Bro. E. E. Brubaker, at Virden, Ill. All business and reports from the workers should be in the hands of the Secretary prior to that date. All churches that are in arrears on their apportionment for District work, are urged to send in their quota AT ONCE. The "Forward Movement" of the church and District can not be carried out unless the churches respond to the call.

The Sunday-school of the Green Tree church, Oaks, Montgomery County, Pa., is to observe the fiftieth anniversary of its organization on Sunday, March 30, in an all-day service. Bro. Joseph Fitzwater, ninety years of age, has been superintendent during the half century, and Bro. Lewis E. Griffin has been secretary. Only one teacher, Jesse Davis, connected with the early days of the school, is living at the present time, so far as is known. It is the earnest desire of the school that all scholars who attended the opening session, be present at the anniversary, or send a letter.

Important Notice,—Bro. E. G. Diehm, Royersford, Pa., District Secretary, requests us to announce the following, of special importance to the churches of Southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Eastern New York: "By order of M. C. Swigart, District Moderator, notice is hereby given that the District Conference will be held in the Bethany church, 3255 Kensington Avenue, Philadelphia, on Thursday, April 24, 1919. The elders, by order of Bro. L. R. Holsinger, will meet on Wednesday evening, April 23, at 6 o'clock. All queries for the Conference must reach the Secretary not later than Saturday, April 5."

RELIEF AND RECONSTRUCTION NOTES

If there can be any doubt of the needs now existing in Armenia, with their urgency, the following cablegrams, received March 17, by the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, will surely help to dispel the illusion:

"From Tiflis: No bread anywhere. Government has not a pound. Forty-five thousand in Erivan City without bread. Not a dog, cat, horse, camel or any living thing in all Igdir region. Saw refugee women stripping flesh from dead horse with bare hands today. Another week will score ten thousand lost.—Signed, Barton, Sims.

"Widespread famine throughout Armenia. Refugees slowly starving on animal corpses, slaughter-house blood, chaff. Cholera expected this summer. Drugs, food, positively must be imported. Three hundred and thirty thousand refugees in West Caucasus need help.—Signed, Maynard."

The men thus cabling are representatives of the American Committee and are especially concerned with giving the people of America a true picture of the actual needs.

From all parts of the Brotherhood come reports of plans for the forthcoming campaign for relief funds. It is hoped that the work may be done very quickly in the Brotherhood, and that the campaign will not be allowed to drag over any great length of time.

In prosecuting this campaign, our churches should know that the gifts which they have made to the Armenian and Syrian Relief funds since the first of December, or the beginning of the great drive by the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, and which funds have come through our hands, will be placed to their credit in this larger campaign. Our committee feels that it would be unfair to do otherwise than to give this recognition to what our churches have done.

Material is being sent this week to all local churches, whose representative's name has been given us by the District representative of the Relief and Reconstruction Committee. We desire to send this literature into every church and are hoping that the campaign may be completely organized before this week is past.

Relief and Reconstruction Committee,
J. H. B. Williams, Secretary.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Korean Uprising

Many persons were killed and others wounded at Sungchun, Korea, recently, while a demonstration was being made by the people in favor of national independence. Of course, with Japan in full control of Korea, no uprisings of that sort are permitted and, as might be expected, the heavy hand of restraint has again fallen, as before, on the native Christians. All schools and churches have been closed, and native pastors and elders, to the number of one thousand, have been arrested, though there is not even a shadow of evidence to connect them, in any way, with the uprising. President Wilson has been asked to initiate action at the Peace Conference, to insure the independence of Korea under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Europe's Great Destitution

Without question, the lack of food supplies in Europe can no longer be regarded as problematical, but must be considered as an actual condition, to be met adequately, and disposed of satisfactorily. Whether we are actually desirous of extending a helping hand to our former foes, or not, is not the question. The fact remains that in self-protection against the seductive spread of Bolshevism, it must be done. It has been conclusively shown that people in the grip of hunger, and destitution in general, fall a ready prey to the delusive lure of Bolshevistic theories. These, like a pernicious epidemic, are sure to spread far and wide, if given a chance. Universal safety depends upon the elimination of Bolshevism by removing conditions that create it.

Bolshevism a Real Volcano

If only half of the things are true that have been charged up to Bolshevism and its dire effects upon humanity, it is undoubtedly the greatest blight that has ever threatened mankind. Captain Alexander Hendry, a member of the Red Cross forces in Paris, declares that all Europe is threatened by the pernicious propaganda of Bolshevism, and that no one can tell just when or where the smothered fires will burst forth in a volcanic eruption that will destroy life and property without mercy, and wholly subvert commonly-accepted standards of social propriety and decency. Already Russia has found to its sorrow that the pernicious principles of Bolshevism mean corruption and destruction. Whether the other countries will heed the warning, remains to be seen.

Where Real Security Is Found

At a recent gathering of prominent religious workers, the vital points of a League of Nations were carefully considered, after which the following resolution was passed: "Though we have the utmost confidence in the formation of a League of Nations around the council table at Versailles, and in the final acquiescence in the tabulated conditions of universal peace among the belligerent nations, the ultimate assurance of a lasting and universal peace will rest not upon parchment agreements, but upon the acquiescence of the hearts of men and the souls of nations in the brotherhood principles of Jesus Christ." That is a most admirable way of defining the basis of real security. Without a whole-hearted, unselfish purpose back of the League covenant, it is simply nothing.

Helping Unemployed Bartenders

A recent announcement of the Salvation Army promises effectual assistance to down-and-out bartenders in securing positions after the closing of saloons, July 1. For thirty years that organization has conducted an employment bureau for those who happen to be out of work, and thousands have secured profitable employment by that means. It will not fail in the task now confronting it,—so its prominent leaders say. We are also told that the argument advanced by liquor men, that the discontinuance of saloons will cause new and serious hardships by throwing people out of work, rendering manufacturing plants idle, and depriving cities, States and the Federal Government of large revenue, is simply deceptive propaganda. Prohibition States did not go out of business when saloons closed.

The Real "Yellow Peril"

So often has Asia been singled out as a menace to the world because of its dense population and its resultant military strength, that a greater danger has been wholly overlooked,—that of being a permanent breeding place for germs of disease. Asia is, and always has been, the home of plague and many other pests. At first thought this may not seem to be of any moment, but the presence of plague in epidemic form, especially in the ports of the Orient, does constitute a real menace to Americans. The facilities for travel have brought Asia and our Pacific Coast points in close touch, while the possession of the Philippines has multiplied the occasions for intercourse with the inhabitants of the Far East. Thus the diseases of Asia threaten, to some degree, the lives and health of the American population, and the situation, regarded from this point of view, has been aggravated by the conditions of war. An exchange points out that the present epidemic of plague in Asia began in Hongkong in 1894, and in Bombay in 1896, and has persisted since then. It was as deadly and widespread as ever during the first three months of 1918,—twenty-two years after the original outbreak. Constant vigilance will be necessary lest the epidemic of the Orient gain a foothold on our shores.

Where Children Are Not at Play

A traveler through the war-stricken area of France happened to spend a recent Sunday afternoon in one of the picturesque towns of that land. There were throngs of sad women on the streets, but comparatively few children. What few there were, had lost the child-like smile and happy laughter. In one of the beautiful parks that traveler stood beside a spraying fountain, where a few of the children were at play. A hideous something, however, seemed to hold their hearts under bitter restraint. All the joy and gladness, usually characteristic of care-free childhood, were utterly lacking. There were sober faces, and seemingly the gloom of the four years of agony was hanging like a heavy pall over their spirits. The tragedies of war are manifold, but one of the saddest was seen by the traveler that very day.

Liquor Men in Open Fight

As referred to in a recent item, the liquor element in the United States will leave no stone unturned to attack the constitutionality of the Federal Prohibition Amendment and the war-time Prohibition Act. As soon as the Treaty of Peace is signed, a suit to test the emergency prohibition law is to be started. Referendum elections in thirteen States have been arranged for, to determine whether the bone-dry Amendment will be sustained by the vote of the people. The distillers have joined forces with the brewers in a determined struggle to defeat the two measures above alluded to. This, therefore, is a time for a determined, united effort on the part of every promoter of prohibition principles. Let us pray that the cause of right may be upheld, but let us not forget to work with might and main to hold our ground!

War Supplies for Peace Purposes

It may not be exactly the actual "beating of swords into plowshares," but it is at least the very spirit of that procedure, when formidable war supplies are devoted to the peaceful pursuits of the husbandman. Twelve million dollars' worth of explosives have been shifted from the War Department to the Interior Department. This dynamite, when sold to the farmer, will blow up stumps, and clear and drain land, instead of destroying life. Then, too, there is sodium nitrate, to the value of $57,000,000, that was bought by the Government to make powder for the war, which is now to be distributed on farms through the Agricultural Department, for the fertilizing of crops. Surely, both of these changes are most admirable. They mean conservation of life and property, instead of destruction of what is highest and best.

Work Among Southern Mountaineers

Up to a comparatively recent period, the dwellers among the mountains of the South were largely isolated from the world and practically devoid of religious influences. Recent years, however, have wrought a change, and considerable work of a missionary and educational nature has been done among them. Thirty-seven schools are maintained by the Southern Baptist Church among the people. One school,—the Yancey Collegiate Institute of North Carolina,—illustrates the interest with which this work is supported. When the first subscription of $3,000 was needed, all gave their utmost,—in fact, many gave like the widow of old,—their all! Later on, $5,000 more was given. Now the property is worth $45,000, but its best assets, by far, are the transformed homes, improved farms and wide-awake churches. Most significant, too, is the changed attitude of the people towards whiskey. They now have the light of better knowledge.

A Real Danger

One of our readers calls attention to what he declares to be "increasing sentiment in favor of 'universal, compulsory military training,'" and urges that something be said regarding the situation. Some are inclined to draw considerable comfort from the fact that the Sixty-fifth Congress failed to pass a compulsory training bill. It should be remembered, however, that considerable propaganda was developed in favor of military training by the introduction of the drastic bill of Senator New, of Indiana. Then, too, just now the great newspapers are practically a unit on the question. Many State Legislatures are strongly in favor of military drills. The Senate of the Indiana Legislature is reported as having adopted a resolution endorsing universal military training, without a dissenting vote. One is made to wonder whether the great body of citizens of our land is fully reconciled to universal, compulsory military training, and if not, whether they are ready to act before it is too late. Is there any matter, connected with our Government, in which it is more vital that sober thought be taken by those who claim to be professed followers of the Prince of Peace? Should not the church protest against the adoption of principles, responsible in so large a measure for the world tragedy which is not even yet wholly ended? Another matter, greatly to be deplored, is the general lack of understanding as to just what the adoption of universal military training will really mean. It should be remembered that not one of the six military bills before Congress, from time to time, has been based on the greatly-heralded "Swiss system." Each one has been patterned after the most despicable Prussian militarism. To prevent the enactment of such legislation, early action is necessary: (1) Discussion, organized effort, and public expression of disapproval of such a law. (2) Protests to President Wilson and the nation's representatives.

One Divorce to Nine Marriages

That the number of divorces is constantly increasing throughout the United States, has been noticeable for some years. Latest statistics tell us that one marriage in nine comes to an inglorious end in the divorce court. It is difficult to assign the leading cause for the domestic infelicities that finally are disposed of by means of the divorce court, but prominent judges of the courts assure us that two causes are chiefly responsible: (1) The lack of proper parental training, concerning the sacredness of the marriage relation. (2) A failure to make home associations the chief essential of congenial married life. If the partners in the matrimonial covenant fail to find happiness in the home, they will seek to obtain it elsewhere, to their great loss, eventually.

Age Counts Little on Mission Fields

Perhaps because there is so little time to think of it, missionaries on the foreign field pay scant attention to advancing years. Dr. E. M. Wherry, of the Punjab mission in India, at the age of seventy-six, has just completed his fifty-first year as a worker under the Foreign Board of the Presbyterian Church. As president of various religious organizations and movements, the aged missionary is doing an enormous amount of work annually. He served as editor of "The Indian Bookman," and during the year just past, revised a manual on Islam, compiled descriptive catalogues, wrote a book on "Our Missions in India," etc. Besides all that he preached and attended to the general station duties at Ludhiana and superintended extensive repairs and alterations in the mission property. Judging by Dr. Wherry's activity at his advanced age, one would almost conclude that he is "renewing his youth" by his earnest "waiting upon the Lord."

The Death Train

In a recent number of the "Red Cross Magazine" Rudolph Bukeley graphically describes how a trainload of diseased, crazed, dying and dead prisoners was dragged madly over into Siberia, in cars reeking with filth. Eight hundred of the poor wretches died before the Red Cross workers could render effectual aid. "I have seen the dead," writes Mr. Bukeley, "through whose bodies disease and vermin had eaten their way until life itself had departed, after five months of daily, agonizing torture from hunger, filth and exposure. Through the windows of box-cars, 10×24 in size, I have counted forty animals that once were human,—men, women and children. I saw faces that, when they glared at me, I could not recognize as belonging to human beings, but rather resembling beasts of a species unknown to man. I saw as many as sixty men fighting like dogs for pieces of bread, thrown to them by the sympathetic poor people of Nikolsk. And these sights can be duplicated all over Siberia. Tens of thousands will literally rot to death."

An Uprising Against Fashion's Follies

It is a matter of decided interest that the women's clubs of New York have come to the point when they realize that continued indulgence in fashion's foibles will prove disastrous to the best interests of the nation. A rigid demand has been made by these clubs on the fashion-mongers that they must stop a further "disrobing" of women,—that there is a decided limit to styles that "disrobe" instead of "cover." The club women of Nebraska are also putting themselves on record by a severe arraignment of the "hobble-skirt," which, by the way, has also incurred the universal condemnation of railroad and traction companies, because it impedes the speedy boarding of cars and departure therefrom, and is productive of accidents. The New York women passed the following resolutions, which they threaten to back up with a boycott: "Whereas, The designers of women's evening gowns have led fashion to the extreme limit of indecency, and this is having a most demoralizing effect upon the youth of the country, therefore be it 'Resolved, That we, women of New York, do all in our power, to urge women to dress modestly, and that we, through a committee, appointed by the President of the City Federation, seek to control indecency in dress by appealing to designers of women's fashions and leading shops, and by a public appeal to women.'" In this outspoken declaration of American womanhood against extreme, indecent and eccentric fashions, there is a hopeful sign of a coming declaration of independence from the bondage and profiteering of the fashion-makers. In behalf of our readers we voice a hearty "Amen."

HOME AND FAMILY

Let Us Be Kind

Let us be kind;
The way is long and lonely,
And human hearts are asking for this blessing only,—
That we be kind.
We can not know the grief that men may borrow,
We can not see the souls storm-swept by sorrow,
But love can shine upon the way today, tomorrow—
Let us be kind.

Let us be kind;
This is a wealth that has no measure,
This is of heaven and earth the highest treasure,—
Let us be kind.
A tender word, a smile of love in meeting,
A song of hope and victory to those retreating,
A glimpse of God and brotherhood while life is fleeting,—
Let us be kind.

Let us be kind;
Around the world the tears of time are falling,
And for the loved and lost these human hearts are calling,—
Let us be kind.
To age and youth let gracious words be spoken,
Upon the wheel of pain so many weary lives are broken.
We live in vain who give no tender token,—
Let us be kind.

Let us be kind;
The sunset tints will soon be in the west,
Too late the flowers are laid then on the quiet breast,—
Let us be kind.
And when the angel guides have sought and found us,
Their hands shall link the broken ties of earth that bound us,
And heaven and home shall brighten all around us,—
Let us be kind.

Grandmother Warren

BY BESS BATES

5. Mary Begins an Education

MARY was spending the afternoon on Grandmother Warren's porch. She had brought over her fancy work, and busily stitched away while they talked. Finally, she held up the piece of embroidery for Grandmother's inspection.

"Very pretty," Grandmother assured her.

"I like it myself," said Mary, twisting about so that she could see it also.

"I have worked on it every afternoon for nearly a month. I love to do it."

"You have lots of pretty things," went on Grandmother.

"I surely have. I have made lots and had so many given to me."

"I shouldn't think you would need many more," suggested Grandmother.

"I don't suppose I really do, but I may as well be doing this as nothing at all."

"My dear child, haven't you anything else to do?" Grandmother appeared surprised.

"Why, I can't spend all day just at housework," declared Mary.

"You might go to school," suggested Grandmother.

"Oh, I couldn't do that. I am through." Mary was very apparently holding in, on account of her respect for Grandmother. "I'm a married woman, now. I can't go to school any more, even if I should want to."

"One is never done learning, Mary, and the greatest lesson of all is the last one we get when life is ended. Right now you have an opportunity that will never come to you again. You have time to do the things you want to. So many young women fritter away their time on reading a magazine or two and piling up fancy work. Have you ever listened to them as they talk? There are just about three things they talk about: The latest stitch they have learned, their troubles and their neighbors. And that is about all they think about. When they get a little older, and have children to care for, they add them to their conversations, and half of them give up making a real effort to do more than just to get along. They drop fancy work in despair, and their thoughts and talk revolve about their troubles, their children and their neighbors. Just listen to the talk of almost any group of women and see if that isn't so.

"I have one neighbor in particular who comes in here so often and sits and sits and sits, while her children run wild on the streets. I have never yet heard her mention a subject of interest. It's one continual round of gossip with her. One can't blame her, though, for she has nothing else in her mind. And the care of several children has sapped all her surplus energy, so that it is too late for her to start over. But you can do better than that, for you have a chance right now that will probably never come to you again."

"What is there for me to do?" asked Mary, a little hurt that Grandmother should be directing such vigorous assaults at the way she spent her leisure time. Her house was in perfect order and even her dresser drawers presented an astonishing array of neatness. Had she not a right to make fancy work during her afternoons?

"The fact that you can ask a question like that shows that you have not gone very far," went on Grandmother. "If you had started to study and think a little, there would be plenty of things that you would want to do. For instance, I have lately been reading this book, 'The Seven Greatest Books in the World.' After reading it, I found that there were about two dozen other books I would like to read, if I could get the time. But you might not care for something like that. I just told you about it, so that you would see that I did not think I was too old to keep on learning.

"It seems to me that you ought to be interested in health. That is peculiarly a woman's subject. You could learn something about dieting, nursing, sanitation, the care and feeding of children. If that did not keep you busy, you might start in on domestic science and learn scientific cookery, chemistry of the household and study the most efficient ways of running your house. So much for the most practical things. No doubt you would enjoy studying a few political subjects, for you and John could talk them over. You can't become interested in politics without getting started in biography and history. You and John ought to do that together in the evenings.

"Then there is your Sunday-school class. Do you know just how to teach it? You have the 'what to teach' all written out for you, but do you know the best way to present it to your class? Learning that would keep you busy for quite a while. Then I have often thought of the pleasure that people miss in their music. You have your piano and can play so well, but what do you really know about music? You go to a teacher and she gives you a selection to learn. You master that and then get another. That is the way it goes until your fingers have been trained so that you can play the ordinary music. Then the playing that is done is mostly hymns and popular songs. You miss all of the pleasure of learning about the composers, what their music means, and why and how it was written. Why, Mary, my child, I wish I were you, for I long to do it all myself."

Mary had dropped her work and was listening with interest by this time.

"How can I start?" she asked.

"Well, you can just get books and read, but the best way to begin, since you can't go to school, is to take a correspondence course from some good college on a favorite subject. After a while you will learn how to go on by yourself."

"I'm going right home and see what John says about it," declared Mary.

The "Housing" of Life

BY G. W. TUTTLE

THE "housing" of life is not unimportant. I love a good bed when I am weary, a substantial meal when I am hungry, a roof over my head when the storm rages, and a warm fire when the cold north wind blows. I have all of a healthy man's love for the creature comforts, or the "housing" of life. But let us take heed lest we surfeit the body and starve the soul.

Life is not things. Life,—real life,—is not silver and gold, and houses and lands, and stocks and bonds, and creature comforts. Real life is love and friendship and service.

A quaint old man, a devout Christian, was being shown a new Queen Anne cottage by a friend of his, who was not a Christian. The friend was very proud of his new cottage, and he said: "This is what every man needs,—a Queen Anne cottage."

The old man replied: "My friend, if a man has the fear of the Lord in his heart, and he can get a good beefsteak to eat, he can get along very well without a Queen Anne cottage."

Bodily comforts and needs multiply. The more a man has, the more he thinks he needs. Would that it were always so with the soul, until we had an insatiable appetite for the unlimited soul-food that God loves to give us.

It avails little to make the body comfortable if the higher needs of the soul are neglected. The softest bed becomes a hard couch when conscience is neglected night and day. Leaden, indeed, is the heart in which there is no God. Hopeless is the soul in which there is no divine life, no responsiveness to God. When God finds even a spark of divine life in our souls, he fans it into a flame.

God pity the people who think that the biggest thing in this old world is a new auto, or a fine suit of clothes, or some creature comfort of life. Their foreground needs changing. Their perspective is wrong. Their ideas of value are perverted. The biggest thing in this old world is a heart and life overflowing with love for Jesus Christ. How full is such a life! How rich is such a soul! All the resources of heaven are back of the Christ-filled life.

ices. For a week prior to the feast, services were held in the church daily, conducted by Bro. E. H. Eby, assisted by Indian brethren. The aim of these services was to prepare the people for a spiritual feast. All the members, working in mission employment, were dismissed from their work fifteen minutes early, so that they might attend the meetings. Twelve of our mission family, including the writer, from Ankdesvar, had the pleasure of attending this feast.

At Anklesvar, on the last day of the old year, three hundred people came together under a tree on the mission compound, half of whom were eligible to partake of the communion services. Bro. Stover had charge of the services. There was not room in the assembly hall, hence the people were seated outside. We trust that the new church can be built before the next love feast occasion. After the feast, a singing service, which continued until after midnight, was held in the Boys' School Building. It was an inspiring occasion.

Early in January of this year, feasts were held at Vada, where thirty-one communed, and at Dahanu, where about thirty-five communed. Bro. Adam Ebey and family, just from America, were present at the Dahanu feast. In a previous report mention was made of the Ahwa feast, Dec. 9, where sixty-six of the seventy-five members of that church were present.

Condition of Membership, Needs and Future Outlook

Bro. Long writes from Vyara as follows: "Our people do not worship idols any more, I think, but they do drink toddy, most of them. They are trying to quit, they say, but too many of them even drink liquor, for which we are very sorry. There are shops on 'every fence corner' in this State, making the temptation very real to them. We had many confessions of drinking and promises to quit, just prior to our love feast.

"The people want to join us and feel very bad when we say: 'No,' because they are not ready. Our main trouble is that after they are baptized they do not attend services well enough to grow in grace and understanding. They remain so nearly what they were before that it is a question with us, always, whether to baptize. My solution for that is the thought that we can't expect much from them, our hope lying in the children, whom we can and do teach. If the parents are won, the children are in our hands, you see.

"The field is open, and the people are here to be taught and may be taught and baptized without much difficulty. They have but little persecution to endure here. The tide is in our favor now, though at first, in new villages, there is some persecution. But we easily overcome it, it seems.

"Our set of teachers are as yet illy prepared for shepherding the flock, and so few too, that we do not try to baptize many. If we had a few hundred good teachers, we might baptize villages and villages, all the way down to Bansda and Dharampoor, we think."

Bro. Arnold reports that there are prospects of a ripe harvest in Raj-Pipla State, but an evangelistic missionary is badly needed. The past year has been the most fruitful one in the history of the Ahwa work, where another missionary is needed for evangelistic work. This is especially encouraging to our work among the Marathi people, which is not as well developed as that in Gujerat. The people do not seem so responsive at our other two Marathi stations,—Vada and Dahanu,—where caste has a stronger hold on the people. Caste prejudice at Bulsar is becoming less, and the outlook appears good. Bro. E. H. Eby has taken charge of the English services on Sunday evening. Perhaps the most promising feature of the work at Bulsar and at Jalalpor is among the aboriginal tribes to the East, who are responding to and are being influenced toward Christianity by the educational and evangelistic work that is being done among them.

The conditions mentioned by Bro. Long, as prevailing among the village Christians at Vyara, is quite typical of too many of the village Christians in the Anklesvar district. Their tendency to drink prevents their spiritual growth and development, and often gets them into trouble. The closing of the drink shops would greatly hasten the time when hundreds, yes, thousands, of them would accept Christianity. Since the fight for national prohibition in the States has been won, those of us who are interested in the evangelization and uplift of the backward races, will do well to contend for world-wide prohibition. It would do much to hasten the economic, the educational, and the spiritual advancement of the peoples whom we serve. A liquor-dealer confessed to Bro. Stover that prohibition would help India, for a man who spends ten out of twenty-five rupees,—his month's wages,—for liquor, can not make a decent living on what is left. Among the Bhils, who have been caught for thieving, there were a number of Christians. This is a temptation to many of them, because it is so prevalent in the villages near the railroad. These often make a full confession to Bro. Stover, and in many cases they had been drinking,—so they confess. The missionary does not try to shield them from punishment, but encourages them to confess everything and to yield themselves to the mercy of the court. One day the mamladar, the chief county official, asked the missionary: "Why do they confess to you and not to me?" "That is easy to answer," replied the missionary. "It is because I forgive them, while you punish them." In other words the one seeks to punish them, while the other seeks to get them out of the difficulty and to have their sins pardoned.

One encouraging feature of the work here is the constant coming of the people to the missionary for his advice and help. Among them is the Government official and the Mohammedan as well as the poor, ignorant Bhil. There was a time when the missionaries wished the people would come to them in time of need, and the fact that they are now coming, is considered a very hopeful feature of our work.

Bro. Pittenger writes concerning conditions at Dahanu as follows: "The spiritual condition of those already professing to be Christians has been so sad and our efforts have been largely with them, to get them to see the beauty of holiness. An unclean, careless, indifferent church is powerless and a constant reproach to the Master. God's Spirit is working with these careless members and they are showing that they are wakening up to the fact that a Christian has duties to perform as well as privileges to enjoy. For this awakening we praise the dear Father who is our strength and shield.

"Caste opposition is tremendous here. It amounts to fanaticism and madness at times. Caste will hasten its own downfall.

"Somehow, the Lord has shown us that opposition is needed to make possible steady and sturdy growth. The more the opposition, the greater his glory will shine forth, and the brighter and more blessed is the fulfilling of his promises to us. The day was when I dreaded this opposition more than I have words to describe. I do not court it now, but am not in any wise fearful that God's work will be successfully hindered, or for long retarded by it. The history of the church in the past shows that she has prospered most when opposition was greatest.

"Briefly I want to tell you that the prospects, here at Dahanu, are as great and blessed as his promises, and this is altogether enough to encourage the most faint-hearted.

"Just now we are having a number of inquirers for baptism. Among them are a number of Mohammedans and high-caste people. We rejoice because of these prospects. Pray with us that they may come with pure motives to him who is indeed their Savior." A. T. Hoffert.

BRETHREN'S HOME, GREENVILLE, OHIO

The trustees of the Home met today in business session, this being the last meeting of the fiscal year. At present there are twenty-three aged brethren and sisters in the Home,—the oldest being ninety-two years of age. The ac-

ing in ages from fourteen years down to a little ov year, are receiving the motherly care of Sister Ru Landis. These children are anxiously looking forwar the time when Christian homes will open their doors admit them as members of the family.

The very efficient superintendent and matron, Bro and Sister G. W. Minnich, who have been in charge the past ten years, except a two-year vacation, are spa no pains in caring for the inmates and the institutio every way in their power.

The "Sisters' Aids" of the Bradford, Salem and Gr ville churches rendered valuable assistance in the ma of clothing for the children, which is highly appreciate the management of the Home. Jerry Hollinge

To this couple were eight children,—two daughters who died in infancy, three sons and three daughters who survive. Both fa and mother lived to see the day when all their living dren united with the church. Early in life they united the Church of the Brethren, of which they were sta supporters. In 1887 father was elected to the ministry, served the church faithfully. His best work,—in fact, t ly all of his work,—was done in his home congrega though he did serve other congregations as elder f number of years.

NOTES FROM VALI, INDIA

This has been a very hard year for our people, espec for our farmers, as there was scarcely any rain at proper season, and the crops were a failure. There they have no grain for food and no money to buy. It necessary for us to give work to the people or their f lies would suffer, and as there was new work to be b here, it was not hard to find employment for them.

The Boys' Boarding School is growing and new quar are necessary to accommodate all the boys who are ing to us now, so we are building a temporary building them. We have sixty-five now and they are quite crow As soon as possible we want to have the other quar

Training Class, with Bro. M. E. Stair as leader. We contemplate holding a revival this fall, in the month of October, with Bro. H. M. Brubaker, evangelist. Eld. M. D. Stair was chosen elder in charge for another year.—J. L. Snavely, Alvo, Nebr., March 20.

Bethel church met in council March 12. One letter was received and one was granted. Our church and Sunday-school work has been greatly hindered since October, owing to bad roads and the epidemic. As spring opens we hope that better work will be accomplished. Brother and Sister Geo. Hilton are earnest workers, and Bro. Hilton gives us excellent sermons. Our County Sunday-school Convention will be held at our church April 12 and 13. The date set for our love feast is May 3.—Ella S. Saylor, Carleton, Nebr., March 14.

Lincoln church met in council March 7, with Eld M. E. Stair in charge. Six letters were granted. Our love feast will be held May 11.—Mary A. Hargleroad, Lincoln, Nebr., March 14.

NEW MEXICO

Clovis.—We are in the beginning of a series of revival meetings, conducted by Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Garden City, Kans. During these meetings, we plan to dedicate our church, which has just been remodeled. Our Sunday-school rendered a program Sunday. The school and Christian Workers' Society sent an offering of $10.35 for the India Famine Relief.—Minnie B. Rodes, Clovis, N. Mex., March 10.

NORTH CAROLINA

Maple Grove.—March 1 Bro. Geo. Reed was elected delegate to Annual Conference. Our quarterly collection was $8.35. The writer was elected correspondent for the "Messenger."—Annie Perrell, Lexington, N. C., March 17.

NORTH DAKOTA

Edgeley.—The West Branch of the Englevale church met in council March 15, with Eld. Herbert presiding. Bro. C. Crill and Eld. Dierdorff were reelected to the respective offices of church clerk and elder; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent. Bro. S. O. Stemen and wife were installed into the ministry. Owing to the District Meeting being held in Canada, we appointed no delegate to Conference. Bro. Stemen was appointed delegate to attend the council meeting of the East Branch of Englevale church, March 13. We are thankful that the influenza epidemic has taken none of our members. Owing to the mild winter we have had, we offer Sunday-school and church services nearly every week, with good attendance and interest. —Pearl Brown, Edgeley, N. Dak., March 17.

OHIO

Black Swamp church met in council March 2, with Eld. C. W. Stutsman presiding. We reelected our church officers, with Bro. Geo. Garner as secretary. Sister Mary Garner was chosen correspondent. Bro. T. W. Crago was chosen delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. Walter Kurfies, alternate. Bro. Geo. Garner is our delegate to Annual Conference, and Bro. S. J. Baker, alternate. We reorganized our Missionary Committee as follows: Sister Edith Baker, three years; Sister Ella Garner, two years; Bro. Walter Kurfies, one year. On our Temperance Committee Bro. Ray Johnson was chosen for three years; Bro. Geo. Garner for two years, and our elder for another year. We decided to have a series of meetings and a love feast,—the time of these to be announced later. On account of influenza, last fall, we had to close our series of meetings at that time. Beginning March 3 we continued our meetings for seven days with a fair attendance and very good interest. Bro. L. I. Moss, of Portage, had charge.—Mrs. Asenath Baker, Le Moyne, Ohio, March 14.

Blue Creek church met in council March 15. Bro. D. D. Thomas is to remain as pastor for another year. Bro. S. C. Stombaugh is superintendent of the Sunday-school; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent. We are to have a series of meetings this year in or near Brieeton, with Bro. Roy Mishler as evangelist. Sister Sylvia Stombaugh will have charge of the song service. Our delegate to Annual and District Meeting is Bro. D. D. Thomas.—Mrs. D. D. Thomas, Latty, Ohio, March 17.

Covington.—Our pastor, Bro. Geo. W. Flory, followed the example set by the seventy in the Scriptures, who went out two by two. Ninety-six went out to visit members of our church. Later they held a meeting to which every member was invited. Over eight hundred were present and the get-together spirit was manifest in all that was done. Speeches were made, expressing the hope and determination to do greater things in the Christian cause. Bro. Flory said: It is a joy to be in the house of the Lord when peace and happiness prevail. This church has been blessed by the moving in of new members this spring. We appreciate these fellow-workers and helpers, and trust we may welcome many more.—Elizabeth D. Rosenberger, Covington, Ohio, March 17.

Eversole church met in council Feb. 27, Eld. John Root presiding. Bro. Harley Eby and Sister Swinger were also with us. Two letters were granted and one received. Bro. Jesse Root was elected delegate to Annual Conference, and Brethren H. A. Priser and C. G. Erbaugh delegates to District Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast May 17, at 5 P. M. Bro. Root closed with the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Hattie Kreitzer, New Lebanon, Ohio, March 15.

Frechurg church met in council Feb. 15, with Eld. A. H. Miller presiding. The church decided to have Bro. Miller conduct a series of meetings to be held some time during the month of May or June. At a previous council two deacons were chosen and installed,—Brethren John Minser and Frank Culler. Sister Minser not being present at that time, was installed at the meeting of Feb. 15.—Mrs. Mary E. Bowman, Paris, Ohio, March 19.

Greenville.—Bro. B. F. Petry began a series of meetings at this place Feb. 16, closing March 9. The attendance and interest were good. Bro. Petry gave very helpful discourses. Seven were baptized. March 15 our council meeting was held, with Eld. G. W. Minnich preaching. Nine letters were received. Bro. A. H. Weiner will represent us at the Annual Conference. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren G. W. Minnich, Jerry Hollinger and S. S. Holladay.—Ella Miller, 600 Wayne Avenue, Greenville, Ohio, March 18.

Middle District congregation assembled in quarterly council March 13. The official board were all present with Eld. C. V. Coppock acting as moderator. Nine of our members were granted letters. We shall miss them. Bro. John Rohrer was elected trustee. Brethren J. P. Miller and Jesse Coy were elected as delegates to District Meeting. Eld. J. P. Miller was elected delegate to Annual Conference. Our communion service will be held at 2 P. M. the first week of meetings is to precede the communion. Much other matter, pertaining to the welfare of the congregation, was pleasantly provided for.—Glenn C. Miller, R. D. 3, Tippecanoe City, Ohio, March 14.

Painter Creek church met in council March 8, with Bro. Lawrence Kreider presiding. One letter was received and eleven granted. Our love feast will be May 24. The church decided to install a more efficient heating plant. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren Lawrence Kreider and Wm. Sayger; to District Meeting, Brethren Wm. Royer, Lawrence Kreider and John W. Fourman. Upon ratification of the Federal Dry Amendment, a very impressive exercise was held in the Sunday-school. A map of the United States having been hung on the wall, several boys placed a star upon each State that had ratified the dry amendment.—Martha Minnich, Greenville, Ohio, March 15.

Palestine church met in council March 13, with Eld. R. M. Lantis presiding. Officers were elected as follows: Bro. R. M. Lantis, clerk for two years; Bro. Frank Baker, clerk; the writer, correspondent. Four letters were granted and one received. Our delegate to Annual Conference is Bro. R. M. Lantis; to District Meeting, Brethren R. M. Lantis and Noah Baker. We decided to hold a love feast Oct. 25, at 5 P. M. Recently we took an offering of $65 for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Ella Hollinger, Greenville, Ohio, March 17.

Pleasant Hill church met in council March 6, with Bro. C. L. Flory presiding. We are hoping to have a revival in May, with our pastor, Bro. John A. Rohlinson, in charge. A communion will follow the revival. Delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. John Robinson; alternate, Bro. C. L. Flory; to District Meeting, Brethren Harvey Brown, John Robinson and Lester Sollenberger. As the coming District Meeting will be at Pleasant Hill, a Committee on Arrangements was chosen. The letters of our pastor and wife were received; also letters were granted to our former pastor and wife and to five others. At our teachers' meeting, plans were made for greater service in our Sunday-school. It has kept up in attendance and interest during the winter in spite of sickness.—Mary West, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, March 14.

Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Benner and F. E. Brobaker. Our delegate to Annual Conference is Bro. Benner. Our love feast will be held at the close of the feast on Sunday evening, May 11. Our series of meetings began Feb. 8. Bro. Reuben Shroyer came to assist us Feb. 10. He preached twenty-three sermons, besides by his efforts three confessed Christ, and two were reclaimed. One dear aged brother was baptized just before our meeting started, making a total of four.—Mrs. Elsie Brubaker, Duncansville, Pa., March 17.

East Petersburg congregation met in regular council March 12 at Salunga, with our elder, Bro. Henry Hottenstein, presiding. Many things were discussed in regard to the welfare of God's church. The missionary solicitors handed in their report, which was $79.84. The church will send our elder, Bro. Hottenstein, as delegate to Annual Meeting, and Brethren William Zobler, Reuben Shroyer and Phares Forney to District Meeting. Seven church letters were granted. Our love feast is appointed for May 6 and 7, at East Petersburg, beginning at 2:30 P. M. On the evening of March 2 an interesting missionary program was rendered at the East Petersburg house. Bro. Harry Nye, of Elizabethtown, gave us an inspiring address. A silver offering of $42 was lifted for missions. Sunday, March 9, two of our Sunday-school boys were baptized by Eld. M. G. Forney.—Phares J. Forney, East Petersburg, Pa., March 14.

Harrisburg.—Feb. 23, at 8:30 A. M., about seventy-five persons (with a score of children) gathered at the prison for services. It was the first experience of the kind for many. Six rendered a song, to speak in a prison. Many of the prisoners called for prayer. The evangelistic meeting closed March 9 with two accessions. Others are seeking the way of life. Bro. Hess preached the Word with power. All who came were well fed with the sincere milk of the Word. Much personal work was done, especially by Bro. Bowman and our pastor, Bro. Conner. Earnest prayers were offered in behalf of lost souls. The Christian Workers' Society met Sunday evening, March 13, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Henry, 1223 Derry Street. Mr. Henry can not walk, hear nor see. The attendance was 34, with a full program. Topics were nearly all based on the Bible. The offering given remained in the society. Our meeting to convene April 10, at 7:30 P. M.—Sallie E. Schoffner, 212 S. Thirteenth Street, Harrisburg, Pa., March 13.

Leamersville church, Dr. Henry, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, commenced a series of meetings Feb. 23, which continued till March 9. The attendance was good. Faith, repentance, confession and baptism were especially made prominent in his talks. Thirty-six were baptized. There are now seventy-three members added on their former baptism, and two were reclaimed,—making in all forty-five additions to the church. Among the converts were two fathers and six mothers. The rest being young people, members of the Sunday-school.—Jas. A. Sell, Hollidaysburg, Pa., March 14.

Lititz church met in council March 12, with Eld. J. W. G. Hershey presiding. Five certificates of membership were granted. Eld. Hershey was chosen to represent our congregation at Annual Meeting, and Brethren Henry Nies and Jacob Gibbel at District Meeting. Various committees were elected for the coming year. The Missionary Committee,—Bro. John R. Gibbel, Sister Anna Gross and Bro. Morris Trimmer,—will have charge of plans for the "Forward Movement." Bro. H. M. Eberly was chosen Christian Workers' President for six months. We decided to hold our love feast on Good Friday (April 18). Services will be held at 9:30 in the morning and 2:30 in the afternoon. Eld. H. A. Ditzler, of Elizabethtown College, preached a most helpful sermon on "Thy Will Be Done on Earth As It Is in Heaven." Feb. 16 the Alexander Mack Bible Class had charge of the Christian Workers' meeting. Topic, "Mountain Top Experiences." March 16 the Volunteer Band of Elizabethtown College gave a very instructive and inspiring program. An offering of $384 was given for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Florence B. Gibbel, Lititz, Pa.

Little Swatara church met in council March 10 at the Frystown house, with Eld. Wenger presiding. Elders John Herr and Samuel Whitmer were also present. Twelve letters were granted and two received. The congregation being large, the meeting was decided upon dividing it, for the purpose of doing more efficient work. The eastern part is to be known as the Little Swatara church, and the western part as the Swatara church. The congregation known as the Little Swatara church will meet March 22 at the Frystown house, for the purpose of organizing. The part known as the Swatara church will meet at the Fredericksburg house March 24. We expect the Volunteer Band of Elizabethtown College to give a program, some time during the spring term. March 9 a series of meetings closed at the Merkey house with Eld. Samuel Whitmer, of Bevelry, as evangelist. Six converted, three reclaimed to the Master's service.—Annie B. Wenger, Fredericksburg, Pa., March 14.

Philadelphia (First Church).—During the month of February, Bro. J. H. Cassady was in the city, working up interest in behalf of the endowment fund for Juniata College. Feb. 2 he preached both morning and evening. Feb. 16 Bro. A. B. Miller, formerly of Hagerstown, Md., preached morning and evening. Since our last report two young men and one young woman united with the church by baptism.—Mrs. Wm. H. B. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., March 14.

Increased interest and zeal in the Master's service mark the ress of the meetings.—Ada M. Shunk, South Waterloo, Iowa, eb. 20.

arden City.—August 1 of last year I took charge of this church his place, as pastor and elder. I have found it a large field, where y more workers could be used and even then the territory could be adequately covered. We will gladly give any information desired to any one looking for a location in a land of "broad s" as we have at this place. We were here only about two months n influenza closed all services for three months. During that time and I were both pressed into the work of nursing by the Red ss Branch of this place. It was not always pleasant or easy, but were glad to be able, in a small way, to follow in the footsteps our Master in alleviating suffering. It also afforded us an opunity to get better acquainted. O, that we might be better fit- to turn all the circumstances of life to the saving of souls! We e recently made to rejoice in being privileged to lead a precious ul into the baptismal waters that she might be "born of the wa- and of the Spirit." A young lady of large promise is already ing forward to special preparation for a life of active Christian vice. The revival services, planned for last fall, we were forced ostpone. We have now set the first Sunday before opening for March with our love feast on Monday evening, April 21. The decision the church was that the writer conduct the meetings. We have ed it hard to get back to a normal condition in the services. e the quarantine has been lifted, but are glad to see that we are having a better attendance than at any time since our arrival e.—H. D. Michael, Garden City, Kans., March 17.

The class collected $36.06, and added 06, of which $40 was used for India Famine Relief Work; $15 was lied to Relief and Reconstruction Work in Europe. A Christmas was sent to Kansas City, amounting to $7.58. We pay $2.80 Sunday-school. The B. Y. P. D. service flag we paid $2.80.—Blanche ward. Abilene, Kans., March 12.

loniton.—Bro. W. H. Yoder, pastor of the Monitor church, handed his resignation, and expects to take up pastoral work at Morrill, s. We are indeed sorry to see Bro. Yoder and his family leave s as they have faithfully served the church at this place. We have ured Bro. E. F. Sherly, who is now attending McPherson Col- e. Last spring the children were given instruction and baptized harvest. A few weeks ago they brought back the proceeds, which ounted to $40. This money was equally divided between the ld Rescue Work of our District and the Armenian-Syrian Re- f. Sister Edgar Rothrock, of Wichita, is a member of the church hold a revival meeting in November.—Mrs. Laura Murrey, Con- ley, Kans., March 17.

est Wichita.—Feb. 9 Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe began a revival. Dur- the three weeks of earnest effort, thirty-eight confessed Christ, st of whom have been baptized. The church in general has en on new life. Every member seems to be busy for Christ. The mmunity gave a tangible appreciation of the evangelist's services. e credit is due the choir from the East Side church for their ing to make the meetings a success. On the evening of March e closed our meetings with a love feast. March 7 our members t in council, in charge of Eld. W. R. Mishler, of Newton, Kans. e spirit of the meeting was wholesome and forward-looking. We opted the "Forward Movement" plan. We took action in regard the securing of a parsonage. The building committee was in- ted to submit a report covering the most fitting method to e given the new members. Prospects look good for a year of help- service for the Kingdom.—R. T. Egge, Wichita, Kans., March 20.

She leaves a mother, nine sisters and two brothers. She united with the Church of the Brethren, Feb. 23, 1912, and lived in the faith she professed until death. Services by Elders A. N. Hylton and Michael Reed. Interment in the family burying ground near her home.—Fernie L. Dickerson, Willis, Va.

Roose, Catharine Miller, daughter of David Y. Miller and wife, born in Elkhart County, Ind., died at their home in Goshen, Ind., Feb. 19, 1919. Aug. 14, 1850, she was married to Henry Roose. She united with the Church of the Brethren early in life, and served faithfully in the deacon's office for many years. Of four sons and six daughters, all were living at the time of her death. All are members of the church. Funeral arrangements had been made, with ward and each of the duties of their son, Reuben Roose, of Naperville, Ill. A double funeral was held at Yellow Creek church, where the writer officiated for the mother, and Bro. T. E. George for the son. Interment at Yellow Creek (Mennmite) cemetery. Text, Rev. 14: 13.—Frank Kreider, R. D. 3, Goshen, Ind.

Sechrist, Mrs. Mary (nee Strickler), died March 9, 1919, at Yoe, Pa., aged 77 years, 7 months and 16 days. Death was due to a paralytic stroke. She is survived by six sons and four daughters. Services at the Free People's church, Yne, Pa., by Bro. J. L. Myers and Eld. J. M. Myers. Interment in Union cemetery. Text, Heb. 2: 27, 28.—S. C. Godfrey, R. D. 3, Hon, Pa.

Schwab, John William, infant son of Brother Ira and Sister Nina Schwab, died Feb. 28, 1919. Burial in the afternoon of the following day. Interment in the Ivester cemetery. Short services were conducted in the home by the pastor.—D. Warren Shock, Grundy Center, Iowa.

Shidaler, Daniel, son of Elias and Mary Shideler, born in Wayne County, died Feb. 8, 1919, aged 77 years, 2 months and 6 days. He moved with his parents to Huntington County when one year of age, and has been a resident of Stringtown the remaining seventy-six years. He married Susanna Dilling March 26, 1863. To them were born six sons and four daughters. One son preceded him. He united with the Church of the Brethren, June 20, 1867, was chosen to the ministry Oct. 6, 1867, advanced to the second degree Sept. 11, 1869, and ordained to the eldership Jan. 28, 1882. He remained faithful to the end. His last illness of nine days was caused by influenza, followed by pneumonia. A daughter, Bertha, died from the same disease about twenty-four hours later. Services at the Salamonie church. Eight ministers took part in the funeral. Sermon by Bro. J. W. Norris. Burial in the cemetery near by.—Pearle Gosiee (daughter), Warren, Ind.

Sink, Bro. Stewart T., born March 5, 1891, died at his home, near Boone Mill, Va., on his twenty-eighth birthday, March 5, 1919, of pneumonia, following influenza. He was the son of Bro. J. G. and Sister Ida Sink. Nov. 27, 1910, he was married to Sister Flora Peters. To this union five children were born. One daughter preceded him. He became a member of the Church of the Brethren several years ago. Serving him are his companion, three sons, one daughter, father, mother and one sister. No services were held. Interment in the Ahshire graveyard.—Blanche Bowman, Boone Mill, Va.

Wattars, Sister Grace, died at her home, near Dallas Center, Iowa, Feb. 22, 1919, aged 46 years, 2 months and 9 days. She was married to Bro. Chris Bechtel Sept. 19, 1894. Their home was blessed with two sons and one daughter. She, with her husband, united with the Church of the Brethren soon after marriage and was a staunch advocate of the cause she espoused. She leaves a devoted husband, three children, one grandchild, one sister and two brothers. Her parents and four sisters preceded her. Services by the writer.—C. B. Rowe, Dallas Center, Iowa.

Wiedman, Charles, son of George and Catherine Wiedman, born at Baden, Germany, died at the home of Brother and Sister John Leeper, near his old homestead, March 9, 1919, aged 95 years, 4 months and 8 days. At the age of twenty-nine he emigrated to the United States. He came first to Logan County, Ohio, where he spent several years. He returned to Germany in 1860. After remaining two years, he again returned to Logan County, Ohio. August 10, 1863, he married Sister Anna Wolf. They lived on a farm in Ohio until 1866; then decided to come to Marshall County, Ind., settling on a farm near where he died. To this union were born four children, three of whom, with the wife, preceded the father. In August, 1892, he was married to Sister Sarah Hindel, who died Dec. 3, 1910. After her death he made his home with Brother and Sister John Leeper. Although attaining to an advanced age, his relatives are few. He leaves one son, one grandson, one granddaughter and one great-grandson. In 1862 he was received into the Church of the Brethren, living ever faithful. He chose his own funeral text, also the songs. Services at the Yellow River church by Bro. D. W. Hostetler, assisted by Bro. E. E. Shively. Interment in the adjacent cemetery.—Alma E. Hanawalt, Plymouth, Ind.

Williams, Ruella (nee Smith), died March 2, 1919, aged 53 years, 1 month and 14 days. Sister Williams' husband, Bro. Leonard M. Williams, died Nov. 17, 1918, and their little adopted daughter, Marvel, died Nov. 29, 1918. Sister Williams is survived by two sons, one brother and two sisters. For a number of years Brother and Sister Williams were faithful members of the Church of the Brethren, and greatly endeared themselves to the Grandview congregation, Montana. Services by the writer, assisted by Brethren Joseph Reish and Guy Kae. Text, Psa. 35: 14. Interment in Grandview cemetery.—J. S. Geiser, Froid, Mont.

As to "These Nations That Remain"

THE farewell address of Joshua is full of helpful suggestion for the Christian, but there is one statement in it which seems peculiarly pertinent for our times. Here it is: "Behold, I have divided unto you by lot these nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the great sea westward."

We have emphasized the words which should have our particular attention. The conquest of Canaan was by no means complete, as is often assumed by the superficial reader, when the time came for Joshua to say good-bye. He had gained for his people a foothold in the country. Some of the native tribes had been vanquished, but there still remained "very much land to be possessed." Now the interesting point is, that Joshua treats this unconquered portion of the land, "these nations that remain," as belonging to the tribes of Israel just as truly as the part that had been conquered. He divides it all out together, with the calm assurance, "Ye shall possess their land, as Jehovah your God spake unto you."

That is something like the situation in the world today. Christianity has obtained a foothold, a secure foothold, we are convinced, but "there remaineth very much land to be possessed." What shall be the Christian attitude to "these nations that remain"? There can be no question more vital to future progress than this.

Shall we say, "Oh, well, the Lord never meant for us to take it all anyway. This talk of winning the whole world for Christ is foolish. It is based upon a misconception of the divine plan"?

That doesn't sound much like Joshua, does it? But what is more to the point, it doesn't sound much like Jesus, either. Here is his program: "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations." We have emphasized the "all," so you can see just what we are to do about "these nations that remain."

Making the Great Decision

WASN'T that a fine prospect Moses had before him as a "son of Pharaoh's daughter"? But he spurned it. He knew how his people were oppressed. He saw a concrete instance of it one day, when he went out to visit them. His heart went out to them. He determined to cast his lot with them. He made the great decision of his life.

How can any one, who calls himself a Christian, forget all the injustice and misery which so many of his fellow-men are suffering, and map out for himself a purely selfish life program? Can you imagine how it's done?

IN connection with some preparations for Sunday-school work, I have recently been making a new study of the Pentateuch, and I have been impressed anew, and more forcibly than before, with the thought what a wonderful picture book the Old Testament is. It is full of stories of the ancient times, that are of priceless value. Nothing like them has come down to us from remote antiquity. It is marvelous what their superiority is, when one compares them with the other stories of the ages in which they were written, as they have come to us, dug up from the libraries of Nineveh, Babylon, Thebes, and all the ancient centers of learning.

It is impossible devoutly to give up one's heart to meditation upon them without being profoundly impressed with their moral and spiritual worth. They have such circumstantial detail, and with such true coloring are they drawn, that one can not doubt their veracity. Nobody ever invented anything quite like that; nothing but actual experience of life is able to produce them.

Somehow, our morning worship has taken on a new interest for the children, as these stories are related to them. They grip the heart as nothing else does.

Some years ago, I read in an educational magazine that there were no stories quite equal to the Bible Stories in educational value. I was startled at the statement. But since then, as I have taken pains to look into the matter, I am convinced that they are of incomparable value in the forming of the child-mind. Even from a literary standpoint they are superior to anything else that has come down to us from antiquity. They have an interest which no other stories can afford.

And then one is amazed at how true they ring in moral and spiritual sentiment. When we search them for their fundamental principles of morality and religion, as we know them today, we are startled at the veracity from this standpoint.

It is only when people deal with the shell of them, and miss the heart of them, that they are able to deny the inspiration of these accounts,—their abiding value, their eternal truthfulness.

Suppose you read again the story of the giving of the manna and quails; the passage of the Red Sea; the water from the rock; the story of Balaam; Moses going up into the mountain to talk with God; his coming down with his face shining. Now suppose that at family worship you tell the stories to the children, one each morning, and see how they will gather around your chair and listen with bated breath to every word you have to say.

If you have not learned the art of story-telling, by all means practice until you have become proficient in it, for all the world loves a story. There are no illustrations for sermons and Sunday-school lessons or lectures on Christian ethics, etc., that quite equal Bible stories in interest and grip on heart and imagination. Many a sermon lacks in vividness and strength because this Old Picture Book of the Old Testament has been forgotten. On the other hand, preachers who have discovered it, have found an inexhaustible mine of wealth, in which every moral principle and every fundamental principle of our holy religion are illustrated by incidents taken from real life in God's dealings with his people.

Back to Fundamentals

A FEW days in bed will generally get a person back to the fundamentals. At such times it is really astonishing how one's interest in new houses, oil stocks, and Florida real estate just simply fades away. The patient gets back to fundamentals,—to a new appreciation of such forgotten blessings as a good home, the unselfishness of friends, and the love of God. When flat upon his back, one can see all of the elements of life in their proper perspective. It is a time when intrinsic values shine out. To the man who has had the influenza, or bronchitis, or both, there abides a new meaning in home, friends, God.

That Life-Work Conference for the Young People

WITH the recent publication of the General Conference Program for 1919, our eyes are already turning toward Winona Lake. Some details are yet to be supplied, but it must be a dull soul indeed that can read the program, as printed, without being thrilled by the promise of inspiration which it contains, and filled with an intense desire to be present and enjoy it. The special bicentennial flavor is in the second section, but the first section, unless our judgment is at fault, is not one whit behind the second in importance and far-reaching possibilities. It is of this part of the program that we wish to speak.

"A Life-Work Conference for the Young People." The very sound of it is enough to set one's veins a tingling. Contemplate the picture: A body of our most representative young men and women, the finest and best blood of the future church, assembled with one accord to study, plan and pray about the place where they belong in the great Kingdom-building program,—their sole purpose to find out what God would have them do,—counseled and instructed in the mighty problem by some of the most competent and consecrated leaders in the church. Can you measure what it means?

Consider again some of the subjects which these leaders will discuss: "What the Church Means to Me," "How Shall I Invest My Life?" "Consecration to the World's Needs," "The Call of the World to the Christian Young Man." How such themes as these must grip the heart of every live young Christian! Think what it might have meant to hundreds of such, whose talents are now largely wasting away, if they could have had, at the right time, the stimulus and guidance which this Conference will give. What would you yourself have given to have had these subjects opened up by able and experienced hands, dissected, labeled and set out before your hungry mind in tangible and appetizing form?

Naturally and properly such a Conference will have a strong missionary flavor. A description of both the India and China fields will be given by means of pictures as well as by word of mouth. But "Our Debt to America" is not to be forgotten. We are to be told "What We Owe and How to Pay It," and the "Possibilities of the Home Field" are to be presented, not merely in a general way, but with some detail. The Conference will not confine itself to vague abstractions. It will get down to particulars. "What We Can Do to Further the Interests of the Church" will be explained and applied to a half dozen or more specific sets of conditions in our country.

God has not called everyone to be a preacher, that is, not in the technical sense of that term. But the young man who sincerely desires to lay himself, without reserve, upon the altar of service to mankind, can not fail to consider seriously "The Claims of the Christian Ministry." He will have a favorable opportunity to do this as these "claims" are unfolded at the Conference.

The very nature of a Conference like this must make it markedly devotional in spirit. But there are two topics on the program which give special emphasis to this. Yet they are not designed, primarily, to fix the tone of the Conference itself. "The Spirit-Filled Life" and "The Place of Prayer in the Christian's Life" are intensely practical in their application, bearing directly upon the most matter-of-fact affairs of everyday concern.

"The Education I Must Secure" is a vital problem to the youth of today, and especially to the youthful Christian who wants his life to count for the most and best. The Conference will help to solve that problem.

But what of the young men and women who are sure that they are not cut out for ministers or missionaries or any of these "special" fields of service? Well, this Conference is for them. Too much the idea has been fostered that the extension of the Kingdom of God concerns only those who have been called to some "official" position. "The Consecrated Layman" is one of the greatest subjects on the program, full of the highest possibilities, and one which is bound to have from now on more attention than it has so far received.

In our judgment the program committee have done a most excellent thing in providing for this "Life-Work Conference." It is our conviction, further, that pastors and elders will be doing the church a valuable service if they do their best to secure a large attendance of our young people at the Conference. Get the young people interested. Talk it up! Plan for it! Help them to see that it is really worth while!

They can not all go. But there are three classes in whose behalf special efforts should be made: (1) Those whose interest has already been aroused, who want to be useful to the church but are perplexed as to the proper course. (2) Those who have special talents for service but have not yet been awakened to a realization of their obligations. (3) Those who are best able to carry back the inspiration of the meeting to those who do not go.

Yes, we know it's early yet. But not too soon to get the idea. Start the ball rolling in your community. Get the young people to Winona Lake this year. And have them there by seven o'clock, Wednesday evening, June 4, ready to hear the Moderator, Bro. H. C. Early, introduce Bro. D. L. Miller, the first speaker on the program.

A Word for the Prisoner

"It is one thing to go to the hospital; it is quite another thing to go to the prison. The sick one wears only the pale seal of weakness; the prisoner wears the scarlet brand of shame. The sick have lost their health; the prisoner has lost his character. The sick one is isolated from social activity; the prisoner is exiled from social fellowship. The one is pitied; the other is banned. And, therefore, the visitation of the prisoner is mentioned as the crowning ministry, because it demands a more courageous sympathy and a more daring sacrifice. To be the friend of the fallen is a nobler friendship than merely to be the friend of the sick."

These are the pertinent words of Dr. J. H. Jowett, commenting on that series of ministries mentioned in the judgment scene of Matthew twenty-five. Had you ever been struck with the climactic force of that "I was in prison, and ye came unto me"? Society,—even Christian society,—is a long way from the attitude of Jesus in its treatment of the prisoner and the fallen. It is hardly up to the standard of Onesiphorus. Do you remember Paul's loving tribute to him? "He was not ashamed of my chain."

The Extremist

THERE is hardly a community, or a church, in this great country of ours, without an extremist or two. The extremist is always a one-sided man. He never sees the other side of things, and in too many instances does not care to see them. He is never disposed to line up with his church or his community, but insists on their lining up with him. As he sees it, his mind is the standard, regardless of its practicability. With him it is not a matter of special concern as to whether his plan can be operated in the community. It may work with him, and possibly with his family. But how about other families and other people? He simply reasons that if it works for him it should work for others.

We illustrate as we pass along. He believes that the New Testament teaches great simplicity in Christian attire. In this he is right. He puts his theory into operation,—a thing that all true disciples of Christ should do. But for himself he has accepted a standard. It may be the approved standard of the church. Again in this he is on the right side. Two ways are open to him,—the standard of the world or the standard of the church. Being a member of the church, he wills to line up with what those of like precious faith would recommend, rather than to pattern after the ungodly. This shows wisdom as well as faithfulness.

But while a plain man, and a man of very plain ideas, he is not a man of taste. He cares little whether his clothes fit him perfectly or not. He prefers a bit of misfit as an indication of his lack of pride. Harmony of colors has never occurred to him. He cares little for the whisk broom and none for the brush. Dress for him means very little more than comfort, protection and plainness. Generally speaking, no one, save his home folks, who regret his lack of taste, objects to his manner of attire. Even in dress he has no disposition to live wholly for self. He believes in a standard for Christian clothing, and is disposed to urge his custom, with all of its lack of taste, neatness and harmony.

He does not pause to consider that in dress he is an extremist, and that the more he urges his example, the greater his influence against plainness in attire. He may even be a minister, and every now and then preach in support of his views. His preaching partakes of the flavor of his appearance, and for those of taste it becomes a repelling rather than a drawing force. He converts no one but may, by his extreme notions, set some good-thinking men and women against the real simplicity in attire that the New Testament recommends. The man may mean to let his light shine with a view of winning others to Christ, but having a very poor light, his well-intended efforts result in just the opposite course. Plainly speaking, he is a detriment to the cause he advocates, because he is an extremist.

Another illustration: A minister who lives a pious life, has become thoroughly convinced that photographs are forbidden by what the Bible has to say against the making of images. He is sure in his mind that God does not want his people to make pictures and images of anything in earth or heaven. He will not sit for his photograph, nor will he allow one in his house. No one objects to his manner of life in this particular. It is his privilege thus to live. But he does not stop here. He persists in preaching against the work of the camera, not once or twice, but many times during the year. Possibly no one in his community accepts his views on the subject, not even the members of his congregation. He goes right on denouncing the photograph, holding that it is, in the sight of God, something highly esteemed of men,—an image, an object of worship,—and must be exposed. As a result of his efforts he has emptied the house of worship, and many of the members, becoming discouraged, have sought other localities. He may be devout, may mean to serve the Lord's interest, but he is not wise. His influence is on the wrong side,—tearing the church down, scattering the flock and repelling those who by earnest preaching should be drawn to Christ.

The situation is a sad one, and in many ways may be duplicated in different parts of the country. Men who ought to be wise and broad-minded become narrow, make extremists of themselves and cease to be helpers in the Lord's work. They may pose as preachers of the Gospel, but degenerate into repelling forces, and drive away, from the door of the Kingdom, men and women, who, with a little care upon the part of those in charge of the Master's interests, might be induced to enter the fold. They are constantly working for the impossible and in the end show themselves to be a detriment rather than a blessing to the church.

Prior to our love feast we hear a good deal said, about members examining themselves, to see whether they are sound in the faith. Might it not be well for a lot of them to examine themselves with a view of considering the wisdom and consistency characterizing their manner of life? No amount of piety can be made to atone for the type of conduct or life that drives well-meaning people away from the Kingdom of God. While the way of holiness is strait, and the entrance narrow, still it is intended for teachers who are broad-minded enough to take in the general needs of all those seeking to serve God. The church may prosper despite a few narrow-minded people in her ranks, but her teachers and leaders must not be men of the contracted, eccentric and extremist type. Men of this type can tear down and scatter, but they can not attract and build up.

The Christian Doctrine of Reconciliation.—James Denney, D. D., $2.00

"Reconciliation is a term of wide scope and various application, and it is hardly possible to conceive a life or a religion which should dispense with it. There is always some kind of strain or tension between man and his environment, and man has always an interest in overcoming the strain, in resolving the discord in his situation into a harmony. . . . The process by which his end is attained may be described as one of reconciliation. . . . The reconciliation may fail to give men the peace of which they are in quest. Nevertheless, reconciliation, and nothing else, is what they want, and its place in religion is central and vital."

These opening sentences of Dr. Denney's essay on "The Christian Doctrine of Reconciliation" suggest something of the scholarship and masterful insight of the author. The promise of the earliest pages is borne out by what follows. As the reader passes from the chapter on "The Experimental Basis of the Doctrine," to "Reconciliation in the Christian Thought of the Past," to "The New Testament Doctrine of Reconciliation," to "The Need of Reconciliation," to "Reconciliation as Achieved by Christ," and, finally, to the chapter on "Reconciliation as Realized in Human Life," he is held by the range and power of the author. With his evident mastery of the bibliography of his subject, it is refreshing to see how completely Dr. Denney founds "The Christian Doctrine of Reconciliation" upon the New Testament.

There are some portions of the book that will not prove of special interest to the general reader. Chapter II, in particular, dealing as it does with the historical aspect of the subject, will have a limited appeal. Yet, the very fact that the material is there, is significant of the author's type of mind, and indicates how deeply he has gone into his subject. The book is one that will bear rereading,—in fact, it must be reread to be appreciated, and each time over will give fresh and ample proof of its worth. "The Christian Doctrine of Reconciliation" is easily one of the most scholarly and reverent books that have recently come to hand. It is a volume that puts fearless emphasis on certain fundamental Christian doctrines that have been much obscured by the fogs of present-day easy-going theologies.

The Fundamental Doctrines of the Christian Faith.—R. A. Torrey, $1.40

It is in place to mention Dr. Torrey's book in connection with "The Christian Doctrine of Reconciliation," by Dr. Denney. The two books are unlike in style but one in purpose. "The Christian Doctrine of Reconciliation" treats exhaustively of one great doctrine,—it is a volume for study and meditation. Dr. Torrey's "Fundamental Doctrines" is composed of a series of fifteen popular sermons on as many subjects. Yet, Dr. Torrey's book has its place and significance. The author believes that the great need of the churches today is systematic indoctrination. Not many months ago he suited deeds to convictions and preached fifteen sermons on such subjects as God, Inspiration, The Deity of Jesus Christ, The Holy Spirit, The New Birth, The Resurrection, and other topics. The discourses are said to have been received with marked interest by Dr. Torrey's congregation, and similar sermons would doubtless be as eagerly received in other churches. Like Dr. Denney, the author of "The Fundamental Doctrines of the Christian Faith" bases his teaching squarely upon the New Testament. Ministers will find both of these books stimulating and dependable.

The Beautiful House of Today

Selected by Agnes M. Geib, Manheim, Pa.

A pilgrim was passing the wide-open door
Of the house by the side of the way,
As an angel stood waiting and calling to him
From the beautiful house of Today:
"O enter ye here; 'twas built for you;
Come dwell in this beautiful place,
For other shall never be open to you
From now to the end of the race."

But the pilgrim saw not its glory or worth.
"I see not the beauty you say;
To me 'tis only a bare, lonely place;
'Tis only the house of Today,
While onward before, in my journey I see
A house that is wondrously fair;
'Tis the house of Tomorrow that soon I shall see,
That is free from the burdens of care."

And the angel said sadly: "Farewell, farewell,"
As the pilgrim pressed on his way
To the house of Tomorrow he had seen just ahead;
And, lo, 'twas the house of Today.
Its glory and splendor had seemed to depart;-
"Not the house of Tomorrow," he cried,
And the angel still stood by the wide-open door,
And pleadingly pressed to his side.

How often we all, in the journey of life,
Impatiently press on our way,
Nor see in our haste that beautiful place,—
The beautiful house of Today,
But the house of Tomorrow we constantly seek,
And turn from the angel away,
Who lovingly, pleadingly calls us to dwell
In the beautiful house of Today.

Liberty Christians

BY GALEN B. ROYER

MUCH is being said, these days, about liberty,—liberating the world from autocracy and so on,—and one is made to wonder if these terms are simply vague expressions of some indefinable license, or a real, positive and proper ideal of true and noble life.

To many, liberty means doing just as one pleases without regard to the rights of others, or to another being master over them. At least in the spirit of such a definition people reject Christ, and others forsake him and seek to live without any master. They do not go far, however, in such a course until they find themselves Satan's bondsmen, and their hoped-for liberty swallowed up in the most slavish fear and service.

Take away control through cultivation in the garden, and instead of pretty flowers and useful vegetables, there grow up noxious and pernicious weeds. Remove check and discipline from children, and quarrelling and fighting take the place of learning and improvement. Real liberty does not mean the absence of control, but a striving for that which is highest and best in life.

Opposing forces are constantly contending for the mastery in every life. The higher nature develops only when the lower is brought under subjection. Freedom of the baser always means suppression of the better nature. Hence, true liberty is found only when the lower is properly controlled.

Real liberty is enjoyed only when God governs. True freedom is found only under his grand control. To the extent that God does not direct the life, there is tumult and discord, a lack of purpose, a failure to be successful. What would a ship accomplish without the control of the helmsman? Turn on all the power of the engines, open every sail to the winds, but let the rudder be without control and that stately barge goes hither and thither, touching no port, and finally strands on some rocky coast or sandy beach.

So it is with the Christian. Let Christ's control weaken, let his pierced hands drop from the helm, and confusion, distrust, misery and death will come to pass. But let him have his own way, and "of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end" (Isa. 9: 7).

What, then, some call freedom is rightly termed license,—the power and privilege to do as one pleases, even in doing wrong. That being true, where is true liberty found?

To enjoy real freedom, everything must be in its right element. The bird in the air, the fish in the sea are free because they are in the element for which God created them. And man can only find his true liberty when he enters the love of God through making Jesus Christ his Lord. To be away from that love is to be a wanderer from the Father's house, and the so-called freedom is a field of swine and the rags of sin. But think what restraint, what bondage is such a condition! In what contrast is the joy and peace of being "at home" in the Father's house, and feasting on God's love! We are reconciled, pardoned, restored to the family circle again.

To be free, one must do what God means for him to do. A passenger train has great freedom as long as it keeps on the track made for it. Indeed, it was not made to go anywhere else, and when it leaves the track, for any reason, it soon stops. There is no freedom. So we must keep on in God's appointed way, if we wish to enjoy God's largest freedom of action and service.

One would think that Jesus, the Son of God, Lord of heaven and earth, Lord of lords and King of kings, had perfect freedom in his earthly life, and he did. In what did he say his freedom consisted? "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work" (Psa. 40: 8; John 4: 34). How joyously free was the Master's life! Hence, to the extent that we let God control our lives, we will find his will "good, perfect and acceptable" (Rom. 12: 2). His yoke will be easy, his burdens light. Strange as it may appear to many, no one feels really free and easy save in doing God's will.

But some one, who has tried God's service, says this all sounds good in theory,—on paper,—but it does not work out that way in practice. They have found God's will irksome, complex and difficult. His burden is a tiring load. Several things may have obtained to produce this testimony of adverse experience in an honest life. It may be that the will of man may have been mistaken for the will of God. Then I know the burden is heavy. Christ blamed the Pharisees for putting burdens on others that they themselves could not and would not bear,—burdens so grievous that they themselves would not move them with their finger" (Matt. 23: 6). This is still a very common error and has puzzled many an honest, Christ-loving heart,—misguided in what the will of God really is.

To follow God's will even when its pathway runs counter to the will of religious men, need not be burdensome or difficult if the heart is right with God. A stone crusher is of no value to grind wheat, but keep it in good running order, and it does its best work when it is kept full of stones to be crushed. So in the spiritual life. A right heart with God keeps us in trim to do his will perfectly. Some of us need the prayer: "The very God of peace make you perfect in every good work to do his will" (Heb. 13: 20-21) fulfilled in our lives. Perhaps the machinery of our spiritual selves needs adjusting, "restoring" (Gal. 6: 1). Then we are no longer doing "eye service, as men pleasers, but as servants of Christ doing the will of God from the heart" (Gal. 6: 6).

The train held in by outward constraint,—the rails,—keeps on its way in perfect freedom. Unlike this are our lives in the Christ-way. As the bits of iron are drawn to the magnet, or as the planets are kept in their courses without confusion, all by an unseen but positive power, so God's love holds us fast, in perfect freedom to him and we serve him because we can not help ourselves. We can not do aught else because we do not want to do otherwise.

Such are real liberty Christians,—all the liberty they wish, to do the right, with no desire to do the wrong. They are free from the burden of sin, delighting to do the Father's will in the pure and unsullied freedom and joy of privilege and not duty. They are not like the force pump which must be worked to get water, but like the Artesian well or the spring at the hillside, that can not help but overflow. Anything else than overflow would be exceedingly distressing and perfectly unnatural.

Christ's love constrains us. Yes, it is that delightful constraint that gives us greatest peace and gladness because in his sovereignty we yield ourselves to his full control.

Brother, sister, do you feel restrained, hemmed in, bound down, almost crushed in your service of the Lord? On bended knee search to know whose will you are obeying; for rest assured that Christ is right when he says: "My yoke is easy and my burden is light."

The happiest thought of this liberty, too, is that our Lord meant it for every child of his. Therefore, seek, knock, search until you find your liberty in Christ Jesus and in that stand (Gal. 5: 1). I know you will never seek to return to your former bondage, when once you are a "liberty Christian."

The Peace Conference at Versailles

BY S. F. SANGER

IT is most remarkable that in two short months after the ending of hostilities,—the most gigantic militant struggle the world has ever experienced,—a convention of representatives of the leading nations of the world should be engaged in discussing issues and problems confronting the nations involved in this unprecedented holocaust, including also those nations not directly involved in the war.

Since the smoke of battle has cleared away and the destructive agencies are slumbering in silence; human reason seems to be contemplating the awful tragedy, and men are intensely interested in devising means to prevent a repetition of war by using more just and saner means of settling international differences.

In order to accomplish this very desirable end, three things are essential and need to be studied most carefully: (1) The causes of war. (2) Their prevention. (3) How to make the preventive measures effectual.

It may be safe to state that wars in general, if not universal, are caused primarily by selfishness, or, as James puts it (4: 1), "From whence come wars and fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members?"

A League of Nations

This is being very favorably considered now, both in and out of this convention, as the most feasible means of preventing wars in the future. Such a League must necessarily embody three fundamentals: (1) A legislative power to formulate laws for the government of the League and the settlement of international questions. (2) A judicial body to arbitrate contentions and pass on all issues that may arise, in the light of the laws enacted for this purpose. (3) A means, a power, or possibly a force, to make the decisions of this court operative or effectual.

There is little benefit to be hoped for from a League of Nations unless its work has a recognized authority. Writers on this question have proposed three methods, or powers, one or more of which is to be used in enforcing the decisions and authority of the League. The first is military,—by force of arms. The second is commercial,—by boycotting. The third is moral,—by breaking relations, refusing to hold rebellious nations as members of this compact, or to grant to them the privileges or benefits of the League.

There are advocates who offer strong arguments for each of these methods. Others favor using all three, beginning with the moral, and ending, if necessary, with the military. A goodly number favor only the use of the moral,—the let-alone idea.

Dr. Lyman Abbott holds that Matt. 18 justifies the "let-alone idea," by treating the rebellious or stubborn nation as a political heathen,—an outcast,—to be severely let alone, or disfellowshiped by the loyal nations.

I feel very much interested in the discussions and developments going on in and out of the Versailles Conference. First, because, as Premier Clemenceau said to the League: "You hold the destiny of the world in your hands." On the result of this League's work hangs the future, not only of world peace, but of a broader and fuller human brotherhood,—socially, commercially, educationally, politically and religiously.

This is not all that is involved in the work of this convention, but it will put to test one of the broadest, deepest and most profound principles of government,—political and ecclesiastical. It is this: Is a CENTRAL power, or authority feasible, practical and effectual? If so, how can it best be obtained, maintained and honored?

The practical effect of such a League will, no doubt, revive, internationally, the old issue, known in American politics as "STATES' RIGHTS." It was this issue that led to the Civil War of the States, as it related to the slavery question.

The whiskey lords, in a recent convention, decided to try to resurrect this old issue in their fight against the prohibition movement that has struck so effectively their "Diana of America."

Perhaps no other country in the world has developed a democratic government in as high degree of efficiency as we have in America. This was not accomplished, however, without its trials and perplexities. It was not an easy matter for the early settlers of this country, coming so largely from the monarchies of Europe, to accept a representative form of government, with its central legislative, judicial and executive authority. Our Supreme Court, the highest branch of our judiciary, with its power of final decision on legal questions, was very strongly opposed in the early years of its existence.

During President Jackson's administration South Carolina attempted to challenge the power of the central authority of this Government, only to realize that the national government was its superior, to whose laws she had to submit. The result of the Civil War put a quietus upon those contending for "States' rights." And up to this time the question of any State, county, town or other smaller division, being subordinate to the central authority of the United States,—the Congress, the Judiciary and Executive,—has been a settled fact, an established principle of American democracy.

The foregoing part of this article, while giving some phases of the world problems now confronting the nations, large and small, forms a basis for what I wish to say to our beloved Brotherhood,—a rather lengthy introduction,—but I trust it may more clearly and forcefully appeal to our thinking members, who are concerned about the future government and prosperity of the Church of the Brethren.

Is it not a remarkable fact that our early brethren adopted a form of church government that is now, after two hundred years, being accepted as the most advanced, and highest in the world?

Ever since our church was established in America, we have had in operation what is equivalent to the proposed League of Nations, a Central authority,—our General Conference. This well-developed form of democracy has accorded to every State District, every local congregation, as well as each individual member, the right of appeal on any question of privilege or duty, and is to be respected in all of its privileges, local and general. The decision of our Conference is final on all questions of government, and should be respected and honored by every State organization, local congregation and individual.

It is yet fresh in our memories what it meant for any one living in the United States to speak against our Government, or in any way to violate the "Espionage" act, during the recent war. Even Senators and Congressmen were haled before the courts to answer the charges preferred against them for such violations.

I am wondering what the result would be if the church were as strict and vigilant as the Government, in dealing with the ministers, elders and other church officials who have promised to maintain, and observe our church rulings, and who are not only indifferent, but who disregard, oppose and override our church government. How busy would our courts be, and how long her dockets?

May I urge all the readers of the GOSPEL MESSENGER carefully to read and seriously ponder the editorial by Bro. D. L. Miller in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 4, current volume. I know of no other question, now before our Brotherhood, that is fraught with such far-reaching and dangerous results as the too common practice, with officials and congregations acting contrary to the counsels and decisions of our highest, our central authority, —the Annual Conference.

May I be putting it too strong to say that no nation, no church, no other organization can maintain strength, develop its resources and safeguard its constituents, and perpetuate its organization without respect for, and submission to, its established rules of government?

For a local congregation or the individual to set up his judgment against the church, will bring us, as a church, just where the nations of the world have been for thousands of years, and which culminated in the most gigantic and destructive war of all history. From this awful experience the nations have awakened to the fact that a League of Nations, a central authority, is the hope for peace, justice and prosperity and perpetuity of nations.

Had all sections of our Brotherhood, at all times, duly respected our Conference decisions, and lived up closely to our ideal form of government, we would not now be discussing ways and means for reuniting our broken band, or reinstating those who are out of fellowship with us.

May I state here, parenthetically, that I see no way of reuniting the several bodies without an assurance from all concerned that our central authority will be duly respected and its government maintained.

We are not alone in the unfortunate steps taken by some of our members in their disregard for church government. The Jews are now having a similar experience, as stated in the following quotations from Rabbi Meyers: "The reformers, however, claim, that with altered times and circumstances they have a right to modify, or abrogate the rabbinical ordinations to suit the present age, or, rather their own convenience. . . . It certainly seems desirable, and I might say, absolutely necessary, in the interest of Judaism, if a change is to be made, that a general synod, or convention of duly-authorized Rabboni should be held, and a code of laws be approved, or amended, for general adoption, instead of individual ministers and congregations of laymen making, or abolishing, regulations according to their individual tastes, ideas or conveniences.

"These leaders call themselves reformers, a great misnomer. The term to be applied to them is seceders, or abolitionists. They want to set aside all that is Jewish, that is distinctive of us as a nation,—all that we have prided ourselves in, observing it through ages of trouble and persecution. Had they contented themselves by attacking only Rabbinical institutions, I would have been silent; but they have, in their presumption, attempted to set aside these laws that have been given to us by Almighty God himself, commandments of which he said: 'Between me and the children of Israel, it is an everlasting covenant.' These things they would set aside as naught."

The similarity between the course pursued by these Jewish members and some of our own brethren is most striking. But the part that impresses me most seriously in this Rabbi's statement is, that when once they begin to change the established rules of the church, as individuals and congregations, it is but a simple and easy step to change or abolish God's laws.

The nations of the world have tried out the rule of individuals and single nations regulating government and have reaped its bitter results. The Versailles Conference is laboring strenuously to get where we, as a church, have been for nearly two hundred years. Shall we maintain this high, this ideal, form of government, or shall we degenerate into a policy that means fatalism,—such as the nations of the world have experienced?

The Brethren Are Right

BY G. J. FERCKEN

I HAVE a book, on one of my shelves, on primitive Christianity. It is in French, published in Paris in 1896. The author, a Swedenborgian, by the name of Edmond Chevrier, now dead, wrote it after having visited the catacombs of Rome. This book, whose title is "Etudes Sur le Christianisme Primitif," was written with the intention of proving that many inscriptions, frescoes, tombstones, lamps, etc., to be found in those subterranean corridors, favor his doctrines. In many cases it seems so; but I was not a little surprised to find, as I was carefully reading this interesting book, that he should mention some rites and ordinances practiced in the Church of the Brethren and not in the church of this Swedenborgian author.

I shall here quote all that I was able to gather in his work, translating from the French:

"In the early days the Eucharist was not separated from the agape or fraternal meal" (page 35).

"According to the Apostolic Constitutions the order of divine service was as follows: Reading of the Old Testament, singing of Psalms, reading of the Gospels, Acts and Epistles. A homily by the priest. Praying standing, the face turned to the east, celebration of the holy supper with a kiss of peace" (page 84).

"After the final prayers, hymns were sung and the kiss of peace was given before parting" (page 88).

"The consecrated bread and wine were called Eulogia (blessings). This word designatod, later on, the holy bread, which, until this day, is distributed to the faithful in remembrance of the agape, or feasts of charity, which were held in the primitive churches" (page 90).

"Mention is never made on the inscriptions of the catacombs of dignities and social distinctions, such as are found on pagan tombstones. The clarissimi, or noblemen, and the tenuinores, or humble and obscure, were gathered in the same resting-place after their death,—as they had, while alive, gathered around the same table in the agape and Eucharist."

As was said above, this book was published twenty-two years ago or more. There is now something much fresher than that.

A bishop of that denomination, in a paper read before his "Council of the Clergy," last June, quoted John 13: 1-15, and made the following remark: "After eating the supper, and after he had washed their feet, they were then sanctified, and so prepared for their work; and in the time to come they were to do as he had done unto them, wherein lies a principle of general application, not limited to one particular form of ritual, such as the washing of the feet."

This paper having been published in their periodical, the following appears as a foot-note to the above:

"This ritual of the ancient church, which the Lord performed with his disciples, has been brought into effect in some modern religious bodies; but it does not, at present, appear likely that any proposition will be made to do so in the New Church (Swedenborgian). The general principle involved is that in which we are interested. Thus, at any rate, it will be carried out in spirit."

But suppose that a proposition will some day be made, will not, then, the Brethren be right?

Prodigal Sons,—Who Are They?

BY OLIN F. SHAW

IN that wonderful parable of our Lord, Luke 15, the elder brother, or stay-at-home, and the younger son, or prodigal, are easily recognized in the persons of the scribes and Pharisees and the publicans and sinners. But the distinct type of character represented by each may not be so easily discerned. And yet we have stereotyped the character of the younger by the name prodigal, the riotous, wasteful, lavish liver. It may be pertinent to remark here that, under the old Jewish economy, the eldest son inherited a peculiar relationship with special authority and a somewhat priestly office in the family. He was in line also for a double portion of the father's estate. The Israelitish church was divinely designated as Jehovah's "first born." Israel was and is the purveyor of all nations, religiously speaking.

And since the family is represented as one of but two sons, the younger may represent all of those not in a covenant relationship with God. Emphasis, perhaps, should be placed on the terms younger son, for while he was the younger, he was nevertheless a son. But until he returned to the father's house (where the elder brother lived), he was lost. Until he returned to the father's house he was dead.

The question arises here, Was the elder brother saved? That depends. A covenant is only binding so long as it remains unbroken by both parties. Unless the elder brother was living within covenant relationship with his father, he forfeited his rights to its blessings.

Both the elder and the younger sons were in pursuit of the same things,—happiness. The Father doesn't begrudge his children any amount of happiness they may enjoy. But men differ most radically in their conception of what constitutes happiness. And, too, happiness is conceived to be the end of life, whereas service is the end, and happiness the result. The outstanding trait of the prodigal's life was wastefulness and riotous living. Wasted in that his end was pleasure and not service. Riotous because, in his mad pursuit of happiness, illegitimate ways to become happy were resorted to.

A man died the other day in a local hospital. So wretched and deplorable was his condition, that there was probably not an organ in his body that was not diseased. Indeed, nurses threatened to resign if their duties in the institution required them to minister to him. Of drinking, carousing, and dissipation in general, his life had known but one limit,—his means and his strength. That he was a bankrupt, goes without saying. Socially he was an outcast. An appeal to his nearest relatives for help elicited no sympathy. Perhaps only public charity saved him from dying as a brute. On the street the common verdict was,—another one of God's prodigals. All too true, no doubt.

But while the number of those who lead such ungodly lives is legion, and their sinfulness is painful, indeed, to behold, they are only a part of God's prodigals. Included in the type of men, characterized by the younger son, were the publicans. We may believe that among them were not a few just such men as were Matthew, and Zaccheus,—moral reprobates, in the sight of the elder brother, but in the sight of Jesus possessing much genuine manhood. This same type of character is to be found in practically all vocations of life today. To many of these might be applied the words addressed to the rich young ruler: "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." They are very near to it, but they must get into the kingdom. They must accept Jesus Christ as their own personal Savior.

Several aspects of these men's lives are to be considered: Outside of the church is away from our spiritual home. Such are spiritually lost and dead to all of the blessings of the Father's house unless and until they come home. Which is the greater sinner,—the one who is miles away from home, to whom the journey looks great, and who can not find it in his heart to undertake the journey, or the one who is just outside of the door and refuses to come in?

Speaking of the class of prodigals first described,—debauched, dissipated, ungodly sinners,—they leave no admirers behind them. No one is purposely following their lives. Of the latter, how many there may be who are holding them up as examples to pattern after, the Lord only knows. Circumstances would indicate that there are many. There can be no question that a large per cent of those, who have landed in the ditch, started out to live good, moral lives. Comparing the two, in their lives, who can tell which has been productive of the most evil?

There is still another class,—call them elder brothers if you wish,—who, in the sight of God, are prodigals nevertheless. These are persons whose names are on the church-roll somewhere, but of whom nonchurch members are disposed to say: "If such and such are saved, we are willing to take our chances outside of the church." They are lovers of pleasure and lovers of money.

Just as happiness is a God-ordained blessing, so the Father does not deny to his children any amount of wealth they may be able to use rightly. The desire for both are heaven-born, and it is the Father's good pleasure to give generously of both. But recall again that service is the end of life and money is the means that God gives us. To help others is to attain to the highest measure of it.

Let us see! What is worship? It is an act of respect or reverence to God. What, therefore, one respects or reverences most, becomes his god. Verily, the carnally-inclined have gone out after other gods. In finances they may be misers indeed, but they may also be wasteful, lavish, and riotous livers.

What if, after a life of service, the righteous man should have to be buried in a borrowed tomb, like our Savior, or in the potter's field, because of a want of means! A life spent in the pursuit of money or pleasure is simply wasted. Life is wasted. Money is as trash, in the sight of God, compared with life. And what of the years of time that are wasted, which spell opportunity to do good, in advancing the Kingdom? Neither our mission boards nor our schools are getting the fortunes of such. Will their big estates tend to make consecrated men and women of their children? Have they wasted their time? With what has God endowed his children, that is of such priceless value as life and time?

What fabulous prices many multi-millionaires would be willing to pay for an extension of life, and time to live! What shall be the answer to such? "If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own? No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

Ours is the task of convicting all who are not in a covenant relationship with the Father. Those whose interests are not in the Father's house, but who have gone out after other gods, must be told that they are prodigals. They must be made to feel the Father's sustained interest in them, and the welcome and royal reception that awaits their homecoming. May the Holy Spirit help us to recover all such for their own salvation and for the honor of the Father!

The Steward on His Job

BY ADALINE HOHF BEERY

"He went and traded with them and made other talents"

A STEWARD is not a boss; he is not a foreman; he is not a landlord; he is not a physician; he is not a preacher; he is not a statesman; he is not a poet.

And yet a steward may be at the head of a factory employing thousands; he may be a most capable administrator of an estate; he may have a deed for forty farms; he may turn a multitude of sinners in at the strait gate; he may mend broken soldiers and make them almost like new; he may dictate policies for a league of nations; he may write verse that will move hearts to surrender and adoration of the Mightiest.

If a steward can be such a paradox, what is he? A steward is one who takes care of something for somebody else; he does not own anything himself. He may say, "my farm," "my bank," "my factory," "my stock," "my business," but he does it for euphony's sake and for convenience of description. The real Owner is not hanging around corridors and back lots, picking up loose ends. He is in his private office, superintending the affairs of his entire planet. The steward has his orders,—explicit, imperative. Just as you would exercise implicit care in handling a bit of rare china belonging to a dear friend, so the steward must be alert, sympathetic, enthusiastic, thorough. If something should break in his hands, or if he should fail to carry through an important deal, what would his Chief say? "Inasmuch as you did it not"——

The blank is the eloquent answer.

Dropping the figure, we are all stewards of innumerable gifts. Our money (which is the first thing most of us think of), to the last cent, is God's. The intellectual and physical ability to earn it is a gift of God. The ability to keep out of the insane asylum is a gift from Him. The power to think clearly, and deeply, is a superlative endowment. The gift of speech is a supreme distinction conferred on the human animal. The power to write arresting thoughts is an inspiration of the Divine breath. The power to sing comes through the touch of the heavenly Cantor. The power to plow comes from physical strength, which comes from food, which comes from the field, which was bought with your money, which was earned by your skill, which is a gift of God.

Are you not overwhelmed with responsibility? Think of what you are expected to turn in at the close of the day, when your lease expires, when the Owner, with level eyes, shall say, "You shall be steward no longer."

Have you used all these things to build up your own business or the business of the Kingdom? If we have a thought for the aggrandizement of ourselves, without distinct reference to the boosting of the business blazoned by our electric sign, then we have no business to be in business. If we put our surplus bushels in Brother Self's bins instead of a transport to Armenia, we are false to our trust.

If we pull down our wooden house, where we have been happy for twenty years, where the wall paper is dingy and the library couch is dilapidated, and take our cozy balance in the bank to put up a spacious stone dwelling, "because it makes our street look more imposing," we are false. How about the thousands who have nowhere to lay their heads? If we use knotty pine in making a piece of furniture, instead of the polished oak of the specifications, and put the difference in cost in our little quiet purse, we are false. "Hypocrites," is the contemptuous word our Lord used.

You see it comes around every time to the question of a man's being in front, and on top, and nearly always money is at the bottom. Why are we so afflicted with astigmatism on this one subject? Money will do as a medium of exchange for physical necessities—I said necessities, not superfluities—but it will never buy happiness, honor, friendship, content, faith, hope, love; and without these, what good would money do?

Our education has not been intensive enough. We have been cultivating courtesy, good manners, gracefulness, becoming dressing, the classics of social ethics, the appearance of perfection. But we have not gotten under the crust. If we could touch the beating heart—I mean if the Holy Spirit could touch it—there would be no distinction between avenues and alleys, between tiled bathrooms and pig-sharing shacks, between limousines and wheelbarrows, between terraces and ditches. We should all be socialists, with the slogan, "Each for the other and all for God."

Do not think that any of us can crawl out of responsibility because we have no money in the bank. We are all rich. God has given each of us at least a talent. Yours may be financial acumen, mine may be blacking shoes. Yours may be knitting for the Red Cross, mine may be making doughnuts. Yours may be editing a magazine, mine may be making steam engines. Yours may be designing cathedrals, mine may be washing its windows.

For the steward who must keep account of all these investments, O, what bookkeeping it will take! And if the ledger does not balance——

"When the Owner of the vineyard comes, what will He do to those vinedressers?"

Our Tasks

BY JULIA GRAYDON

"And so I do my task and wait the opening of the outer gate."

OUR tasks seem hard sometimes, and long, and we are weary at the end of the day.

We may look for a reward from those about us, but none comes, for we are simply doing our duty, our daily tasks.

But one is watching from above, and he sees our efforts and the spirit in which we work at these tasks. He stands waiting inside the gateway, ready to open the gate to us in his good time, ready to say to us, if we deserve it: "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

So we can patiently wait for the opening of that outer gate, knowing the joy that lies beyond it.

THE ROUND TABLE

The Divinity of Toil

BY J. E. YOUNG

In the Louvre of Paris is a picture of Murillo, "The Miracle of San Diego." The figures are life size. Through an open door, two noblemen and a priest enter a kitchen. To their amazement they find that all the maids are angels, dividing among themselves the work of the place.

It is a parable in art of the divinity of the common toiler. These persons, discharging a work rated as drudgery, are, themselves, radiant with divine kinship, and under their hands life's daily toil itself is glorified.

This Christlike conception, as thus pictured on Murillo's canvas, needs universal acceptance as a vital condition of the Kingdom of Christ. All toil, for all time, in all ways and in all places, is for his sake.

A Battle Episode

BY W. G. NYCE

The fighting along the front was fast and furious, The king came riding along with several of his officers, and stopped where a little detachment was coping with great odds,—a company so valiant and heroic that he felt they should be publicly commended for their fidelity.

Calling the captain, he exclaimed: "Your company seems to have lost the greater part of its men already!"

"No, your Majesty," replied the candid captain, "we haven't lost a man yet."

"Why, then, is your company so small? It seems but a remnant."

"Well, you see, it is such a nice day that about one-third of them went off in automobiles and carriages to visit friends."

"Where are the rest?"

"Another third are in their tents, entertaining friends. They are doing that a good bit of the time."

"Does that account for all your absentees?"

"No. Some are peeved, and they never turn out. Others are just plain lazy, and no bugle call to service ever arouses them,—unless there are rations to be distributed. These are all that we can count on."

If this had occurred in France, the result would have been court-martial and death. As it occurred in America, on a pleasant Sunday morning, in the church-service battle against sin, the King has not yet revealed what he will do about it. But his Word is full of instances of what he has done with unfaithful servants.

"When Jesus comes to reward his servants,
Whether it be noon or night,
Faithful to him will he find us watching,
With our lamps all trimmed and bright?"

Reflections

BY ELIZABETH H. BRUBAKER

What a rich field of Bible literature we are passing through, this quarter, in the current Sunday-school lessons! When God created Adam and Eve, placed them in the Garden of Eden, they failed to obey their Creator, and God's judgment, expulsion from the garden, was visited upon them. But man again failed. As people multiplied, the earth was filled with wickedness, and then follows the judgment of the flood. The holiness of God is here manifested in punishing man. God can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance. His hand must fall upon the guilty, else he would not be God, the Holy One. However, God's mercy is shown in giving man another chance. The earth is replenished with people, when the spirit of pride is displayed in their attempt to make themselves a name, and build a tower which should reach to heaven. God came down to see man's work. He was displeased and judgment again follows in the confusion of tongues. Their purposes were defeated and they were scattered.

God again manifests his long-suffering by choosing one whom he would bless that he might be a blessing. God now has his watchful eye on Abram, who is called from the midst of idolatry into Canaan, the land of promise. That the promise of his seed to be multiplied as the sand of the sea may be verified, Isaac is born, also Jacob and his twelve sons, who became God's chosen people Israel. We have followed the latter into Egypt, through the oppression, through their deliverance under their leader Moses. At Sinai God restores the communion and fellowship which were broken in the Garden of Eden. After giving the law, God calls Moses up into Mount Sinai, and gives him the pattern of the tabernacle in which he promises to meet with his people. The design of the tabernacle was not only for a meeting-place with his people (Ex. 25: 22) but that God might dwell in their midst. "Let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them" (Ex. 25: 8) said God. "I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God" (Ex. 29: 45)..

Reading the text carefully, we find that whether camping or on the march, the tabernacle in which was the ark, God's dwelling-place, was always in the midst of the tribes. God is a God of order, but more, he is in our midst to protect and to be easy of access. From the day that sin entered into the world, God had no dwelling-place with man. He saw the people in their misery, and heard their groans (Ex. 3: 7). He visited them, but not until Israel was separated from Egypt, defiled with idols, and redeemed by blood and by his power, did he come to dwell with them.

Here also, in the tabernacle, God revealed himself. "They shall know that I am the Lord their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I may dwell with them" (Ex. 29: 46). Through the tabernacle God revealed his character and declared his purposes of love and redemption.

Decisions

BY ROY TEMPLE HOUSE

Once upon a time there were three preachers, all struggling with heavy and difficult charges, and all poorly paid. Then, on one and the self-same day, it happened that each of the three received a call to a pleasanter location, with a much more generous salary.

The first preacher weighed the matter maturely, consulted with his faithful helpmeet and with his God, and concluded that it was not just to himself or his growing family, to work under the limitations, financial and other, which then surrounded him. Confident that he could be at least as useful in the new work, he resigned his pastorate and accepted the other. The event justified his confidence. Neither he nor any one of his household has ever doubted that he did the wise thing and the right thing in changing to the more promising and fruitful field of labor.

The second preacher considered the situation quite as carefully and prayerfully as his brother, and, after deliberate heart-searching, determined to close his eyes to the apparent advantages of the transfer. It seemed to him, and to his, inasmuch as he was securing results where God had placed him, whereas he could not prophesy so surely that he would prove the man to meet the peculiar responsibilities of the other pastorate, that it was unwise to leave a certain good for a questionable better. So he informed his grateful congregation that he would remain with them. The knowledge that he was sufficiently interested in their welfare to refuse a larger salary and a more attractive field elsewhere, strengthened his hold on his people, and his work since then has been blessed more richly than before.

The call threw the third preacher into a condition of nervous excitement that was pitiful to see. He wanted to go and he wanted to stay. He didn't want to go and he didn't want to stay. He felt that it would be foolish and positively sinful to neglect the real opportunity which seemed to have been divinely opened to him. He was sure that he had no right to leave the charge where he had labored so hard and long, and where his labors were so sorely needed. He was afraid that he would not be equal to the other place. He was afraid that so definite an opening was evidence that he no longer belonged where he was. So he lost sleep over the matter, and he wore out his family and friends with arguments and questions. He accepted, and recalled his acceptance; he declined, and telegraphed frantically to have the question reopened. The record does not state whether he finally went or stayed; but we may be certain that whichever course he followed, he never ceased regretting that he had not done the other thing.

The lesson is not for ministers alone. No one but God knows which is the wiser course to follow in any one of a thousand contingencies which arise in every life. Has every crossroads a better path and a worse, a right way and a wrong? Or is it not possible to admit, with old Sir Roger de Coverley, that "much might be said on both sides"? Our Father has set us no task to which our knowledge and ability are not equal. It is mine to choose my course honestly, carefully and prayerfully,—the rest is God's. And yet the world is full of conscientious men and women who are trying to do God's work for him. A man who calls himself a Christian, confessed recently that he is in a state of constant uneasiness, for fear that the particular work at which he happens to be occupied, at any moment, is not the wisest employment of his time. Very many of us, it is to be feared, are more or less like him, and yet such an attitude, reduced to its lowest terms, is impiety. It is doubting God's Word; it is doubting God's Providence. Honest, faithful effort is our part. The results are his alone. "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass."

An old lady, down East, is the widow of a Western miner who made a fortune, but who lost practically every cent of it, shortly before his death, by a hasty speculation. For a few years the possessor of hundreds of thousands, the old lady is now entirely dependent on the meager earnings of her daughter. She is fond of telling the story of her short-lived wealth, but she always concludes cheerfully: "Well, it would 'a' been nice to have that money now, when things are so high, but Thomas thought he was doing the best thing, and I guess the Lord won't let us suffer for it." No, Aunt Ellen, the Lord won't let you suffer for anything but sin. If you suffer, or I, for anything else, it is our doing, not the Lord's.

Knowledge of Jesus

BY G. W. TUTTLE

To know my Jesus! Yes, to know
The virtues in my Christ that glow;
And know his mercy! will be key
To unlock heaven and earth for me.
To know my Jesus! Know that he
Eternal life has brought to me!

Knowledge of Jesus is the secret of the Christian's power, the beginning and end of his confidence; the stimulus to Christian service, and the assurance of eternal life. Life unfolds under the quickening influence of the knowledge of Christ; it blossoms in new activities, it blesses all with whom it comes in contact. Eternal life! it has already begun in the true disciple of Jesus.

"I will come again and receive you unto myself." The heart of the Master longs for his own; for the souls of men who look up to him with expectant faces, who joy at his touch, whose hearts burn within them as he talks with them by the way; for the followers whose knowledge of him and whose usefulness in his service is increasing from day to day.

It is our knowledge of Jesus, even our small understanding of the great Christ, that makes wondrously satisfying those words of his: "Because I live, ye shall live also." Here is our certainty, our assurance, our title deed to heaven. This verse and one other: "Where I am, there ye may be also."

Two things will make heaven for us,—the presence of Christ, and the absence of sin. The virtues that have shone but dimly in our lives will there take on new luster; the knowledge of the Master that is so imperfect here because of human limitations, will there come to fullness and fruition, for "we shall see him as he is."

For every Christian there are two resurrections. The first resurrection is when the heart's door opens to Jesus Christ, and we say: "Come in!" How new, and warm, and luminous life becomes! How the good predominates, and how the evil shrinks away, when the Light of the ages shines into all the dark corners of the heart! Poverty of life vanishes when God's riches are ours, and new knowledge of Jesus Christ comes in. Is not this the first resurrection?

The second resurrection will not be more wonderful, but it will be more perfect, and more complete. It will be glorious, endless, satisfying, for we shall be with him forever.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

THE CONFERENCE DAILY

As the time for the Annual Conference draws near, there is some inquiry as to the Conference Daily for this year. The Committee of Arrangements have asked the undersigned to take charge of this part of the work this year. We will, therefore, try to do the best we can.

Arrangements have been made to publish a special edition of the Conference Daily News this year, in which the entire paper will be given over to the Conference proceedings. It will contain a little more matter than last year and will cover seven issues. One will be a big, double issue, as a sort of Becker Memorial issue. The principal addresses will be given in full, and every effort will be made to render the publication one worthy of the event which it celebrates. We want it to reflect the spirit of the Forward Movement. This can only be done if we have the coöperation of the churches. The cost of the paper will be a considerable amount, and is quite an undertaking. We feel sure, however, that the Brotherhood will not fail us this time. The subscription price will be 30 cents for single subscriptions, and 25 cents in clubs of five or more. We are going to urge our people to send in their subscriptions early, so that the mailing-list may be as complete as possible before Conference begins. This will facilitate prompt mailing of the papers every day during the Conference. Subscriptions may be made at any time and they will be properly filed and cared for. A limited amount of select advertising will be accepted.

SEBRING, FLORIDA

Our love feast was held on the evening of March 18, and a most spiritual feast it was. Though a score of members had left for their homes in the North, there were about sixty at the tables. Among the number, as visiting elders, were Geo. A. Branscom, of North Carolina, J. V. Felthouse, of Seminole, Fla., and S. A. Honberger, of Tampa, same State. Bro. A. C. Wieand, who left for Chicago the next morning, officiated, being assisted by several of the ministers present. In fact, all told, ten ministers were at the tables.

With Bro. Branscom, a member of the District Mission Board, here, and also Bro. J. H. Garst, a member of the same Board, it became convenient to confer regarding the outlook for mission work in several sections of Florida. Bro. Honberger locates near Eustis, and will take charge of the interests at the Seneca church. A movement is on foot to establish a mission at Tampa, and for our interests in the South this means much. Two, and possibly three, other points are under consideration. Movements of this sort simply pave the way for a number of churches in the State. In Florida there are enough members to form at least a half dozen congregations, but they are too much scattered. Efforts will be made to encourage greater concentration.

Among the ministers spending the winter at Sebring, and who will return to their homes inside of a few weeks, we name Brethren D. H. Zigler, I. J. Rosenberger, Wm. Bixler and A. D. Coate. All rendered valuable services while here. Sister Marguerite Bixler Garrett, widely known as a leader in song, rendered assistance in some departments of the work. The services of Sister J. B. Kendall, as Sunday-school superintendent, have proven helpful. In the person of Sister O. L. Mansfield, we have a very efficient church and Sunday-school chorister. Our congregation is favored with three resident deacons and two ministers, both elders. Bro. Coate, mentioned above, has purchased a winter home and that will add to the ministerial force.

LET US HAVE YOUR COÖPERATION IN OUR WORK, PLEASE

One of the greatest needs in our city mission work is the coöperation of our rural members. A number of young members have come to us from the country, and have remained in the city just long enough to lose interest in their church. Then they leave the city. After having left the city, I get letters from pastors and parents, inquiring about them. Would it not have been much better if they could have notified me sooner? This would have given me an opportunity of getting acquainted with them and inviting them to worship with us. The primary purpose of the city mission is to furnish a church home for our retired brethren who have left the farm and moved to the city, but we must also try to take care of the pure country boys and girls whose lives have not been corrupted with vice and immorality as the lives of some of the city boys and girls have been. These young people leave their homes in the country and go to the cities, seeking employment. They find things quite different in the city. The attractions and amusements are so alluring that they soon captivate those who frequent the places of amusement, and finally they forget the church and Sunday-school. They seek pleasure in worldly amusements, and before they learn that there is no real satisfaction in them, they become strangers to the church, and never attend services any more. Sad, sad, but nevertheless it is true.

Some parents have neglected their children,—not purposely, but for the lack of serious thought. Some shepherd permitted his lambs to wander from the fold by not looking after them close enough. "While men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares also among the wheat, and went away" (Matt. 13: 25).

Brethren and sisters, it would be a source of much pleasure to our city mission workers to have your coöperation in saving your children from the pit-falls of sin and for the church. If you have children in Rock Island or Moline, Ill., or in Davenport or Muscatine, Iowa, please send me name and address. Then, too, write them a letter, directing them to the Church of the Brethren, which is conveniently located at 1133 Lucas Street, on the West Hill Street car line. Services each Lord's Day morning and evening. Bible study and prayer meeting every Wednesday evening, at 7:30. A special invitation to visitors who are in the city.

Leander Smith, Pastor.

1147 Lucas Street, Muscatine, Iowa, March 8.

"OVER THE TOP"

One Monday morning, last spring, I climbed into my car and drove 70 miles across country to my old home in the "dear old Bethel" congregation. My first stop was at the home of a brother-in-law, W. E. Flory, brother of Raymond, the missionary in China. After the usual greetings he said: "You can't guess how much our offering for Armenian relief was yesterday."

I hedged: "Was it as much as we raised for the China Boys' School? That was the largest offering Bethel ever gave at a collection in one service."

"I do not remember how much that was," he said.

I replied: "$326."

"Yes, it was more than that."

He looked so pleased over what he had to tell that I could hardly wait until I found out, so I said: "I'll give up. How much was it?"

Now, reader, what would you have guessed? Here was a country congregation, that had experienced an entire failure of their wheat crop the year before. The farmers had even to buy seed for the next crop. The corn crop was only fair and of very poor quality in 1917, as farmers all over the corn belt will remember. Then, too, the membership only numbers 100, and, of course, not all were present on the Sunday in question.

Well, you couldn't guess, if you didn't know Bethel, and her pastor, and how the Lord had rewarded them in times past for sacrificing and giving liberally of both her children and money, that their less fortunate brothers across the water might live.

The pastor, Bro. George W. Hilton, while a missionary in China, helped the Red Cross to feed the starving in one of the great famines. He knows what it means to be able to supply only a part of the hungry with daily food, and to let the larger part die of starvation because there is not enough to feed all. He knows the pitiful entreaty of children, weakly crying for something to eat. He knows the sight of dead and dying,—scattered here and there for lack of food. He knows how the half-starved are a prey to disease.

Well, he told some actual experiences, that Sunday morning, and pointed out what Jesus meant when he said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these," and how we can serve our Loving Father by being kind to some of God's unfortunate people in Armenia. Then he said: "It takes just $5 a month to feed one of these people, or $60 a year." "I couldn't be happy," he continued, "to sit down to my table with my family if I didn't supply the means for at least one of these to live."

Then brethren, here and there over the congregation, said they too wanted to supply their own table, but furnish enough besides, for one poor, homeless, persecuted Armenian Christian, to have something to eat every day for a year. Then others pledged enough for six months, and even the boys and girls wanted to earn money enough to feed one of these little brothers or sisters for a month. So when all were through, the offering amounted to $1,110.

Every place I called, the people were just as anxious to tell me about it as was Bro. Flory. They were experiencing the real joy of having gone "over the top" for Jesus' sake. In the April drive for this same cause for $250,000 in our Brethren congregations you will have a chance to set up a new mile-stone, when your congregation goes "over the top" and you raise your quota and more.

SISTER D. J. LICHTY.—AN APPRECIATION

The death of Sister Lichty reached us by cable at Bulsar, and was forwarded from there to the other stations. We had been out in the village of Shaker pur Bhata for some days. Returning home we found a number of letters, postcards and other pieces of mail. One postcard attracted my attention,—perhaps because there was so little written on it. I took it up first, and read: "Nora Lichty died twelfth, influenza."

What sadness in those few words! The news touched deeply every sympathetic heart. Many, all about us, have lost loved ones by that same disease during last October and November.

Nora was one of us. She was ever ready, willing and cheerful, and fitted into any place where needed. Yes, I think that is a good word to use,—"fitted." She was unassuming and never reminded us that she knew things,

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation.

What Easter Should Mean to Us

1 Cor. 15: 50-58

For Week Beginning April 13, 1919

1. A Message of Cheer.—Several things seem to stand out in these verses,—things that are worth while for us to ponder seriously. However, we must not forget that we are treading on the borderland of mysterious things, and therefore should follow closely in the footsteps of our Divine Leader. Even Paul recognizes that he is dealing with things beyond finite understanding, when he says: "Behold, I show you a mystery." And when we are handling things which the great Apostle to the Gentiles regarded as mysteries, we can well afford to step cautiously, and not to speak too rashly. Paul tells us that "flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God." He tells us that "corruption" can not "inherit incorruption." He tells us that "we shall not all sleep [die], but we shall all be changed in a moment." He tells us that "this mortality must put on immortality." He leads us out into the great after-world and he shows us something of what shall be hereafter. He gives us all to understand that the grave is not the terminal. We shall live again. We shall not all sleep. If we shall not ALL sleep, then we shall never cease to live. Our bodies shall not slumber in the dust. To those who are alive at "his coming," the words of Jesus to Martha will be definitely fulfilled: "Whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die."

2. The Hope of a Blessed Hereafter.—Paul and Jesus are united in this, that there is a deathless land somewhere beyond the portals of death. Why, then, be satisfied with this life? No matter what its ambitions or its accomplishments, it will not be many years at most until it is all over, and we must face the things which now are hidden from our view. We must face the conditions that await us, and those conditions will be largely of our own choosing. The character of our life beyond the resurrection will be dependent, in large measure, upon our life on this side of the grave.

3. A Glorious Vision.—What more illustrious thought can there be than just this,—that, by reason of Christ's righteousness there was an empty tomb in the garden on that never-to-be-forgotten resurrection morning! Still more comforting to us is the promise of an empty grave for every one who believes in the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. The days are coming when we shall wish for the swinging portal, when our own mortal nature shall put on immortality, when the old earth-life shall be over, and the repose of the final slumber at an end, and we shall arise to greet the sunrise of a day that shall never know a twilight.

4. The Comfort That Never Fails.—Few households escape the hour of the vacant chair. Very few circles remain permanently unbroken. Sometimes it is a child, sometimes a youth or a maiden, sometimes a wife or husband, and sometimes an aged one who is taken away. The joy of the Christian is that those who are thus taken are in the Father's keeping, who doeth all things well. And thus it is that Easter-tide comes to us, laden with cheer and comfort. The apostles preached it, the Book of Revelation thrills with it. Throughout the long ages the church has rested her faith on it in full assurance.

5. Suggestive References on the Resurrection.—Awaking out of sleep (Isa. 26: 19). Morning after night (Dan. 12: 2, 3, 13). Absolute assurance may be ours (Job 19: 25-27). A corn of wheat rising through death (John 12: 24). Transformation (Philpp. 3: 21). The first and best coming forth (1 Thess. 4: 13-18). The vision of the revelator (Rev. 20: 5-13).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 6

Sunday-school Lesson, God Our Heavenly Father.—Gen. 1: 1, 27; Psa. 103: 1-14; Matt. 6: 24-34.

Christian Workers' Meeting. Treasures.—Matt. 6: 19-21.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

One has been baptized in the Bremen church, Ind., since last heard from.

Two have been baptized in the Mechanic Grove church, Pa., since the last report.

One accepted Christ in the Mt. Morris church, Ill.,—Bro. G. L. Wine, of Polo, same State, evangelist.

Nine were baptized in the Covina church, Calif.,—Bro. D. L. Miller, of Pasadena, same State, evangelist.

Four accepted Christ at the Red River church, Ohio,—Bro. Wm. Buckley, of Bradford, same State, evangelist.

Eight accepted Christ in the Kokomo church, Ind.,—Bro. Wm. L. Hatcher, of Rossville, same State, evangelist.

Seven were baptized in the Hanover church, Pa.,—Bro. John E. Rowland, of Bunkertown, same State, evangelist.

Six stood for Christ in the Shamokin church, Pa.,—Bro. Adam M. Hollinger, home minister, in charge of the meetings.

Twenty-two confessed Christ in the Elizabethtown church, Pa.,—Bro. Frank Carper, of Palmyra, same State, evangelist.

Thirteen confessed Christ in the Hatfield congregation, Pa.,—Bro. Rufus P. Bucher, of Quarryville, same State, evangelist.

Five were baptized at the Merkey house, Little Swatara congregation, Pa.,—Bro. S. Z. Witmer, of Elizabethtown, same State, evangelist.

Thirty-four confessed Christ, fifteen of whom have been baptized, in the Denver church, Colo.,—Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, Ill., evangelist.

Seventeen accepted Christ, thirteen of whom were received by baptism and four reclaimed, in the Piney Flats congregation, Tenn.,—Bro. S. H. Garst, of Blountville, same State, evangelist.

Thirty-seven accepted Christ, sixteen of whom were baptized, ten reclaimed, and nine await baptism, in the Shiloh church, Va.,—Bro. J. B. Shaffer, of Nestorville, W. Va., and Bro. J. E. Shepler, of Bentons Ferry, W. Va., evangelists.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. Ira H. Fox, of Brooklyn, Iowa, to begin June 15 in his home church.

Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, to begin April 13 in the Pyrmont church, Ind.

Bro. C. C. Cripe, of Bremen, Ind., to begin the latter part of May in his home church.

Bro. Wm. Buckley, of Bradford, Ohio, to begin April 27 in the West Manchester church, Ind.

Bro. David Metzler, of Nappanee, Ind., to begin in September, in the Center church, same State.

Bro. H. M. Brubaker, of Plattsburg, Mo., to begin some time in October in the Alvo church, Nebr.

Bro. W. K. Conner, of Harrisburg, Pa., to begin May 11 in the Mechanic Grove church, same State.

Bro. Edgar Rothrock, of Holmesville, Nebr., to begin some time in November in the Monitor church, Kans.

Bro. Chas. R. Oberlin, of Hartford City, Ind., to begin April 6 in his home church, at the Bethel Center house.

Brother and Sister Ralph G. Rarick, of South Bend, Ind., to begin June 15 in the North Liberty church, same State.

Bro. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans., during the latter part of April at Holmesville, Nebr., to begin May 1 in the Larned County church, Kans.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. J. R. Suter, of Deisem, N. Dak., has changed his address to Edgeley, same State.

Bro. Ezra Flory, of the General Sunday School Board, spent several hours at the Publishing House last Friday, looking after some matters in connection with the "Book of Doctrine" which the Board has under preparation. About five minutes was all that Bro. Flory allowed the "Messenger" rooms.

Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Bethany Bible School, favored the "Messenger" rooms with a short call last week. Bro. Hoff came out to the Publishing House primarily on business connected with the sale of his new book just from the press, "The Message of the Book of Revelation," which the reader will find listed in our advertising columns. A preliminary examination of this book has disclosed two facts of first-class importance. One is that the author has thought it worth while to acquaint himself with the historical background of the Book of Revelation. He has read the apocalyptic literature of the period so as to understand that method of presenting truth. The other point is that he never loses sight of the practical purpose which the Revelator had in mind. This keeps him from getting lost in a maze of fanciful and profitless speculation. One does not need to agree with the author's opinions on all points, to see that he has succeeded well in giving the reader the "Message" of this last book of the New Testament. The Book Editor will probably take an early "excursion" into the territory of this volume.

Relief and Reconstruction Work

April will be a red letter month in the history of the church because of the supreme effort which will be made, on every hand, for the Reconstruction work in Armenia and Syria.

Literature is being mailed out to local chairmen as rapidly as the nomes come in. If there is ony church thot fails to receive this literature, or if there is ony church in which o local chairman hos not been appointed, we hopo thot the elder will coöperate to the fullest extent.

Sunday, April 13, is the day when the compaign will reach its climox. Let us work towerds that day, and gathor our offorings at that time. If this is too early a date, lot Sunday, April 20, be designoted. Wo trust thot by thet timo the compaign will be over.

The omount osked for by the Committee need not all be paid in cash. It con be pledged now, ond paid monthly or quarterly, as the donor moy elect. These pledges should be held in the locol church.

If printed pledges of the Committee are not at hond for the campaign, he suro to prepore plenty of slips, to use as pledges at the time of your meeting.

In behalf of the sufferieg of Armonia, in bohalf of this great work, authorized by the Goshen Conferenco, and in behalf of the Brotherhood, we thonk you for what you moy so willingly do.

Most frotornally,

Relief ond Reconstruction Committee.

Bro. J. F. Graybill and wife, our missionaries to Sweden, arrived safely at Brooklyn, N. Y., at noon, March 24. Word to this effect reached the Mission Board rooms just a little too late for mention in our issue of last week. Their address for the time being will be Palmyra, Pa. Bro. Graybill hopes to attend the Mission Board Meeting here next week.

A letter from Bro. J. Homer Bright to the Secretary of the General Mission Board brings the sad intelligence of the death of Bro. Bright's father, Eld. John Calvin Bright, on Monday, March 24, after an illness with influenza of about one week. Bro. Bright was well known throughout the Brotherhood, having served the church in many important capacities. He was still in active service at the time of his death, being but a little past 67 years of age. He preached his last sermon at Pittsburg, Ohio, March 16, and was to give a missionary sermon that same evening, but the approach of the dread pestilence prevented him from filling that engagement. We extend our sincere sympathies to all the bereaved ones. We hope to publish soon a suitable sketch of Bro. Bright's life and work.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

The District Conference of Middle Pennsylvania is to be held in the Snake Spring Valley congregation April 15 and 16. See Bro. Joseph F. Snyder's announcement among the Notes.

Be sure to read, on page 215, how one congregation went "over the top" last spring. There's help and inspiration in Bro. Rothrock's story for the special task we have in hand this month.

On page 220 we publish programs of the Ministerial, Sunday-school, Missionary and Educational Meetings of Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Colorado, to be held at Hutchinson, Kans., April 26-28.

The District Conference of Idaho and Western Montana is to be held at Nezperce, Idaho, May 13-15. On page 220 Bro. A. I. Mow gives some important information concerning that gathering. No member within the District should neglect to read that communication. Let there be a general move to be present at the Conference.

MISCELLANEOUS

The District Meeting of Western Pennsylvania will be held at Scalp Level, instead of Markleysburg, April 21-23. Full particulars will be given in our next issue.

The General Educational Board is scheduled to meet here in regular session next Tuesday, April 8, and the General Mission Board on the day following. It will be a busy week at the Publishing House.

One of the churches in the Middle West,—and not the largest, by any means,—reports an offering of $400 for the Armenian-Syrian Relief Fund, with still further pledges to be paid in later. We trust that such a readiness will "provoke" other congregations to a like exhibition of "love and good works."

Word from the American Committee for Relief in the Near East informs us that the Sunday School Commission was booked to sail April 2 from Marseilles, France, for Port Said, Egypt, on the Steamer "Canberra." All were well.

The District Meeting of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado is to be held in the Belleville church, Kans., April 16. Owing to the recurrence of influenza in so many churches of the District, other gatherings previously arranged for, in connection with the Conference, will not be held.

Bro. A. W. Atkins, District Secretary, desires to make the following announcement to the Sunday-schools of Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas: "The quarterly Convention for the second quarter will be held in the Fairview church, Douglas County, Mo., April 20, beginning at 9:30 A. M. A good representation is desired."

The "Year Book and Church Directory" of the newly-established congregation at Cleveland, Ohio, is one of the most attractive booklets of the kind we have yet seen. The story of the growth of the work in that city is told in an interesting way. Read Bro. Copeland's account on page 219 of this issue, noting especially his offer to send copies of the booklet to persons interested, and his request for the addresses of friends living in the city. Let us help the cause in Cleveland!

Last week we published the Queries for next Conference which have so far been sent to this office. A number of District Meetings, usually held in the fall, were postponed until spring on account of the epidemic. This fact will tend to increase the difficulty of getting the material in hand for the Conference Booklet in time. We earnestly urge officers of District Meetings to see that all matter for the Booklet is sent us as promptly as possible. Do not wait for the publication of your minutes. Send queries and names of Standing Committee delegates direct to the "Gospel Messenger." And do it as soon as you can give the information.

The Goshen City church, Ind., must be taking the Forward Movement seriously, judging from the stress put upon it in a late issue of their church directory. The matter was taken up by the church council and a program of seventeen points adopted, covering all phases of the local activities. That looks like business. Here are a few points which are good signs of a healthy spiritual state: "The financial budget of the church fully subscribed in an every-member canvass." "The church represented by delegates at District Meeting and Annual Meeting." "Friendliness toward strangers and visitors. Let our church be known as the place where 'you're a stranger only once.'"

"SEND EIGHT MEN"

The three words, given as the caption of this note, are contained in a cable message received March 30 from Sister Eliza B. Miller, Secretary of the India Field Committee. They mean that India is calling for eight new men as missionaries.

Couched within this request from India lies a meaning that we, who are far from these front line trenches, can scarcely understand. The foundations of our India work have been laid broad and deep. Much self-sacrificing toil has been rendered there by some of the church's best. As a consequence, the seed sown has ripened into full harvest. Doors are opening,—really, many of them are off their hinges,—and opportunity for the greatest advance for years is presented to our missionaries and to our church. But the workers are insufficient in number to do other than scarcely hold their own until the arrival of recruits.

What are the Board's prospects to answer this need? We can only say three men, two of whom were appointed last year. Only one man available for India from the great Church of the Brethren in a year! And such opportunities! And such imperative need!

Here is a chance for young men to invest their lives at a premium. They can multiply themselves. They can labor at the biggest job in the world. They can become outstanding leaders among more than a million. They can lift a race from ignorance, superstition, primitive existence into a self-respecting people of God. And, young man of the church, if your preparation is such that you can go, God wants your service. He may want it in India. You may be one whom he has chosen for this great work. The General Board is seeking recruits and issues this as a call for strong men to consider and to apply for the work. They are needed now, before Annual Conference.

The tasks are not all easy in India, or anywhere else on the field, but we take it that real, virile Christian manhood is not seeking for easy places. We have more confidence in seeking for men for tasks that will call from them the very best with which they have been endowed by God.

Think of India, brethren, hear her call, "Send eight men." Pray and encourage the right men to apply to the Board at once. May God help us that we may not be found wanting with our men in this great crisis in our India work. We can do it if we will. Write us at once.

In behalf of the Master's Work,

General Mission Board.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Bible Given Recognition

It has always been a puzzle to right-thinking people why a thorough knowledge of the Bible should be so lightly esteemed by prominent educational institutions. It is decidedly refreshing, therefore, to learn that Columbia University has taken advance ground among the educational centers of our land by making a fair degree of Bible knowledge an examination unit for entrance. The required range of Scripture study covers Jewish history from the Egyptian period to the destruction of Jerusalem,—seventy years after the ushering in of the Christian era. It is gratifying, indeed, to note that the Word of Life is attaining its rightful place in education as well as in morals.

Fateful Race Prejudice

It was thought that, with the ushering in of a new era, all tendency towards race prejudice had ceased, but late press reports bring the disquieting news from Argentina, South America, that a number of Jews in that republic have been relentlessly massacred, and that, too, upon the wholly erroneous accusation,—as later on shown,—" of fomenting a Bolshevist revolution." In several sections of Russia, Poland and other European countries, the same bitter race hatred has lately broken out. In consequence there has been a wholly unjustifiable slaughter of Jews, running into the thousands, with many more seriously wounded. Seemingly the remnant of God's " Chosen People " is to drink persecution's bitter cup to the very dregs.

British Capital in American Breweries

More than $150,000,000 of British funds is invested in the stock of American breweries, and now the word comes that Great Britain will demand compensation for the anticipated loss by reason of prohibition. We expected a demand of this sort, when the prohibition era would finally be ushered in but, really, why did our British friends risk their millions in a land where the rising tide against liquor was so unmistakable? Had Great Britain made use of that money in supplying food for her own people, rather than sending it over here in the hope of reaping heavy dividends through the manufacture of beer, it would have been much more creditable all around. Incidentally there would have been a valuable saving of food-stuffs, of great benefit to Great Britain as well as ourselves.

All in the Day's News

It is passing strange how, in the grist of daily happenings, as recorded by the various journals, there are incidents every now and then, that accurately illustrate the applicability of some old-time Bible text. Side by side in a recent daily paper there were two occurrences exemplifying Cant. 8: 6, "Love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave." There was the case of the mother who rushed back into her blazing residence to rescue three children on an upper floor. Her boundless love prompted her to brave the devouring flames, counting not her own life dear to herself. Wholly different was the case of the mother whose final act is summarized in the terse headline: " Jealous Wife Kills Two Babies and Herself." Wild frenzy given full sway, reason was overthrown.

The Korean Uprising

Recent reports of Japan's ruthlessness, in dealing with Korea's request for national independence, are ominous. Thousands have been killed and many have been imprisoned,—in many cases wholly innocent of any misdoings. Korea's demonstration throws into startling relief, once more, the political perils that attend the preaching of the Gospel in oppressed, suppressed and depressed lands. The missionaries at work in Korea have not, as a matter of course, encouraged nationalistic aspirations among the Koreans, and yet, since the revolt has broken out, Japanese officials are inclined to blame the missionaries. If Japan is wise, in its present crisis, it should not accuse the workers of complicity of which they are not guilty. Rather it should turn to the missionaries as helpers to allay the pending unrest.

Adding to the Span of Life

Perhaps no topic, pertaining to man's physical being, arouses keener interest than that of prolonging life,—retarding the fateful moment when man must bid farewell to the scenes of earth. For centuries the most learned medical experts have struggled with the momentous problem, gaining, perhaps, a point now and then, but unable to discover the vital conditions insuring longevity. The latest project of medical research, along the line above referred to, is being planned by Dr. Octave Laurent, a heart specialist and leader in French medical circles. Aided by Dr. Amanry Mars, a Chicago surgeon, Dr. Laurent proposes to establish a " Laboratory of Vital Energy" in our western metropolis. A wealthy Chicagoan has promised an initial gift of $100,000 towards the necessary $250,000 endowment. Dr. Laurent, in his successful operations on the hearts of wounded soldiers during the war, has made many important discoveries in heart research. He is also sure that other physicians have made similarly valuable discoverics. In the contemplated laboratory Dr. Laurent proposes " to continue the research into the thing we know as life. It may be classified into vital energy, slow life or apparent death,—all being susceptible to treatment. No one knows," he says, " how far medical science can go toward prolonging all life, and in reviving life after it is apparently extinct." The results of the proposed research will be awaited with interest.

Labrador's Influenza Scourge

As nowhere else, perhaps, influenza has practically wiped out the bulk of Labrador's population. Terrible and mysterious as the disease has been, in the United States, it has been far more fatal in Labrador. Had it assumed the same virulence in our land, seventy-five million of our people would have been taken. Entire Labrador communities have been wiped out literally,—not five in one hundred being spared. In one case all the inhabitants on one of the islands died,—their bodies being devoured by wild animals. Medical men attribute Labrador's low resistance, when exposed to the onslaught of influenza, to the fact that the people had not acquired the necessary physical power to throw off the fatal germs. The same thing has been noted in sections of India and other parts of the great world field.

The Empty Jail

Birmingham, Ala., is a wide-awake southern city, and some years ago it put up the handsomest city jail in that Commonwealth, at an expense of about $100,000, surrounded by about twenty acres of ground beautifully cultivated. Before the advent of prohibition the number of prisoners confined in the jail was 200 and upward. Then the number dwindled to 60 or 70, most of them colored women, and at this writing the jail is empty. Now the problem is, what to do with the fine jail which has no inmates. Another trouble is that Birmingham,—hitherto depending upon prisoners for its street-cleaning and garbage collection,—must now do it with paid labor instead of with prisoners. Liquor men may belittle the endeavors of temperance workers, but they can not deny the invincible testimony of the empty jail.

Alarming Conditions in Russia

During February more than 113,000 persons, or about eleven per cent of the entire population, died in Petrograd, according to latest Russian police statistics. Feb. 1 the total population of Petrograd was 990,000. In addition to the deaths during the month, 77,000 persons left Petrograd, so that on March 1 the population was only 800,000. American relief workers, who left Moscow Feb. 12, declare that deaths in that city, early in February averaged 4,000 daily. Smallpox, typhus, starvation, and the " hunger-plague " were raging unchecked. Coffins are no longer sold in Moscow, but are only rented for use at funerals. Seemingly, all forces of law and order have, temporarily at least, been overcome by the hordes of terrorism. Whether the chaotic conditions, now existing, will yield to saner counsels by and by, remains to be seen.

The World Needs More Than Civilization

An editorial item in the Chicago " Herald and Examiner," referring to the fifteen hundred million human beings of earth, asserts that the great majority has reason to be greatly dissatisfied with life, and that several hundred million are absolute savages, under a very thin veneer, or no veneer at all, of civilization. In the editor's opinion, such civilization and such organized intelligence as the world possesses, it needs urgently,—especially now, since war has torn open old wounds, and people, overwhelmed in misery,—dumb hitherto,—have begun to talk, and tell what they want. We agree with the editor, so far as the helpful influences of civilization are concerned, but he does not go far enough when he excludes what this old world most sorely needs,—the uplifting influence of the Man of Galilee. He alone offers the sovereign balm for the dire ills of humanity.

Bolshevism a Growing Danger

Recent press dispatches announce the rapid spread of Bolshevism from Russia to Poland, Hungary, Roumania and Austria, and at this time it is hard to tell just how much the final decisions of the Peace Conference may be complicated and delayed by that sinister influence. One of our senators, Mr. Hitchcock, of Nebraska, sees in the "imminent danger of Bolshevism" a solemn warning to the United States against " obstructing the formation of a League of Nations to combat autocracy and anarchy." It is clear that Bolshevism must be stayed, if orderly government is to survive. Close students of the situation assure us that the only real and permanent cure or prevention of Bolshevistic propaganda,—merely one of the varied forms of destructive radicalism,—is to be found in social justice, in political and economic progress along constructive and sound lines. Senator Borah, in a recent magazine article, said that America can escape Bolshevism only by devising " more just and humane laws " and bringing about " a more equitable distribution of our prosperity." The fairness of this enlightened declaration is obvious. Beyond all doubt, the cure for Bolshevism is found in justice, equality of opportunity and genuine democracy in government and in industry. But justice in national relations is impossible, in this age of complicated world trade, world finance, etc., unless justice and friendship are given full sway in international relations, also. War is the foe of social reform, of liberty, and of opportunity in economic relations. It necessitates artificial conditions of industry and arrests progress. Justice at home presupposes peace and economy, the utilization of national resources for constructive purposes. The world will organize for war, if it does not organize for peace and neighborly relations. It must be conceded, therefore, that the world must have a wisely organized and well-governed League of Nations.

" The Friendly Visitor "

One of the churches of Fort Worth, Texas, employs a worker who is known as a " Friendly Visitor." Some really remarkable results, in the development of practical Christianity, are reported as having been attained by the devoted woman who has put her whole soul into the work. In the heart of the long-neglected railroad district a mission has been established, known as the " Neighborhood Chapel." This has a Sunday-school of ninety members, not hitherto in attendance at religious services of any sort. A young people's society, prayer meeting and other services are also well attended. This " Friendly Visitor " averages a hundred visits a month in the homes of the community, influencing the lives of the people most favorably. Coming in touch with young and old, she learns their needs, and helps them in many ways.

Release of All " Conscientious Objectors " Urged

In a recent issue of " The Continent " a strong plea is made in behalf of " conscientious objectors against war," who were imprisoned while actual fighting was going on. " The World's Crisis " comes out in a similar appeal, citing especially the case of the seven leaders of the International Bible Students' Association, who were sentenced to twenty years in the Atlanta Penitentiary. It should be remembered that these men were not convicted of spreading the peculiar tenets of Russellism, but because they urged a following of the spirit of Christ's teaching, and insisted upon a literal interpretation of the command: " Thou shalt not kill." This was judged to be contrary to our statutes, and calculated to impede the mobilization of an army. Pertinently the " Crisis " asks: " The world at large may have been made safe for democracy, but are the rights of the Christian people now safe under a Government by democracy? "

Thousands Spent on Dogs

A wealthy woman's dog died in New York, the other day. Fido had every luxury while he lived, and his mistress insisted upon a luxurious burial. Not only was he given a costly casket, but also sepulture in a beautiful cemetery, devoted wholly to aristocracy's canines. The cemetery lies on a suburban hillside, far from the clamor of the city, with a sturdy iron fence preserving its exclusiveness. In spring it blossoms out with yellow pansies, red geraniums, and many roses. Over 3,000 dogs are buried there,—expensive monuments marking their graves, —the most elaborate memorial being a marble vault that cost $15,000. We allude to the foregoing to emphasize the fact,—lamentable as it is,—that humanity is more ready, at times, to spend large sums on the care of animal pets than on suffering fellow-beings. While thousands upon thousands, the world over, are suffering because they lack the barest necessities, it is downright wicked to spend money needlessly.

Christianity's Opportunities in China

Those who have China's best interests at heart, are hoping, in all sincerity, that, by the wise provisions of the League of Nations, when fully perfected, the future of that great republic may be fully safeguarded. Christianity in China, just now, is facing some problems, but the opportunities for real service far outnumber them. Never was there more need for the wise, aggressive prosecution of the work of Christian agencies. Fortunately, mission enterprises in China are now recognized as an essential factor by every one intelligently informed and genuinely interested in the nation's development. Present-day China is receptive to the lessons of Western civilization at its best. What China will be fifty years from now, depends upon the objectives toward which these new forces are to work. Of course, the Christian forces, engaged in this stupendous task, are very small. The total Protestant missionary force in China, including men and women, is slightly more than 5,000, or an average of one to every 80,000 of the population, and yet this small group has been, and is, the greatest single constructive force at work in China, according to the testimony of those who know the country best. Dr. Reinsch, the present American representative in China, said: " There have been many great crises in history, but none comparable to the drama which is now being enacted in the Far East, upon the outcome of which depends the welfare not only of a country, or a section of the race, but of all mankind." The present opportunity of " open doors " in China may possibly not be permanent. No one can prophesy when they might close. Why not work while it is day?

HOME AND FAMILY

No Place Like Home

BY JULIA GRAYDON

"There's no place like home," says the soldier brave,
As he clasps his infant child.
"Home is a place for which I fight,
Far off from the discords wild."

"There's no place like home," sighs the exile sad,
A weary and helpless man.
"A rover am I, no place call home,
Oh, pity the one under ban."

"There's no place like home," says the mother too,
After her pressing work is done,
As she lays her children softly to rest,
Kissing them every one.

"There's no place like home," cries the dying soul,
As he lifts his eyes above.
"The beautiful gate stands open wide,
I long for the Father's love."

Are You Going to Move This Spring?

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER

I WAS cleaning our back yard when Mrs. Norris leaned over the back fence and said: "So you're going to move? I thought, maybe, Loreny Adams didn't know, but this looks as if you were getting ready to go?"

I looked blankly at her for a moment: "What in the world do you mean?"

"Loreny said that you wanted to get into a quieter neighborhood; you wanted to have your Mary where there were not so many children."

"Of all things," I murmured helplessly. "I like Mary to play with other children; that is one of the reasons I moved to this stteet when she was little."

"So you ain't a going? Why, it does beat all how people make up their minds about a thing and then tell it. Well, I am awful glad that you stay here."

That evening, at dinner, we talked about this. Then Mary spoke up: "Well, mother, nearly everybody on this street is moving away. I don't wonder they counted us in." A little reflection, then she added: "I'd like to move too."

"Why?"

"Well, Allie Coy says they are going to move because their next door neighbor is,—they don't like them, and I guess the Delks don't like the Coys, for they are moving too. I don't like Joe Norris next door. Why can't we move somewhere else? There's lots nicer places."

"I guess you have as good reason as many of them, for moving, but I believe, Mary dear, we'll stay right here." The door-bell rang then, so I left the table and went to welcome Mrs. Trescott, who lives a few doors away. "You have come to talk about moving away, have you?" I hazarded.

She looked surprised. "Why, whoever told you? I am here to talk it over first with you."

"Take the big chair there, close to the grate. You look tired, too. No one told me. Mary says everybody on this street is moving, so I only guessed." I may have looked rather solemn by this time, for in spite of my gay assurance to Mary, I really found it quite upsetting to think that the friends I liked best on this street were going to move away. It was just a trifle disconcerting to find that what I liked so much was held so lightly by others.

"Well, we are talking of moving away. I don't like the house very well. Of course, if we had intended to move this spring, I would not have bought the new rug for that large dining-room." She looked at me with that helpless air of leaving it in my hands which so many women have when they feel that a situation is too much for them. Any one they can press into service is asked to decide real important questions for them.

"Florence, why did you take that house in the first place?"

"Why, I don't just know. We had to entertain so many people that the large dining-room was the one thing that attracted me."

"Exactly. I remember you told me that you wanted that dining-room when you moved in. That's not much of a reason for taking a house, is it?"

"No, perhaps not. You know the Coys are going away. I like that house and thought we'd move there. My living-room couch and hangings would look all right in their guest-room, and we'd have to furnish the living-room then."

"Will you like your home any better if you and Walter go in and out of the Coys' front door?"

"I suppose so. The house we are in now just seems dead, somehow. I don't like it."

"Florence, may I say just what I think about this?"

"I came over to ask you to tell me what to do."

"Then I must say that I am afraid if you and Walter keep on moving a lot of furniture from one house to another, as seasons come and go, you do not have much chance to make a home. Young people who begin housekeeping seldom think the matter through. Furniture and rooms are the great things. They want the best, but they lose the vital element in home-making,—the proper spirit that makes the house and furniture theirs. The things must mean something. You lose the home spirit entirely by moving often."

"I wonder, whenever I come here, what you have that makes your home so dear. Walter has talked of it, too."

I blushed with pleasure, for I do love my home. "We built this house as my grandfather built his,—to live in and to go on living in it and bring up our family in it. Our friends always said: 'What a lovely home.' We had bought some new furniture since the children came, but not very much. I chose each piece carefully, for it would likely be with us a long time. A home is a growing place as much as a tree. How can it grow if you pull it up by the roots all the time?

"Florence, your home should look like you. Then it is genuine. Don't move now! Wait a little longer. Then settle down and build your house. Prepare to call that place home for years to come. Get acquainted with the people next door. Visit over the back fence. Make this home a place where children and roses and pear trees grow up together."

"Oh, but if we should make lots of money, we should want a bigger house and all that. I am ambitious."

"Very well, Florence. But I have found that when you apply ambition to your home spirit, I am afraid it becomes discontent. You can't do it and have a real home."

"I want a home like yours. I want a little girl like your Mary," said Florence, as if she were repeating a lesson. At this moment Mary came in with the paper. I chanced to notice a bit of Walt Mason's rhyme. I read it to Florence: "'In the spring the model husband carries furniture outdoors, and he gaily helps the women when they want to paint the floors; and he blithely eats his supper sitting on the cellar stairs, for he knows his wife has varnished all the tables and the chairs. Oh, he carries pails of water, and he carries beds and ticks, and he props up the veranda with a wagon-load of bricks, and he deftly spades the garden, and he paints the barn and fence, and he rakes and burns the rubbish with an energy intense.'

"Does it make you want to put Walter to all that trouble? It is a good description of a regular moving. You can go from one house to another, but that is not the way to have a home. Things inside of your house must look as if you lived with them. Outside you want neighbors. You want to talk over everyday doings with them. You want the home spirit."

"Walter will be glad if I go home and tell him we'll stay where we are. He was dreading the extra expense."

"And that dread would have marred the new home for one thing. Sometimes I think the very walls and furniture are hungry and tell what they hear and see. I can't explain it,—only there is a lot to this home-making."

There Is a Difference

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

"And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls" (Rev. 17: 4).

"And to her was granted that she might be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white" (Rev. 19: 8).

Do we need to be told to whom these passages refer? There is no confusing them,—the bride of the Lamb, with the one who represents all that is sinful and worldly. There can be no mistaking the descriptions. The one is beautiful in her simplicity, the outer showing of inner goodness or living righteousness; the other is reeking in her gorgeousness, the flaunting of sin.

You say the above is only symbolical. True. But what are symbols except types or illustrations of real life? In the former, as truly as in the latter, right living or inner righteousness needs no extra outward adornment. It can only be really and genuinely expressed in the beauty of simplicity.

But the other. How easily it is recognized, and how broadcast it is in the world! And the sorrow and shame of it is that even professing Christian women pattern after her in outward adornment, although they would hotly resent being classed with her in deeds. Does it not make us blush to think that we should even desire to clothe and bedeck our bodies after her fashion, for truly the godly do not so appear.

but somehow we found ourselves wanting to talk matters over with her, and when her opinion was secured, we felt it was worth having.

Today is her birthday. I thought I remembered the day, but to be sure of it, I looked in my birthday book. There, in her familiar hand, is written: "Nora Arnold Lichty, 1880."

Perhaps the greatest lesson she has given to us missionaries on the field is that of her unwavering faith in the matter of her health. During her first year in India she was ill with typhoid fever, which left her in a weak condition for years. She was repeatedly advised (really ordered) by physicians to return to America, but she felt sure that the Lord wanted her in India and she would not give up. Some of us feared greatly for her, but now we praise the Lord for the lesson she leaves us of the triumph of her faith.

We are so glad that she could go home to her dear parents and sisters, and that they could see her so well and strong. We can only try to be resigned to God's will in the taking away of our dear sister. May it, perhaps, be his way of calling workers to the needy field she has left? May it be to call us to more faithful and earnest effort for those she loved?

A few days ago one of the Christians came from Undi, a village that Brother and Sister Lichty had often visited. He came to sell cotton, and stopped with us for a short visit. When he was about to leave, I said: "Brother, you must have heard that Sister Lichty has gone," to which he could only reply: "Yes, oh, yes," and began to weep. I, too, could not keep back the tears, and so we stood on the veranda, until he grasped my hand and nodded "Good-bye." Then hurriedly drawing the end of his pagerdi (the cloth wrapped about the head) over his face, he burst into sobs and hurried to his cart. All of us, whether Indian or American, feel grief-stricken over our great loss. May God comfort all who mourn loved ones gone!

Mary E. Stover.

Anklesvar, India.

I knew Sister Lichty best as a home-maker and recall many pleasant experiences while she served in that capacity at Dahanu. She was interested in every phase of mission work and willing to do what was best for it, regardless of her own comfort and convenience.

B. Mary Royer.

Dahanu, India.

Our dear sister, Nora, lived a beautiful life in our midst. She was one in whom we could confide,—sympathetic and kind to all of her fellow-workers.

She loved the people of this land and was willing to make any sacrifice necessary to live and work for their salvation.

In her own sickness she suffered with great patience and was always hopeful. She could see the best in life. Her patience in suffering was a beautiful lesson to us in faith.

She endured hardship and inconvenience in the beginning of their work in the Raj Pipla State. She bore all things without complaint because of her love for her Master.

Anna Z. Blough.

Ahwa, India.

Sister Lichty has gone from us, but her memory is with us still, and with all of our mission family and our Christian community, just as fresh as if she had left us only yesterday. And this sacred memory of one whom we loved will abide with us forever.

The thing that impressed me most, in a review of her life among us, and that is lasting, was her will-power, or determination. When she decided on a thing she would see it through. All through her life, here in India, she had to battle against physical difficulties in some form, and yet we never heard her complain about it, and she always went on about her duties as if she were in robust health.

One little incident I want to relate. During her first year in India she was very ill in the hospital, in Bombay, with typhoid fever. One evening, at six o'clock, the nurse told her that her heart was very weak and that it would be best for her to move just as little as possible. She was surprised to find, on returning in the morning, that her patient had not moved one bit during the night, but kept perfectly still, to facilitate her recovery.

When she had recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital, the doctor told her that she could not make it in India,—she would have to go to America, or she would die. It is reported that she told him: "No, I am not going to America and I'm not going to die either." And with her pluck and courage she pulled through,—where many another might have gone down.

So it was with her work here in India. She never splurged about, making a great show, but the native people looked to her as to a mother, and she has helped many. Especially at Vali, where she spent most of her time, has her influence been felt. And many of us, who are more timid, have been inspired by her example of determination, to go right on and do things, till God puts down his finger and says: "Stop, it is enough. Come up higher." May her memory and influence live in the hearts of the India people for years to come! Effie V. Long.

LA VERNE, CALIFORNIA

The first regular biweekly meeting of our "section workers" ("assistant pastors" our pastor, Eld. R. H. Miller, calls them) convened at the church last Sunday afternoon. A report from each section, with reference to work done, was called for. This revealed the fact that at least 110 calls had been made during the two weeks previous. The workers collected information which showed just which people are and are not Christians, and who among the number does and does not attend church and Sunday-school regularly. Those on the negative side are to have special attention from our "section workers" and the "sentinels" whom they have asked to help them,—the membership committees from the respective Sunday-school classes, the Sunday-school department superintendents, and from our pastor and elder.

The foreign mission field in our midst,—the Mexicans and Japanese,—are not overlooked in this work. Our pastor aims to have his congregation as helpful as possible to these people,—less favored from a religious standpoint than we are.

The meeting closed with a short, practical and inspiring address by Eld. J. P. Dickey. His subject was "Personal Work." He urged us to "know our Christ" first of all, to know our Bible,—never to argue Scripture with the sinner, nor to get discouraged if we do not get immediate results. He illustrated the last point with the fact that it takes many blows to break a solid rock ("nigger head"), and so it takes many blows to break "stony hearts," and the first one is just as important as the last. Our pastor urged that we "speak many words to God" about the unconverted, compared to those we speak to the person in question.

The attendance and interest in our midweek prayer meeting have increased decidedly during the past few weeks. Our pastor is conducting evangelistic services on Sunday evening. The interest and attendance are very good at both morning and evening services.

Last Sunday evening about sixty responded to the pastor's call to meet in the adjoining room for the "Inner Prayer Circle." The aim is to spend about fifteen minutes each Sunday evening after services in this prayer circle.

La Verne, Calif., March 14. Grace Hileman Miller.

VIDORA, SASKATCHEWAN

The work in the Battle Creek congregation has suffered much for three months, and it will require a renewed effort to regain what was lost. The epidemic seems to have sufficiently abated so that regular services may now be continued. We shall not be satisfied to reach the point from which we were driven by war and epidemic conditions. To know that the door of opportunity stands wide open, means that the message of salvation must be offered to many who have not heard the Master's voice. On account of the ban on all public meetings, our regular business meeting was deferred to March 8. Considerable work was arranged for.

Among the items was the consideration of our new church building, which is required in order that we may do better work, both in our Sunday-school and public services. A committee was appointed to arrange a program for systematic giving. The first Sunday of each month was set apart for special offerings. Sunday-school officers were elected for the year, with Bro. E. C. Swihart as superintendent. We are placing some new workers on our list this year, and with officers and teachers united, we are looking forward to a bright future. We hope to close the year with a better Sunday-school, a more spiritual service, and souls added to the Kingdom. And all the praise shall be to the Lord. Geo. Strycker.

THE CLEVELAND, OHIO, WORK

Despite much sickness and other unfavorable conditions, incident to city mission work during the winter months, our Sunday-school and preaching services have been held each Sunday morning since the lifting of the influenza ban, last November.

Spring brings us the prospects of increased attendance and the opportunity for more effective work than was possible heretofore. Do we realize that only through the loyalty and zeal of those who have stood by the work each Sunday, during the past winter, it was made possible to create the present foundation, upon which the greater work of the future may be built?

It is our desire to acquaint the Brotherhood, and especially the membership of our District,—Northeastern Ohio,—with the great value of a work such as ours, in providing the young brethren and sisters with their own church privileges, upon coming to the city. Then, too, we want to speak of the large possibilities of our work, if proper attention is given to its development.

Therefore, in order to place before you in a concise, yet interesting and valuable manner, every phase of the work, thus far accomplished, with a glimpse into what our hearts desire for the future, in the Lord's work here, we have issued a sixteen-page well-printed and attractively-designed booklet,—our first Yearbook and Church Directory.

Your request for a copy, forwarded to the undersigned, or any of our members here, will be filled while our supply lasts.

We also desire to announce an informal social gathering for all the friends and members of the church, either in Cleveland or elsewhere, to be held in the church on Sunday evening, April 13, at 7 o'clock. If you have friends, or relatives, whom you would like to see interested in our work, write to them and urge them to come to this meeting.

We do not, at present, have regular Sunday evening services. Our morning services are: Sunday-school at 9:45 A. M., church at 10:45 A. M. The location of our church is on the corner of East 110th Street and Superior Avenue.

We will gladly get in personal touch with those whose names and addresses you may give us, should you know of any one living here that is not as yet in touch with our work. C. E. Copeland.

NOTICE TO THE CHURCHES OF THE NORTHEASTERN DISTRICT OF OHIO

The Home Mission Board of the Northeastern District of Ohio, at a recent meeting decided to build a new house of worship at New Philadelphia this coming summer.

At a meeting held at Orrville in the spring of 1918 it was decided to ask the District for $20,000 to be paid during 1918 and 1919. If apportioned according to membership, this would amount to about $7 per member or $3.50 for each of the years 1918 and 1919. It was not intended that individuals should be governed by the average per member, for there are those who are able to do much better than the average, while, on the other hand, there are those who are not able to make the average.

Most of the churches have been solicited. The few remaining are to be solicited this spring. Most congregations have either raised or pledged about half their amount, if apportioned according to membership.

Some individuals, or group of individuals, should plan the work. All should help to work the plan. If those of us who paid last year, or who pledged then and have since paid our pledges, have discovered that we have not missed what we parted with, might we not duplicate the work of last year? And those who have not yet contributed toward the work, or complied with the request of the Board, why not start now and for the next seven months see what can be done towards raising the desired amount? The Aid Societies and the Sunday-schools can help. Then, too, there are individuals, in our various communities, who, though not members, will gladly help in religious work. None should be omitted in the canvass.

Our Cleveland members are asking for help. We should have started the work there long ago. The Mission Board is desirous of assisting in the work there, but our biggest financial problem on hand is the erection of a new church building at New Philadelphia. This once disposed of, we will be ready for the Cleveland work. Are you ready to help? If so, to what extent?

The Home Mission Board of Northeastern Ohio.

March 21, 1919.

OZAWKIE, KANSAS

The church at this place has great cause to be thankful for blessings. While the world war was raging and later, during the dreadful epidemic, the members made a heroic effort to maintain the principles dear to our Brotherhood, and, at the same time, to give of their time and money to help the many worthy calls for assistance. Not one of our members has fallen a victim of influenza.

During the winter we have had a great deal of inclement weather. This, with the closing order and much sickness, has had its effect on our attendance. With Bro. Roy Brammell, Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Pearl Smith, Christian Workers' president, these services, as well as all others, are taking on new life. Quite recently, at the close of a sermon on "A Forward Look," the whole congregation voted to work for a greater degree of holiness. Bro. H. L. Brammell has been reëlected elder in charge. Three were received into the church through baptism and one reclaimed.

Aside from keeping up incidental expenses and our quota to the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. work, we have raised $306 for church repairs; $100 for home missions; $35 for Annual Meeting collection; $44 for Armenian-Syrian Relief; $27 for Child Rescue work; $25 to a poor sister. We have a balance of over $200 in our church treasury.

We are looking forward with great expectancy to April 6, 7 and 8, at which time the District Meeting will convene in our church. Our aim is greater service for the Master, who has done so much for mankind. We met in our quarterly council March 8. Ella Statler.

March 15.

ROANOKE CITY, VIRGINIA

Although we have launched well out on the work for 1919, with our Heavenly Captain upon the deck of the old ship, hoping to reach the port of the five-year program with the rest of the ships of the Brotherhood, we would like to take a retrospective view of the past year. With the help of some of the workers we have been enabled to present the following:

The church, in all her departments, has been crippled by influenza. We were unable to hold our love feast last fall. The revival did not result in as large a number of members added to the church as in former years. The revivals at the Ninth Street and Tinker Creek Missions had to be called off. The attendance, during the last months of 1918, was unusually small, and the work at times was at a standstill. The war, too, had a very depressing effect on our work.

We had planned to add to our church a number of Sunday-school rooms, and to enlarge the auditorium, but it was decided to postpone this. Only some minor repairs were made. At the Southeast Mission a small furnace was installed and the school benches were replaced by comfortable folding chairs. We hope, however, in the very near future, to be able to carry out our former plans.

Despite all these seeming hindrances and failures we were able to accomplish some good. During the year twenty-five members were added to the church by letter. Four letters were granted. Several were added to the church by baptism. We are unable to state the exact amount of money, taken in during the year, but at a safe estimate, between $3,900 and $4,000 was given in free-will offerings. Pledges for home and foreign work were collected by all departments of the church and missions.

Just a brief report of some of the Sunday-school work: The Young Men's Bible Class, with a membership of sixty, had an average attendance of thirty. Twenty-four members of the class were called to Government service. Letters were written to them and a special effort made to supply each man called from the class with a Bible. The class is getting ready to support a missionary in the field, and $100.26 was collected for this purpose. They also gave to the main school $66.75; to the sick, $5. The flower committee alone made forty-nine visits to the sick, taking flowers or potted plants. Other classes have done their bit too.

The primary department took up the graded work July 1, with Sister L. C. Moomaw, superintendent. They now have an enrollment of 110. The work is liked very much by the children. The parents, who have been interviewed, are also pleased with the work. The Aid Society has seemingly made the greatest progress of any department of the church, considering the fact that the organization was only effected last year. This has surely proven to be an essential department of the church, and under the able management of Sister Amy Flora, the society has proved a splendid success.

Feb. 23, Prof. Moherman, of Daleville, preached for us. His theme was, "In the School of God." Feb. 28, our business meeting was held, with Eld. P. S. Miller presiding. Three members were received by letter. March 2, two members were received by letter. They were Eld. B. B. and Sister Garber, of Waynesboro, Va.

Our pastor, Eld. P. S. Miller, has repeatedly requested that he be relieved of the pastorate on account of long service and being unable to meet the ever-increasing duties of this office. Eld. B. B. Garber was called to the pastorate, and it was a source of great joy to the Roanoke church that he so graciously accepted the call to the work here.

March 9 a welcome was given Brother and Sister Garber by the church. The program consisted of addresses of welcome. Eld. P. S. Miller spoke in behalf of the church. The Sunday-school was represented by Bro. D. P. Hylton. The Aid Society was represented by Sister Amy Flora. Bro. Garber responded.

The following week, the Young Ladies' Bible Class gave a welcome, going to their home. Brother and Sister Garber a welcome, going to their home, where a program and a general good time were enjoyed. They were accompanied by their teacher and the superintendent and his wife. The Aid Society rendered a splendid program at the Christian Workers' hour, March 9. An offering of $14 was taken.

Brother and Sister Garber are already very much liked by the membership, and we feel sure that they have been to make a success of the work to which they have been called. and that they are going to have the coöperation of the entire membership. Mrs. John H. Shickel.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL EXHIBIT AT WINONA LAKE

The General Sunday School Board is taking this method of appealing to the Sunday-schools for material for the Sunday-school Exhibit at the coming Conference.

Six years ago, at Winona Lake, we made the first exhibit. Each year the Sunday-schools have contributed quite satisfactorily, and each year the exhibit has grown.

The Conference is to be held at Winona Lake again this year, and it is the desire of the Board to make the exhibit better this year than that of any previous year.

Inasmuch as there will be "Bicentennial Gatherings" held, we suggest that, in addition to materials such as pupils' hand work, class records, special programs, mottoes, models, charts, etc.,—in fact anything that is proving helpful in your own school,—you bring such material as you have in your possession, that was used in an early day.

Bring the material yourself, mail it, or express it to the General Sunday School Board, Winona Lake, Ind. Send material early enough to reach the Conference grounds not later than June 6.

Committee: James M. Mohler, C. S. Ikenberry.

THE IDAHO DISTRICT MEETING

This District Meeting will be held at Nezperce, one of the prettiest places on earth, and at the prettiest time of the year, May 13-15. Now is the time for the Brethren of Idaho and Western Montana to be thinking about this great and important meeting, and planning how they can best get there. Some are already planning how they can best stay away. That, however, is not the way to promote any important work. It is hardly excusable for us to let our personal affairs crowd in ahead of this foremost obligation. Some one must break loose and go. Every member of this great District is responsible for its success.

I am writing this to help you out, for you must be there. Get busy now and see that your old automobile is cleaned up, all parts adjusted, well oiled and thoroughly provisioned, for you are going to go. There is room at Nezperce for one hundred and twenty autos.

The members from Flathead will come south on the Rocky Mountain Highway to Lola, thence southwest to Nezperce.

The members from Lost River will come directly across, following the road northwest through Challis on to Meyers Cove, thence west to Roosevelt, thence north to Edwardsburg, thence west and north through Brady, on the Salmon, on to Grangeville, thence to Cottonwood and to Nezperce.

The members from Twin Falls, Boise Valley, Nampa, and Bowmont should follow the Oregon Pioneer Trail into Oregon. (We will give you, before you start, a special route.) You will have a good and scenic road, and a jolly time all the way.

The members from Fruitland, Payette and Weiser will go west of Weiser and hit the Oregon Trail, when they cross the river at Olds Ferry. As nearly as possible, all should join the one great procession and have company and a blessing. We regret that we can not recommend that you all come directly along the Salmon River Route. It would be much nearer. But the road will be torn up by road-building gangs, and not safely negotiable by car. The other road is good and will afford a joy-ride all the way.

Do not carry too much load. Rather bring an extra machine.

A car carrying four or five passengers can make the trip for what it would cost one on the train. All passengers should go equal shares on the expense. It will be cheap enough, and you will get the worth of your money out of it. Now, do not be a slacker! A. I. Mow.

Moscow, Idaho.

THE HOMEGOING OF SISTER ANNIE E. BERKLEY

Annie E. Berkley died at her home, Johnstown, Pa., March 18, 1919, aged 78 years, 2 months and 14 days. She was born Jan. 4, 1841, at Meyer's Mills, now Meyersdale, Pa. In 1856 she married Israel Berkley. They located at Berkley's Mills and in the spring of 1866 moved to a farm in Cambria County, where she spent the remainder of her life. She was the mother of eight sons and five daughters, of whom two sons and one daughter preceded her, as did also her husband. She was a sister of the late Bishop C. G. Lint, of Meyersdale.

Shortly after her marriage she and her husband were received into the Church of the Brethren. She was a faithful, devoted member of the church of her choice, during her long and well-spent life, and died in its faith. Thinking that, perhaps, her end was near, she called for the anointing. Her desire was fulfilled by her pastor and one of her sons, Eld. Albert W. Berkley.

She had the satisfaction of seeing all of her children baptized into the same faith in which they grew up. The church has bestowed upon three of her sons, Norman W. Berkley, Albert W. Berkley and Samuel J. Berkley, the highest office in her power to confer,—that of the eldership. Another son, Clayton M. Berkley, has been serving the church acceptably in the office of deacon.

There were few happier than Grandmother Berkley when old age overtook her. Disease at length laid its heavy hand upon her and for several months she suffered, but neither murmured nor complained.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, the writer, in the West Johnstown church. Interment in the Berkley cemetery. Edgar M. Detwiler.

CALIFORNIA

Covina.—Eld. D. L. Miller began a series of meetings March 2, and continued for two weeks. The services were well attended and very interesting and inspiring. Nine were baptized. The meetings closed with a love feast March 16, with about 150 communing. Eld. J. B. Emmert officiated, assisted by Elders D. L. Miller and J. W. Cline. Bro. Miller's earnest efforts were greatly appreciated and the church has been edified and strengthened. At the Sunday-school hour there was a consecration service for the officers and teachers. Eld. J. W. Cline, our District Secretary, had charge of the service. We have a splendid Sunday-school. On Saturday afternoon, conducted by Sister Mabel Smith. Bro. Emmert was with us in the Wednesday evening service and gave a very interesting talk on some of the Christian men of our missions.—Mrs. S. W. Funk, Charter Oak, Calif., March 20.

Lindsay church was favored by a visit from Dr. and Sister Wampler, of China. Their illustrated lecture was much appreciated. From it we got a very good idea of Chinese sanitation,—or rather the lack of it,—and of missionary methods of teaching better ways. Bro. Wampler has been doing a great work but has been handicapped by lack of equipment. An offering of $27.86 was taken for the China Hospital Fund. The church decided to build a parsonage and have it ready for Bro. Frantz and family by Sept. 1. Our love feast will be held May 10.—Emma V. Yoder, Lindsay, Calif., March 25.

Pasadena.—We have been enjoying a great feast of good things from our returned missionaries and others. March 12, Bro. J. B. Emmert gave a very interesting talk on "Progress of Our Work in India." Sunday morning following, his subject was "India Awakening." An offering for the India field was taken. March 18 Brother and Sister Wampler, from China, gave an illustrated lecture on the medical work in their field. An offering was also taken for this field. Sunday morning, March 23, Bro. D. L. Miller talked to us about "Our Lord Jesus Christ." This was his last sermon before leaving for the East. During the Christian Workers' hour, the same evening, Dr. Rush Crissman, of the American Sunday-school Union, gave an illustrated lecture of his work on the extreme western field. A liberal offering was taken for this work. One member has been received by letter since the last report.—Mrs. Alice Vaniman, Pasadena, Calif., March 24.

Pomona church held its council March 17. Bro. J. H. Brubaker presided. We decided to have a love feast in the near future. A series of meetings is to be held this spring with the pastor in charge of the meetings. Since the influenza epidemic has taken its departure in our locality, the Sunday-school attendance has begun to climb. The attendance last Sunday was better than a year ago. With the help of our new superintendent, Bro. Frank Hartman, we hope to do better work than ever.—Mary E. Forney, Pomona, Calif., March 18.

CANADA

Bow Valley congregation met in council March 15, with Eld. Luther Shatto presiding. Three letters were granted. Reports of officers and committees were read and accepted. March 16 we had with us Brethren T. A. Eisenbise and P. L. Fike, both of Chicago. The former gave us a much appreciated talk on God's power and protection.—Maude Pohst, Gleichen, Alta., Can., March 19.

COLORADO

Colorado Springs.—We invite all the members who are looking for a change of location, to investigate our country. We have fine, rich, productive land here, that raises big crops, and can be bought, as yet, at reasonable prices. We have two churches, one in the city and the other in the country, giving good church privileges to all. If interested write the undersigned.—F. C. Colon, Box 546, Colorado Springs, Colo., March 21.

Denver church, for more than twenty years, has enjoyed the financial assistance and the spiritual oversight of the District Mission Board of the District of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado. The problems to be solved by a city church have been complex in Denver. That the Board has successfully met those problems is shown by the fact that the church is now in a position to support the work without outside aid. At the time of taking over the responsibility, the members were impressed by the debt of gratitude which they owe to the various brethren who have, as members of the Mission Board, given so freely of their time and counsel and to those of the District who have so nobly supported the work. A resolution of appreciation was unanimously passed by the church, and the clerk was instructed to communicate the same to the Mission Board.—Merrill Bodell, Denver, Colo., March 26.

Haxtun church met in council March 22. Bro. Heiney is now living in our midst and will conduct a singing class each evening, beginning March 31. Our love feast will be held May 17. A committee of five was also elected. The influenza epidemic is still raging to some extent here. As a means of showing our appreciation of our elder and pastor, Bro. S. G. Nickey, we remembered him with a gift on his birthday. We are planning to have a series of meetings some time in April.—E. L. Lapp, Haxtun, Colo., March 26.

IDAHO

Weiser church met in council March 15, with Eld. M. Alva Long presiding. Our delegates to District Meeting are Sister Cora Long and Bro. Alvan Hoover. Bro. Long is with us again after two months of evangelistic work. Our Sunday-school and church attendance is increasing since the influenza has abated and the roads and weather are improving.—Retta Baker, Weiser, Idaho, March 19.

ILLINOIS

Franklin Grove.—We met in business meeting March 8. We will hold our spring love feast May 24, beginning at 10 A. M. Eld. O. D. Buck is our delegate to Annual Conference. Our Sunday-school has taken on new life in the last few weeks, and the attendance is increasing. March 16 the Township Sunday-school Convention met in our church and rendered a good program to a full house. We have organized a Mission Study Class with a goodly number of members.—Mrs. Jennie M. Benchley, Franklin Grove, Ill., March 20.

Martin Creek church met in council March 15, with Eld. J. W. Harshbarger presiding. We organized a Christian Workers' Society, to be first meeting to be held April 6, with Frank Shirk as the president. Bro. Harshbarger preaches the first and third Sundays in our church and each fourth Sunday at a Free Baptist church, two and one-half miles west of Golf.—Amelia Leinard, Golf, Ill., March 24.

Mt. Morris.—Eld. G. L. Wine, of Polo, Ill., came to us Feb. 26, and conducted a series of meetings, which closed March 16. Good attendance and marked interest prevailed. Bro. Wine's clear Gospel messages were presented with great earnestness. One accepted Christ.—Nelson E. Shirk, Mt. Morris, Ill., March 21.

Pine Creek church met in council March 20, with Eld. C. C. Price presiding. Our regular church officers were elected for another year, with Bro. C. C. Price, elder. Brethren C. C. Price, C. W. Stauffer and Newton Glick, the three ministers residing in our congregation, will fill the preaching appointments the coming year. Bro. Price was elected delegate to the Annual Conference. We decided to hold our love feast May 24, at 7 o'clock.—Bertha M. Stauffer, Polo, Ill., March 23.

Virden.—March 23 Sister Anna Hutchison, returned missionary from China, gave us two inspiring messages. During her seven years of work among the Chinese people she was drawn very near to them, as well as to her Master. In her pleasing manner she told of the different Chinese customs, and the large audience of attentive listeners felt more grateful for Christian parents and homes. An offering of $33 was lifted and we trust some were moved to be of greater service.—Stella Brubaker, Virden, Ill., March 25.

INDIANA

Bremen church met in council March 8, with Eld. Chas. C. Cripe presiding. The letters of Brother and Sister Cripe, who have now moved into our midst, were received. Bro. Cripe was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. We decided to hold our communion service on Sunday evening, June 1, preceded by a two weeks' series of meetings, to be conducted by Bro. Cripe. Since our last report one of our Sunday-school girls was baptized.—Emma Kauffman, Bremen, Ind., March 25.

Center church met in council March 8. Brethren Jacob Hildebrand and J. F. Appleman were with us. On account of Bro. Hostand, our former elder, moving away, Bro. J. F. Appleman was chosen elder for two years. Our series of meetings will be held in September, with Bro. David Metzler, evangelist, closing with a love feast. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. Eddie Stump, with Bro. Clyde Miller, alternate.—Mrs. O. W. Gordon, Walkerton, Ind., March 24.

Clear Creek church met in council March 8, with Eld. V. F. Schwalm in charge. Four letters of membership were received. Bro. J. B. Wike was elected elder. March 23 he gave us a fine talk, and will be with us every Sunday morning and evening. Bro. Hoover Neff was elected clerk and the writer, correspondent. Bro. John Neff was selected as chairman for Armenian-Syrian Relief. A committee is trying to secure a pastor to locate here.—Mrs. Minnie Slagel, Roanoke, Ind., March 24.

Killbuck church met in council March 22, with Eld. V. B. Browning in charge. We appointed our love feast for June 14, at 7 o'clock, to be held in the Antioch house. Bro. Ira Hiatt was chosen delegate to the Annual Meeting; the writer, alternate.—H. E. Millspaugh, Muncie, Ind., March 24.

Kokomo.—Bro. Wm. L. Hatcher, of Rossville, began a series of meetings March 2 and closed March 17. Sister Hatcher accompanied him. Sister Maud Koesler, of Manchester College, conducted the song service. Eight Sunday-school scholars accepted Christ; seven were baptized last Sunday. Bro. Conrad Werkheiser was chosen delegate to the Annual Conference; Bro. Oscar Werking, alternate.—Mrs. Anna Davis, Kokomo, Ind., March 26.

Santa Fe church met in council March 20, with Eld. S. T. Fisher presiding. Five letters were granted. Bro. Fisher was reëlected elder for another year. Our delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren Sherman Kendall and Perry Coblentz. Bro. B. F. Jenkins resigned as church clerk and Bro. Ross Zerbie was chosen in his place. May 11 has been set as the time for the joint Sunday-school Meeting of Loganaport, Peru, Mexico, Pipe Creek and Santa Fe churches, to convene in the latter church. Our work here has been greatly hindered ever since October. The regular December council was omitted. Bro. Perry Coblentz and wife, and Bro. Sherman Kendall and wife, were chosen as a committee to visit each family in our congregation as a means of securing better Sunday-school and church attendance from now on. Since the weather is more favorable and the roads are improving, we hope for better things. The opportunities for doing good are many, but means and workers have not been available.—Bessie M. Webb, Bunker Hill, Ind., March 24.

Upper Fall Creek church met in council March 22. Bro. Lewis Teeter was with us. Bro. D. P. Hoover was elected elder for one year. He also was elected delegate to the Annual Meeting. We expect to hold our love feast May 24.—Rachel E. Dellinger, Middletown, Ind., March 24.

Walnut church met in council, with Eld. John Appleman presiding. The various treasurers' reports were given. Bro. Levi Puterbaugh was chosen delegate to the Annual Conference. Our Primary Department has decided to support two orphans in India. The prayer meeting has been closed for a short time on account of bad roads, but we hope to resume the meetings soon.—Helen Mowlser, Tippecanoe, Ind., March 19.

West Manchester church met in council March 1, with Eld. I. B. Book presiding. Steps were taken to complete a room as possible, the repairing and remodeling of the basement under our church, making it suitable for general purposes. Eld. J. S. Diekey and the writer were elected delegates to Annual Conference. We expect to begin a series of meetings the last Sunday in April, with Bro. William Buckley, of Bradford, Ohio, doing the preaching.—Calvin F. Eller, North Manchester, Ind., March 27.

IOWA

Brooklyn church met in council March 22, with our elder, Bro. J. Schechter, Jr., presiding. Bds. Harvey A. Gregory, of Garrison, and Eld. I. W. Brubaker of Prairie City, assisted in the work. Three certificates of membership were read and one was granted. Feeling the need of help in the deacon's office, Brethren Elmer Seehorn and Glen Connell were elected, and, with their wives, duly installed. Bro. Ivan Connell was called to the ministry, and was also installed.—Bro. Brubaker officiating in this work. Our love feast will be held May 31. We decided that our series of meetings, beginning June 15, be conducted by Bro. Ira H. Fox, who is now serving us as pastor. District Boards, or any one having literature for the Brooklyn church, should address it to him. Bro. Fox is to serve as our delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. J. M. Warner as alternate. Dinner was served at noon in the basement of the church. A very pleasant and profitable day was spent.—Mrs. Rose D. Fox, Brooklyn, Iowa, March 25.

South Keokuk church met in council March 8. Sister Mabel Wonderlich was chosen to represent our church at Annual Conference, with Bro. Butler, alternate. Our love feast will be held May 18. We were not permitted to have our love feast last fall, on account of the influenza epidemic. All of our services were discontinued for several weeks. At our January council, Bro. H. N. Butler was reelected elder for another year. Bro. C. W. Shelly is our Sunday-school superintendent. Our Sunday-school is helping the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Glennie Williams, Richland, Iowa, March 26.

KANSAS

Bloom church met in council March 3. Several letters of membership were granted. Church officers were elected for one year, with Bro. G. W. Weddle, elder. Our work at this place has been handicapped, because of the influenza epidemic. For several months our services have been called off, because of another outbreak of the disease. Most of our members have been ill, but up to this time none have been taken by death, although we are very sorry to have so many of our members move away, as workers are badly needed. Any one desiring to change location, will do well to locate among us. Our conditions are very promising this spring.—Cassie Martin, Bloom, Kans., March 26.

Morrill church met in council March 22, with Eld. J. J. Yoder presiding. Four letters were granted. Our new pastor, Bro. W. H. Yoder, was chosen elder for the year, also delegate to Annual Meeting, with Sister Sadie Sayler, alternate. Bro. Dan Sayler was elected president of the Christian Workers' Society. Our love feast will be held May 18. Bro. A. Sawyer will have charge of the church services till our new pastor comes to us, which will be in May. The members gave a rising vote of thanks to Bro. J. J. Yoder for his services during the two years he has been with us as elder. March 30 will be Bro. Smith's last Sunday with us as pastor. We are loth to see him and his family go. They have ably served the church faithfully for eight years. They go from here to the District Meeting at Ozawkie, and from there to Holmesville, Nebr., where he will hold a series of meetings and attend District Meeting.—Mrs. Delilah A. Maxey, Morrill, Kans., March 26.

Notice.—Owing to the recurrence of influenza in so many churches, the District Meeting of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado will be held in the Belleville church, Belleville, Kans., April 16; Elders' Meeting, April 15. All meetings arranged for will not be held.—Mrs. Susie R. Williams, Rydal, Kans., March 28.

Notice to the Northeastern District of Kansas.—Our District Meeting is to be held at Ozawkie, Kans., April 6-8. A motor leaves Leavenworth at 3:30 P. M., going south. A motor leaves Meriden at 8 A. M., going east. A motor leaves Meriden at 2 P. M., going east. Any one that happens to miss the motor at Meriden, will please phone the writer. No train or motor on Sunday.—S. A. Royer, Ozawkie, Kans., March 22.

Victor church met in council March 22, with Eld. A. C. Daggett presiding. We have failed, so far, to secure a minister to hold our spring meeting. We will hold our love feast May 17. A committee was appointed to secure a Gospel team, to hold a two days' series of meetings May 17 and 18. We also decided to ask the Portis church to join us in a Christian Workers' and Sunday-school Meeting June 15. Bro. A. C. Daggett wished to be relieved of the eldership of the Victor church, as he expects to be away most of the time. Upon the request of the church he retained the office and we elected an assistant,—Bro. F. A. Wagner.—Mrs. A. E. Thompson, Waldo, Kans., March 24.

Washington church met in council March 22, with Bro. J. M. Gauby presiding. Three letters of membership were granted. Our services have been greatly hindered during the winter on account of influenza.—Mrs. Minnie Bell, Washington, Kans., March 24.

MARYLAND

Glade View Sunday-school met Jan. 26 to install officers for the year. An inspiring talk was given by Bro. W. L. Teets. The school then took a collection for the sufferers in Europe, after which Bro. Teets preached a splendid sermon.—Mabel V. Fike, Oakland, Md., March 24.

Westminster.—Prof. Kinsey, of the Bible Department of Blue Ridge College, preached for us on the morning of March 23, and in the evening gave a splendid talk on "Child Rights." The Meadow Branch church will hold its annual Bible Institute in the Westminster house, beginning May 4, and probably have sessions a day, closing on the following Sunday evening. Brethren Ober and Myers, of the Elizabethtown College faculty, will be the instructors. The Westminster Sunday-school offering, last Sunday, for the India Famine Fund, reached $30. The Junior Christian Workers' Meeting is still growing.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., March 24.

Westminster.—The Young Ladies' Class, of which Miss Lydia Trostle is teacher, was recently addressed by Miss Edna Dotterer, of Blue Ridge College. The Sunday-school work in both the Westminster and Meadow Branch schools has held up well throughout the winter and there are already some evidences of new life, as spring approaches. Our regular quarterly council will be held in the Meadow Branch house April 10.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., March 10.

MICHIGAN

Hart church met in council March 22, with Eld. Granville Nevinger presiding. The main item of business was the election of officers. Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers. Bro. Nevinger was reelected elder; Bro. J. J. Scrogum, clerk; Sister Mollie Nevinger, superintendent of Sunday-school; Bro. Homer Wine, president of Christian Workers' Society.—Dora Ames Serogum, Hart, Mich., March 24.

Zion congregation met in business session March 22, with Eld. J. P. Bowman as moderator. Several letters of membership were granted. We decided to have our love feast June 28, commencing at 10 A. M., preceded by a two weeks' series of meetings.—Neva Moats Martindale, Prescott, Mich., March 25.

MINNESOTA

Bethel.—We met in council March 8, with Eld. M. L. Hahn presiding. We received two letters of membership. A collection was taken for our quota, as assigned by the Mission Board. We appointed two solicitors to collect and send in one payment for our quota.—Florence Miller, Hines, Minn., March 18.

MISSOURI

Warrensburg church met in council March 12. Our elder, Bro. D. L. Mohler, not being present, Bro. E. A. Markey took charge of the meeting. Bro. Jesse Mohler, of the South Warrensburg church, was present. Four letters were granted. We expect Bro. Leonard Root to be with us in a series of meetings this fall.—Rowena Wampler, Warrensburg, Mo., March 25.

NEW YORK

Freeville.—We have been especially favored with a mild winter. We had no deaths from influenza. At no time have schools been closed or church services suspended. Many western people are locating here now. We are pleased to have Eld. A. D. Wolfe and family with us; also Bro. Walter Fisher. These are from Idaho. We are expecting others soon from Ohio and from Canada. These Brethren are buying farms. Farms are cheap here. The farms here are level, well improved and the soil is fertile. We hope to start church services before long. There should be many Brethren churches planted in New York State and throughout New England. People are becoming more and more dissatisfied with less than the whole Gospel. Brethren passing through this way should give us a call. Freeville is easily reached, as we have two railroads, with a passenger service of fourteen trains each day. We expect a visit by our District Mission Board from Eastern Pennsylvania a short time ago, but as yet they have not come. I would be glad to answer inquiries regarding our propositions here.—F. L. Baker, Freeville, N. Y., March 26.

Lake Ridge church convened in council March 1, with Bro. E. F. Nedrow presiding. Visiting brethren present were John Herr and J. H. Longenecker, of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. Bro. E. F. Nedrow tendered his resignation as elder, which was accepted by the District Mission Board. Bro. I. W. Taylor was appointed for one year in his stead. Bro. R. A. Nedrow was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. Sister Taylor had the pleasure of listening to a very able sermon by Bro. A. D. Bowman, from Acts 16:9. We began with his family to New York State, to take up the work. March 2 Brethren Herr and Longenecker preached morning and evening. These are great seasons of refreshment. Brethren are scarce in this place, isolated, as we are, from other congregations.—Martha Weibly, Ludlowville, N. Y., March 24.

NORTH DAKOTA

Cando church has been doing good work in the services this year. Bro. J. H. Fox and family, of Minot, N. Dak., were with us for two weeks. He gave us some very interesting lessons on Christian life and our duties toward God and man. Though no one joined our band, yet all were deeply impressed. Sister Katie Burkhart, of Zion, was our guest for a few days recently. Other young folks from Zion gave us some special songs, which were much appreciated by all. The regular quarterly council was held at this place last Saturday.—Carrie Sipes Cando, N. Dak., March 20.

OHIO

Covington.—The eighth anniversary of the dedication of our church, also of Bro. Geo. W. Flory's pastorate, took place March 9. The churches were represented by about 150 people. The severe cold account of influenza that it was difficult to get our people together again. For this reason, our audience was not as large as on previous anniversaries, but the spirit of worship was abounding. Yet our people filled the church and overflowed into the Sunday-school room. We were highly favored in having Eld. A. J. Culler, of McPherson, Kans., with us. He gave us the history of the Church of the Brethren in Western Kansas, which was very interesting. The church stood as a city set on a hill. He spoke of our brethren who were leaders in education, and aided in the dissemination of books and newspapers in the new conditions of the nineteenth century. He spoke of their willingness to sacrifice much for the sake of the cause of Christ. The congregation listened eagerly as Bro. Culler pictured the church as it should be today. In the evening, he spoke on the need of help in India. The church at Covington responded in a spirit of deeper consecration. We hope to do greater things during the coming year than ever before. The working force of the church is willing, so we hope with God's blessing.—Elizabeth D. Rosenberger, Covington, Ohio, March 22.

Ft. McKinley church met in council March 12, with Eld. D. M. Garber presiding. Two visiting members were with us. Ten letters were granted. Bro. A. W. Holler was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. A. D. Klepinger, alternate. Bro. W. Holler and H. L. Klopper, delegates to District Meeting; alternates, Brethren D. C. Stutzman and Wm. J. Keller. It was decided to alternate Christian Workers' and Sunday-school service.—The Christian Workers' Meeting to be followed by preaching, and the song service and study of "The Life of Christ." Our weekly prayer meetings are soul-inspiring and well attended.—Olive Beck, Dayton, Ohio, March 24.

Jonathan Creek.—March 16 Bro. Otho Winger, President of Manchester College, held services for us in the morning and in the evening at the Methodist church at Somerset. He remained among us until the following Tuesday. His services were much appreciated. —Mary H. Snider, Thornville, Ohio, March 27.

Marion.—We are very much encouraged in the work at this place, feeling that every department is in excellent condition. Our Sunday-school is progressing; the attendance is increasing rapidly, the interest is good and the offerings excellent. Our pastor, Bro. G. E. Deardorff, whose health has not permitted him to fill the pulpit a great part of the winter, is again able to take up the work. He preached last Sunday morning after which he baptized "Seven Angels." In the morning, Bro. Isaac Deardorff, delegate to the District Meeting, gave a report, continuing with a short address on "The Sunday-school." March 16, under the direction of Sister Marie Deardorff. Although the weather was inclement, the attendance was good. We wish especially to commend the work of Sister Deardorff, who so zealously conducted the song service in the recent series of meetings, conducted by Eld. J. L. Guthrie. It was decided to hold our love feast May 11, in the evening.—Rachel Bowman, Marion, Ohio, March 25.

West Milton.—As one of the results of our recent series of meetings, we now have a midweek prayer and praise service, which is growing in interest, and we trust, will prove a great blessing to our church and members. At our last meeting, Eld. J. A. Norris addressed us. March 20 our church met in council. Bro. S. A. Blessing presided. Quite an amount of important business was transacted. The meeting was adjourned to the following evening, at which time delegates to District and Annual Meeting were elected. Bro. S. A. Blessing will represent us at Annual Meeting, with Bro. Samuel Wenger, alternate. Brethren F. E. Wenger and Jos. Dohner are delegates to District Meeting, with Brethren J. Henry Wenger and Samuel Wenger, alternates. The church called to the ministry Bro. Samuel Wenger and to the deacon's office, Bro. Jos. Dohner. The installation services were conducted by Eld. Wm. Minnich. All these meetings were largely attended and were rich in spiritual blessings.—J. Henry Showalter, West Milton, Ohio, March 22.

OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City.—Since the quarantine has been lifted, the attendance and interest have been growing. The month of March has been our best yet. The Sunday-school has grown from an average of twenty-six in the fall, to an average of forty-six. The children have become interested in bringing others into the Sunday school. In one family two girls have succeeded in bringing in seventeen others. March 9 we had with us Brother and Sister Lehman, of Guthrie. Bro. Lehman preached for us at the morning hour. Brother and Sister May, of Altoona, have come to live among us and are proving a help in our work. We hope to dedicate our church April 27. March 27 is the date set for an address by Sister Taylor, and we are hoping to have an excellent crowd. The opportunities are good for a great church, but we are only a few yet. Others have seen the possibilities and need of work to be done and have remembered us with liberal donations for the church building.—J. H. Morris, Oklahoma City, Okla., March 25.

OREGON

Ashland church met in council March 21, with Eld. S. E. Decker presiding. We reorganized our Sunday-school, which work had been postponed on account of irregularities brought about by the epidemic, although our school has been in session since the first of the year. We retained all church officers. Our Sunday-school has increased in attendance and interest during the last quarter.—Laura E. Goetze, Ashland, Oregon, March 24.

PENNSYLVANIA

Elizabethtown congregation has had seasons of refreshing during the recent revival effort. Bro. Frank Carper, of Palmyra, Pa., came to us March 2 and conducted evangelistic services until March 18. The attendance was excellent from the very beginning and continued so to the close. Bro. Carper is one of our youngest evangelists, but his messages touch the hearts of those who hear him. Many of the other denominations attended regularly, and their presence and interest in the services were very much appreciated. Twenty-two confessed Christ.—S. P. Engle, Elizabethtown, Pa., March 22.

Ephrata church met in council March 18, with Eld. David Kilhefner presiding. Seven letters were granted and one received. We decided to hold our love feast May 4. Bro. A. W. Zuck was elected president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. I. D. Wenger; alternate, Eld. D. K. Kilhefner; delegates to District Meeting, Brethren I. D. Wenger and H. S. Gibble. A Bible Institute will be held here April 11 to 13, conducted by brethren from Elizabethtown College.—Gertrude R. Shirk, Ephrata, Pa., March 22.

Hanover church has just closed a two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. John E. Rowland, of Bunkertown, Pa. He preached eighteen inspiring sermons and made seventy-five visits. Seven were baptized. The interest and attendance were good throughout the meeting.—Mary A. Bowman, Hanover, Pa., March 24.

Hatfield congregation closed a very inspiring and interesting revival meeting the second week in March, conducted by Bro. Rufus P. Bucher, of Quarryville, Pa. Thirteen were added to our number by confession. Bro. Bucher preached twenty-three sound, doctrinal sermons and lasting impressions were made upon both members and non-members. The services were largely attended. We are especially glad to note the visible results for the better.—J. Hermau Rosenberger, Souderton, Pa., March 24.

Little Swatara congregation met at the Zeigler house March 22 for organization, as it was decided, at our last council meeting, to divide our church into two parts,—the eastern section still to be known by the old name, Bro. Hunsicker's charge, and the new, John Herr and S. Z. Witmer were also present. The following officers were elected: Elder, Jacob Flouts; church clerk, I. D. Gibbel; "Messenger" agent, Wilmer Zeigler; correspondent, Geo. Keeney,. Bro. Jos. Meyer was elected to the deacon's office, with Bro. Jacob Hile, alternate. Bro. I. D. Gibbel was elected to represent our church at Annual Meeting, with Bro. H. C. Zeigler, alternate. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Jacob Metzler, Jacob Hile, with Brethren Jacob Flouts and H. C. Zeigler, alternates. A two weeks' series of meetings, held at the Merkey house, conducted by Eld. S. Z. Witmer, closed March 23. Five of the Sunday-school scholars stood for Christ and were baptized. Bro. Witmer labored faithfully and, with four ministers, three deacons, four Sunday-schools, four churchhouses and a territory about ten miles wide and fifteen miles long. Our love feast will be held May 8 and 9, at 10 A. M.—Geo. E. Keeney, Bethel, Pa., March 25.

Mechanic Grove church has received two members by baptism, one by letter and granted one certificate since the last report. The Children's Meeting will be held May 11, on Mothers' Day, with a program suitable for the occasion. The series of meetings, conducted by Bro. W. K. Conner, of Harrisburg, Pa., will open on Sunday evening, April 6. The date of our love feast is May 24. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren Jacob Hoover and R. P. Bucher; to District Meeting, Brethren Benj. Kreider and Crisse Bucher.—Mary P. Habecker, Quarryville, Pa., March 25.

Pleasant Hill church met in council March 24, with Eld. A. H. Brubacher presiding. Three letters of membership were granted and four received. A pastoral committee was appointed to act in about securing a pastor for the Lebanon church. One query will be sent to District Meeting. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren Wm. Forry and Albert Fike; alternates, Brethren Jacob Hoover and A. S. Heisey; delegates to District Meeting, Brethren A. H. Brubacher, S. K. Wenger and Albert Fike. Our love feast is appointed for May 6 and 7, at 9:30 A. M.—Lizzie M. Eshleman, Pa., March 25.

Notice to Middle District of Pennsylvania.—All ministers and others desiring to attend the District Meeting, to be held April 15 and 16 at the Snake Spring church, coming via the H. and B. T. Railway, on the 9:16 A. M. train, Sunday, April 13, will be met with conveyances coming via the Midland Railway to Bedford, Pa., on the 10:07 A. M. or 2:40 P. M. trains.—Joseph F. Snyder, Everett, Pa., March 22.

Shamokin.—Pea Vine has had a revival meeting and closed Feb. 26. The services were well attended and the interest was good. Six stood for Christ. TENNESSEE

Notice to the Churches of Tennessee.—Having for more than a year been urged by many members over the State to attend to the work of an evangelist, and recently received a very urgent call from the District Mission Board, to enter the field as an evangelist, I have decided, after very prayerful consideration, to enter the field constantly, and to give to the great mission field of this great Southland my time and labors as the Lord may direct. Churches desiring my services may communicate with me.—S. H. Garst, Blountville, Tenn., March 29.

Piney Flats.—This congregation has enjoyed a great revival, beginning March 1, with their elder Bro. J. D. Clark, preaching each evening. The writer was able to reach the place of meeting March 7. The services continued each evening until March 16. Seventeen accepted the invitation and on Monday, March 17, thirteen of this number were received by baptism and four reclaimed.

A DEVOTIONAL COMMENTARY

Complete in Seven Volumes

Through the Bible Day by Day

Rev. F. B. Meyer's Comments on the Bible, Book by Book

There are a good many people who do not have the time to make a thorough study of the Bible. Therefore, it was indeed a happy thought when it occurred to F. B. Meyer to prepare a series of brief studies that make it possible to cover the whole Bible in a connected and intelligible way at the daily devotional hour. These studies will commend themselves to many Bible readers—not simply because of the author, F. B. Meyer, but also because of the possibilities connected with the series. It is now possible to go through the Bible day by day with such a Bible student as F. B. Meyer as a guide.—Gospel Messenger.

Vol. 1. Genesis to Joshua, 218 pages.
Vol. 2. Judges to 2 Chronicles, 249 pages.
Vol. 3. Job to Ecclesiastes, 201 pages.
Vol. 4. Ezra to Malachi, 225 pages.
Vol. 5. The Gospels, 235 pages.
Vol. 6. Acts to Ephesians, 190 pages.
Vol. 7. Philippians to Revelation, 206 pages.

Possibly, larger crowds were present at these services and to witness the baptismal scene than ever assembled at this place on occasions of this kind. The morning closed with great interest. Members asked that their wayward sons and wicked husbands still be remembered at a throne of grace. This church is without an active resident minister, located in a small village on the line of the Southern Railway, and surrounded by a fine farming country. It is the only Church of the Brethren located in a town or village in the State.—S. H. Garst, Bloomtville, Tenn., March 20.

VIRGINIA

Bethlehem church met in council March 24, with Eld. D. A. Naff presiding. Two letters were received and granted. Two queries were sent to District Meeting. Our delegates to Annual Conference are Brethren L. A. Bowman and E. E. Bowman; alternates, B. T. Naff and N. C. Peters. On Sunday following, Bro. E. E. Bowman gave a splendid discourse on the subject of "Wise Stewardship." An offering of $24.35 was taken for District Mission work, which will be sent to District Meeting. An offering of $16 for the same purpose had previously been taken at Cedar Bluff. Other preaching points will also do their share. Bro. Virgil C. Finnell was to have been with us for a few days during the month of February, but because of influenza here, he went to Blackwater Chapel instead,—a point in this congregation. We were glad however to have him with us for one service, March 17. His talk on "The Biggest and Best Paying Business in the World" was very much enjoyed.—Blanche Bowman, Boone Mill, Va., March 25.

Burks Fork.—Bro. S. E. Hylton, of Indianapolis, Ind., began a series of meetings Feb. 24, preaching eight very instructive sermons. The church was much encouraged by having Bro. Hylton with us. We met in council March 15, with Bro. A. J. Weddle presiding. One certificate of membership was granted. Bro. H. B. Hylton was elected Sunday-school superintendent. Services on the Sunday following were conducted by Eld. A. J. Weddle.—Hattie E. Hylton, Floyd, Va., March 22.

Copper Hill church met in council March 22, with Bro. C. E. Eller presiding. Three letters of membership were granted. Bro. Cleophas Stump was elected "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. We are glad to have with us again our young brethren who have been at Camp for several months. We reorganized our Sunday-school, with Bro. Jos. Wimmer, superintendent. Bro. Eller also preached two interesting sermons. Bro. Virgil C. Finnell came March 16 and gave us some good lectures on Sunday-school work. We hope that our church has been strengthened by having him with us. April 27 funeral services will be held at the church by Brethren C. E. Eller and Eugene Kaylor for Bro. Luke Wimmer and Sister Lillie Wood, who were recently called home.—Clytie E. Holt, Copper Hill, Va., March 24.

Mountain View.—Bro. J. F. Keith preached for us Feb. 28, and on Sunday gave us a very interesting sermon. Our next service will be held April 5.—J. T. Whitaker, Lawton, Va., March 22.

Notice.—The District Meeting of the Northern District of Virginia will be held in the Fairview church, Unity congregation, April 16-19. The elders will meet on Wednesday afternoon, April 16, at 2 o'clock. The annual sermon, on Wednesday evening, at 7:30, is to be delivered by Eld. H. C. Early. "The Great Forward Movement of the Church," from the text, "Forgetting Forward" (Philpp. 3:13), will be Bro. Early's theme. We would like to encourage all who possibly can, to be present for this evening service. The District Conference session will begin on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock (or if clocks are moved up one hour, at 11 o'clock). Fairview church is on macadam road, one-half mile east of Valley Pike, three miles south of New Market. Parties coming by train will be met at New Market station, if they inform Bro. S. J. Huffman, R. D., Broadway, Va., as to what time they expect to arrive.—J. S. Roller, Timberville, Va., March 22.

WASHINGTON

Omak church met in council March 16, with Eld. M. F. Woods presiding. Three letters were granted. Bro. M. F. Woods was re-elected elder for one year; Bro. Richard Dynes, clerk and treasurer; the writer, church correspondent. It was decided to hold a love feast in July,—the day has not been determined upon as yet. Bro. Irvine Brethren, contemplating changing locations, to make investigations. We have a fine fruit country and are desirous of having members locate among us.—Mrs. Allie M. Murray, Omak, Wash., March 16.

Wenatchee.—Feb. 9 we met for services for the first time since November, when everything was closed on account of the influenza epidemic. We feel that this congregation has been greatly blessed, as only one of our number was called home. Bro. Paul Mohler began a revival meeting at the Sunny Slope house Feb. 9, and continued until March 9. The attendance and interest were good. We were glad to have a large number of the East Wenatchee brethren with us each evening. We believe that our church has been greatly strengthened. March 8 we met in council, with Eld. L. E. Ulrich presiding. Two letters were received and eleven granted. Bro. L. E. Ulrich was reelected elder for the remainder of the year; Bro. D. B. Steele, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Mary Downs, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. We shall miss Bro. Mohler and his family, who are soon to leave us for their new home.—Galen W. Leavell, Wenatchee, Wash., March 20.

WEST VIRGINIA

Knobley congregation met in council March 15, with Eld. Noah M. Rotruck presiding. One letter was granted. The delegates elected to District Meeting will also serve as delegates to Ministerial and Sunday-school Meeting. It was decided to secure Eld. B. W. Smith to hold a series of meetings in the fall.—Albert C. Sites, Antioch, W. Va., March 22.

Shiloh.—The church at this place just closed a revival meeting which began March 1, and closed March 17. Bro. J. E. Shepler, of Bentons Ferry, W. Va., and Bro. J. B. Shaffer, did the preaching. There were thirty-seven conversions. Sixteen were baptized, ten reclaimed, nine await baptism, and two are to unite with other churches. Nearly half of those who came are heads of families. The church has received a great spiritual uplift. We had the best of interest and attendance throughout the meetings. At several of the services, the house was almost filled. On March 14 Bro. Obed Hamstead came to us, and held our council on the 15th. Bro. J. B. Shaffer was elected church agent and the writer correspondent. We reorganized our Sunday-school with Brethren A. C. Kelser and Charlie Digman as superintendents and Brethren Henry Wilson and Albert Wilson, presidents of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Practically all services were closed during the winter on account of influenza, and all are eager to have them open again. We have started a midweek prayer meeting with good interest and attendance.—Louella (Bolyard) Spurgeon, R. D. 1, Moatsville, W. Va., March 23.

...EDITORIAL...

Sovereignty and Sacrifice

OUTWORN notions of liberty and sovereignty die hard. The last stronghold of the anti-prohibitionist is "personal liberty." No matter what the issue is, there are always some who insist on being the last to find out that nobody has any right to "liberties" which prejudice the public welfare.

If you were the only person in your county, you could indulge some personal privileges which you can not now, being a member of a populous community. But would they be worth the price? There are advantages in having neighbors, notwithstanding the resultant limitations of your own sovereignty. Everything considered, you would not wish to be the only person in your county, would you?

If America were the only nation in the world, she could have a kind of sovereignty which she can not have as a member of the great family of nations. But could any sober mind, not to say Christian mind, wish her to exchange her wonderful opportunity to serve humanity for such a proud and selfish isolation?

Would-be statesmen wax warm with eloquent warnings against the danger which threatens America,—the danger of losing some measure of her independence in the interest of the common good. Since they are not unselfish enough to prefer the well-being of all the nations to the safety of their own, it is a pity they are too blind to see that the safety of one nation depends upon the welfare of all.

Fighting the stars in their courses is shortsighted policy. The days of national isolation are gone, never to return. You can not cheat Divine Law. It is as true of nations as of individuals that, in the long view, self-sacrifice and self-interest are identical.

"To Each One His Work"

SUPPOSE Joshua had tried to be another Moses. What a mess of things that would have made! He could not have been a Moses,—a type of man not needed then, anyway,—and he would have failed to be the Joshua who was so badly needed.

Grant that Moses was a greater man than Joshua. Was it not much better to be a great and useful Joshua than to be a fool?

To be the worthy successor of a man like Moses may look like a dangerous undertaking. But it isn't if the successor is satisfied to do his own work, and does not try to do over what has been done already better than he could do it.

"Let each man abide in that calling wherein he was called," and "walk worthily of the calling." Then see with what strides the Forward Movement will move forward.

An Antidote for Religious Fads

ONE of the most prolific sources of religious fads is Bible knowledge. The cure for them is more Bible knowledge.

Some propagandists make no claim of Scriptural support. Their own wisdom is sufficient. But most dispensers of "strange doctrines" do try to find a Bible basis for them.

And most of them succeed in finding it. That is, after a fashion. And to their minds, as well as to the minds of many eager adherents, the method is conclusive. For do they not buttress each position with a proof text?

Usually they do. And in the very act, oftentimes, distort the real message of the Bible on the subject. Taking no account of the conditions in which the words were spoken, they appropriate them because they are suitable for their purpose, even though, in doing so, they run counter to the most fundamental Bible teachings.

This they may do in all good faith. They intend no violence to the Word. Far from it, they intend to do the Word the utmost honor. But they have misunderstood its nature. They have not realized how vitally and necessarily the Bible is connected with the history through which the Spirit brought it into being.

It is easy, for example, to make the Bible teach polygamy and slavery by this method, and honest men have done so. But no honest man can do this who has learned to read his Bible in its own historical setting.

This is the antidote for the whole tribe of fads and isms which claim the Bible as their basis, but which, in fact, have only snatched a fragment from it here and there, while they have proved false to the spirit of the Bible as a whole. Certainly Bible texts must be applied to ourselves. But they must be interpreted in the light of their own background, and our application of them must be checked up by those central truths and principles which constitute the axis of the entire Bible message.

There is nothing mysterious or difficult about this. The important point is that we have not been sufficiently awakened to the need of it.

The Worst Avenger

WASN'T that ancient institution of blood revenge a fearful thing? Always to be haunted by the fear that some day somebody would track you down and slay you,—think of it!

But was any avenger of blood ever more relentless in the pursuit of his victim than are "the sins of yesterday," which, "like an avenger, are ever on the heels of today"? How hard it is to get away from them! How careful, then, this fact should make us about how we use the day that will soon be yesterday!

The Miracle of Faith

FAITH is one of the most potent forces in all the world, for "all things are possible to him that believeth." Notice that the miracle of faith touches not a few things, not most things, but that all things are possible. We have here, then, the sort of statement that at once challenges interest and investigation.

Of course one may say that the sentence, just quoted above, was spoken with reference to a special situation. Statements of this sort can not, ordinarily, be pushed far in the realm of general application, and yet this does not necessarily follow. But in spite of this reservation the sentence referred to has all of the ear-marks of a general truth. Christ himself, who spoke the words, made no attempt to limit or modify their application. Look at the statement: "All things are possible to him that believeth." Is it not simple, direct, axiomatic?

The more one looks at the statement, the more startling it becomes. For this reason it may be of advantage to remove all possible grounds of objection before we have gone too far. Why should our subject deal with faith when the word in the text is believeth? Happily we have more than poet's license here. Our two words, faith and believe, are more closely related than might at first appear. In the original different forms of the same word only are used, for the ideas conveyed in English by the two words faith and believe. For this reason we are doing no violence to Scripture when it is assumed that a text which runs: "All things are possible to him who believeth," in reality teaches the miracle-working power of faith.

As has been suggested, the simple, sweeping statement of our text naturally challenges the closest study. For our purposes it is just as well to begin with a definition. Doubtless your mind goes immediately to that fine sentence in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews which begins: "Now faith is assurance of things hoped for . . ." Of course it sounds well, but just what does it mean? How is faith the assurance of things hoped for? In the end it proves to be only an illusive definition, with nothing very concrete for the mind to get a hold of. In this respect the marginal reading, given for both the King James Version and the American Standard Version, is much better. Our new rendering is: "Now faith is the giving substance to things hoped for." The phrase used suggests a process,—faith is giving substance or objective reality to dreams and hopes.

Perhaps the most distinct advantage of the marginal rendering lies in just the fact that it enables one to visualize the miracle-working power of faith. For example, in the development of a country we have a fine illustration of how faith gives reality to hopes, and at the same time we have something that most people can visualize from their own experience. When Southern California was first settled, men built their houses where the soil was most fertile and where water was plentiful. But after a time there came men of vision who saw that the best land was by no means the most valuable in the long run. They saw that in general there was a belt of foothill land, often poorly watered and sterile, that offered greater possibilities than the richer and better-watered bottom lands. In brief, they saw that this frostless belt was the place where the more tender varieties of fruits could be grown to perfection. These men began to give substance to their dreams. Sagebrush and cactus gave way to the orange and the lemon tree. Sterile and ragged foothill slopes became orchards and gardens of tropical beauty.

But the rise of an orchard in a desert land is only one of the many illustrations that might be given to show the miracle-working power of faith. There is the immigrant from distant Italy or Russia, who, like our forefathers, dreamed of a better land across the ocean. For some hundreds of years men and women have been making all kinds of sacrifices to reach this land of opportunity. These people have given up homes and kindred, they have faced the unknown perils of the sea and of a strange land, and in many cases they sold themselves into virtual slavery for a term of years in the hope that if happily they should survive all of this they would at last be free in a free land. Thus, for generations, men and women have been giving substance to their dream of the land of things as they ought to be, and it is not strange that in the hour of the world's greatest crisis America should stand as the hope of the world. The faith of the generations that are past has wrought this miracle.

No man needs to go outside of his own life for proof of the miracle-working power of faith. The finest things we ever do, begin as hopes and wishes. The first steps toward such goals are usually slow and halting. But each advance, however small, is a ground for new hope and with growing assurance momentum is gathered. This is the first chapter in the process of giving substance to our dreams. But at last, often with a speed that is most startling, the hopes of a lifetime come true like wishes in a story book.

If we think of faith as the miracle-working power by which reality is given to our hopes we have still to see just what factors enter into the process. By faith men remove mountains, but just how do they do it? Here, again, we must go to the eleventh chapter of Hebrews for help. Enoch is one of the many faithful cited in this chapter, and of him and his faith it is written: "For he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." Now this statement suggests at least three steps in the faith that is of the Enoch type. First, there is the belief that God is; second, there is the conviction that God rewards those seeking after him; and, third, there is the action implied by the words seek after him. However, these three factors may mean little until we reduce them to more general terms, in order to see just what they mean in our experience. First, there is the belief that God is. Just what does this signify? In speaking to the men of Lystra Paul, somewhere, says of God: "And yet he left not himself without witness, in that he did good and gave you from heaven rains and fruitful seasons, filling your hearts with food and gladness." That is, the witness of God is in the world and so unmistakably that any honest man can see that God is, and that he is good. In terms of general race experience a belief that God is means simply that a man is willing to accept as true the facts that to us are indisputable. No matter what men say they believe, in the end the universe in which we live can not be explained without God, and no man is intellectually honest unless he admits this fact. Therefore, we may say that a belief that God is, really stands for intellectual honesty in the more general terms of common experience.

In the second place a faith of the Enoch type involves the conviction that God rewards those who seek after him. Upon the facts suggested by Paul's words to the men of Lystra one is obliged to believe, not only that God is, but also that he is a Rewarder of them that seek after him. This implies the power to reason correctly, to draw right conclusions from fundamental and indisputable facts. To sum up, we may say that the second factor in faith of the Enoch type is the power to draw right conclusions. But in the third place, intellectual honesty and the power to draw right conclusions are both dead without some action.

By our method we have resolved faith into a process, making it possible to visualize the way by which reality is given to insubstantial hopes and dreams, and then, finally, we have seen that the elemental factors in this process are intellectual honesty, the power to draw right conclusions, and definite action. So far as our study has taken us, these three factors seem to explain the secret of the miracle-working power of faith, and to give us grounds for taking Christ's words without any thought of limitation or modification. His words stand simply as they were spoken: "All things are possible to him that believeth." These may indeed be startling words, but ". . . what shall I more say? for the time would fail me if I tell of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah; of David and Samuel and the prophets: who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the power of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, from weakness were made strong, waxed mighty in war, turned to flight armies of aliens."

Military Training in the Public Schools

DURING the summer of 1918 the Woman's Church Federation of Chicago appointed a committee to study various forms of universal training in this and other countries and to report its findings when the war should be over. The following paragraphs are taken from the report of this committee:

"In studying the experience of other countries than our own, we find that England and France years ago tried military training in their schools and discarded it as unsatisfactory. During the past year, England has adopted a wonderful new educational system which, when fully put into operation, will take account of the mental and physical welfare of every child, from birth to the age of eighteen. But the new system makes no provision whatever for military training. On the contrary, H. A. L. Fisher, British Minister of Education, states that after a thorough canvass of the subject, the Government decided that compulsory military training, as a part of the school system, has neither educational nor military value. In France a strong central committee has been formed to promote physical (not military) education. In Switzerland, so often pointed out as a model, military training does not begin till the age of twenty. Germany has never had military training in her public schools.

"In our own country, educators and teachers in large numbers are openly opposed to compulsory military education. The National League of Teachers' Associations, representing 20,000 teachers, in convention at Pittsburgh last July, sent a resolution to Secretary of War Baker, expressing a 'warm approval' of his stand against universal military training in this country. 'Military training,' says Dr. Sargeant, of Harvard University, 'is not an adequate means of physical training, being not only very limited in its activity, but actually harmful in its effect on boys less than eighteen or twenty years of age.' Dr. Ehler, of the University of Wisconsin, says, 'Military drill is an enthusiasm-killing, contempt-developing treadmill. . . . Let us not confound drill with training or substitute military drill for physical education.' Our own Ella Flagg Young contended vigorously that the blind obedience of military training is in direct opposition to the reasonable obedience and opportunity for self-expression that the education of the past decade has been attempting to develop in the child. The military system, moreover, not only neglects the physical needs of the mothers of the future, but also eliminates that part of the male population most in need of physical training.

"A bulletin, recently issued by the Bureau of Education of the United States, reports it to be the conclusion of legislators in the various States which have been considering military training for schoolboys that, while in most cases the initial impulse to action was interest in the military preparedness and took the form of bills for military training, investigation forced the conclusion later that military training is less valuable, even as a measure of preparedness, than a solid system of physical education. With the exception of Nevada, where the law applies to high schools only, the bills passed or likely to be passed by State Legislatures this year provide systems of physical training applicable to all school children.

"Carefully considering this array of testimony, we are led to the conclusion that military training is not a desirable addition to American public schools, but what we should provide for our children instead is a thorough system of physical education from the kindergarten up, adapted to the different ages of the pupils and including health supervision and instruction, supervised play and competitive games and contests, group singing, pageantry and amateur dramatics and vocational training. Such a system would tend to develop strong, well-trained, perfectly controlled bodies, fit to be the foundation of joyous and efficient manhood and womanhood of the highest possible service to humanity. If it still must be that for some young men, service of their country must take the form of the grim business of war, let them be given specialized training for their profession, as other specialists are trained,—but subsequent to and not during the impressionable years. Patriotic training in the public schools, during the later teens, may better take the form of instruction in the ideals of democracy and their application to industrial and civic affairs. The idealism of youth, aroused to the highest pitch during the war, may well be enlisted with the coming of peace in the valorous fight for clean and beautiful cities, fit homes and working conditions for all the people and the introduction of Christian standards into social and business relations."

A Bystander's Notes

A Deplorable State.—An investigation, carried on by the Japanese Government, reveals the most astonishing fact that in Tokyo eighty per cent of the working people have absolutely no religion whatever. In Osaka ninety per cent of the laboring class make no pretension whatever of holding to a religion. The time was when Japan's aristocracy of learning was non-religious and rather gloried in it. That was dangerous enough, loosening all moral restraints. But today it is the ignorant, downtrodden laboring man who has thrown religion overboard. He has no ideals, no standards, no moral barometer. Self-interest and dire need are the only forces of which he is conscious. Where will they drive him? To the Christian church it is a problem of vital interest. The crumbling of old-time religions leaves the Japanese wholly without restraints. Shall the church regard it as an opportunity that will open up before her in Japan a limitless field of service and usefulness? That will depend wholly on the attitude and action of the Christian forces at this critical time.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has issued its annual call for the Easter Week of Prayer, April 13-20, 1919. The daily topics are as follows: Sunday, April 13, Sermons on a New Year for a New World; Monday, The New Discovery of Self; Tuesday, The New Discovery of God; Wednesday, The New Stewardship; Thursday, The New Passion for Others; Friday, The New Sacrifice; Saturday, The New Day for Palestine; Sunday, April 20, Sermons on the Resurrection. "Help us, our Father, to do thy will and to follow fully thy plans and methods. Teach us to think in terms of world-need and establish in righteousness the nations now disordered and confused. Give us courage to tread unfamiliar roads and keep us free from unclean alliances! May the experiences and discipline of today make more worthy the citizenship of tomorrow! Rekindle our smouldering fires, quicken our spiritual hunger and give us holy unrest with present attainments! May our work be done with deepening desire and joy to the praise of him who ever lives to intercede for us!"

Best Methods of Taking the Collection.—The Bystander has often been impressed with the fact that the HOW of the collection is of much more importance than the "HOW MUCH." The fact of the matter is, that the method often determines the HOW MUCH or the HOW LITTLE. The very manner in which a collection is taken at a missionary gathering, often clearly indicates how near we have come to an adequate sense of our stewardship. Sometimes there is not even the least preparation by prayer, and how can we expect the audience to form an exalted idea of the importance of the occasion? All of us, perhaps, can remember times when the collection was treated as a wholly perfunctory affair, by merely saying: "The collection will be taken during the singing of the next hymn." To be sure, solemn words are sung about the bitter need of the world, of the Savior's agony, and at times a crowded house will enthusiastically sing: "Lord, I care not for riches, neither silver nor gold," but all the while only small coins are hastily rattling into the collection baskets, as if there were no spiritual connection between the words and the action. Possibly, as long as we persist in talking about "collections" instead of "offerings" we shall go on in the same old inefficient way. If we would only stop to think a bit about the relative difference between the two terms, we would soon see the importance of making our offering as truly an act of worship as our prayers. We may rest assured that if we give the proper degree of reverence and consecration to the church offering, a real sense of God's presence will be felt during the collection. Then we may expect greater results and more sacrificial obedience to the last command of our Savior.

Life's Recompense

The road is rough and the hills are steep,
In the wheel-worn furrows the dust lies deep!
But beyond the hedgerow stretch fields of green
And the dim grove's arches are cool and serene.

Oh, hard and heavy the load I bear,
As I trudge along in the noonday glare;
But the wayside flowers bloom fair and sweet,
And the bird-songs hasten my lagging feet.

The night draws on, and I may not know
How long is the way that I still must go;
But I'm sure to find, at my journey's end,
A welcoming smile on the face of my Friend!

God's Will for Us

BY PAUL MOHLER

It is the common thing for people, when they are suffering, to wonder why God has brought such suffering on them. How often we hear people say: "It is hard, but if it is God's will, we must bear it." I think a good deal of such submission is unnecessary and mistaken.

When I wish to know what is the will of God on any question, the best place I can go is to our Lord Jesus Christ. Turning to Luke's record, chapter 5: 12-16, I find at least one intimation of what is the will of God.

Notice that Jesus was approached by a man full of leprosy. This disease is popularly supposed to bear a close relation to sin, so that it is easy to regard it as a judgment on the sufferer. If it had been the will of God that any disease should be permanently settled upon a sufferer, leprosy would have answered the purpose. In view of this, it is interesting to see what attitude Jesus took toward the man "full of leprosy."

When he saw Jesus, he fell on his face and besought him, saying, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." "What a faith," you say. Well, it was a strong faith, remarkably strong. To believe that the healing of his supposedly incurable disease was resting entirely on the will of a young Nazarene, who had but to speak the word and make him clean, required more faith than we generally find, even in the majority of Christians of today. Such faith must be born of intense desire, which is, I believe, the foundation of all true faith.

If Jesus so willed,—but Jesus came not to do his own will, but the will of God who sent him. If it were God's will for the leper to remain unclean, even Jesus would not heal him. If I know the will of Jesus, I know the will of God. Certainly he would not do what was contrary to the will of God just because the man besought him. No man of real strength of character can be so changed from what he knows to be right and for the best. Much less may God be moved from that which is his will by the pleading of any man. What Jesus did in this case was, therefore, according to the will of God.

We are told he stretched forth his hand and touched him, saying, "I will, be thou made clean." And straightway the leprosy departed from him. It was, then, the will of God, that the leper should be made clean. God wanted that man to be a whole man, able to do a man's work, exert a man's influence for good, and enjoy a man's life amid the multitude of blessings with which he had surrounded him. Is this the will of God for every man? I don't know, but here is what I think.

I think that it is the will of God that every man in all the world shall be entirely free from both sin and sickness, just as he was before sin entered the world, but since man refuses to do the will of God, he does the best he can with him, without taking from him his power of choice. God teaches him the danger of sin, its debasing and destructive effects, by allowing it to work out its own natural results in the physical weakening of the human race, exposing it to diseases of every sort.

The only way the majority of men will learn is by experience,—their own and that of others in whom they are interested. If God should wipe out all disease, at the request of the sufferers, before sin, the ultimate cause of disease, is destroyed, men would rush into sin even more greedily than now. Suffering teaches men the folly of sin, as does nothing else. Even the visiting of the sins of the fathers upon the children unto the second and third generation, as it is in some cases, is valuable in emphasizing the terrible results of sin. God could not abolish the penalty while granting liberty to sin, without doing a positive injury to the race. Therefore pain abides.

Why, then, should he ever answer prayer and relieve the sufferer? The only reason I can see is, that he has a work for the sufferer to do that he can do better in health than in sickness, and that it is his will always to honor true faith by answering prayer, whenever this can be done without loss to the suppliant and to others who may be concerned. Whenever the sufferer has lessons to learn and blessings to receive which he can only receive through suffering, I should expect it to be the will of God for suffering to continue, regardless of the prayers that might be offered for healing. Whenever the immediate healing of the body, in answer to prayer, would encourage the sufferer to disregard the laws of health, even in overworking in spiritual ministrations, I should expect it to be God's will for him to suffer until he should learn to live naturally and normally, according to those laws of health that he has revealed to us.

The Power of Early Impressions

BY EZRA FLORY

Yesterday I heard the conversation of two ministers,—one a middle-aged man, and the other quite young. The remark which particularly engaged my attention ran as follows: "Why don't you wear a beard? Somehow I can not quite consent to seeing a minister in the pulpit who wears a smooth face."

Neither one of these ministers wears a beard, and the remark was the more striking for this reason. The conversation continued: "There is something about the beard that gives the impression of wisdom, of maturity, of,—well, I can not say what,—but I was always used to seeing my good old father in the pulpit with his beard, and the other ministers did the same. Now, somehow, it does not seem fitting for me to associate the minister in the pulpit with any other less pleasing attitude."

Now the insisting middle-aged minister is a sincere lover of the church, but not of the conservative type in respect to dress, and we were exceedingly interested, as we took note of the overheard remarks,—there in the corner of the room, only a few feet away.

The conversation continued: "But I can not reconcile myself to the minister who wears a mustache alone. I have heard Dr. ——— and Dr. ——— in his eloquent sermon on ———, but somehow there was a constant thrust in my heart, insisting upon the irregularity of the behavior. And I can say the same in reference to gold and jewelry. I can not bear the minister who appears with a stickpin in a tie, or a ring on his finger."

At this point I interrupted the conversation, to ask why the middle-aged minister held such notions about the appearance of a minister; whether other people regard the same standard and why.

I was the more interested in the subject because this minister is a man of broad experience, both within and without the Church of the Brethren, and a man of unusual intellectual attainments.

Now I am wondering why we insist upon similar standards of conduct. Is the basis of the simple life in dress entirely one of doctrine? How came it to be? Is not the explanation to be found, in part at least, in these early impressions of childhood? Why are some of the old songs so sacred to us and others not so? Why do you dislike certain names, certain colors, certain sounds, certain gestures, certain attitudes in worship? If we were able to trace the complex back to its source, we should find it springs from those impregnable foundations, laid in early days, when the greatest teachers of our lives lived unconsciously before us what they believed, down in the depths of their beings. These were the most impressionable years of our lives and what went into their make-up remains longest and controls most fundamentally. Some prefer to call it prejudice. This may be permissible if we disallow the bias of suspicion, which often accompanies what is meant by the term.

Our mental and emotional lives are largely under the domain of the sub-conscious. These complexes of the sub-conscious are not dormant or passive. Our stream of consciousness is in the grip of the larger background of the sub-conscious (unconscious). The sub-conscious life is stored with experiences apparently forgotten, but which are active in directing the lines along which the conscious thought shall follow, coloring and intensifying it according to the tastes and will of this unseen director. But call it what we may, the fact remains that we are all the creatures of our past experiences.

This fact ought to make us humble and very patient with those who sincerely differ with us. It is not enough to say that the Scriptures have directions to guide one in the dressing of his body, or his house, or his children. Deep and abiding convictions must be stored in the soul, to hold that individual as he goes forth into the society of the world, and to keep him in the great good arms of its parental protection, long after father and mother and minister and teacher have ceased to live, and when they shall not be able to accompany the life they nurtured.

Our dislikes and our likes, our notions of propriety and of impropriety, are all colored by these early standards that are set up, unconsciously enough.

A certain lady told me she never liked the name "Eliza" because in her younger days a girl by that name was an unpleasant playmate. Another said: "I never liked red hair because I was taught that people with such hair are fiery-tempered, and I have been unable to get that notion out of my thinking."

A little girl liked the name "Agnes" and named all her dolls thus. She envied those who were named by this name. But one time an "Agnes" moved into the neighborhood who was naughty. That spoiled the name for that little girl, and ruined forever the attraction it had.

Certain parents taught the evil of using slang. If they happened to hear such talk, it sent the barometer of interest, for such persons, down to zero and there congealed.

One family taught that the highest respect for the father of that home can not tolerate unkindness toward him.

There was a day when Sunday-school was spoken of as a questionable institution and the children, because of their confidence in their parents, accepted their position, and for many years could not be reconciled to this strategic function of the church.

Some parent may be unjust in dealing with his children. The example thus given is going far toward establishing a like condition in the children, and this, in turn, will incline them toward incorrect social living.

What might we say further about "mourners' bench," "banquet," "picnic," "convention," "evolution," and a host of expressions, activities and customs which at once call up our preconceived stock of impressions? As teachers for the Lord it is our privilege to lay hold of some of these opportunities and to use them with all our power, not for the undoing but for the upbuilding of the individual.

How to Be Rich

BY E. F. SHERFY

There is a natural instinct in every human heart which craves possessions. This instinct is seen in the very small child when he says: "This is my ball," and when he cries if his little candy-stick is taken into possession at the hands of another. The miser, the gold seeker of the West, the business man, the farmer,—in fact, all of us have, in greater or less degree, that desire to "have" things. The get-rich scheme promoter takes advantage of this thing in human nature. The heading of this article may sound like a get-rich scheme. Well, the writer could wish that every one who reads this humble message might actually be richer for having done so.

I have no "scheme," but God has,—no, not a scheme exactly, either, but a plan,—by which each of his children can get riches and be rich. Some may object to this statement if by riches is meant earthly riches. Well, let us see.

Webster says: "Riches is a large aggregate of property,—of those material things men desire to possess." But what is a "large aggregate of property"? Who is rich? No one, in his own estimation,—when the assessor or solicitor calls. The $25,000 farmer considers the city capitalist rich. The renter considers his landlord farmer rich. The poor of the city would consider the renter, riding in his "Ford," rich; and so it goes. By what standard, therefore, can we say that one is, or is not, rich? Our "fancies" should not be the standard, for Carlyle says: "All seems to depend on what we fancy the world owes us; an overplus is wealth; a deficit is misery and poverty." And he further remarks, "Many a blockhead will cry: 'Was ever worthy gentleman,'—referring to self,—'so badly used!' I tell thee, blockhead, it all comes of thy vanity in fancying the world owes you much." Yes, we fancy the world (or God) owes us much. We would better fancy the world owes us little; then all we have, be it ever so little, is a luxury,—just that much more than is "comin' to us."

To vivify this point, I use Carlyle's illustration. Life,—or as he puts it,—"the fraction of life," may be increased in either of two ways. For example: Here we have the fraction "two-fourths." Now this fraction may be increased in value by adding a "one" to the numerator (above the line), making three-fourths, or it may be made larger in value by subtracting a "one" from the denominator, making it two-thirds. Now we shall let the numerator equal "things," and the denominator, our fancies, our desires and so-called rights. The time-worn method was: Increase the numerator,—the things of life. Carlyle's method and Paul's method,—yes, and Jesus' method, would be to decrease the denominator, the fancies, the unwarranted desires and cravings. By the first method few can be rich. By the second ALL can be. By this last method, Carlyle says: "We can have the world under our feet." Paul would say: "I am full [rich], having received of Epaphroditus enough to supply my needs for a few weeks." This method we might call: "Secret of riches, number one."

Another secret of riches, here on earth, lies in the fact that the child of God may "possess" more than he "owns," as Jesus puts it: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." We used to think that to own a thing meant exclusive right to the "possession" thereof. But today the student of economics is beginning to see that "society" has certain rights to possess, in a way, some things an individual may claim to own and control.

We might illustrate with the case of Henry Thoreau. This man lived in his little house, situated on Walden Pond, a beauty spot of old New England. His few acres supplied his "returning wants." To the west lay the big "Hollowell Farm," with its bewitching landscapes. This, Thoreau wished he might buy, so that he could have free access to its wealth of beauty. Such was impossible for him. He contented himself, therefore, with simply "possessing" it through the scenery. The wealthy farmer, Mr. Hollowell, is dead and buried. The poor man, rich in thought and feeling, with his messages on the "Simple Life," lives on. Which of the two, after all, really entered in and possessed the land?

Some "big" landlord may own the house you live in—and a dozen others. It is his house, but you can make it your home, with its fireside of love and prayer, and you are richer in your possessing the home than he is in owning the house.

There are two kinds of poverty,—the one the "lack of goods for the higher wants, and the other (which is worse), the lack of wants for the higher goods." Sad it is that perhaps more than seventy-five per cent of humanity, these war times, lacks the "goods." But you, dear reader, if you can afford a twenty-five cent Testament and can buy a year's subscription to the MESSENGER, or borrow your neighbor's, and are within five miles of a library,—you have the "goods." And you evidently have the "wants" for those "goods," or you would not be reading the MESSENGER as you are now. Therefore, while I do not know your "finances," I know you are rich. May God help us to see, from this viewpoint, how "well fixed" we are.

But perchance we do not have the goods we might profitably use for ourselves and others. How can we increase them? How increase the numerator,—the "things?" A few simple Bible rules may help: (1) Diligence. "Go to the ant, consider her ways and be wise." (2) Frugality. "Gather up the fragments (Hooverize) that nothing be lost." (3) Give, that you may have more to give. Quit robbing God. "Bring ye the whole tithes into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house and I will open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Listen to a personal testimony, the like of which there are many. The brother writes us: "Enclosed find check of $200 for the work (a work of benevolence). I want to do that much again this year. God has indeed blessed my basket and store since I give a tenth of all to him."

"But," you say, "some will always be poor." Don't despair. Hath not God chosen the poor,—rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he promised to those that love him? Yes, the true riches are within the reach of all. God is able and willing to bestow. Therefore all depends upon our receptivity. He can give only to those who will accept.

We may be rich in good works,—doing the things that are pleasing in his sight. We may be rich in thought, thinking on those things that are honorable and pure. We may be rich in fellowship to the point of being able to say: "Truly our fellowship is with the Father and his son, Jesus Christ." We may be rich in possession as having nothing, yet possessing all things. We may be rich in character, manifesting his image from glory to glory, or from a glorious character to a more glorious character, until we finally come to be like unto the Son of God, rich in memory, so that, when old age comes, we may "re-live," in memory, a rich experience.

Oh, brother, we MESSENGER readers have, I am sure, enough "goods" for the necessities and the higher wants. And if we but have the "wants" for the higher "goods," we may be millionaires with God, and rich in every way.

Churchanity,—Christianity

BY NORMAN W. TWIDDY

UTILITY is the final test of every theory. The world cares little for the most involved formula unless it be workable. The insistent iteration of "Gott mit uns" can not convince civilization that the Heavenly Father, who sent his Son on this earth to suffer and die for righteousness and liberty, was with the blood-guilty millions of Kaiserism. Profession and action must square in these days, when national and personal efficiency is the watchword of the hour.

Thousands of men and women today are warming pews in our churches, singing the blessed Gospel hymns loudly, and arguing their Christianity on the premise of church membership, as though that, in itself, furnished a pass-key to the pearly gates. Out in the work-a-day world of business and society it would take a microscope, capable of magnifying several hundred times, to detect a speck of real Christianity in them.

The pity of it all is that the unchurched, hearing their loud protestations of Christianity, and noting, with the keen eye of the world, that talk and practice do not agree, use these misnamed Christians as cases in point to prove the "sorry failure" of our glorious faith. By their hypocritical lives they bring discredit on the great church of Jesus Christ, because it is the unchangeable tendency of people to judge a system by its effect on any given person who claims to be its adherent,—the carping critics, in the ranks of the unchurched, as a rule, absolutely disregarding the Christians whose belief and whose lives make a perfect square.

When Christ commanded us: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven," he placed the emphasis on works. "Faith without works is dead." So it is the vital Christianity of a life which really counts, not the mechanical repetition of a creed. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Churchanity is lifeless formalism; Christianity is the life-blood of civilization.

When Napoleon,—supreme militarist that he was,—sadly acknowledged his failure to found a kingdom on force, and made the historic statement that "centuries ago Jesus Christ founded a kingdom on love, and today there are millions of people, throughout the world, who would die for him," he not only paid tribute to the Man of Galilee, but he pointed out the cornerstone of the Christian religion,—love. Love here includes brotherhood, charity and humility. Unless a man possess these, he may sit in the first pew and sing the loudest in the congregation, but he has not Christianity.

The church is Christ's ambassador on earth. Its members should glory in the privilege of reflecting his blessed light upon all mankind.

"If ye have not the Spirit of Christ, ye are none of his." Honeyed words within church doors and backbiting outside, do not square. Talking of brotherly love in prayer meeting and attempting to cut the throat of your business rival,—not being too fussy about the method,—is far from the spirit. Presumably, by your church membership, you are standing for decency, but talking loosely, or tolerating that which is indecent is not Christlike. Nodding approvingly as the preacher condemns reprehensible factory conditions, and encouraging a slack respect for law in your own factory, do not correspond. Mayhap you have been guilty of none of these transgressions of the law of consistency, but you are not fulfilling your obligation as a Christian man or woman unless you have placed Christ first in your life.

"Christ's life our code, in letters clear,
We read our duty day by day,
His footsteps tracing eagerly,
Who art the Truth, the Life, the Way."

Is your Christ first,—before business, pleasure, friends, and even loved ones? Are you tracing his footsteps eagerly?

Up, Christian! Away from bigotry, narrowness and churchanity. Vitalize that Christianity of yours with a flaming life of love,—flaming with the passion to serve him by serving your brethren in love and kindness.

Let us exalt our Master in word and in deed! Let us make our profession and our actions square! We are his messengers and the only Bibles some people know. What a responsibility! What a privilege!

Individual Responsibility

BY SARAH NORRIS SLATER

PAUL speaks of the great love Christ had for the church, that "he gave himself for it." Also in Acts 20: 28b we read, "To feed the church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood." "That he might present it to himself, a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish" (Eph. 5: 27).

Brother, sister, did you ever feel the weight of these words, and the great responsibility that rests on every individual member of his church? Each individual member of his church is a part of the great whole, and if there is to be no "spot or wrinkle, or any such thing," such a desirable state must come from you, and you, and you, and me, to make it "holy and without blemish" and a glorious church when presented to him.

"How careful then ought I to live,
With what religious fear,
Who such a strict account must give
For my behavior here."

"For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. . So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God" (Rom. 14: 10, 12).

Committee Reports for Annual Conference

I. "SAVING OUR CHILDREN TO THE CHURCH"

We, your committee on "Saving Our Children to the Church," beg leave to submit the following:

After repeated efforts during the past two years, we have secured reports from three hundred and one churches, representing every State District in the Brotherhood. We regret that the remaining seven hundred churches of the Brotherhood did not fill out and return the questionnaire, since the absence of this information has made it impossible for the committee to submit as complete a report to this Conference as had been planned.

Our report must, therefore, be based on conditions as revealed by the reports from 300 churches whose total membership is 38,164. In the Brethren homes of these congregations we find 7,245 children between the ages of 20 and 30, of which number 4,475 are already members of the church. There are also 9,862 between the ages of 10 and 20, of whom 5,826 are members of the church. Thus, in these 300 congregations, there are 6,806 children between 10 and 30 years of age who are not in the church. Within these same bounds there are also approximately 12,572 children under the age of ten years, a few of whom are now members of the church.

There were lost from the communion of the church, during the past fifteen years, 2,907 of our young people, as reported by 200 of these churches, the other churches failing to furnish data on this point. Taking these 200 churches as a basis, it is quite reasonable to suppose that the entire number of our children, lost to the Brotherhood during the past fifteen years, would exceed 14,000. It should be kept in mind that these figures have reference to those who have at some time been members of the Church of the Brethren, but do not take into account the much larger number who have never been within the membership of the church.

The interest in attendance upon the various services of the church is indicated by the following figures:

71% of parents attend Sunday-school;

79% of parents attend preaching services;

78% of our children attend Sunday-school;

77% of our children attend preaching services.

It should be kept in mind that these figures include all who attend such services, even though they are present only occasionally. In the light of these facts, we realize that a great loss has been sustained by both the church and the individuals, reared in our Brethren homes, and that we have not appreciated the marvelous possibilities for good to be realized, when once the church has earnestly and energetically undertaken to conserve these forces that are in our homes and churches.

Though it is not within the province of this committee to suggest remedies, we submit the causes that are largely responsible for our children being lost to the church, as indicated by the information received from various sources.

1. Individual.

(a) Affiliation in marriage with those not members of the Church of the Brethren.

(b) Indifference of some young people to all religious appeals.

(c) Have secured their education in institutions other than those maintained by our own church.

2. Home.

(a) Neglects prayer at meal, family altar, and Bible reading.

(b) Unchristian criticism of church activities and church officials in the presence of the children.

(c) Failure of parents to accompany children to church and Sunday-school during the habit-forming period of their lives.

(d) Locating home without due regard for the child's spiritual welfare.

3. Church.

(a) Failure sufficiently to consider the social and spiritual needs of the young people to provide for the same.

(b) Employing methods that are legalistic rather than helpful and conserving, in applying church discipline.

(c) Neglecting to enlist the young people in some phase of church or Sunday-school activity.

(d) The failure, in a great majority of instances, to provide a resident pastor, which provision is an imperative necessity as an aid in this effort to "save our young people to the Church."

Recommendation.—In view of the earnest appeals from many churches for help and cooperation, and the great loss sustained in past years through causes that may be largely avoided, we recommend that this matter be continued in some form agreeable to the Conference, in the hope of securing, in some measure, the proposed end.

Committee: W. S. Long, Virgil C. Finnell.

II. INVESTIGATING THE BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE

Our preliminary report of conditions, as we found them in the House, was published in "Gospel Messenger" of Aug. 31, 1918. Our report to Annual Conference will be made of that report with the addition of the following paragraph:

"We recommend that the Brotherhood look toward putting our publishing interests into the hands of a Publication Board, and that a committee of three brethren be appointed at this Conference to work out a plan whereby this can be done, and report to the 1920 Conference."

James M. Moore, Chairman of Committee.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Laton church met in council March 9, with Eld. D. R. Holsinger presiding. Our love feast will be held April 12. The first service will be at 10 A. M., and dinner will be served at the church. Sunday, April 6, Bro. S. F. Sanger, of Empire, Calif., will begin a series of doctrinal sermons in the Laton congregation. Our Sunday-school is growing, and there is a live interest in all departments. The mid-week prayer meeting is well attended. Bro. Guy De Hart is our prayer meeting superintendent. The Sisters' Aid Society, under the direction of Sister Emma Warrington, is progressing nicely.—Bessie H. Jenkinson, Laton, Calif., March 28.

La Verne.—We were delighted to have Dr. Wampler and wife, returned missionaries from China, with us, at both morning and evening services, March 16. Dr. Wampler told of their experiences in the morning. In the evening he gave an illustrated lecture, showing conditions with which they have to deal in the medical work in China. Results of our Section Workers' efforts are visible on every hand,—especially in the attendance and interest in our Sunday-school. Among other new pupils we have four Japanese men and a number of our Mexican neighbors. Our pastor is arranging to have Dr. R. A. Torrey address the Section Workers and their helpers at the next meeting, April 6. We hope to have Brother and Sister J. B. Emmert with us April 6.—Grace H. Miller, La Verne, Calif., March 27.

Los Angeles Mission.—Bro. Jesse B. Emmert gave us a splendid lecture on India March 23. An offering of $13.06 was taken for the India work. April 6 our Bible Term begins, to continue one week: "Prophetic Doctrines," "The Holy Spirit's Methods and Messages," "Dispensations," "Baptisms," and "Atonement" will be taught by Bro. M. M. Eshelman. The First Epistle of John will be treated by the writer, and a series of sermons on "The Identity of the Church," or "How Can the True Seeker Find the True Church?" will be delivered by Bro. G. H. Bashor. A series of evangelistic services will follow, conducted by the pastor.—C. W. Guthrie, 3721 Michigan Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., March 24.

McFarland.—March 13 Dr. Wampler, our returned missionary, gave an instructive illustrated lecture on the medical needs of China. March 16 Sister Anna Blough spoke both morning and evening on religious customs and social life of China. We are glad to be among the churches favored by their visits.—J. Ross Hanawalt, McFarland, Calif., March 20.

South Los Angeles.—Since the influenza epidemic has abated, our Sunday-school has been increasing in attendance each Sunday. Sister Ethel Smith has had charge of the primary department since the first of the year, and is doing splendid work with the little folks. Sunday, March 9, Bro. Jesse Emmert, with his wife and children, from India, was with us. It was a great inspiration to us to associate with them and also to listen to Bro. Emmert's very interesting addresses. On Friday evening, March 14, Dr. Fred Wampler and wife, of China, gave a fine illustrated lecture of their work on the foreign field. The missionary offering for the week amounted to $63.53. Our regular monthly communion was held on Friday evening, March 21. Bro. R. H. Miller presided. As we have been without a pastor since the first of January, we feel the urgent need of having some one to visit the members, and keep in touch with them. In a large city like this, people are constantly changing locations, and such a worker is absolutely necessary. Sister Daisy B. Evans is now doing this work for us, and her efforts are very much appreciated by the church. Bro. T. H. Forney, of Covina, Calif., has been secured as pastor for this congregation, his services to begin at once. We have paid our apportionment for La Verne College, which was $580. We are now encouraging.—Sister Dewey Bailiff, Nobleville, Ind., March 31.

North Liberty church met in council March 8, with Bro. Hildebrand presiding. Bro. Howard Dickey was elected delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. Hildebrand alternate. The date for our communion service has been appointed for Oct. 5. It was decided that our revival meeting begin June 15, with Bro. Ralph Rarick, of South Bend, Ind., evangelist, and the undersigned assisting in the song service.—Mrs. Iva Burke Sponseller, North Liberty, Ind., April 1.

Peru church just closed a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. I. T. Holsinger, of Brethren, Mich. The meetings began March 2. On account of so much sickness, the attendance was not so large, but a very good interest was manifested throughout the meetings. One accepted Christ. We feel that the members have been greatly encouraged and strengthened by the earnest efforts of Bro. Holsinger. —Mabel Neff, Peru, Ind., March 31.

Pine Creek church met in council March 22, at the West house, with Eld. J. F. Appleman presiding. We had a splendid, spiritual meeting, with a good representation. Two letters were granted. Our delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren J. O. Keuler and John Stump, with Brethren Wm. Sommers and Delbert Mangus, alternates. We decided to have a series of meetings some time in May or June. Our Harvest Meeting was appointed for August 24. We have organized two Mission Study Classes, to meet every Saturday evening at the East house. March 16, in the morning, Eld. Daniel Wysong preached at the West house, and in the evening at the East house.—M. S. Morris, North Liberty, Ind., March 26.

Rock Run congregation met in council March 29, with Bro. I. L. Berkey presiding. The date of our love feast is May 17, 7:30 P. M. March 30 was our missionary day. We had a program of special songs, readings and talks by Brethren I. L. Berkey, Fred Ulrey and Melvin Swarts. Our offering amounted to $38.53.—Mrs. Clarence R. Cripe, Goshen, Ind., March 31.

Solomon's Creek church met in council March 25, with Eld. Amsey E. Clem presiding. Seven letters were received and four were granted. Bro. Hugh Warstler was elected Christian Workers' president. Bro. Clarence Swihart, our pastor, who has just moved here from West Goshen, was chosen delegate to Annual Conference, with Brethren Wesley Weybright and Hugh Warstler, alternates. Sister Ida Fields, who is attending school at Manchester College, expects to be with us on Easter evening to give a reading, "The Prince of the House of David." We are very thankful that we have not had to close our church more than a few Sundays, on account of influenza. Our church attendance is increasing and we are hoping for better things in the near future. We would be glad to help in finding a place here for any one desiring a change of location.—Cecil M. Whitehead, Syracuse, Ind., April 1.

IOWA

Coon River.—Our church services were discontinued for two weeks on account of a second outbreak of the influenza epidemic. March 30 Bro. W. H. Caslow, of Grand Rapids, Mich., gave us a splendid sermon. We all enjoyed having Bro. Caslow with us as he was a member of this church when a boy. Coon River has many who have gone out into other places, who are heralds of the Gospel, and

ILLINOIS

Allison Prairie church met in council March 29, with Eld. N. H. Miller in charge. Bro. E. C. Elder was elected church trustee. Bro. N. H. Miller was chosen delegate to attend the Annual Meeting, with Sister Miller, alternate. We decided to hold our love feast April 19, at 7 P. M.—Ernest Virgo, Lawrenceville, Ill., March 31.

Panther Creek church will hold her love feast May 10, at 6 P. M. Eld. J. H. Neher is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Sister Neher is the Sunday-school superintendent.—J. W. Switzer, Roanoke, Ill., April 2.

INDIANA

Andrews church met in council March 29, with Bro. Ira E. Long presiding. Two letters were granted. Bro. Long was chosen delegate to Annual Conference. We are feeling keenly the effects of the influenza epidemic. We lost several of our most efficient workers. We are planning a special service in behalf of the Armenian-Syrian Relief, for April 6, at which time we will take an offering and pledges for that fund. Our Sunday-school is supporting a French orphan this year. April 13 we expect to begin at least one week's series of meetings, to be conducted by our pastor. Our love feast is to be held April 19, at 7: 30 P. M.—Mrs. Jennie M. Eckman, Andrews, Ind., April 1.

Auburn church is enjoying a series of meetings which began March 24, with Eld. David Metzler, of Nappanee, evangelist. He is a strong speaker and we are fortunate to have him with us. March 22 Brethren E. H. Urey, Walter Swihart and Jesse Gump were also present. We had a very impressive service, when Bro. C. C. Cripe, our pastor, was ordained to the full ministry. Any who may desire to change locations will find Auburn a clean little city, in which new industries are opening up. We would welcome any faithful young brethren and sisters who may desire to help in this great work.—Mrs. M. A. Hamson, Auburn, Ind., March 28.

Bethany.—We met March 12 to elect a minister. A number of visiting ministers were present. Brethren I. L. Berkey and Manly Deeter gave the principal talks. Bro. Noble Neff, of Milford, Ind., was chosen. He was installed on Sunday evening, Bro. Hiram Forney officiating.—Mrs. Bertha B. Weybright, Syracuse, Ind., March 28.

Blue River church met in council March 29, with Eld. Walter Swihart presiding. Eld. Jesse Bump, of Pleasant Hill congregation, was with us. Three letters were granted. Bro. Clarence Bowers was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Everet Chapman, alternate. The church called Brethren Monroe Miller and Everet Chapman to the deacon's office. The installation service will be held some time during our meetings, which begin May 18, conducted by Bro. Geo. Mishler. Our love feast was set for May 31. We voted to meet on Friday evening of each week for prayer and simplicity. Our offering for the India Famine Fund amounted to $56.80. The writer was elected church correspondent to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Sister Neva Hire.—Laura Frick, Churubusco, Ind., April 1.

Flora church met in council March 27, with our elder presiding. Bro. C. A. Workman was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Sister Elizabeth Beery, alternate. We decided to have our communion services April 27, commencing at 6 P. M.—Mattie Welty, Flora, Ind., March 30.

Loon Creek.—Owing to the fact that our township high school commencement will be held April 19,—the time set for our love feast,—we have changed the date to May 24. Our series of meetings, however, will begin Sunday, April 6, with Bro. D. Hirt in charge. We now have six organized classes in the Sunday-school. We also have prayer meeting every Thursday evening. Our work is growing in interest and attendance.—Mae Hoover, Huntington, Ind., April 2.

Middletown.—March 23 Bro. Root preached for us in the morning and Bro. Spitzer in the evening. Bro. Jos. Spitzer will hold a two weeks' series of meetings, preceding our love feast, which is appointed for May 17. We are busy arranging for the remodeling of our church. Sister Burk and the writer have been appointed to canvass the town for funds, and Brethren Labayteaux and Geo. Ritchey the country. Any one in the District desiring to give toward the work, may send the money to the writer. We are few in number at this place and help would be appreciated.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., March 28.

Monticello church met in council March 22, with Eld. G. B. Heckman presiding. Two letters were received and five were granted. Eld. A. R. Bridge was elected delegate to Annual Conference. Our love feast was appointed for May 10, beginning at 7: 45 P. M. March 30, Bro. Floyd Irvin, Sisters Ruth Forney and Ruth Blocker, representing the Volunteer Mission Band of Bethany, gave us a very interesting and spiritual program. An offering of $9 was lifted for the Mission Band.—Orpha Bridge, Monticello, Ind., April 1.

Nobleville church met in council March 29, with Eld. Moses Sanger as moderator. A committee to secure the services of an evangelist has been appointed, and is now making arrangements for a fall series of meetings. Our Sunday-school is growing, and the number of children and young people becoming interested is encouraging.—Sister Dewey Bailiff, Nobleville, Ind., March 31.

North Liberty church met in council March 8, with Bro. Hildebrand presiding. Bro. Howard Dickey was elected delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. Hildebrand alternate. The date for our communion service has been appointed for Oct. 5. It was decided that our revival meeting begin June 15, with Bro. Ralph Rarick, of South Bend, Ind., evangelist, and the undersigned assisting in the song service.—Mrs. Iva Burke Sponseller, North Liberty, Ind., April 1.

THE ROUND TABLE

Her Trust

BY JULIA GRAYDON

While away on a visit, recently, I heard a minister tell the following story to his congregation, while preaching on our lack of faith in time of anxiety and trouble. He said: "There was an old colored woman who had a good, kind mistress, but one who did not have much religion. One day she said to the old colored servant: 'Nancy, suppose you get very sick, and suppose your husband should die, and suppose I was not living to help you, what would you do?'

"The old woman looked at her mistress, and said: 'I don't suppose. The Lord is my Shepherd.'"

Save a Life

BY J. E. YOUNG

Recently a man said to me: "I spent $13,000, doctoring, trying to save my wife from leaving me,—from going the way of all the earth, and I would have spent more if I had had it. Then I had to let her die."

In the world today millions have died for the want of bread. Millions more will die, if some kind heart does not furnish it to them. Two dollars a month will save a life in India. Five dollars a month will save a life in Armenia. Call your family together and ask each boy and girl: "Would you rather I would save $24, or $60, for you when I am done with it, or would you rather have me invest it now,—right now,—in a human life,—not a pig, or a calf, or a lamb, but a human life, so that life may bridge over a dark chasm for one year, and then go on rejoicing?"

That is not all. Why not have that rescued one, over in the great eternity, step up to you, and say: "You saved my life by sending $60. Oh! it is so beautiful to think about! Here we shall be in eternity together, where there shall be no more famine, nor desert thirst, nor murderous Turk! Oh! how kind you have been to me, like Joseph to the needy in Egypt."

All you, who have no children, but have the money, why not save a dozen boys and girls? Thus you may lay up treasure in heaven. Don't fear that the record will not be kept all right. Just make one worth keeping!

On the Threshold

BY W. J. HAMILTON

The past is gone forever, but through the window of memory we may look backward and behold the finished work of successful efforts, the crumbling ruins of many failures, and the graveyard of neglected opportunities. The present is but a fleeting moment. On silent wings it goes to join the ever-increasing past. Thus we are always on the threshold of the great future, with its cherished plans, rosy dreams, and golden opportunities.

But today, perhaps, we are standing on the threshold of the greatest future mankind has ever been privileged to enter. The events of the great war, at the close of a world epoch, have gone to join the centuries of silence.

As we look backward at the warp and woof of life, we see a checkered pattern. The shuttle of time has mingled our mistakes and shortcomings, along with our honest efforts and good intentions. We may weep over the motley array, but can not alter what has already passed through the loom of life.

But today we are standing on the threshold of a new experience, and we are anxious to have you help in choosing the materials, the colors, and the pattern. Today we stand upon the threshold of a new era of peace, with its hopes and fears and longings. When this new era has passed into history, the way we have used its cycle of days, will determine whether its pages of memory will be blotted with tears, heartaches, and disappointments, or glow with joy, happiness and contentment.

A mighty wave of unrest is now sweeping over the world, causing humanity to desire to turn away from the old regime, and to look toward the future for better things, and herein lies the crucial opportunity for every child of God.

Like Joseph, the Egyptian prisoner, Moses, the shepherd in Horeb, Daniel, the captive in Babylon, Elijah, the driver of oxen, Gideon on the threshing-floor, Peter, the fisherman, Matthew, the tax collector, and Saul, the Pharisee,—every child of God, in every walk of life, today is being called upon to come forth, in the strength of the Lord of hosts, to lead this restless, dissatisfied, hungry generation of mankind, away from the paths of sin, out into the golden light of God's eternal love, that they may walk in the highway of his great salvation, and find rest unto their souls.

If we fail to heed the call, and do not grasp this greatest of all opportunities, what shall the harvest be? And what can we answer to God, if the world is plunged into ruin, through our neglect? Truly, this is a day of glad tidings, and we do not well if we hold our peace.

May a Kind Heavenly Father overrule all things! May a Loving Savior fellowship with us! May the Holy Spirit direct us! Then we can all pass over the threshold into this new field of unparalleled opportunity, and win the world for Jesus.

For Me

BY G. W. TUTTLE

When we get away from the impersonal view, when we bring it home to ourselves: "For my sins! For me!" then the light of heaven falls on the dark shadows of the cross.

O, 'twas love, 'twas wondrous love,
The love of God for me;
It brought my Savior from above,
To die on Calvary.

Christ was the supreme expression of God's love for me. "He might have saved the world in some other way," some voices say. Ah, no, he could not, he could not, else Jesus had not died. We were so deep-dyed in sin that naught else could cleanse us and fit us for heaven.

None, none but Jesus could remove
The deep-dyed stains of sin;
None, none but Jesus and his love,
Could give such peace within.

To get it home, to make it personal, to awaken response,—love for love,—to make it certain, positive, is the mission of the church. Here is the Gift of gifts, here is the Sacrifice of the ages. What are our petty sacrifices, our little giving, our small meed of service? Shall we whine, and talk of sacrifice? Nay, we will reveal the wonder and the richness of his love for us, —for me! The devout soul will not cease to wonder, through all the ages of eternity, at the richness and fullness of the love of Christ.

Heaven poured its brimming chalice on the earth
When Jesus came by humble door of birth;
Tired, weary, footsore; still naught he counted loss,
But set his face toward Calvary and the cross.
Pain, sorrow, suffering; all endured for me,
That I from power of sin be ever free.

The treasury of heaven was exhausted, all its riches were poured out on earth, when Jesus came. "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins."

Some Reflections on Faith

BY LEO LILLIAN WISE

She was a little frail body,—her mind not much advanced beyond that of a child. Yet unconsciously she taught a big lesson of faith. All her life, storms had frightened her so, and, should a storm come up at night, she would leave her bed and sit in the dining-room, watching flash after flash of lightning until she could scarcely speak. Then it was noticed that she did not get up any more when the storms came. Her sister said to her: "You are not so afraid of the storms as you used to be, are you?" Back came the confident reply: "No, for I ask Jesus to take care of me, and he always does."

Many a one, who has all the finer intellect fully developed, lacks this one great wonderful principle,—faith. How often do we betray our lack of faith? We pray, and almost before we are up from our knees we are worrying lest, what we have asked for, will fail. In my own experience, I had it brought to me vividly thus: Once, while out in an automobile, danger threatened. I was frightened. I uttered silently a short prayer for protection, that the driver might continue to keep a steady mind and that we might be brought through safely. Then I noticed I was sitting with clinched hands. I thought: "Why, that's not right. I've asked God to help us. Why sit like this?" It was hard to relax, yet if I was to have faith in God, I must do that. The crisis passed, and all were safe. But it has occurred to me, time and again, that, in the face of impending disaster or sorrow, we clinch our spirits even while we ask God's care.

Do you not, many times, almost envy the child for its simple faith and trust in God? A tiny girl was overheard saying to her sister: "You just tell Jesus about it. He'll help you to keep your word."

Sometimes it seems that, to the simple folk and to children, God has given a clearer insight to his wonderful goodness and love; and yet, to those who will place themselves in right relations with him, these gifts of understanding are given also.

And the faith a persecuted one will show! It makes you and me wonder how such a one can be so calm, so true to the Christ, whom, many would fain say, he is not following closely. Truly, faith makes one strong enough to endure, though untruths may be uttered against his profession, hurts be cast and disrespect offered. Faith will make such a one feel that no matter what befalls, God will take care of him, even to the end.

Faith will take care of grief itself. Even though there is that intense feeling of loneliness, yet faith brings the response that God knows best. Faith, in such a case, gives a look of assurance that is not always easily understood by others, and sometimes is misinterpreted to mean unconcern. But not so,—the grief is hidden deep, and the sunshine of God's love shines out in beauteous glory.

Here and there we see faith in beautiful forms. Sometimes it is so near to pathos that it brings the quick tear, yet the heart says: "Praise God for such living faith!"

INDIA GIRLS' BOARDING SCHOOL NOTES

Vyara

There are forty-odd girls in the school at present. The great majority of them are in the lower standard. Seven of them are in the third standard and we hope that most of them will pass to fourth in February. There are four teachers in this school.

All the girls that have been here any length of time, and are old enough, have been baptized. About ten from the Boarding School were baptized at Christmas. The girls took part in the Christmas program and did so well that they were commended by the gentlemen from town who were here.

The girls do all their own sewing of jackets and skirts. They have a garden this year for the first time. It is irrigated from the well, and all the help the men give is to run the kos. (This is a large leather bag, holding about twenty-five gallons, drawn from the well by bullocks yoked to a pulley rope.—A. T. H.) They also pick cotton, plant our rice, do weeding, etc., in our fields.

For committing to memory four portions of Scripture, we offered prizes to the girls, of New Testaments. Nine girls were ready for them by Christmas. Our girls sing well and get up in a large crowd at Gayan Sabha (singing meeting) and lead the music, while the others follow.—Effie V. Long.

Bulsar

Our Girls' School was closed a month during the influenza epidemic. The girls were quarantined, and did not get the disease. None of our girls, who are attending the training-schools of other missions, had the influenza.

At Christmas time there were ten days' vacation. A Christmas program was rendered in the church on Christmas morning. The church was neatly decorated. A special program of games was rendered on New Year's Day, followed by a treat of sweets. There were four hundred present, including the Eby family and Miss Shumaker, just back from America. "Training Department" girls from Godhra and Surat were home for the December vacation.

On Decision Day, Dec. 22, four girls were baptized. At the beginning of this year there were forty-two in the Bulsar Girls' Boarding School.—Eliza B. Miller.

Anklesvar

Owing to food scarcity and influenza the Anklesvar Girls' Boarding School had increased from twenty-five to forty-two by the close of 1918. These all must sleep in two rooms and on the veranda. In the rainy season the veranda can not be used as a place for sleeping. The present room and cooking facilities will not accommodate more than the above number. No effort is made to increase the enrollment, and so far it has not been necessary, for lack of room, to turn any away who were seeking admittance.

At present only four grades are taught here. Three teachers are employed. As six standards are taught at Bulsar, they go there after finishing here. There is no Girls' Boarding School at Vali for Rajpipla State, hence their girls are usually sent here. There are several, however, at Bulsar. Those who are to be given training for teachers or nurses, after finishing at Bulsar, are sent to other missions as we do not have schools to give this training. At present there are six receiving such schooling through our Training Department funds. Two girls who passed the fourth standard at Anklesvar in December are now at Bulsar, taking fifth standard work.

Besides the regular studies, the girls are taught sewing in school. Under the supervision of their matron they do their own cooking. Some have sufficient clothing, but to others it must be furnished. They do their own washing and the older ones do their own sewing. Since cleanliness is always insisted upon, they get a training quite different from their less fortunate sisters who never get to school. During the last vacation season a girl went to visit her home in the village, having been in the Boarding School for months. The neighbors remarked that she had changed so much they hardly knew her. Yes, it does make a difference, a wonderful difference, in the lives of these raw Bhil children,—dirty and nearly naked or clothed in rags,—to be in the Boarding School for a few years! Fourteen of the girls are from heathen homes, the others from Christian homes. With Sister Widdowson in charge of the girls, they get much better attention than they do at home, even though their parents may be Christians.

As soon as building accommodations can be secured, the Bulsar girls will be moved to Anklesvar. Efforts to secure a field joining the compound, which belongs to a Mohammedan, have not yet been successful. This field is needed to provide building space for a large girls' institution. To provide temporary arrangements, the Anklesvar Boarding School Boys will be sent to Vali, and thus make room for the Bulsar girls. It will be two weeks before building accommodations can be completed at Vali, and in the meantime every effort is being exerted to buy the desired land, so that building operations here can begin at once.

In the Girls' Boarding School, at Ahwa, there were five at the close of 1918. Two entered and one left during the year. Bro. Blough writes: "There are many orphans in the Dangs, but the relatives will not let us have them thus far. Food conditions are getting more and more severe. Even Christian girls are hard to secure for Boarding School training. They have to work at home."

The Boarding School proposition among the girls at our Marathi stations is still in its infancy. At Vada there are eight girls, mostly orphans, in the Boarding School. Those in the Ahwa Boarding School are mostly orphans. Concerning the situation at Dahanu we have this statement from Bro. Pittenger: "We have a number of applications from parents and friends to take girls, some of whom are orphans. We have decided to take them in. We shall put up a manva (hut) to accommodate them for the present and shall do our best to erect a permanent building, which will give them quarters during the monsoon. This is a fine opportunity to open the work, and if we miss it, we always shall stand condemned before the Lord and in our judgment, too."

Statistics show that the Girls' Boarding Schools have increased from a total enrollment of eighty-nine, at the close of 1917, to one hundred and forty one year later. Besides that, we have the prospects for a Girls' Boarding School at Dahanu, as mentioned above. At Jalalpor, also, there is demand for a Girls' Boarding School. This growth, this awakening, is indeed encouraging, but remember, there are tens of thousands of other girls in our field who are growing to womanhod without this training!

MISSIONARY MEETING OF NORTHWESTERN OHIO

The Missionary Meeting of the above named District was held in the Pleasant View church, near Lima, Ohio, March 19. The first session was called at 10 o'clock. After devotional exercises, conducted by Bro. S. G. Greyer, of Toledo, Eld. Otho Winger, of North Manchester, delivered a strong, practical and instructive missionary sermon to a very appreciative audience. The large audience room of the church was well filled, nearly every congregation being represented. We were very pleasantly and profitably entertained in the basement of the church by the Pleasant View congregation, after which we again assembled for the afternoon program.

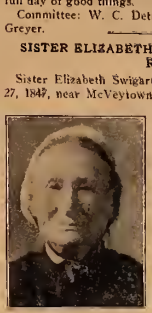
The District Mission Board first gave their report. Then Bro. E. E. Eshelman, of Fostoria, very ably presented the Five-Year-Forward Movement, setting forth the possibility of reaching the goal as set by the General Board. Bro. J. J. Anglemyer, of Williamstown, then followed, speaking on the subject of "Duties as Ministers, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Officers." Bro. Wm. J. Tinkle, of Bellefontaine, gave us some splendid thoughts on Relief and Reconstruction, portraying the sufferings and privations of the Armenians and others of the Far East. The address was well received and made a deep impression.

During the afternoon session an offering, amounting to a little over $200, was taken for missions. The evening session began with a meeting of the Sisters' Aid Society, conducted by Sister Blanche Byerly. This was followed by an Educational Round Table, in charge of Sister Lula Tinkle. Eld. G. A. Snider delivered a very strong discourse on "Christian Education," thus rounding out a very full day of good things.

Committee: W. C. Detrick, G. D. Armentrout, S. G. Greyer.

SISTER ELIZABETH RUPERT SWIGART "AT REST"

Sister Elizabeth Swigart, nee Rupert, was born March 27, 1847, near McVeytown, Mifflin County, Pa. She died Feb. 24, 1919. The days of her years were seventy-one years, ten months and twenty-seven days.



Sister Elizabeth Rupert Swigart

She leaves a husband, Eld. S. J. Swigart, Lewistown, Pa., and five children,—one son, C. H. Swigart, Lewistown, Pa., and four daughters, Mary J. Kearns, Lewistown, Pa., Rhoda McCarty, of Arizona, Carrie Fraizer, also of Arizona, and Esther Rothrock, of Lewistown, Pa. Four children preceded her to the spirit world, one of whom is well known to all the Brotherhood, Bro. J. W. Swigart. "Will," as he was called, was one of the party of nine missionaries under appointment by the 1904 Annual Conference for the India mission field, but about one month before sailing he took his departure for his home and reward above. Though he was called home so soon, yet, as time has shown, he lived a lifetime, and achieved works that endure. "The J. W. Swigart Memorial Fund" was set on foot because of that noble and consecrated life. The subject of this sketch is the mother of that illustrious son, and now "she is with Will,"—to use Sister Esther's expression, when Mother breathed her last.

Sister Swigart was a daughter of John Rupert, of McVeytown, Pa. She married Eld. S. J. Swigart Oct. 19, 1865, and the Lord blessed them with fifty-three years of married life. They celebrated their golden wedding three years ago. Her labors, as the faithful wife of a minister, were spent in the Spring Run, Dry Valley, and Lewistown congregations, which were formerly all one congregation. Had she lived until May 25 of this year, she would have been a minister's wife for fifty years. Eld. Swigart was called to the ministry May 25, 1869. She knew something of the sacrifices that belong to a minister's wife under the conditions of half a century ago, and it was with interest that we heard her refer to those times.

Sister Swigart was born again at about the age of sixteen, and for fifty-five years has lived a consistent Christian life. She was a godly mother, and greatly devoted to her Bible and church in the way of worship, and a woman full of good works in the way of practical Christianity. She died on Monday. On the Sunday previous she attended church as usual. She also attended the Sisters' Aid Society the previous week.

She was always a regular attendant at the Sunday services when well. She always took an active part in the Sunday-school lessons, and was an attentive listener to the sermon. She imparted a benediction, as she mingled and shook hands at the close of the services.

As we learned to know her, being her pastor for over three years, she was a companionable woman, cheerful and lovable. She was kind and very sympathetic. Her face, which is an index to the soul, was always radiant.

She was a good neighbor and in her death the community sustains a great loss.

She died very suddenly, about 10 A. M. During the night there were signs of illness. She and her husband were seated in the kitchen, and while his back was turned she gently breathed her last.

The funeral services were held in the Spring Run church, near McVeytown, and were in charge of the writer, assisted by Eld. H. A. Spanogle. The scriptures used were: "Weep with them that weep" (Rom. 12: 15), and "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Psa. 116: 15). The large concourse of people at the residence, and the great gathering that filled the spacious church, evidenced the esteem in which she was held. To the husband we would say: "Her departure is a loss, but to her to die was gain, and there is a blessed hope.—she shall live again and you shall meet her. May the dear Lord bless you. Amen." Wm. Kinsey.

MISSION BOARD OF MICHIGAN

The State Mission Board met in the city of Grand Rapids in tri-annual session. All the members were present. Much business in a general way, was discussed, —pastoral needs in some of the weaker churches, the plans of forward movements, etc. The Board desires to correspond with ministers who wish to change locations. While not much financial aid can be given, yet there are some splendid opportunities to develop spiritual as well as financial propositions.

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

Abiding in Christ and Christ in Us

John 15: 1-11

For Week Beginning April 20, 1919

1. Introductory.—Christ is in the believer because the believer is in Christ. The relation here is a vital and definite one. "I am the vine," says Christ, "and my Father is the Husbandman." "As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; so neither can ye, except ye abide in me." The branch enjoys the blessing of the vine because of its relationship to it. Destroy that relation and all direct intercourse is at once terminated. "Without me ye can do nothing."

2. The Union of the Vine and the Branches Is a Vital Relation.—It is vital because the life of the vine becomes the life of the branch. The life-current is inherent in the vine. It is the vine that supplies the branch with vitality, and not the branch that supplies the vine. Because of this union, the strength of the one becomes the strength of the other. If the branch becomes dead, it is because the life-current is wanting. It is because the strength of the vine has been cut off from it. There is, therefore, no way by which it can obtain life. Christ pointedly says: "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." It is union with Jesus or it is nothing. When the storm has broken the branch from the vine, there is no more fruitfulness for it. It is cast aside, and that is the end of it.

3. How Christ Abides in the Believer.—When we are in Christ, as the branch is in the vine, then we may truly say that Christ is in us. As the sap of the vine gives nutrition to the branch, so the believer, united to Christ, receives from him the likeness and character of the Master. He sees things as Christ sees them. He looks at things from his point of view. His relationship establishes his conduct. And if Christ is in us, then we are partakers of Christ's nature. The nature of Christ determines the nature of the one who is in Christ.

4. Christ Within Means Everything to Us.—It means service and it means life. It means the victories which the new and life-giving relation brings about, and far more. It creates a greater desire for humanity's uplift. It shows to the individual what no artificial relation can show,—the inherent value of a man. It can see the Christlikeness in men, and understands how they can be brought back to that condition. It places the regeneration of humanity on a loftier plane. It desires man's restoration,—not merely because he is a human being, but because he is a divine being, made in the image of God, and, when restored to God's likeness, becomes an heir of the immortal blessings at God's right hand. Meanwhile he is made more worthy of the life that God has given him on earth. It increases man's estimate of his own inherent value.

5. When Christ Is in Control.—"If Christ be in you," —says G. Campbell Morgan,—"living, reigning there absolutely, and you are obeying him, that fact will be evident. You can not hide Christ if once he comes within. If the light be there, it simply must shine. There is no such thing as long-continued secret discipleship."

6. Suggestive References.—Christ within (Eph. 3: 17-19). A confident looking forward to Christ's second coming (1 John 2: 28). A close union (1 Cor. 6: 17). The new life in Christ (Rom. 6: 3-7). Glorying in the cross of Christ (Gal. 6: 14). Quickened for service (Eph. 2: 4-8). Attaining unto a Christ-like life (Eph. 4: 15). Live in Christ the life of faith (Gal. 2: 20). Suffer in fellowship with Christ (Rom. 8: 16-18; Philpp. 3: 10). Suffering with Christ, exalts us forever (1 Tim. 2: 12).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 13

MEETINGS IN PROGRESS

Bro. W. D. Keller, of Canton, Ohio, in his home church, —Canton City.

Bro. B. D. Hirt, of Huntington, Ind., in the Loon Creek church, same State.

Brother and Sister Wm. J. Tinkle, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, in the Greenspring church, same State.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

Three were recently restored in the Bethel church, Va.

One was recently restored in the Vestaburg church, Mich.

Four have been baptized in the Winchester church, Idaho, since the last report.

Two confessed Christ at Indian Head, Pa.,—Bro. Walter Hamilton, of the same place, evangelist.

One accepted Christ in the Peru church, Ind.,—Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Brethren, Mich., evangelist.

Thirteen were added to the Brookville church, Ohio,—Bro. Van. B. Wright, of Peebles, same State, evangelist.

Three accepted Christ in the Olympia church, Wash., —Bro. Warren W. Slabaugh, of Wenatchee, same State, evangelist.

Thirteen were baptized and three reclaimed in the Piney Flats church, Tenn.,—Bro. Jesse D. Clark, of Jonesboro, same State, evangelist.

Fifteen accepted Christ in the White Oak congregation, at the Longenecker house, Pa.,—Bro. Geo. Weaver, of Manheim, same State, evangelist.

One accepted Christ at the Boiling Springs house, Lower Cumberland congregation, Pa.,—Bro. H. S. Gipe, of Hershey, same State, evangelist.

Two were reclaimed, two were baptized and more await the rite in the Rowland Creek church, Va.,—Brethren N. C. and J. A. Reed, of Eunice, N. C., evangelists.

Four more, making thirty-eight in all, confessed Christ, twenty-four of whom have been baptized in the Denver church, Colo.,—Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, evangelist.

One accepted Christ in the Annville church, Pa., and since the meetings closed three have asked for baptism,—Bro. Samuel G. Meyer, of Fredericksburg, same State, evangelist.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. Ira E. Long, of Andrews, Ind., to begin April 13 in his home church.

Bro. J. C. Forney, of McPherson, Kans., to begin Sept. 2 in the Bethany church, Mo.

Bro. D. H. Keller, of Chicago, to begin the latter part of August in the Rome church, Ohio.

Bro. Geo. Mishler, of South Whitley, Ind., to begin May 18 in the Blue River church, same State.

Bro. Henry F. Crist, of Colorado Springs, Colo., to begin April 28 in the Antioch church, same State.

Bro. P. J. Blough, of Johnstown, Pa., to begin the first of May in the Viewmont church, same State.

Bro. Jos. Spitzer, of Summitville, Ind., to begin the first of May in the Middletown church, same State.

Bro. L. H. Root, of Mt. Morris, Ill., to begin April 13 in the Bethel congregation, Naperville, same State.

Bro. D. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., to begin April 26 at the Shank house, Back Creek congregation, same State.

Bro. S. D. Zigler, of Harrisonburg, Va., to begin May 10 at the Valley Pike church, Woodstock congregation, same State.

Bro. Wm. Harpine, of Mt. Jackson, Va., to begin May 10 at the Columbia Furnace church, Woodstock congregation, same State.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. David Hamm, of Rocky Ford, Colo., changes his address to La Junta, same State.

Bro. F. R. Smith, whose former address was Gove, Kans., is now located at R. D. 3, Waverly, same State.

Bro. C. L. Wilkins has been chosen as pastor of the Grand Rapids Mission. His address is 1914 Gardner Ave.

Bro. P. H. Beery, of Covington, Ohio, has accepted the pastorate of the South Los Angeles church, Calif., and enters upon his duties at once.

Inadvertently, in announcing Bro. E. F. Sherfy's change of address, we located him as pastor at Morrill, Kans. It should have been Monitor, same State.

Bro. J. R. Smith, of Junlata, Nebr., is in position to give a limited portion of his time to evangelistic work. Any church desiring his services will please confer with him as early as practicable.

Bro. J. L. Guthrie is the Standing Committee representative of Northwestern Ohio for 1919,—the District Clerk informs us,—with Bro. David Byerly as alternate. We regret the incorrect statement made in our issue of two weeks ago.

Bro. I. H. Crist, who has been in pastoral charge of the McLouth church, Kans., for the last two years, expects to move to Middlebury, Fla., the latter part of April. He does not expect to assume pastoral duties in his new home, unless there should be an opening, somewhere in the Southland, as pastor or missionary.

Bro. S. H. Garst, Blountville, Tenn., responding to the urgent appeals of many members of his State District, and also the call of the District Mission Board, has decided to enter the evangelistic field. Churches that may desire his services along the line indicated will please communicate with him as early as possible.

Relief and Reconstruction

Now for that $250,000.

Perhaps you think it is not needed. Read these recent cablegrams to the American Committee, which we find in this morning's mail (Monday, April 7):

"Famine in Syria has increased in strength. The bodies of friendless poor, who die in the streets, are too many for authorities to bury."

"Widespread famine throughout Armenia. Refugees slowly starving on animal corpses, slaughter-house blood, chaff. Cholera expected this summer. Drugs; food, positively must be imported."

"Conditions in this country (Caucasus) are frightful. People starving, dying by thousands, and down to using dead bodies for food. Lack of cash now means catastrophe and loss of great work already done."

"Thousands of homeless children are wandering through the country, seeking shelter and a bite to eat. Many of them, having lost both parents, do not know their own names."

This one is from Herbert C. Hoover: "Food, clothing, medicine, hospital attendants, agricultural implements, seed and our help in local food transportation are desperately needed."

And so we might go on and fill this page.

All printed matter, pertaining to the campaign, has now been sent out. This has been mailed direct to the local congregations. Requests from regional secretaries differed on this point, but to avoid confusion and for the sake of uniformity, the literature was sent to the local managers rather than to regional secretaries.

Since writing the above, we have received this telegram from Bro. Edgar Rothrock, Holmesville, Nebr.: "South Beatrice church more than raised quota today for Armenian Relief. Quota asked was $4 per member, or $800. Pledges and cash today, $775.86. Previously given, $200; total, $975.86."

Will the churches everywhere unite as one man in this great service to suffering humanity? We believe they will. These are the vital days of the campaign. We are counting on you. And God bless you.

The Committee.

Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, after an extended tour through the South and East in his Religious Education work, is enjoying the pleasure of a few days with his family at Elgin. He leaves for the field again on the twelfth,—the date of this issue. He informs us that his time for the remainder of 1919 is fully taken, with the exception of a few dates in September and October. Any District or churches, WEST OF THE MISSISSIPPI, desiring his services for the above dates, should make early application, addressing him at 21 Melrose Avenue, Elgin, Ill.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Members of Eastern Maryland will please pay special attention to Bro. Wm. E. Roop's announcement, as given among the Notes.

The program for the Sunday-school Convention of Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas will be found on page 236. The convention is to be held in the Fairview church, Mo., April 20.

MISCELLANEOUS

The District Meeting of Middle Maryland is to be held at Vanclevesville, W. Va., April 16 and 17. The first session convenes at 1 P. M. Elders' Meeting at 4 P. M.

The recently-organized western section of the Little Swatara church, Pa., will be known as the Fredericksburg congregation, instead of the name originally decided upon.

This is the time of all times to get close to the things that actually count in religion, and to let secondary and unimportant ones take their real place. With the claims of the "Forward Movement" and other vital issues loudly appealing to the loyalty of every member, let not one of us be found wanting in rendering the assistance that is clearly within his power. The day of opportunity is upon us. We cannot afford to spurn the call of the hour.

The love feast announced for April 20, in the Brookville church, Ohio, should have been designated as a home love feast,—not a public meeting,—so we are informed by the correspondent, Sister Arthur Hoy.

Did You Know It?—The Bible claims to be the Word of God in more than two thousand places: We are so told 501 times in the Pentateuch, 292 times in the Historical Books and Psalms, and 1,111 times in the Prophets,—besides what we find in the New Testament. We have either a verbally-inspired Bible, or no Bible at all.

The Antioch church, Colo., is greatly in need of a minister, being unprovided for at present. The opening at that point is said to be an unusually good one. Any one desiring further particulars, regarding this opportunity for real usefulness, may address any member of the committee: A. A. Heaston, W. H. Cooper, W. W. Heaston,—all of R. D. 2, Yoder, Colo.

Members of Southern Ohio will please note the following special notice, sent us by Bro. A. B. Miller, Secretary and Treasurer of the Home: "The Secretary of the Brethren's Home at Greenville, Ohio, will close his books May 1, 1919, to make his report for District Meeting. All the churches that have not as yet paid their apportionments, and others that are delinquent to the Brethren's Home, will please remit soon. All money not received until after the above-named date, will be reported delinquent. All remittances should be sent to A. B. Miller, Eldorado, Ohio."

Have you ever thought just what difference a few trees and shrubs might make in the appearance of your church premises? We take it for granted that none of our congregations allow their church grounds to be littered with rubbish, or grown up with weeds, though we do remember hearing of such conditions, now and then. But why not relieve the painfully apparent barrenness, so often noticeable, by the tasteful grouping of shrubbery and a few trees? The expense is trifling, but the community is sure to be favorably impressed by the church premises thus made attractive.

A recent issue of the "Huntingdon Globe" describes at some length a special service of the Huntingdon congregation, Pa., in which the leading features were the presentation and acceptance of a Christian Service Flag in behalf of those who have gone to the foreign mission field from Juniata College. Besides the large cross on the flag, symbolical of Christ, the missionaries were represented by twenty-two small crosses. Two of these were golden in color, in memory of Sister Mary N. Quinter and Bro. S. N. McCann, the two workers on the foreign field who have already gone to their reward.

The church forfeits its spiritual assets when it turns its back on its world task. Refusing to be a missionary church, it divorces itself from all the conditions of vigor and health. Many a church has been not only toned up and rejuvenated, but literally raised from the dead, by a baptism of missionary fervor. There is nothing better, for the church at home, than to get her members profoundly enlisted in the work abroad. A church is bound to drop its narrow views when it becomes really cosmopolitan. It is likely to forget its own petty aches when it becomes a tender nurse, ministering to the wounds and woes of a sinsick world.

In the matter of individual giving, the most striking instances of sacrifice come from the newly-converted heathen, who,—like the saints of old,—give out of their deep poverty. Eighty per cent of the work of the Korean churches is already self-supporting. Hundreds of Korean leaders and lay preachers serve without remuneration. In a number of cases Korean men have been known to mortgage their own homes that mortgages might be removed from God's house. Many have cheerfully sold their crops of good millet, on which they had thought to live during last winter, and have given the difference in price to the support of workers among their own countrymen. Thousands of them, last year, gave from one week to one month, each, to the work of proclaiming the Gospel to neighboring and distant communities.

Promoting a Spirit of Sociability.—Recently we were told of a city church in California that, like many other congregations, similarly situated, deplored an increasing lack of sociability. All agreed that something must be done, but how? Finally the minister suggested a very simple plan which, when put in practice, solved the problem most admirably. He divided the city into four districts. On a certain designated day, the members residing in one of the districts remain at home, and it becomes the duty and privilege of members residing in the other three districts to call upon them socially, thus promoting a spirit of congeniality and real friendliness. On the next occasion another district is at home to the other three, and so on. A constantly-increasing spirit of amiability and coöperation is thus being developed. And the greatest value of the plan is that it works not only automatically, but promotes the very thing aimed at. It is worth trying in other cities.

AROUND THE WORLD

For French Refugees

American school-boys are about to execute one of the biggest furniture orders ever placed,—30,000 chairs and 10,000 tables. These are to be manufactured in school and community manual training shops throughout the United States. Members of the Junior Red Cross will present these goods, through the American Red Cross, to the refugees of Northern France, who are now pouring back to their devastated homes. About 15,000 families in the war-stricken area will be made happy by receiving one or more pieces of the furniture thus provided. With each chair and table will go a message of greeting from the Junior Red Cross, containing an addressed card that will enable the recipients to acknowledge the gift.

New York's "Bread Line"

For the first time in several years the "Bread Line" has again been started in New York,—hundreds thus finding their only means of subsistence. About ten per cent of those to whom a meager dole is thus supplied, are discharged soldiers, who, owing to scarcity of work, are compelled to join the ranks of the "down-and-out." Hundreds of skilled mechanics are also found in the motley throng. It is estimated that at least 100,000 people in New York's East Side are now unemployed. That fact is ominous, and might well be pondered by all who have been alarmed by the fatal spread of Bolshevism in Europe. The very men who from day to day are found in the "Bread Line" are likely to prove willing disciples of the delusive exponents of Bolshevism.

A Square Deal to All

On one occasion the late J. Pierpont Morgan went on record as affirming that he regarded his "own confidence in a man as the best possible security in any financial transaction." Just that sort of spirit is the one thing preeminently needed today, when strikes, in all parts of the world, threaten the very foundation of all industrial enterprises. Employers and workers have too long been in the anomalous relation of crafty horse-traders,—each seeking an advantage, each doubting the other, and each feeling that a display of real honesty will be rewarded by trickery of some sort. "Deal justly," was the sage advice of a prophet of old, and a strict compliance with that precept, by employer as well as employé, would practically settle the most complicated labor problem of today.

A World Labor Bureau

It is now authoritatively announced that one of the many admirable features of the League of Nations will be the establishment of a World Labor Bureau. By the provisions of this comprehensive measure it is planned to regulate labor, prices, hours of toil, etc., for men, women and children all over the world. Without question, this is the biggest problem ever presented for adequate solution, and well worthy of considerate thought. Values have been affixed on gold, silver and precious stones, and during war times it has been thought expedient to regulate the prices of the most essential necessaries of life. Meanwhile the value of a human being and his highest welfare have been left largely to chance. Why should not intelligent thought be given to the most efficient development of man?

Distressing Conditions in Korea

It is urged by those in close touch with the situation of affairs in Korea, that the undue severity of Japan is chiefly to blame for the unfortunate condition now existing in that country. The request for self-determination, by the people of Korea, was not without considerable justification, according to the provisions of the League of Nations, and should have been duly considered. As matters stand now, 32,000 persons, at least, have been imprisoned, and more than 100,000 have been injured, including wholly innocent children and young women. Christian churches and mission schools have been closed, which, naturally, involves the suspension of all missionary endeavors for the time being. Native Christians, however, show faithful adherence to their sacred principles, and refrain from all acts of violence.

The Thrifty Gleaners

It remained for four active girls in Saskatchewan, Canada, to demonstrate to the farmers of the great Canadian wheat country that they have been wasting untold treasures, and that, too, for years. Gleaning has never been customary in Canada. The farmers, who sometimes clear enough on one wheat crop to pay for their farms, have been content with the twenty to thirty bushels to the acre, obtained by harvesting machinery. From stubble fields abandoned by their owners, the four girls, alluded to above, gleaned enough wheat, by means of rakes, to sell for $646.50. Two girls, living at Stony Beach, asked a farmer for the privilege of going over his stubble field with rakes. He readily granted his permission, assuring them that they could have all they gleaned. The farmer was surprised, however, when, at the end of four days, he saw a big wheat stack standing in his stubble field. He was still more surprised later on, to learn that the wheat thus gleaned sold for $315. "Who hath despised the day of small things?" Let him learn the lesson of the Canada gleaners, and also remember the words of the Master: "Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost."

Combating the Dance Evil

In full recognition of the evils attending present-day dancing, a corporation has been formed in Los Angeles, Calif., to present to the people a photo-play of T. A. Faulkner's two books,—"From the Ballroom to Hell," and "The Lure of the Dance." Concerning the great need of an exhibition of this sort, the manager says: "Why have we made the questions of strong drink, tobacco, etc., the subject of arduous labors, and allow the dance to continue? By what law of justice does society surround our youths with passion-arousing amusements in its select affairs, which drive them to the paths of disease and degeneracy?" If it is true that eighty-five per cent of the fallen girls are led to their ruin through the snares of the dance, the public should, undoubtedly, be aroused by every means possible.

The Sunday-School Recognized

At a meeting of educators, Theodore Frelinghuysen,—at one time United States Senator from New York, and later Chancellor of the University of New York,—offered the following resolution: "Resolved, That the Sunday-schools, by laying the foundation of public and private integrity and intelligence, provide the best preservation of our rights and liberties, and the best guarantee for the peace and good order of society; and that in this way they deserve the special patronage of every statesman, patriot, and citizen in general." These are words wisely spoken,—sentiments which, we trust, may inspire each church worker to redoubled diligence in the activities of the Sunday-school. Surely, that work deserves the coöperation of every member. With the Sunday-school at its best, we may truly say of Zion: "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces."

Value of House-to-House Effort

Those who may wonder how the Mormon Church ever succeeded in establishing 335 regular preaching places, in various parts of the United States,—outside of their Utah stronghold,—can find a ready answer in their intensive system of propaganda. Chief of their various methods is their quiet, house-to-house effort, which, in many sections, has succeeded in building up strong congregations. Their signal success along that line suggests that a similar effort must be employed by those who desire to counteract the pernicious propaganda of the "Latter-day Saints." The Rev. J. D. Nutting, of the Utah Gospel Mission, has been doing important work, in neutralizing the teachings of Mormon emissaries, by making use of the very methods they employ. Through personal interviews and by means of the dissemination of anti-Mormon literature, the Utah Gospel Mission combats Mormonism in its own territory, and is making a most acceptable showing.

The Right Attitude

It is a most gratifying fact that most of the returning soldiers do not urge a continuation of the intense military program of the last few years, but rather urge a devotion of all that is best, to the gentler arts of peace. Here are the words of a prominent lieutenant, recently mustered out: "Presently we shall take off our khaki, but we shall not cease to be soldiers. We shall not be soldiers in the sense that you dread,—swaggerers, people banded against the civilian by the pride of military caste. You see, we never really wanted to be soldiers,—the thought filled us with terror. It was your need, the heroic fact that some one had to die in your defense that made us fighting men. Nevertheless, though we don civilian dress, we have not done with fighting yet. We are coming back to man the trenches of a kinder social order, and to follow the barrage across 'No Man's Land' in pursuit of a new heaven and a new earth. We shall be a brotherhood for righteousness."

No Easy Task

That there is going to be a League of Nations to enforce peace, and that the United States is to be a member of it, is now generally conceded among public men. The covenant, however, will be modified, by the allied council in Paris, to include some, if not all, of the amendments proposed by leading diplomats of our land. Senator Root has given these suggestions a form wholly acceptable to the American delegation at the Peace Conference. There is every indication that American rights and interests will be fully preserved. With the certainty of the creation of a League of Nations in the near future, keen interest is being aroused as to the part that the United States will play in the society of nations. Some are wondering just what effect the operations of the League will have upon vital interests of the American republic. It is generally admitted that the United States will be requested by the League to become the controlling factor in safeguarding the new republic of Armenia. Just how much would be involved by such a move, is not quite clear. President Wilson, however, during his recent visit to the United States, plainly indicated that the allied program calls for an American protectorate of Armenian affairs. The President's supporters rightfully contend that the United States can not justifiably refuse to do its part, whatever the cost, in the work of preserving world peace, and protecting and assisting the struggling nations, created by the breaking up of conquered realms. As protector of Armenia the United States would have a job of no mean proportions. The Armenians claim a territory extending about 1,000 miles from east to west, and about 400 miles from north to south, with access to the Mediterranean, the Black and the Caspian Seas. To protect the Armenians, living as they do, among Turks and Kurds, and to develop a Government that they can maintain, will require statesmanship of the highest order.

When the Nation Goes Dry

Have you ever tried to realize what it will mean when the nation goes dry? On that blessed day the blighting power of the liquor octopus will be broken, and one of the most subtle temptations of man will be removed. More than two billions of dollars, every year, will be directed into legitimate channels of commerce and industry. Business will boom, order and law will prevail, schools and churches will prosper as never before. It will be a happy time for the poor drunkard's wife and children. Instead of rags and patches, there will be good clothing and plenty of it. Instead of hunger and misery, there will be food in abundance, and happiness supreme. Even the liquor seller will be in a better environment when saloons close, for no longer will he be in a business condemned by all right-thinking people.

Tobacco Joins the Fight Against Prohibition

Many of us, perhaps, had always entertained a suspicion,—more or less well founded,—that there is a close affinity between tobacco and liquor. This is verified by a recent announcement of the president of the American Tobacco Company who, with certain New York bankers, has organized the "Association Opposed to National Prohibition." It is said to be the prime object of the new association to make the "Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution forever inoperative." Well, the tobacco folks have set themselves a big task, and we are wondering just how they are going to get away with it. Perhaps they feel under at least some obligations. In practically every saloon, tobacco has always been a prominent factor. The cigar has been passed across the counter with the beer or whiskey. But, if tobacco does even now cast its lot with the waning fortunes of liquor, how can it hope to benefit either itself or its ally?

"Russellites" Liberated

In our last issue we referred to the efforts that were being made to free several others of the "conscientious objectors," sentenced to long terms in the Federal penitentiaries. We now learn that Joseph F. Rutherford and six of his co-religionists, sentenced to twenty years in the Atlanta penitentiary, were recently released on bail, and may possibly be wholly at liberty by the time this item is read. At the time Mr. Rutherford was incarcerated,—not knowing how long he might be thus confined, he exclaimed: "This is the happiest day of my life. To serve earthly punishment for the sake of my religious belief is one of the greatest privileges a man can have." As a people, we may not endorse all that the followers of Russell advocate, in their peculiar religious tenets, but we may well honor them for their adherence to the teachings of Christ against war, and the more, because such avowal did not shun confinement in the gloomy prison cell.

Quakers to Work for Russia

It is a source of much gratification that another expedition to Russia is now being organized by the English and American Quakers. The work in that country will be under the direction of the American Friends' Service Committee of 20 South Twelfth Street, Philadelphia,—the organization which has already sent over 300 relief workers to France, and a few each to Russia, Serbia, Corsica, Holland, Armenia, Tunis, Syria, Italy and Belgium. The preliminary plan is, to send out a Commission of three or more American Friends with special qualifications "to spy out the land," and to discover just what assistance can be rendered to help Russian peasants to learn useful trades, and to carry on efficient production. The first Quaker expedition to Russia, in the fall of 1916, operated central stores: coöperative shops, orphanages, hospitals, dispensaries, and settlement houses. They distributed clothing and food, opened libraries and home classes, encouraged modern methods of agriculture, carpet-weaving and knitting. Work of the same kind, though more extensive, will be done by the new Unit that will follow the Commission to Russia as soon as the necessary plans can be made. The experience of the Friends in Russia during the war has shown them that they can help the people of that land in a direct and definite way, no matter what political party may happen to be in power. None of the Quakers have ever been molested by either of the revolutionary factions. Even the present Bolshevist Government recognizes the value of the work done by Quaker relief workers. Local Soviet leaders are even now rendering efficient assistance in every way possible. The Society of Friends has proved itself a mighty agency of uplift in a land of great destitution.

HOME AND FAMILY

A Spring Song

Selected by Mary A. Bishop

Old Mother Earth woke up from her sleep,
And found she was cold and bare;
The winter was over, the spring was near,
And she had not a dress to wear.
"Alas!" she sighed, with great dismay,
"Oh, where shall I get my clothes?
There's not a place to buy a suit,
And a dressmaker no one knows."

"I'll make you a dress," said the springing grass,
Just looking above the ground,
"A dress of green, of the loveliest sheen,
To cover you all around."
"And we," said the dandelions gay,
"Will dot it with yellow bright."
"I'll make it a fringe," said the forget-me-not,
"Of blue, very soft and bright."

"We'll embroider the front," said the violets,
"With a lovely purply hue."
"And we," said the roses, "will make you a crown
Of red, jeweled with the dew."
"And we'll be your gems," said the voice from the shade,
Where the ladies' ear-drops live,—
"Orange is the color for any queen
And the best we have to give."

Old Mother Earth was thankful and glad,
As she put on her dress so gay;
And that is the reason, my little ones,
She is looking so lovely today.

How Waybacks Was Organized

BY IDA M. HELM

THIS is the way it came about. Pastor Good had been going out to Waybacks Corners and preaching in the little roadside schoolhouse every Sunday afternoon for four months. It was the nature of the good pastor to put his earnest efforts at helpfulness in the place most needed, and he knew of no place where his service was needed so greatly as at Waybacks Corners.

The people of Waybacks Corners were mostly foreigners and the most of them were worldly people. They were looked down on by their neighbors on every side,—much as the Samaritans were looked down on by the Jews. But the good pastor saw in these despised people diamonds in the rough and he determined to win, if possible, from among them, some gems for the King's crown. He had faith in the Master's promises and he also knew that faith without works is dead. So his motto was that he show his faith by his works.

"Waybacks" was the byword and a term of contempt for the Lakeside people. Every one knew that there was much work to be done for the Master at Waybacks Corners,—a village five miles from Lakeside,—but no effort was made to lift the people to a higher plane of living until Pastor Good stirred them up.

The pastor, in taking notes of observation at the schoolhouse, on Sunday afternoons, noticed that among the boys who always sat on the long bench at the rear of the room, one little fellow invariably carried an embryo museum of natural history in his pockets, and he delighted to put it on exhibition during the preaching services, much to the amusement of the other boys and to the annoyance of the people who sat near them and wanted to hear the sermon,—for there were always some people in the audience who were intent on the sermon, though others gave every indication of having their minds anywhere but on the sermon.

The minister had reason to believe that some of them were in the habit of taking their farms and registered cattle and gardens and barns and houses to church with them, for immediately after the services were dismissed, he would hear snatches of conversation to his right or left that told plainly where the people's hearts were. For instance, one Sunday he heard: "I got $75 for the yearling calf." "That was a good price. I bought a Jersey,—" This bit of news was cut off by a voice breaking in with: "We sold one hundred and eleven dozen of eggs last week."

"That will never do," thought the pastor. So the next Sunday afternoon he sailed into his sermon with whip and spur, and hurled dynamic shots from the Word right and left, till the people were, for the time being, shaken loose from cattle and farms, and houses and barns, and the attention of every one was centered on Christ, the Word,—the Redeemer of mankind. Even the boys forgot their museum, for the pastor believed in preaching in language the children could understand. Back in his home church at Lakeside, that evening, Pastor Good called the Sunday-school superintendent and the members of the Young Men's and the Young Women's Bible Classes to a side meeting. He stood before them and said: "I want some of you to go with me out to Waybacks Corners next Sunday afternoon and help organize a Sunday-school in that needy field. We'll need teachers for the classes every session for a while. I want the classes there organized like they are in our home school. Who'll volunteer?"

His audience only smiled. This riled the pastor, and his face flushed, and he waved his hand much as Paul used to do, and began: "Look here, people, you think there's no use going out there to try to do anything for those Wayback people. I know as well as you do that they're a rough set mostly, and that they're given to swearing and gambling and horse-racing and betting, and that they make religion of secondary importance. But you assume a wrong attitude toward them. Suppose Paul had taken that attitude toward the Gentile world, and suppose Carey and Moffat, and Livingstone and Paton had taken that attitude toward the heathen,—or," he flashed a look of indignation at them,—"what if Christ had taken such an attitude toward this sinful, rebellious world in which we live? What then!"

By this time the pastor's audience looked rather shamefaced, and Superintendent Helpgood stood up and said: "You're in the right, pastor. You took us by surprise. You can depend on me to help you in the good work, and I'm sure my fellow-workers, one and all, will stand with you." Then he turned to the assembled classes and said: "All who are willing to go to Waybacks next Sunday afternoon and help organize the classes and then stand by them till they get a firm footing, stand up."

Immediately both classes stood up to the last person, and the pastor's face beamed. He brought his fist down on the bench with a whack and he said: "Good."

At once there was a jubilee in each heart. They did not waste any time in jubilation, but began immediately to make practical arrangements for the work. There were plenty of fish in the lake, so they decided to have a big "fish fry" on Wednesday evening and invite the Waybacks. You can not imagine how pleased they were to be invited to a fish fry at Lakeside. The whole bunch came over in big wagons and the Lakesiders were out in full force, so there was a big crowd. The good housewives of Lakeside were experienced in frying fish and the fry was luscious enough to please the palate of an epicure.

After the feast, Pastor Good said: "Brethren, I feel that now is the time to sing." So Mr. Singer stood up and invited everybody to join in singing, "There's Power in the Blood." All Lakeside rang with the soul-stirring music. Then the large assembly knelt while the good pastor spread out his hands before God and sent up to the Great Throne a heart-thrilling prayer. After the prayer the pastor asked the superintendent to give a talk. He rose and explained the methods and purposes of the organized classes of Lakeside Sunday-school. He gave the Waybacks a chance to ask questions. One question was all that was asked, and that came from a young man who had a friend living in Princeton, that told him about the work of the organized classes in the Sunday-school he attended. He rose and asked: "Will you tell me about your practical work?"

So the superintendent told them of instances in which the classes helped the sick and those out of work. He told of several incidents when men, injured in accidents, were taken care of and their families helped till the men were able to work again. And when Lewis Ryle's little daughter had the fever and Mr. Ryle could not afford to employ a nurse, the classes sent a nurse to care for the child and they paid the nurse and doctor bills. He said: "When Mr. Stevens had appendicitis and the doctors said an operation was necessary, or he would die, and he had no money, the Sunday-school saw that he received proper hospital treatment." He continued: "The classes, either individually or in a body, visit shut-ins, contribute to institutions of charity,—in fact, they help wherever help is needed."

That fetched the Wayback people. They were so quiet that you could almost hear them deciding they would organize and they listened with eyes intent on the speaker and occasionally a tear dropped on a bronzed cheek. It was the spirit and appeal of brotherhood,—the appeal that our Lord desires his followers to make to this wide world.

Then the superintendent asked for volunteers to go over and help the Wayback people to organize their classes and stand by the work till the work no longer needed their service. So many stood up that he had to ask the volunteers to decide on twelve of their number, as that would be sufficient at the present time. Those twelve have been faithful to their trust. The Wayback Sunday-school is progressing and the leaven of righteousness is working. The natives are taking an enthusiastic part in the work. They are fast losing interest in gambling, racing, betting and balls. The fact is, a great many of them have nothing at all to do with such things any more. They have something of incalculable importance to do. "There's power in the blood."

The membership of Michigan is small,—perhaps 1,500,—and not strong financially, yet she has two very promising city missions, viz., Detroit and Grand Rapids. However, the former is nearly self-supporting, with Bro. Dietz as its efficient leader. The State will aid them to equip the church to meet the present-day needs in their marvelous growth.

Brother and Sister Roy Miller resigned the pastorate of Grand Rapids. The Board accepted it and expressed their desire to aid them in some new field. Eld. C. L. Wilkins and wife were asked to complete the year.

Bro. Messner resigned as Secretary-Treasurer, which position he has filled for twelve years. He has been a member of the Board since its creation, save for one or two years. The Board expressed its appreciation for his untiring efforts. Also to his daughter Grace, whose service has been so valuable to her father and to the State as well. Bro. Harley Townsend was elected to that position. The readers will please note these two important changes: Eld. C. L. Wilkins, 1914 Gardner Avenue, as pastor of the Grand Rapids church, to take effect at once; Bro. Harley Townsend, of Woodland, Secretary-Treasurer after July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.

JALALPOR, INDIA, NOTES

Moving day is always an interesting one, and it becomes especially so when you take most of your possessions with you as baggage on the train, as we do here in India. About the midde of January Sister Shumaker and I moved to our home here, and I am sure it would have been an interesting sight to friends in Ameriea, could they have seen us start with boxes, bags, bundles and baskets. Only a few heavy boxes were sent by freight. All the rest were stowed about us on the train. The conduetor on the passenger train at home would most certainly object, if some of the passengers should attempt to take some of the things as baggage that may be freely taken thus here.

Now we are comfortably located in our home here, and are finding more than enough work to fill the days full. The past few years the work done here has been mostly among the men, and a need was felt for more definite work among the women and children. It is to meet this need that Sister Shumaker has taken up the work here. Bro. Ross will have charge of the work in the Eastern part of the Distriet and will care for the evangelistie work among the men, in connection with his work at Bulsar.

The western part of the Distriet, where we are located, ineludes the station at Jalalpòr, and three schools already opened in outlying villages. There are large opportunities, in some of these villages, through giving to the people the schools they need. We have recently visited the three schools already established, and at each place found the children enthusiastie in their work. In each of these schools Gospel songs and Bible stories are taught.

Making a journey to some of these schools is about as slow a process as are some other things in the Orient. Bhat is the school farthest from us. To reach it we must

It is to meet this need that Sister Shumaker has taken up the work here. Bro. Ross will have charge of the work in the Eastern part of the District and will care for the evangelistic work among the men, in connection with his work at Bulsar.

The western part of the District, where we are located, includes the station at Jalalpor, and three schools already opened in outlying villages. There are large opportunities, in some of these villages, through giving to the ride on the train for about half an hour and then go more than a mile to the riverside. Thence we travel by boat about eight miles down the river. We spent an entire day from about seven o'clock in the morning to about nine at night, making this trip, and then we remained only about an hour and a half in the village. We had hoped to get out to the village quite early, as we knew the tide would be in when we reached the river, and so expected to leave at once. The boats can not go when the tide is out. But this was our first visit to the village and so, of course, they wanted to give us a hearty welcome. The Indian way of doing this is to present flowers, so the boatman had been told to bring some flowers with him for that purpose. When we got to the riverside, the tide was in, as we had expected, but our boatman went for the flowers, and we could do nothing but sit and wait for his return, which was not until about two hours later. In the meantime the tide was going out. By the time he came back, the breeze which the tide brings with it had almost disappeared, and our little sail-boat made progress slowly. In fact, we were on the river about four hours to go eight miles. Good training in patience,—don't you think?

But even a few minutes' visit in the school, with about eighty bright, happy-faced children, well repaid us for the time spent in the trip. In this school three Christian teachers are working.

The school at Machad has more than seventy pupils, and must soon be supplied with the third teacher. The third village has a nice little school of seventeen pupils.

Here, on our compound, we are trying to provide a school for some of the children who are not in the Government schools, and who are difficult to get and hold in school, not because the children do not enjoy school but because they are hindered and frightened by others. Perhaps you will be glad to know something of the difficulties we must meet in starting a school like this.

Our two Christian teachers went out into the homes of these people and secured the promise of a number of them to send the children. But on the morning when school was to open, not a single child appeared. The teachers, however, went out and called them, and succeeded in bringing in eleven boys and two girls. By the end of the week eighteen were enrolled. And what was our joy, the next Sunday morning, to find twenty-six children in Sunday-school! The next week the children again came to school, and then Satan began to get very busy, trying to throw hindrances in our way. The next Tuesday not a child appeared in the morning, but the teachers went out, and finally did succeed in bringing in a very few. We began to inquire what had caused the sudden drop in attendance. Three reasons were given: (1) "You call the children on Sunday, and the Government school does not." (2) "You make our children sit with the low-caste children." (3) "You are going to take the children and send them off to another place."

One of the things that make this work so difficult is the fact that they are almost in bondage. To keep hunger away from the door, these parents have hired out their children to the land-owners and these overseers become almost absolute monarchs over these poor children. When the children come to school, they may come at any hour and call them away to work, and when they see that the children are becoming interested, they will tell them almost any kind of a false tale to frighten them. They do not want these children to become educated, lest they lose sway over them.

We have been continuing to pray and work that we may get these children again, and they are slowly coming back to us, but Satan is also working through some of these people to frighten the children and keep them away. But we know that the Lord will win out in the end, if we are faithful. Pray for the new schools that are being opened amid difficulties such as these.

We are glad for the evidences that come, that Christianity is slowly gaining in influence and power among the people. A few weeks ago a finely-educated man, who has been in educational work in India for many years, said: "We need more men like you missionaries. If we had more such people the depressed classes in India would be in a better condition." A high school teacher in Novsari, about a mile from here, requested the Bible Society in Bombay to furnish him with a New Testament for each of his scholars, so that he might use it as a textbook for teaching ethics.

The carpenters are now repairing our building here, and getting it ready, so that a Boarding-school may be opened for girls. One of our Christian men, who had bitterly opposed the work of the mission when it was first opened, is pleading that this school be begun as soon as possible. He has three girls whom he wishes to put in school at once. We hope to care for these girls, and others, before many days.

skin diseases, and directing the morning prayers for Christians on the compound, I can as yet do little in work. Language study is interesting, but we long to able to help some of the many needs that can be seen every hand. Yet the days of waiting are worth w May they mean the most!

Pray for the work here, that we may be able to meet needs here through him who is our sufficiency.

He sho the extremely dark picture of the unsaved man, and the man in himself, or through the mere keeping of law, stands condemned before God. He defined justi tion as a declaration of God, whereby man is acqui of sin. It can only be brought about as man rea out by faith and lays hold of divine pardon. This br joy both to God and man.

The afternoon was given to a general discussion problems of vital interest to the ministers of North Indiana.

The next meeting will be held at Goshen City on third Thursday of June. H. L. Hartsough, Secretar Nappanee, Ind.

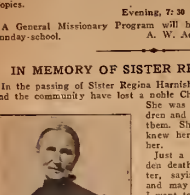
IN MEMORY OF SISTER REGINA HARNISH

In the passing of Sister Regina Harnish, the children, the church and the community have lost a noble Christian mother and friend. She was a true lover of her children and her prayers were many for them. She was loved by all who knew her or came in contact with her.



Sister Regina Harnish

Just a few weeks before her sudden death she wrote to her daughter, saying: "I am getting old and may not be in this life long. I want to be faithful in doing all I can for the Lord, so that when my time on earth is spent, I will be ready. I want to do whatever the Lord wants me to do, and I pray that he may give me strength that my last days may be happy days in serving him. That is worth more than all the world to me. I would like to be with all the children once more, I sometimes think, if it would be the Lord's will. But God knows what's before us."

And, sure enough, God knew. He has called her home. She is not dead, but she is now reaping the fruits of the beautiful life she lived, and beholding that mansion which she prepared on earth. Death is but life to such a true believer. To such a Christian mother, the dying day is her changing day, her resting day, her reaping, her conquering, her transplanting day from earth to heaven. It is her robing day to put off the old, wornout rags of flesh, and to put on the new and glorious robes of light. It is her marriage day, her coronation day, the day of her glory, the beginning of her eternal, perfect bliss with Christ.

May God help each of us to live such a noble life in service, in prayer, in helpfulness to others! Her main ambition was that her children might all meet her in heaven, and that she could reach out to save souls. Her prayers were constantly such. Just a few days before her death she sent $200 to the General Mission Board for this cause, and in her will she remembered the Lord. She truly loved, read and studied her Bible daily. Mrs. V. E. Whitmer.

FORWARD MOVEMENT AT LA VERNE COLLEGE, CALIFORNIA

March 15, the Joint Board of Trustees of La Verne College met in annual session at the college office. Because of sickness, some were hindered from attending, but we had present five members from the Northern District of California and four from the Southern District. The meeting was one of unusual vision and inspiration. Bro. W. E. Trostle acted as chairman and Bro. A. O. Brubaker was secretary.

It was decided to increase the faculty and to strengthen the work wherever possible. In barmony with the General Forward Movement of the church, we shall endeavor to reach our quota of students in general enrollment, and the required number pursuing regular college courses and special Bible study, looking forward toward defipite Christian service in the mission fields.

It was unanimously voted that we immediately plan a campaign for $50,000 for the erection and furnishing of a men's dormitory, and also to raise an endowment fund of $100,000 toward the maintenance of the college.

To all who are conversant with our present outlook and dire needs, the amounts called for will not seem too much, but rather will appear too little. We trust the occasion and the opportunity may allow each one solicited to put in his full measure of devotion to the cause. In the spirit of the day we should easily double or even treble the amount called for. Let us go over the top with a generous surplus! We have lately become accustomed to an atmosphere surcharged with the desire to dare and to do big things. In the political and social endeavors of the past two years we have trained our minds, souls and purses to coöperative, national defense. Let us, with double diligence, espouse the cause of constructive education!

We have been schooled to liberal giving. To the calls for Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Armenian sufferers, Belgian Orphans and Animal Hospitals we have responded liberally. We have bought saving stamps, thrift stamps and Liberty Bonds. We have lifted in a thousand ways. We were trained in generosity by a conflict thrust upon us, contrary to the liking of all constructive idealists. The exigencies of war forced upon the nation incalculable expenditure for destruction of life and property. Some have been intimidated, vilified, harassed and even coerced into supporting movements contrary to their conscientious beliefs. Pressed down by unjust criticism, bearing the taunt of "slacker," because refusing to contribute freely to human slaughter, many have been crushed almost to martyrdom, yet heroically extolled the doctrine of the Prince of Peace. They plead the futility and unrighteousness of war and advocated constructive policies of peace.

Now is the time to make good all such claims for the more excellent way. If we were called "slackers" because our consciences forbade us to boost for war, now is the most fitting time for us to verify our fidelity and integrity by giving most generously our support to the arts of peace. Unless we come forth with liberal aid for causes of true Christian education and a better reconstruction, we will, in deed and in truth, be "slackers," challenged by our fellow-men; scorned by those who died that we might be kept free; condemned by our own hollow consciences, and naked before him who can not be mocked. Our decided stand for the principles of peace compels us to make good our conscientious scruples by contributing to the arts of peace sums equal, or even greater, than the allotments apportioned us for national defense.

The need is great, the opportunity is ripe, the moral obligation is squarely upon us. While others are building memorials of marble and urging military training for all the schoolboys, it is quite fitting that we should be doubly diligent in the work of positive, Christian reconstruction, building new ideals in the souls of men,—ideals that shall actuate and ennoble flesh and blood, mind and soul for all posterity. Let a transformed spirit lift us out of our wonted ruts, and let us learn, from the costly lesson of this war, that the best way to national defense lies in the inculcation of principles rooted in righteousness and fruiting in Christian conduct.

Never before have the Brethren had better occasion, nor more urgent opportunity, nor more emphatic obligation to vindicate their sincerity of purpose, their integrity of principle, their devotion to Christian ideals and their time-honored claims to conscientious scruples against war. Surely, amidst the many calls to vindicate ourselves we will consider the cause of La Verne College and do nobly, conscientiously, and abundantly "as the Lord hath prospered us." Let us not stop at the first mile, but go the second. Let us double the $50,000 building fund and the $100,000 endowment fund in such a fashion and such a spirit as to arouse in us and our posterity a new sense of Christian pride and a glorious victory. We can do it. We will. N. J. Brubaker, workers in many ways. We are always glad to welcome them back to the old church. Bro. Caslow has been in Arizona with his parents during the winter, but all are returning to Grand Rapids again this spring.—Mrs. Zora B. Ott, Pioneer, Route, April 1.

Des Moines City church met in business session April 1, with Eld. P. S. Brunk presiding. We miss our pastor very much but are carrying on the work to the best of our ability. The pulpit is being filled with talent from our neighboring congregations. March 26, Bro. Reno Takemayer, a Japanese student, recently from Bethany, gave a splendid address. The ministerial committee is still endeavoring to secure a pastor. We will hold our love feast May 25. We endorse the Five-year Forward Movement and will endeavor to do our share in this great work. We decided to take part in the great drive for Armenian Relief and will lift three offerings for that purpose, the first April 27.—Eva Lena Smith, Des Moines, Iowa, April 2.

Franklin County church met in council March 27, with Eld. Buckingham presiding. The outlook of the church here is certainly encouraging. While we met in the afternoon only, it was remarkable how much work was taken care of. Seven letters of membership were granted. On account of having no lights in the church we have not been holding Sunday evening services, but we will now have regular preaching services every Sunday evening. Christian Workers were organized, with Bro. Arthur Scarrow, president. Several committees were appointed to take care of our dedication service June 15. The church also expressed her willingness to promote the "Forward Movement." Bro. W. I. Buckingham will represent us at Annual Meeting.—Harvey W. Allen, Dumont, Iowa, March 29.

Muscatine church met in quarterly council March 28. Our elder, Bro. Leather Smith, presided. We decided to hold our love feast May 4, at 4 P. M. Bro. Elbert McGreer was relected trustee for three years. Eld. Leander Smith and Bro. Wm. G. Williams were elected delegates to the Annual Meeting, with Sister Alta L. Williams and Sister Mary Smith alternates. The interest in all the departments of our church work is increasing. We have planned for a special "personal" evangelistic effort, to win souls for the Master during the month of April. We solicit the prayers of all our dear brethren and sisters in behalf of the work in Muscatine. This is a great field and needs much work. Pray for us!—Mary Smith, 1147 Lucas Street, Muscatine, Iowa, March 30.

Spring Creek church met in council March 27, with Eld. Harvey Gilliam presiding. Our love feast is to be held June 14 and 15, with an all-day meeting on Saturday. A series of meetings is to be held when an evangelist can be secured. Bro. Harvey Gilliam was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. Sister Mae Long was elected president of Christian Workers. Cottage prayer meetings are to be held each Wednesday evening. The church decided to buy a new set of maps for Sunday-school. We also decided to prepare an Easter program.—Mrs. Fannie Long, Fredericksburg, Iowa, March 28.

KANSAS

Notice.—To those from the Northwest, wishing to attend the District Meeting of Southeastern Kansas: From Chanute go to Cherry Vale on Santa Fe; from there to McCune on Frisco.—May Nicholson, McCune, Kans., March 31.

Oanga church met in council March 29, with Eld. D. P. Neher presiding. Two letters were received. Bro. Elmer Groff was elected church trustee; Bro. D. P. Neher, elder. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for starting a building fund. We decided to have a "Go-to-Church Day," April 6, and hope to see a large attendance. The remainder of the meeting was given to making arrangements for District Meeting, to be held May 6-8. Morning and evening trains will be met at McCune.—May Nicholson, McCune, Kans., March 31.

MARYLAND

Beaver Creek congregation met in council March 15, when the church officers for the year were elected and various phases of church work were considered. Our present elder, Bro. Caleb Long, presided. Bro. Preston Myers was elected delegate to District Meeting; Bro. J. O. Butterbaugh, delegate to Annual Meeting. A missionary committee was appointed; this committee will take up the reconstruction work. Our communion service will be held May 26, 25 at 2:30 P. M. Sister Stella Taylor was chosen "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent.—Verge M. Fahrney, Mapleville, Md., March 30.

Hagerstown.—In the absence of our pastor and wife, Brother and Sister A. B. Miller, who are holding a series of meetings at Johnstown, Pa., we had with us, March 16, both morning and evening, Bro. P. F. Holsopple, of Blue Ridge College. On the following Sunday, Bro. Walter S. Long and wife, of Altoona, Pa., were with us, remaining until Wednesday evening. They gave us some wholesome and vital Bible teaching.—Kathryn Yourtee Lindsay, Hagerstown, Md., March 28.

Manor church met in council March 29, with Eld. John Rowland presiding. Elders C. M. Hicks and Cale Long were also with us. Brethren Walter Coffman and Walter Stiker, who were called to the ministry in the fall, were installed into office. Brethren Jacob Thomas and Brown Long were chosen to serve as deacons, and will be installed into office in the near future. Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren McClellan Long, Jos. Rowland and Rowland Reichard; delegate to Annual Meeting, Bro. McKinley Coffman. We met again in the evening and conducted a class in vocal music, with Prof. B. F. Wampler as our instructor. Our love feast will be held in the Manor church May 10, at 4 P. M.—M. Portia Rowland, Fair Play, Md., March 29.

Monocacy congregation met in council March 29, in the Rocky Ridge house. We elected the following delegates to District Meeting: Elmer P. Schildt and Layton Moser, with Arthur Rice and Allen D. Hoover, alternates. We elected Eld. T. S. Fike delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. L. J. Flohr, alternate. Our love feast at Thurmont will be held May 10, at 2 P. M., and at Mountaindale, May 24, 2 P. M.—Allen D. Hoover, Graceham, Md., March 31.

Notice to Elders of the Eastern District of Maryland.—The regular annual meeting for all business coming before this body will convene in the Frederick City church, Tuesday, April 11, in the evening of April 21. All business for consideration of said body should be in the hands of the Secretary on or before the date above given.—Wm. E. Roop, Secretary for the Elders of Eastern District of Maryland, Westminster, Md., April 2.

MICHIGAN

Black River church met in council March 29, with Eld. J. M. Smith presiding. Brethren Seekler, of North Manchester, Ind., preached for us on Sunday morning, and Bro. Smith in the evening. We enjoyed having them with us. We feel encouraged to go on, and hope that ministerial help will be sent us soon. We expect to reorganize our Sunday-school April 6.—Amanda Wertenberger, South Haven, Mich., April 2.

Homestead church met in council March 22, with our pastor, Bro. A. B. Hollinger, in charge. We elected our church officers and church trustees. The writer is "Messenger" correspondent.—Ray Sells, Benenson, Mich., April 1.

Vestaburg church has had very irregular services for some time, on account of influenza. We rejoiced when one, who had been out of the church for several years, was received into full fellowship on March 30.—B. F. Switzer, Vestaburg, Mich., March 31.

MISSOURI

Bethany church met in council March 22, with Eld. E. W. Mason presiding. Our delegate to the Annual Meeting is Eld. Mason, with Bro. G. W. Clemens, alternate. The writer was chosen "Messenger" agent and correspondent. Our series of meetings will begin Sept. 2, with Bro. J. C. Forney, of McPherson, Kans., in charge. We decided to hold a love feast this spring.—Mrs. Effie Mayden, Norborne, Mo., March 27.

Cabool church met at the Greenwood house in council, March 30, with Eld. C. W. Gitt presiding. Bro. A. M. Peterson and wife were installed into the eldership by Brethren Joe Hylton and P. L. Fike. Bro. Lester Fike, a young minister, visited with us over Sunday, on his way home from Bethany Bible School. He and Bro. Hylton addressed the congregation. The following officers were elected: Sister Laura Acher, clerk; Bro. Will Neighbors, treasurer; Sister Florence Oxley, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. A collection of over $37 was taken for Armenian Relief. Bro. Lester Fike told us an interesting story of life at Bethany Bible School. Bro. P. L. Fike followed with an interesting discourse. Our love feast will be held May 3 at Greenwood house. The committee for securing an evangelist was retained. Correspondence was received and then granted.—Mrs. J. W. Oxley, Mt. Grove, Mo., April 1.

Ashland (First Church).—"Japan, a Great Opportunity," was the theme made use of by Mr. H. C. Coleman, Traveling Secretary of the World's Sunday School Association, March 31, when he was to a keen-appreciation of a wide open door for the introduction of Saving Truth into human hearts. Mr. Coleman is enthusiastic concerning this unique country and its intelligent inhabitants. He feels that Christian ideals will easily find a place in every phase of Japanese life, for the people are, first of all, idealistic. A strong movement, at present, toward Christianity in Japan is the revision of its educational system. In this revision strong emphasis is placed upon the necessity of implanting religious ideas in the minds of children early in life. Mr. Coleman considers the coming World's Sunday School Convention, at Tokyo, a most opportune and significant event. Sunday, March 26, we had with us, during the absence of our pastor, Bro. Leekrone, Dr. J. Allen Miller, of Ashland College, who, in his quiet but masterful way, further aroused our sensibilities to the matter of being up and about the Master's work, in this age of marvelous opportunities.—Ona Karn, 908 Orange Street, Ashland, Ohio, April 1.

Brookville church just closed a three weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Van, B. Wright. Thirteen were added to the church. The many spiritual feasts were a rare spiritual uplift. Our home love feast will be held on Easter Sunday. The Christian Workers' Society is planning for an Easter program, Sunday evening, April 13.—Mrs. Arthur Hay, Brookville, Ohio, April 1.

Canton City.—On Sunday, Feb. 2, we observed the fifth anniversary of the dedication of our church. Bro. J. F. Kahler gave a brief review of the growth and development of the church for the five years. Our pastor, Bro. W. D. Keller, brought us an interesting message in his sermon on "A Forward Look." A very edifying program was rendered in the Christian Workers' Meeting, with Prof. G. W. Kieffaber resided. Bro. Preston Myers was elected delegate to District Meeting; Bro. J. O. Butterbaugh, delegate to Annual Meeting. Brethren Harvey Thomas and Albert Nolf were chosen delegates to District Meeting, with Sister Nolf, alternate. Bro. Harvey Thomas is our delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Albert Nolf, alternate. The latter represented the services of Bro. D. H. Keller, of Chicago, for our series of meetings, to begin the latter part of August.—Mabel Buckingham, Alvada, Ohio, March 30.

Rush Creek church met in council March 28. We elected Bro. Bagwell delegate to District Meeting, and Bro. Levi Stoner, delegate to Annual Conference. The church decided to have a love feast some time in May, the exact date to be decided later.—Mrs. E. B. Bagwell, Bremen, Ohio, March 30.

Strait Creek Valley church met in council March 29, with our pastor, Bro. Van B. Wright, presiding. He gave an address on "The Christian's Walk," after which a business session was held. Our series of meetings is to begin May 15. We have secured the services of Sister Nora M. Shively, of Plymouth, Ind., to conduct the song service. May 18 we will have an all-day meeting at the church, at which time lunch will be served. May 24 our love feast will be held. Many of our workers fields need to be looked after, and the need of prayers and encouragement. Our services have been greatly hindered by health conditions. We reorganized our Sundayschool, with Brethren C. E. Setty and Eld. Adams, superintendents. —Senith R. Setty, Sinking Spring, Ohio, April 1.

Tentwood church met in council March 26. Eld. D. M. Gorver presided. Five letters were granted. Eld. D. M. Garver was elected delegate to Annual Meeting; Brethren Wm. Swinger and Thos. Karns, delegates to District Meeting. The church decided to hold a home communion on Easter, April 20.—Martha A. Coffman, Trotwood, Ohio, March 29.

OKLAHOMA

Big Creek church met in council March 13, with Eld. N. S. Gripe presiding. The church decided to hold a series of meetings beginning May 18, and either close with our love feast, May 31, or a week later. March 16 an offering of $31 was lifted for Armenian-Syrian Relief. March 23 Sister Lydia E. Taylor, of the Dreys Reform Committee, gave us two very interesting and helpful lectures on "The Simple Life in Dress." We sent an offering of $13 to the District Mission Board.—Oma Holderread, Cushing, Okla., March 25.

Hollow church met in council March 25. Eld. J. H. Miller presiding. New officers were elected, with Bro. W. H. Miller, elder. We decided to hold a love feast May 24. Bro. Miller delivered two very interesting sermons on Sunday. A collection of $8.10 was taken for Armenian Relief. March 18 Sister Lydia Taylor, of Mt. Morris, Ill., gave us, two very inspiring talks on "Dress Reform." The attendance was good at both services. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting are progressing nicely, also being reorganized. We have suffered some deaths on account of influenza.—Zada Loshbaugh, Hollow, Okla., March 30.

Hoyle church met in council March 15, with Eld. E. J. Smith in charge. Bro. Ray Wagoner, of Enid, was also with us. Both remained for communion and gave us some interesting talks. Bro. Smith addressing us in the morning and Bro. Wagoner in the evening. Since Bro. Smith can not well serve us longer as elder, we chose Bro. Geo. Prentice, of Pleasant Plains, in his stead. Sister Mary A. Root was elected correspondent and "Messenger" agent; Bro. M. G. Peters, Sunday-school superintendent. We decided to make an effort to relocate and rebuild our churchhouse. Brethren H. G. Peters, Will Reynolds and Dewey Rogers were appointed to look after the work. Since December, Bro. Ray Wagoner has preached for us every first and third Sunday, which was very much appreciated. He will hold a series of meetings to begin March 30 and continue until April 13. Our communion services will be held April 12. Though few in number, we have kept up our evergreen Sunday-school, closing only a few Sundays during the epidemic. There were no deaths in our locality. We have fine prospects for a good wheat crop this year, and the ground is in good condition for spring crops, for which we are grateful. Brethren looking for a new location are invited to see our country. We are greatly in need of a resident minister.—Mary E. Root, Ames, Okla., March 29.

OREGON

Mabel congregation met in council March 22. We expect Eld. Hiram Smith, of Albany, Oregon, to be with us April 13 to April 20, to hold some meetings for us, and also to work in the interest of the Sunday-school, he being District Sunday-school Secretary. We intend to hold our love feast April 19.—H. H. Ritter, Mabel, Oregon, March 26.

Newberg.—On account of quarantine we were unable to hold our regular December council, and for that reason all the business, generally transacted at that time, was postponed until our regular council,—March 29. The church was well represented. We decided to hold our love feast May 3, at 7 P. M. The following officers were elected: Mattie Dunlap, Christian Workers' president; Eliza J. Moore, Sunday-school superintendent; S. P. Van Dyke, elder in charge of church; M. L. Dunlap, secretary; Eliza Moore, correspondent and "Messenger" agent. We decided to make some improvements on our churchhouse. We are looking forward with pleasure to the coming of Eld. J. A. Reed and family, of Ellensburg, Wash., to move into our midst, and to assist in the ministerial work in the absence of our present elder in charge, who, with his wife, expects to make an extended visit in the East, starting about July 1.—Sarah A. Van Dyke, Newberg, Oregon, March 29.

Portland.—March 23 Bible Class No. 2 of our Sunday-school rendered the Christian Workers' program. They chose for their subject "The Power of Music," and every member took part in the work. Bro. W. T. Pratt gave a splendid introductory talk. The program was interspersed with songs by the class, and a duet by Sister Mary Hamilton and Bro. Pratt. Bro. Pratt also gave a reading, which was very much appreciated. Sister Hamilton rendered a solo. Bro. Pratt gave a splendid talk on "Music in the Home." Bro. Pratt is a very talented musician, and we hope to have him with us often in the future. Bro. Pratt is also a member of our church choir, and a valuable assistant. Bro. Pratt is also a member of our church choir, and a valuable assistant. Bro. Pratt is also a member of our church choir, and a valuable assistant

May 10, and Bro. Wm. J. Harpine will commence a series of meetings at the Columbia Furnace church at the same time. Eld. Wm. Peters was with us during our council. He was also with us on Sunday and gave us an interesting sermon. Although Bro. Peters is in his eighty-ninth year he has a remarkably clear mind and a wonderful memory.—M. H. Copp, Maurertown, Va., March 27.

WASHINGTON

East Wenatchee church met in council March 29, with Eld. Warren Slahaugh presiding. Eld. A. B. Peters was also with us. Two letters were received. On account of the influenza we did not have our fall love feast. Our spring love feast will be held April 20, at 6:30 P. M. The church decided to be represented at Annual Meeting.—Bunah Graybill, Wenatchee, Wash., March 29.

Mt. Hope.—After a long vacation because of so much sickness, our Sunday-school is again active. Bro. Streeter, our minister, just returned from conducting a series of meetings in the western part of the State and we are again looking forward to regular preaching services. Brethren M. F. Woods and J. A. Eby, of our State Ministerial Board, were with our spring love feast and it is meant much to us, as we did not have the privilege of hearing much from the outside during the past year. Spring is quite advanced in the valley. Our winter was especially mild, with very little snow, even in the mountains.—Pearl Hixson, Chewelah, Wash., March 29.

Olympia.—Bro. Warren W. Slahaugh, of Wenatchee, Wash., came to us March 9 and conducted Bible study each evening, followed by a sermon, continuing till March 23. Studies of the Holy Spirit and prayer were very interesting and instructive. Three of our Sunday-school scholars accepted Christ. At a recent business meeting, our church decided to improve our house by installing a baptistry and several Sunday-school rooms. Our love feast will be held for May 3. A joint Sunday-school Convention will be held May 4,—an all-day meeting.—Mrs. W. C. Lehman, Olympia, Wash., April 1.

WEST VIRGINIA

Mount Union church met in council March 27, with the writer in charge. Bro. James Hamilton and the writer were elected delegates to District Meeting, the writer, delegate to Annual Meeting. Our love feast will be held in May. It was also agreed to hold a series of meetings commencing May 4. Our Sunday-school and church services are fairly well attended and the interest is good.—S. Bucklew, Morgantown, W. Va., April 2.

Pleasant View.—Twelve letters have been granted since our last report. We are sorry, indeed, to lose Eld. J. W. Rogers and family and Bro. W. F. Rogers and wife. They are locating in Ohio and Indiana. While we feel our loss greatly, we know that they will be a great help where they are going. The offering from the Sunday-school for March for the Armenian-Syrian Relief was $80.03; for World-wide Missions, $36.37.—Cyntha E. Fox, Fayetteville, W. Va., March 31.

WISCONSIN

Stanley.—The members met in the recently purchased church March 29, for the purpose of organizing the new congregation. Brethren S. C. Miller and O. D. Buck met with us, the former presiding. We had received permission to organize from our mother churches, Maple Grove and Worden. There are forty-six members in our new organization and six applicants awaiting baptism, which they will receive as soon as the new baptistry can be installed. Bro. S. C. Miller was elected elder. A ministerial committee was appointed, to work with the Mission Board in securing a pastor. The church, Christian Workers and Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. O. W. Henderson, Sunday-school superintendent. For some time we have been worshiping, with Bro. J. M. Myers, pastor of the Worden church, administering to us. Our average attendance has been fifty-four, but we expect the number to increase now we are organized. A Protestant hospital is being built in this city, and our church has decided to furnish one room. We are just beginning our new work at this place and hope and pray for success.—Clara E. Winkler, Stanley, Wis., April 1.

Something We Can All Do

If we can not preach the Gospel, we can pray for those who do, can we not? If we have no money for the starving, we can pray for them, can we not? And for those who do have money? And if we can not be missionaries to the heathen, and if we have no money for the cause, why, we can pray for the heathen and the missionaries, can we not?

Yes, we can. And there's comfort in the thought too. But do you know, gentle reader, that you and I have had the habit of taking a little too much comfort from that thought? We have been cherishing the feeling that prayer is something cheap and easy, something to fall back on as a last resort, when we can do nothing else.

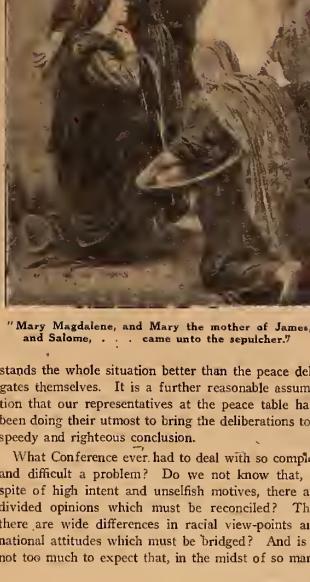
Perhaps we did not mean it that way, but it sounded like it sometimes. And it looked like it, too, when we so readily convinced ourselves that there was nothing else we could do.

Did we forget what prayer is,—the soul's instinctive cry to God for something which we very, very earnestly desire? Did we forget that if we really desired to have the Gospel preached and the starving fed and the heathen evangelized, we would try very, very hard to find some way to help?

Yes, we can all pray, if we are willing to pay the price. And the price is the consecration of our strength, whether much or little, to the causes for which we pray.

Be Patient; Hold Your Tongue

To pass judgment on persons and things we know little or nothing about, is one of human nature's most cherished privileges. This tendency has found an irresistible temptation in the Paris peace negotiations. Newspaper editors, big and little, have felt themselves quite qualified and authorized to warn the peace commissioners of the terrible consequences of delay. Don't they see the rising tide of Bolshevism? Why don't they quit their dilly-dallying and make peace?



"Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, . . . came unto the sepulcher."

stands the whole situation better than the peace del gates themselves. It is a further reasonable assum tion that our representatives at the peace table ha been doing their utmost to bring the deliberations to speedy and righteous conclusion.

What Conference ever had to deal with so compl and difficult a problem? Do we not know that, spite of high intent and unselfish motives, there a divided opinions which must be reconciled? Th there are wide differences in racial view-points a national attitudes which must be bridged? And is not too much to expect that, in the midst of so ma

"And Death Sh

And when that time comes we need have no furth fear of anything to mar our peace, for did not Pa say: "The last enemy that shall be abolished death"? So when death has been finally overcom we shall know that the last foe to human happine has been vanquished.

War, famine and pestilence,—the triple scourges mankind,—have taken such a terrible toll of deat within the last few years that we can contemplate th prospect of the final overthrow of this King of Te rors with unwonted satisfaction. Our own land ha not known the second of these, but the first and thir —especially the third,—has made us sadly familia with the reality of death. It is safe to say that neve in the same length of time, have so many readers o the Messenger experienced the bitter sorrow of be reavement as in the last year. And never has the Grim Reaper seemed more mercilessly wide-reaching in th swinging of his scythe. From childhood to old age hi victims have been cut down with fine impartiality Indeed, it would almost seem as if he had taken specia care not to miss those in the very prime of manhoo that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that are fallen asleep in Jesus will God bring with him. . . . Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

But let us refer again to that saying of Paul, quoted in our first paragraph. How its frank recognition of death, as an enemy, enlists our sympathetic interest! When are we ready to bid him welcome to our homes? Let us be honest and admit that we dread few things so much as the thought of his approach. We do the utmost in our power to bar his entrance. We count death as an enemy and we love Paul all the more for having rated him as such.

And we love Paul better still for his assurance that the rule of death is only temporary. That is the big comfort in his words. With this prospect and the beneficent provision of the Gospel for extracting the "sting" of death we can bravely and patiently do battle with him until God's good time shall come.

Now let us note another thing. Death is the "last enemy" to be destroyed. Then there are other enemies which must be destroyed first. Does that seem to introduce an element of discouragement? But think a little. Would you really wish to have death destroyed and have left in the world all the misery incident to physical, mental and spiritual disorders? Would you want to see an everlasting world in which sin abounds —such sin and suffering as have been dominant these recent years? Isn't it a blessed thing that the overthrow of death is to be preceded by the destruction of these other foes of human happiness?

Is there anything we can do to help along this wonderful consummation? That is the inevitable question. There is. We can labor faithfully at the task which Jesus left us in the Great Commission. We can yield ourselves to God as willing instruments in his hands for the promotion of his Kingdom through the destruction of that greatest enemy of them all—sin.

Meanwhile, through our Lord Jesus Christ, we can achieve a complete personal victory over the arch-enemy, and thus deprive that other enemy of his "sting." And so, knowing that his boasted "victory" is but transient and empty, we can work and wait with quiet, even joyful, confidence until that glorious day when "death shall be no more."

More About Faithful Teachers

Some weeks ago we had something to say about "Faithful Teachers." In the article we tried to emphasize the value of having no other kind. In fact, the New Testament contemplates only the faithful teachers, such as are "sound in the faith," and will "hold fast to the form of sound words." Judging from the letters coming to us, the article was well received and widely approved. This is, of course, encouraging, showing that there is in the Brotherhood a strong sentiment in favor of our well-established Gospel "landmarks." Our people, however, do not stand alone in demanding ministers and pastors who can be depended upon to "speak the things that become sound doctrine." Most devout men and women are getting tired of the so-called "New Theology." One fine elder writes us, saying that he is heart-sick over the situation. Not a few of the religious papers are calling attention to the lack of sound teaching in the pulpits of this country, and probably none of them has spoken out more plainly than the Sunday School Times. We quote from an editorial in the issue of March 1:

> A church was looking for a new minister. As usual, a good many candidates were under consideration. Finally the church agreed upon a certain minister who was in good standing in his denomination, and whose record was good. A friend of one of the members of this church, learning of the decision, asked this member one or two questions about the new man. The answers showed that neither this member, nor apparently any other member of the church, had really definite knowledge as to the detailed beliefs of the new minister in matters of doctrine. The new minister entered upon his work. Later on his utterances from the pulpit were so at variance with the evangelical Christian faith that the church member who had assumed that he was sound was distressed and heart-sick over his misleading teaching and preaching.
> This is a typical case; it has been and can be duplicated numberless times, in almost any denomination today. By way of contrast, let us look at the experience of another church.
> This church also was looking for a new minister. At a congregational meeting one of the members presented a resolution, the purpose of which was that nothing should be "taken for granted" as to the belief of any candidate who might be brought before the church as its possible pastor, but that definite, detailed, first-hand knowledge on this should be secured from the candidate himself. The resolution, which was approved by the congregation, was as follows:
> INASMUCH as the ——— church has been blessed by the pastorate and preaching of a minister who has been true to "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3); and
> INASMUCH as many ministers and various seminaries no longer believe and teach the fundamentals of the historic faith of the evangelical Christian church and of the ——— denomination; therefore
> BE IT RESOLVED that this church instruct its Committee, appointed to take up the matter of securing a new pastor, that it bring before this church as candidates for the pastorate only such men as will express in writing their personal belief in the following fundamentals of the Christian faith:
> 1. The unique, inspired authority and infallibility of the entire Bible in every part as the Word of God.
> 2. The lost condition of all men by nature, as the result of Adam's fall.
> 3. The deity of Jesus Christ, different in kind as well as in degree from any so-called "divinity" of man.
> 4. The virgin birth of Jesus Christ.
> 5. Redemption for men, only by faith in Christ and his finished work, who by his death became man's Savior, by becoming man's Substitute, receiving in Himself the penalty of man's sin and the necessary and holy wrath of God against sin.
> 6. The resurrection of the body of Christ and of all men.
> 7. The personality of the Holy Spirit.
> At the first meeting of the committee on a new pastor it was ordered that one thousand copies of this Resolution be printed for distribution among the members of the church, that all might be fully acquainted with the declared position of the church. And, furthermore, the committee agreed upon the following qualifications as describing the sort of pastor desired:
> A man sound in the faith, according to the Resolution given above.
> A man of real spiritual power, who has gone the whole way with God in the matter of out-and-out surrender, and who is honestly seeking to live solely to the glory of Christ.
> A real winner of souls, seeking to bring men in season and out of season to the personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as Savior, and doing this both in personal or individual work, and in all preaching services and public messages.
> A man whose prayer life is the biggest part of his life, one who takes time daily, in no inconsiderable degree, for personal prayer and intercession, and to be alone with God.
> A real Bible man,—one who feeds on the Word of God, taking time daily for devotional reading of the Bible, so that his spiritual life is constantly being fed and increased, and steady growth in power and efficiency for Christ goes on.
> A Bible preacher, one whose sermons are not essays or expressions of opinion or orations or ethical discussions, but unfoldings of God's Word, thus breaking the Bread of Life to his people continually in his public messages.
> A man with the missionary vision and the missionary passion, whose interests are those of our Lord himself, taking in the whole world as the field, and recognizing that no church can meet its home duties adequately that is not habitually ministering to the needy fields abroad.
> A true pastor, one who goes out with untiring activity among the people of the community, seeking in every reasonable way to bring them into the church and to keep close to their everyday lives and interests.
> The Committee met frequently for prayer and conference. It was clearly recognized that only God could lead unerringly to such a minister, and that out of the many applications that would probably have to be considered there would be no hope of avoiding mistake in making the choice unless God supernaturally directed and controlled. With a very keen consciousness of helplessness, therefore, the matter was committed to God, and his guidance was constantly asked and counted upon.
> Then the search began. The Resolution and the accompanying qualifications were published in various religious papers throughout the country, and applications began to pour in. The first meeting of the Committee was held October 4, 1918; since that time 106 candidates have been directly or indirectly presented for the consideration of the Committee; and these have represented twenty different States,—Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia, Washington, Ontario, Canada.

We offer this rather lengthy extract to show how difficult it is, among the more popular denominations, to find a man whose mind has not been poisoned by the new school of theology. In some parts of the land it would seem that the finding of an efficient pastor, who really believes in the full inspiration of the Bible, the virgin birth of Jesus, his personal resurrection and final ascension into heaven from the Mount of Olives, is almost like searching for the traditional needle in a haystack.

We read in 2 Tim. 4: 3 of the coming time when people "will not endure sound doctrine." This is bad enough. But what about the time when ministers will not even preach sound doctrine? Think of a congregation searching for a preacher who can be trusted in the pulpit! For every vacant pulpit there are usually several applications, and yet a congregation that is thoroughly orthodox in its faith has to institute a search for a man who can be depended upon properly to feed and nourish the Father's children.

As some view it, the congregation referred to in the Sunday School Times may be a bit strict in its demands. One thing is sure, it moves the standard up high. But is it too high? Do not the conditions of the age demand a commendable standard upon the part of those who are to be placed in charge of the souls of men and women? What if all the churches would move their standards up to the same plane! It might mean a lot of vacant pulpits, but in the end it would mean a more loyal ministry and thousands of well-filled pews.

Has any one been thinking of a standard for Brethren ministers? We hear a good deal about the tobacco habit, and living up to our rules respecting simplicity in attire and appearance. This much is proper, but what about practically eliminating Moses from the authority of the Pentateuch? What about the inspiration of the Bible, the miracles of the Scriptures, the Divinity of Christ and the resurrection of his body? One may say that there is not much dangerous teaching along these and kindred lines. But just a little means much when it reaches the pulpit. Then, what about accepting the Gospel principles for which the Church of the Brethren stands? What about respecting the well-meant decisions of Conference? What about lining up with the church activities as well as with the church doctrines? Is the time ever to come when a congregation, well rooted and grounded in the truth, must advertise for a minister "sound in the faith"?

It ought never to be that way. To this end the church ought to have in her pulpits only "faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." As shown above, we are not the only people concerned about faithful teachers, but let us pray that the circumstance, referred to in our quotation, may never be duplicated in the Church of the Brethren. The Message of the Book of Revelation. By E. B. Hoff, 3435 W. Van Buren Street, Chicago.—Price, $1.10

The Book of Revelation has been made the starting point for so many fanciful interpretations that many readers of the Apocalypse have found it more of an enigma than a revelation. The author of "The Message of the Book of Revelation" has frankly recognized this situation. He has definitely set for himself the task of making plain the message of the book.

At the onset the author lays down what seems to us to be a very sound exegetical principle. "The Book of Revelation" is a letter to the "Seven Churches of Asia," and we have a right to assume that as such it carried an intelligible message to them. This basic, important assumption clears the way for arriving at the practical message of the book. The Book of Revelation is addressed primarily to the "Seven Churches of Asia." However, the message of the book is not exhausted on these churches, but carries for us important warnings as well as much comfort and encouragement for the faithful.

"The Message of the Book of Revelation" bears the marks of painstaking scholarship. A lifetime spent in the study and teaching of God's Word has given the author unusual insight into the Apocalypse. The constant reference, throughout the book, to other enlightening passages in the Bible, is an ever-present reminder that the author is not giving range to his fancy; neither is his interpretation made in the light of Revelation alone; but, rather, in the light of the whole Bible context of the Book of Revelation.

The aim of the author is a concise and intelligible interpretation that shall reveal to God's children today whatever helpful messages the Book of Revelation has for them. The Apocalypse, in structure and imagery, is a vivid drama portraying the ancient conflict between good and evil in the realms of the moral and religious issues of life. How will this great drama end? Every scene shows the severity of the conflict, but there are also frequent passages that give "assurance of victory both for the individual and for the church in the aggregate." Perhaps for us, as for the "Seven Churches," the greatest message of the Book of Revelation is its emphasis on the final security of the faithful and the ultimate triumph of righteousness. H. A. B.

Resurrection

BY B. F. M. SOURS

Long years afar the glad news swells
Across the foreign hills and dells,
Through ages sped away:
Joy pierces still the near and far,
'Neath shimmering sun and glimmering star,
And triumph breaks today.

The sepulchre no more could hold
The Lord of life; for power untold
O'ershadowed all the scene;
The mighty battle had been fought,
The golden dawn, with glory fraught
Broke, with a light serene.

O Mary! Mary! 'tis thy Lord!
That One by her sad heart adored,
"Rabboni!" swift she cried;
For lo! before her glad amaze
The Risen Jesus filled her gaze,
Risen!—once crucified!

And all the harps of heaven above,
And all the songs of rest and love,
Were less at that sweet hour
Than that delight, O raptured soul!—
He lives to make the wounded whole
By his immortal power!

And so today our spirits still
Feel joy anew, as thrill on thrill
New strength and power imparts;
And all the harps of heaven ring,
And all the choirs of ransomed sing
The Sovereign of our hearts.

The Abrahamic Covenant

BY E. B. HOFF

In Four Parts.—Part Four

The larger promise beginning to be realized. Christ and the New Testament writers take up this Abrahamic hope where the prophets had left it and speak with no uncertain sound concerning its fulfillment. And in the first verse of the New Testament, Christ is called the son of David and the son of Abraham, as a basis for his lineage, and at the birth of John the Baptist, Zacharias, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, weaves the promise of Abraham into his song of redemption:

"Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel;
For he hath visited and wrought redemption for his people,
To show mercy towards our fathers,
And to remember his holy covenant;
The oath which he sware unto Abraham our father" (Luke 1: 68, 72, 73).

Peter takes up this same redemptive refrain in his sermon in the temple court, concerning the fulfillment of the hope, when he says: "Yea and all the prophets from Samuel and them that followed after, as many as have spoken, they also told of these days. Ye are the sons of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with your fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. Unto you first God, having raised up his Servant, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from your iniquities" (Acts 3: 24-26).

Not lineage but character. The Jews, in the days of Christ, and even long before that time, leaned so heavily upon the value of their ancestral Abrahamic lineage, that they often overlooked the necessity of their own personal moral integrity, but John the Baptist, in his usual vivid, energetic style, gives this false doctrine a tremendous thrust when he says: "And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. And even now the axe lieth at the root of the trees: every tree therefore that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire" (Matt. 3: 9, 10). The Gospel axe will cut down all such dead timber as Abraham did, they are not worthy of being called th children of Abraham. Instead of being the childre of Abraham or the children of God, they are the chi dren of the devil (cf. John 8: 37-59). The pictu which Jesus draws concerning the Jewish people, i their relation to salvation, is quite sad when he says "And I say unto you, that many shall come from th east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven: bu the sons of the kingdom shall be cast forth into th outer darkness: there shall be the weeping and th gnashing of teeth" (Matt. 8: 11, 12). He is her contrasting between the spirit of the Jew and Gentil in accepting the Gospel; the Gentiles are open an anxious for the truth, while, on the other hand, th Jews are reluctant and obstinate in their self-righ eousness.

Paul combating the false hopes of Judaism. Th Jews had come to believe that there was a divine favo itism toward the Abrahamic lineage entirely independ ent of a genuine, personal, moral integrity; and tha even Christianity, if it were at all allowable, must be a Jewish stamp. As we have already seen, Christ mos emphatically opposed any such false doctrine as thi And Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, speaks ver plainly on this matter. He says that the large inte national promise, given to Abraham, is realizing it fulfillment in the spread of Christianity. In contro verting the doctrine of the false Judaizing teacher he advocates that the Abrahamic promise is large than the Mosaic code of religion or any Judaistic form of devotion: "For not through the law was the prom ise to Abraham or to his seed that he should be hei of the world, but through the righteousness of faith For if they that are of the law are heirs, faith is mad void, and the promise is made of none effect: for th law worketh wrath; but where there is no law, neithe is there transgression. For this cause it is of faith that it may be according to grace; to the end that th promise may be sure to all the seed; not to that onl which is of the law, but to that also which is of th faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all (as it i written, A father of many nations have I made thee before him whom he believed, even God, who giveth life to the dead, and calleth the things that are not as though they were" (Rom. 4: 13-17).

Again he says: "Know therefore that they that ar of faith, the same are sons of Abraham. And th scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gen tiles by faith, preached the gospel beforehand unt Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the nations b blessed. For as many of you as were baptized int Christ did put on Christ. There can be neither Jew nor Greek, there can be neither bond nor free, there can be no male and female; for ye all are one man in Christ Jesus. And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to promise" (Gal. 3: 7 8, 26-29).

Every one, therefore, who becomes a true believer of Christ, whether Jew or Gentile, becomes a child of Abraham and falls under the larger Abrahamic promise. Every Hindu, every Chinaman, every Japanese, yes, every Gentile of every kind, as well as every Jew who becomes a Christian, comes under the great covenant God made with Abraham. Christianity is, then, the final potent factor in the Abrahamic promise and the international promise of the covenant of Abraham is being realized in the spread of Christianity.

What Is Music?

BY J. WILLIAM MILLER

In looking over the past, one finds that music is the very oldest of all the arts. In fact, it may be said to be the foundation on which all other arts are built, or rather the soul of all art. We might say, in the last analysis, it connects divinity with humanity.

It is almost beyond question that in an ancient past a civilization existed in Egypt,—the most wonderful

Easter Thoughts

BY IDA M. HELM

THE resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead is the very pith and brawn of the Christian faith. Without it the doctrine of the virgin birth, the sacrificial death,—all the ordinances and teachings of the Word fall to the ground. The tenor of all Old Testament scriptures points to the priceless sacrifice on Calvary and the vanquished tomb. But we are sorry to say that many people,—and some of them members of the church,—deny the literal resurrection of Christ from the dead. They say that the body that appeared to the disciples was a materialization of the spirit of Christ, for the purpose of convincing the disciples that Christ was alive, and when he left the earth, the materialized body was dematerialized, dissolved and ceased to exist.

If this were true, it was not Christ's body that was alive, but some other materialization, animated for the time being. It was a deception, a camouflage. The apostle says: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished" (1 Cor. 15: 14, 18).

The Bible says: "He showed himself alive by many infallible proofs." "Being seen of them forty days." Jesus walked and talked and ate with his disciples after his resurrection. At one time he appeared in their midst, and "they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit." But Jesus soon dispelled their fears, saying: "Why are ye troubled? . . . Behold, my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet" (Luke 24: 36-40).

1 John 1: 1, Am. Rev., says: "That which was from the beginning, that which we have heard, that which we have seen with our eyes, that which we beheld, and our hands handled, concerning the word of life . . . declare we unto you."

Christ's death was an essential part of his work. The sacrifice of his life and the resurrection of his body were the culmination of his ministry. He says: "I lay down my life, that I may take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father" (John 10: 17, 18).

For three days and three nights Jesus' body lay in the sepulcher, as dead as any body that was dead, but when the old ceremonial Sabbath was past, early on the first day of the week, the empty tomb and the angel messenger proclaimed: "He is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead" (Matt. 28: 6, 7).

Now it is not to be supposed that the resurrected Lord needed to eat to satisfy hunger, or to sustain life, but he ate to show them that he was a tangible, physical being. He showed the wounds made by the cruel soldiers to convince them that it was the same body that had received the stripes, and hung on the cross and died in our stead,—a guilty race. After eating a piece of broiled fish, he said to the disciples in the upper room: "These are my words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must needs be fulfilled which are written in the law of Moses and the prophets, and the psalms concerning me. Then opened he their mind, that they might understand the scriptures; and he said unto them, Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer and rise again from the dead the third day" (Luke 24: 44-46).

Jesus rose from the dead and "old things had passed away, all things had become new." The ceremonial Sabbath melted into the Lord's Day of grace and freedom. The women with their offering hallowed Sunday, the first day of the week, the Christian's day of rest and worship.

Before Jesus ascended into heaven he said: "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations . . . And lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

He sent the Holy Spirit to be our Guide and Comforter. I wish the children and all of us could get this idea firmly fixed in our minds, that the Holy Spirit is the third Person in the Godhead, a real Person. He is our Advocate or Peraclete. A paraclete is a helper, one at our side, one who pleads for another at a court. The Spirit stands at the door of our hearts today, pleading for God, and he is pleading for us at the court of heaven, where Jesus is pleading for us with the Father. He leads us into all truth, as we seek Christ in the Word. He is with us today as truly and really as he was with the pioneer Christians. His voice speaking to us is not a far-away call, heard across nineteen centuries, it is a call today in our very midst: "Come, follow me in the resurrection life."

It is said that "the resurrection shall be but the development of that which now works in the children of God,—the Spirit that now works in us mightily, that is already the resurrection of the soul from the death of sin to the life of righteousness. It is the principle and pledge of our final emancipation from disease and death."

Paul says: "If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwelleth in you, he that raised up Christ Jesus from the dead shall give life also to your mortal bodies through his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Without the power of the Spirit of God, the new birth would be impossible; without the redeeming blood of Christ the estate of sonship would have been unattainable. This is the invariable order: faith in Christ, repentance, baptism, the remission of sins, the gift of the Holy Spirit to lead us into all righteousness, to be our strength, to perfect in the saints the good work begun.

The apostles were weak without the fullness of the Spirit. On that night of dread and gloom and anguish in Gethsemane, the disciples, every one, even the valiant Peter, fled and left the Master to his fate. After Pentecost, endued with the fullness of the Spirit, every one witnessed for Christ with great power, and all except one sealed their testimony with their blood. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

As the gardener knows where every root and bulb and seed is resting in the ground through the long winter, and looks forward to the day when they shall spring up to grace his garden, so Christ treasures the sleeping dust of his saints until the time of God's purpose shall be ripe and then shall the redeemed come forth from the tomb in fadeless splendor as the lovely flowers bloom out of the dark earth. We acknowledge with the apostle: "This is a great mystery." But we can not understand the laws and forces which create and sustain the flowers, and that develop and mature the corn and fruit. Perhaps some glad day it will be plain to us. Christ's victory is our victory. He shall change the body of our humiliation into the glory of his own. "We shall be like him when he shall appear and we shall see him as he is."

She Isn't Here

BY OMA KARN

SADLY I wandered among the resting-places of a beautiful Silent City. The graves of my own loved ones were far away. My heart yearned to be near them, to stand above them, kneel at their side, place a flower upon them,—anything, just to be close to them. An instinctive, irresistible force had brought me to the unfamiliar place in which I found myself. It was as if, denied of the boon for which the heart craved, consolation was tendered in the privilege of silent, meditative ministry, above the resting-place of strangers. Wearied by my strolling among the well-kept mounds I sat down on a rustic seat near one of the wide, graveled pathways.

Some distance away, lying directly in range of my vision, was the plat consecrated to the use of those unable to assume the customary financial obligations, attending the purchase of a home in the city of still sleepers. Still occupied with my homesick thoughts, I only indifferently noticed two children wandering about among the unmarked mounds, many of them bearing evidence of having recently become a part of the Silent City. The two children,—a girl of perhaps eleven years and a boy two or three years her senior,—were apparently searching for a particular mound. A third child, in the toddling age, remained seated in a stout go-cart out on the driveway. I watched them idly, uncomprehendingly, for a moment, then lapsed back again into gloomy introspection.

"Oh, well, it doesn't matter, Bobbie, she isn't here, anyway." The words brought me to myself with a start. A vision of the garden and the angel flashed across my mind,—"He is not here; for he is risen." The next moment I became aware that the two children I had noticed, dragging the heavy go-cart behind them, were advancing along the pathway toward where I was seated. The girl, evidently, was trying to console the boy for some disappointment.

My interest was at once aroused. A smile can do wonders in inviting confidence. Especially is this so with children. It worked on this occasion. In a very short time the girl was seated beside me on the rustic bench. The boy was perched on the stone coping of the bend of the pathway. The baby in his go-cart gurgled delightedly over a dandelion bloom he was engaged in deliberately pulling to pieces. "We can't find Mummy's grave," the little girl explained. "We didn't see her buried, you know. We were all sick with the flu,—daddy and Bobbie and baby and me,—when she died. And we don't know where they have put her." How similar to Mary's words in the garden, "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him." "And,—and,—daddy went away, and has not come back,—and,—and we can't find the place." Then, cheerfully, with a bird-like look up into my face, she said: "I tell Bobbie,—he minds a lot, Bobbie does,—that it really doesn't matter, that she isn't here any more, anyway. She's up in heaven, isn't she?" and she drew closer to me as if in mute confirmation of what she herself half doubted.

Kindred spirits in sorrow and in sympathy, we comforted one another with the Risen Message. After a little while they went on their way,—the little girl still chatting cheerfully for the benefit of her somewhat more reconciled brother, and the wee laddie in the go-cart looking back and waving his chubby hand to the accompaniment of a gurgled "bye."

I, too, rose up and went on my way,—back to duty and to the living. Earlier in the day I had been privileged to listen to a matchless Easter sermon from a noted educator in Bible doctrine. He said many fine, true things, none of which compared with the teaching force of the little maid's artless faith, concerning her mother. "What does it matter, anyway? She isn't here,—she's in heaven."

FINALLY, on the evening of March 14, after a hurried day with passports, baggage, purchasing needed supplies, credentials, and other matters, we sailed from New York harbor at 6:30 and by the time to retire were well beyond the immediate shores of the homeland. The weather during the trip was typical of March,—wind, snow, rain,—with now and then the smiling of the sun just as a suggestion of the coming of spring. We have not had, what could be called a storm, yet the weather was mostly rough and the sea carrying a swell. Our ship rode over it with but little pitching. FINALLY, on the evening of March 14, after a hurried day with passports, baggage, purchasing needed supplies, credentials, and other matters, we sailed from New York harbor at 6:30 and by the time to retire were well beyond the immediate shores of the homeland. We have not had, what could be called a storm, yet the weather was mostly rough and the sea carrying a swell. Our ship rode over it with but little pitching. As I write this we are entering the outer waters of the English channel, expecting to land at Southampton in the morning.

The "Mauretania" is the swiftest vessel in the world, and one of the largest and finest afloat. She power of 70,000. Two English trains could pass each other in each of her four smokestacks, and when she carries over four thousand soldiers and crew, she is a floating city. She has made a speed of 625 miles a day, and has escaped all submarines because of her phenomenal speed. She bears the marks of war, being at one time a hospital ship, and now a transport, taking boys back home. Her beautiful lounge rooms and even parts of the dining-room are used for rudely-constructed soldiers' berths.

The ship is carrying several people of international fame, among them General Pau, of the French, Dr. John R. Mott and Dr. Charles R. Watson, who are both on their way to the Peace Conference. A Y. M. C. A. Secretary is on board who, on the return trip, ministers to the needs of the soldier boys, giving them entertainment, a few delicacies to eat, and religious help.

Our party is composed of nineteen men, all of them leaders in their respective denominations. It would be fine to mention them, and say something of their work, but space forbids. They are all fine Christian leaders and most companionable fellows in association and travel. We have a morning hour of devotion and discussion, which is rich in spiritual help and content. Two mornings Dr. Watson gave us addresses on Mohammedanism and mission work among the Mohammedans, which were masterly in their treatment. He was born in Egypt, the child of missionaries, and is going back there as the educational leader. We spend some time each day on deck, walking, and in other and varied exercises. In the evening we have entertainments of music, old-fashioned spelling matches, and story telling.

We are all interested in the cause which is uppermost in our minds. We shall remain in England only until a boat leaves for Egypt. We may go through France and Italy, and take a boat at Naples, though there are difficulties in continental travel at the present time. It would interest you to see our baggage. Each one has a suit-case and a "Duffel bag" which is a sort of carryall. We literally take up our beds and walk. We are prepared to sleep in the open rather than in bug-infested houses. We carry enough concentrated food to go two days in case the crisis comes. We are going to a land not to be entertained, but to help, and each man of the Commission is determined to do all he can, and get all the information he can, in order to tell the people of America, for Armenia has two friends,—God in heaven and America on earth.

En route, March 20.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Glendora.—For several weeks each Sunday, our elder, Bro. Geo. H. Bashor, has been teaching us concerning God's eternal principles. March 9, Eld. S. E. Yundt, of Pomona, came with a splendid message. The same evening, the Mission Band, from La Verne College, rendered an excellent program. They were accompanied by the District Christian Worker officers who occupied the hour following in setting forth enlarged opportunities and possibilities for endeavor in the Christian Workers' special field of service. March 16 Eld. S. F. Sanger came to conduct a revival of interest and spiritual progress. For two weeks interested listeners were instructed concerning the ordinances and doctrines of Christ's church, their foundation and significance, the principles of salvation, etc. The church has been strengthened and edified. Bro. Bashor expects to continue this timely teaching, concerning the Antichrist, doctrines of the deities, etc. We have set the time for our love feast, to be held May 18.—Mrs. Sylvia L. Netzley, Glendora, Calif., March 31.

Patterson.—March 30 Empire and Waterford met with Patterson in a joint Sunday-school Convention. A large crowd was in attendance and five topics were discussed. The forenoon was devoted to the interest of Sunday-school work. At noon, lunch was served in the basement. The afternoon was spent in the interest of the Christian Workers' Meeting. The next Sunday-school Convention will be held at Waterford July 20.—Mrs. Emma Fellis, Patterson, Calif., March 31.

CANADA

Fairview church met in council March 29. In the absence of our elder, Bro. Daniel Peters had charge of the meeting. One letter was granted. Bro. J. I. Michael was reelected elder. Church and Sunday-school officers were also chosen. April 6 was the time set for the reopening of our Sunday-school. We decided to have a series of meetings and communion some time during the summer.—Mrs. Martha Porter, Osage, Sask., Can., March 31.

COLORADO

Colorado Springs.—We met in council March 24, with Bro. H. F. Crist

The spirit of Christian giving is growing. Eld. Ira A. Lapp, Miami, N. Mex., will begin a series of meetings here July 6. Sunday-school is arranging a program, to be rendered Easter Sunday.—Bettie Root Crist, West Colorado Springs, Colo., April 2.

IDAHO

Clearwater.—We met in council March 29, with Bro. Jas. Harp moderator. Eight were received by letter. Bro. A. J. Detrick chosen elder. Brethren Harp and Detrick were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Brethren J. S. Lehman and Louis Heisler are the Sunday-school delegates.—Mrs. Mollie Harlacher, Lewiston, Idaho, April 1.

Moscow church met in council March 22. Several queries were sent to District Meeting. Brethren Fred Flora and Floyd L. Lear are to act as delegates to District Meeting. It was decided to hold a love feast May 17, services to begin at 7:30 P. M. It was also decided to ask Bro. B. J. Fike to hold a revival meeting, beginning the first week in January.—Arrie Lear, Moscow, Idaho, April 1.

Notice to District of Idaho and Western Montana.—Churches please have their contributions for District Missions in the hands of the treasurer, David Betts, Nampa, Idaho, not later than May 1, if credit is desired in the report for this year. Please see to this at once as many have sent in nothing for this year.—David Betts, Nampa, Idaho, April 1.

ILLINOIS

Bethel church met in council April 2. We reelected Bro. W. Horner, of Chicago, elder for another year. The church decided to extend a call to Bro. J. W. Lear to act as our pastor for a year. Bro. L. H. Root, of Mt. Morris, Ill., has been secured to hold evangelistic meetings, beginning April 13, and extending over Easter. Following these meetings, we expect to hold our love feast April 27, at 7:30 P. M. April 20 the Sunday-school will render the usual Easter program. March 30 Bro. J. W. Lear gave us two very helpful and inspiring addresses.—Estella B. M. Erb, Naperville, Ill., April 5.

Cerro Gordo church met in council April 5, with Eld. R. H. Nademus presiding. He remained over Sunday and gave two excellent messages. Bro. Galen Wallick was chosen delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. Al. L. Brenaman, alternate. Bro. Warren Shock has been secured to hold a series of meetings for us some time this fall. Members of the Bethany Mission Band are expecting to render a program in the near future. Bro. J. C. Brumbaugh, of Chicago, has been secured as pastor and will take up the work the last of April. March 29 Bro. Claybaugh, of Bethany Bible School, gave two stereopticon lectures. Many of the views related to the work being done by Bethany students. Sunday morning he gave us a splendid message. The meetings were well attended.—Hattie Leedy, Cerro Gordo, Ill., April 9.

Dixon church met in council March 31, with Eld. John Heckler presiding. Bro. Chas. Boyd was reflected church clerk. Bro. J. H. Johnson is our delegate to Conference, with Bro. Chas. Boyd, alternate. Our love feast will be held May 25, at 7:30 P. M. Arrangements were made to redecorate the interior of our church. Reports Eld. J. W. Lear gave two splendid addresses. Church interest and attendance are good since the influenza has subsided.—Mrs. J. H. Johnson, Dixon, Ill., April 4.

Elgin.—The ends of the earth met in the "little church on Hoffland" last Sunday. Anna Hutchison, missionary to China, on her first furlough, told us about "Weddings and Funerals" in her chosen country. At the same time, 11 A. M., Sadie Miller, missionary to India, on her second furlough, talked to the junior congregation below stairs. In the evening Sister Miller described the status of women in the country of brown people where she works and also the weddings and funerals in that land of deplorable ignorance. . . . Monday evening Dr. D. Webster Kurtz, President of McPherson College, gave his popular and highly informing address on "The Ideals of Democracy." . . . Tuesday evening Dr. Hugh Wampler, medical missionary to China, on furlough, gave a strikingly revealing stereopticon lecture on "Sanitary Conditions in China." It surely ought to educate pocketbooks for their hospital. The General Mission Board, in session at the Publishing House this week, is considering three programs with us. The junior congregation have paid their pledge for the keep of a French orphan, will cultivate gardens, the proceeds of which are to support a native worker in India, "Punja Ally," and have four junior mission study classes in progress. Great enthusiasm prevails.—Adaline H. Beery, Elgin, Ill., April 9.

Girard church met in council April 8, with Eld. W. H. Shull presiding. Bro. Shull was reelected delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. I. J. Harshbarger, alternate. Bro. Paul Bechtold was elected president of the Christian Workers' Society. The report of the deacons showed that the church is in good working order and we are pleased to see the spiritual activities in both the church and the Sunday-school. A band of workers in the Christian Workers' Society have been singing in private homes two Sunday evenings out of each month. This is appreciated by the ones favored as well as enjoyed by the workers. Bro. D. W. Shock and family will begin pastoral work here May 1. Recently Sister Anna Hutchison gave an address on "The Faithfulness of the Chinese Christians." An offering of $32.90 was taken, to be used by her in the work in China. Dr. S. B. Miller, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was also with us. The drive for the Armenian Relief Fund has been launched in the church by Eld. W. H. Shull.—Ethel Harshbarger, Girard, Ill., April 9.

Hudson.—April 5 we met in council, with Eld. J. W. Switzer presiding. Our elder resigned but will remain until some one is secured in his place. We reorganized our Sunday-school and intend to do the best we can, though we do not have a pastor or elder. Influenza and bad roads have been the cause of no meetings for a long time, and we are glad that better conditions prevail now. Our love feast will be held May 18, at 8 o'clock.—Rebecca L. Snavely, Hudson, Ill., April 5.

Mt. Morris church enjoyed a special day, last Sunday, by the ordaining of Dr. and Sister Fred J. Wampler, whose messages from China field are very impressive. We were also gladdened by the presence of Elder and Sister D. L. Miller, who have lately arrived from California. At our recent business meeting, it was decided to retain Bro. M. M. Sherrick as elder in charge. Since our last report one has been received into the church by baptism.—Nola E. Shirk, Mt. Morris, Ill., April 9.

Virden.—We rejoiced recently when three of our junior Sunday-school girls were baptized. To have them come when there has been no revival effort, has been encouraging to both our pastor and Sunday-school workers. They expect to take part in Eld. F. love feast on Easter Sunday.—Stella Brubaker, Virden, Ill., April

Buck Creek church met in council March 8, with Eld. L. L. Teeter in charge. Three certificates of membership were granted. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. A. C. Priddy; to District Meeting, Bro. L. L. Teeter. Our Aid commission is appointed for Oct. 1, at 10:30 A. M.—Clara Sheets, Mooreland, Ind., April 8.

New Paris.—Bro. Manly Deeter, of Milford, began a series of meetings March 16 and closed March 30. Twelve accepted Christ and one was reclaimed. Ten were baptized on Sunday afternoon, March 30. We held our members' meeting April 1, with Eld. Chas. Arnold presiding. Three were received by letter. It was decided to have Bro. Wampler, of Virginia, conduct a singing school for us some time in June. Bro. Chas. Arnold was chosen delegate to Annual

THE ROUND TABLE

Till He Come

BY MARY STONER WINE

From the noted city Venice
On the Adriatic shore,
Like a crown upon the waters
With its wealth of art and lore,
Comes a story fraught with fragrance
Like the Easter lilies fair,
Bearing to us hope's sweet message
From the depths of deep despair.

Standing there in silent waiting
While the years go rolling by
Is a monument of marble,
In a pyramid built high;
Just within that silent chamber
Lies the precious form in dust
Of a little child of promise
From its earthly parents thrust.

Chiseled in the cold, white marble
With a trumpet in one hand,
Stands an angel fair and shining
Looking tow'rd the glory land,
While the other hand in waiting
Rests upon the fast closed door,
Ready to release the pris'ner
When grim death shall be no more.
Carved upon the door of marble
Speaking, though 'tis silent, dumb,
Bids the waiting angel tarry
"Till he come," yes, "Till he come."

O ye souls who mourn in sadness
O'er the graves of loved and lost,
O ye hearts that break in anguish
For the pain that death has cost,
Standing near that precious loved one
Is an angel fair and white,
Waiting till the heavens open
And the skies are filled with light,
Waiting till the trumpet soundeth
And the clouds a mighty scroll
Part asunder in their glory
And like mighty billows roll,
Waiting till that great archangel
Calls that time shall be no more,
Waiting till the hosts angelic
On the golden, shining shore
Call your dead in Christ to waken
And his resurrection share,
Waiting till they shout, "He cometh,
Lo, he cometh in the air."

Then the earthy, sown in weakness,
From the cold and silent tomb
Clothed in pow'r and raised in glory
Bursts the sepulcher of gloom.
Triumphs o'er the pow'rs of darkness
Bears the heav'nly image fair,
Rising in the pow'r of glory,
Meets the Savior in the air.
Through the blessed Lord, our Savior,
Thanks to God the ransomed sing,
Grave, oh, grave, where is thy vict'ry?
Death, oh, death, where is thy sting?

This Is the Time to Make a Record

BY J. E. YOUNG

How did Jesus make his record? It is one that grows brighter and brighter as the years come and go, —one that can not be erased from time nor eternity. It is made by deeds and words,—by saving life.

Joseph made his record the same way. And so did the woman in Jericho, when she hid the spies. Those opportunities came but once. Yours and mine is here now, in a special way.

Think of it! Not a child in Armenia under five years! All have died! How sad! Listen to the sad story of the missionary who had only food enough for his two hundred orphans for a few months; then all must die. When the supply began to fail, he lined the orphans up before him. Their poor little bodies were emaciated. Not a gleam of joy could be seen in their countenances. The future was dark. He explained to them the situation. Then he said: "What shall we do? Shall we all eat of the food until it is gone? Then all must die. Or shall I pick out eighty, to live until we have hope for more food, letting the other one hundred and twenty go out into the desert, to die in exile?" It was done. The one hundred and twenty marched out to die, as bravely as any American soldier went over the top.

So said an Armenian lady, in her talk to the Huntingdon people on a recent Sunday morning. Had you and I seen the one hundred and twenty,—"A Jerusalem number,"—moving out slowly and feebly to the desert to die, and yet so willingly saving some of their race, would we have said: "Come back, boys, come back, girls, I will save five of your lives. I will save twelve"? Save them now, or many more will perish.

When your sleep is disturbed in the night-watches, like Nebuchadnezzar's was, and you can only toss and think and roll around, would it not be good to offer a prayer something like this: "Holy Spirit, art thou knocking at the door of my heart, asking for admittance? Art thou asking for a surrendered life to do thy will? If thou art, stay longer. Abide with me until I shall open every avenue of my soul. Then thou canst come in and fill my spirit with thy power. Then I shall be satisfied and thy Spirit will raise me up in that great day."

How is it? Will there be many a Zaccheus and Barnabas in this day of opportunity for good?

The Tabernacle, God's First House of Worship

BY ELIZABETH H. BRUBAKER

Did you take another look at the tabernacle, as you passed by Sinai in our current Sunday-school lessons? It is a wonderful object lesson to the Bible student. The tabernacle was divided into two rooms,—the Holy Place and the Most Holy. In the latter place was the ark,—a repository for the testimony, the tables of the law. "Thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee" (Ex. 25: 16; Heb. 9: 4). Here, upon the mercy-seat which covered the ark, shone the awful Shekinah, the outward symbol of the Divine Presence. Here Jehovah communed with his people, representatively, through the high priest.

In the Holy Place was the table for the shewbread, on which were placed twelve loaves every Sabbath,—the priests eating the old loaves. This is a type of Christ, the Nourisher of the Christian's life as a Believer-Priest (1 Peter 2: 9). There was the candlestick, with its seven lamps,—a type of Christ, our Light, and the golden altar, on which was the burning of perpetual incense. Just outside the tabernacle, in the court, was the laver, in which the priests washed their hands and feet before entering the sanctuary. There was also the brazen altar, on which the offerings were made. The brazen altar pointed to the mercy-seat.

Mercy is dependent upon sacrifice. Throughout the Bible we learn that there can be no mercy ministered unto us apart from sacrifice. The latter enables one to worship with reverence and acceptance. The sacrifice gave right of access to the worshiper who came to the ark in the person of the high priest.

Here we have the germs of New Testament truth. Here, the "New Testament is concealed in the Old Testament." The brazen altar suggests blood as being the very first step in the Christian life. The question of sin must first be settled through Jesus Christ, who shed his blood for the sin of the world. Very early, in the history of Israel, God taught them his purposes of redemption through the altar. To approach God, they must go by the altar where the blood sacrifice was made. Then by the laver, typifying daily spiritual cleansing. Then only is man ready to feed on the Bread of Life, typified by the table of shewbread. Guided by the light of God, he is ready to worship at the altar of incense, finally to meet and commune with God in the Holy of holies.

What beautiful progress from the brazen altar to the inner sanctuary! What germs of New Testament doctrine! Repentance, remission, atonement, righteousness, cleansing, holiness, guidance, sustenance, prayer, intercession, worship and communion! Surely, God meant, in all this, to reveal his character, and to declare his purposes. Was it not the design of God to express his great thought of redemption to his people in a typical and symbolic manner? "By laws, ceremonies, institutions, persons and incidents, he sought to keep alive, in the hearts of his people, the hope of a coming Redeemer."

Moses truly preached Christ. "Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me, for he wrote of me" (John 5: 46). Jesus is the Center of the Old Testament Scriptures (Acts 28: 23).

At Sinai God gave Israel the law,—not to make them holy but to show them their need of holiness, to show them their unholiness and their need of a Savior. The law is the Gospel, proclaimed beforehand.

The Fatherhood of God

BY AUGUST P. BECKER

The lost sense of the Fatherhood of God, in Germany, has been the menacing factor of civilization. A great catalog of causes and reasons has been worked out, supposedly sufficient to explain the war.

The emphasis on religious affairs pertaining to God, as current in Germany, has proclaimed him the Absolute and Unrelenting Sovereign of the universe. This idea has shaped and molded the civil government of that country. In a general way such a conception is common throughout Europe. Stern rule and iron discipline have been the guiding principle of empires, as administered by tyrannical emperors. This conception has so influenced science and commerce, that even in the discharge of everyday affairs it has penetrated civic life to an appalling extent, poisoning the kindliest impulses of humanity.

Not merely in the national government is this peculiar tendency apparent, but also in the administration of the average home. Everywhere iron discipline is practiced. I am profoundly convinced that the cruelties, committed during the late war, may be traced, when analyzed, to a false conception of God as Sovereign. To forestall other catastrophies, similar to that so recently experienced,—cataclysms that have penetrated the innermost recesses of the human heart,—we must flood Germany, and all Europe as well, with a new conception of Christianity.

It has been the object of the intellectual giants of Europe to enter upon intense historical researches, and to philosophize on vital issues of Christianity,—not for the propagation of a more active and intelligent spirit of worship, but for the sake of argument and higher criticism. Why? It is due to the fact that the Fatherhood of God is not realized as it should be. The deep spiritual experience, so frequently enjoyed and so sincerely coveted in our lives, is absolutely foreign and alien to a man of that make-up.

For that reason, O Christian pilgrim, let the reality of Fatherhood be recognized more vividly than the Sovereignty of God. Let the love of the Father outshine the sovereign idea. And let me predict that the people who at one time compelled Alexander Mack, Peter Becker, and others, to flee for their life, will ere long beckon, with outstretched hands, for the return of the better spirit which, under the pressure of persecution, was driven from its shores.

Today is heard the cry: "Come over and help us!" Listen to St. Paul's touching appeal: "Ye who are spiritual, restore them." Whom? Our European brethren.

Our Aid Societies

BY ESTELLA B. M. ERB

In looking over the various reports of the Sisters' Aid Societies, which we find in the Messenger from time to time, we are impressed with the good work that can be done by a properly-organized Aid Society, with an aim and a willingness, on the part of the ladies of the church, to support the same. We can not help but feel that a church without a society of this kind is missing a great blessing.

A properly-conducted society will find many avenues of helpfulness.

First, they need an efficient corps of workers, who will do all they can to make it a success.

Secondly, they need, for their support and assistance, every woman of the church, who finds it at all possible to attend and lend her influence.

Our Aid Societies

BY ESTELLA B. M. ERB

IN looking over the various reports of the Sisters' Aid Societies, which we find in the MESSENGER from time to time, we are impressed with the good work that can be done by a properly-organized Aid Society, with an aim and a willingness, on the part of the ladies of the church, to support the same. We can not help but feel that a church without a society of this kind is missing a great blessing.

A properly-conducted society will find many avenues

Thirdly, they need funds,—one of the most necessary items. On the method of acquiring money, societies differ. Some make garments or bedding for sale, and use the proceeds for the advancement of the work, while others take up a free-will offering at each meeting, or at some church service, and thus keep the treasury replenished.

Be this as it may, to give aid should be the prime motive of every society, and there are so many worthy causes. In Deut. 15: 11 are these words: "For the poor shall never cease out of the land. Therefore, I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor and to thy needy in thy land." So, helping the poor should be the chief aim. In this age, when we are receiving so many calls for help from all sources, there is no excuse for any society not doing all the good it can, to all the people it can, and in all the ways it can.

There should be no age limit to the members. None are too old or too young to be of assistance. Oftentimes people get the impression that this organization is only for the middle-aged. Indeed not! But if we want to be really and truly followers of the lowly Nazarene, and do all we can for humanity, we should lend our assistance to this work, and not view it with criticism.

It is a noticeable fact, in most all the reports given, that the average attendance ranges from four to twelve. What is the matter with us, sisters? Isn't it about time we awaken to the fact that we have a great opportunity at our very door of "doing our bit" in a substantial way? I know we mothers are busy with our home duties, but how many of us are there who could not give two or three afternoons a month to this work? We are so selfish; our interests and work are considered above all others. We fear the Master would rebuke us severely on our selfishness if he were to come in our midst.

Another excuse that some give as their reason for not attending, is: "Too much gossip." This may be true in some societies, but those who are conscientious about this, should attend and effect a reformation. Perhaps their own quiet conduct and thoughtfully-chosen words would be an incentive for the rest to be more careful of their words.

The Aid meetings may be turned into great sources of helpfulness, if, while those present are busy with their needles, different subjects of interest could be discussed, such as the various phases of child-life, motherhood, the problems that arise in our household duties, community interests and many other subjects. Of course, an outline should be made of these various subjects, so they could be handled in order, and with the most benefit.

So, then, let us be up and doing, for "the night cometh when no man can work."

Church History and Polity

BY CARMAN COVER JOHNSON

IV. The Elder

THE elder in the Church of the Brethren is not a bishop, though several of our most prominent elders did become popularly known as "bishop," at least within certain limited territory, and the office of District bishop did seem, in certain strong elders in certain Districts and at different times in the past, to be almost an accomplished fact, if not a legal title. The fact is, if it had not been for the recent creation of the District Ministerial Committee, it is not hard to believe that the real office and title of District bishop might have been recognized and created.

At bottom, however, the wholesome mixture of congregationalism, presbyterianism, and episcopacy in our church polity has always been of such quality as to prevent the permanent ascendency of any one of these types of church government in our Brotherhood.

Originally we were very markedly congregational in ly another congregational period. Then set in series of "Annual Meetings" that has run almost re larly down to the present. At first these Annual Me ings seemed to "advise" rather than to "decid The counsels or decisions were often taken up in lo congregations for ratification, there being no "Dist Meetings" until within comparatively recent years

In all these shiftings or stages, however, the el stands out prominently, whether from the point of vi of his own inherent personality, which was v marked in some, or from the point of view of act authority reposed in him,—it matters little. The t centuries of our history are marked in every generat by veritable pillars of Doric strength and simplic in the persons of groups of "Tunker elders," wh very names,—not to speak of their noble countenanc —command admiration and veneration.

The elder properly typifies the authority of the c gregation, embodies that authority, and exercises t authority, and yet is not that authority himself. U like the bishop, in whom authority rests from Peter, the apostles in general, down, an unbroken line by v of "apostolic succession," the elder obtains his thority from and through the people, both in his or nation and in his specific administrations, the peo (the laity, in other words) getting whatever autho they possess directly through the Holy Spirit.

When this matter of the eldership is seen in proper scriptural setting, one can understand why eldership never did and never could grow into a bish ric. If we should ever develop a bishop or bishops, should almost be obliged to abandon the more der cratic and really more nearly Christlike, or at le Pauline, eldership.

Why all this, you say? You have a right to inqu for it may seem far afield. But we need backgrou if we are to make a really significant point in our b discussion of "The Elder," today. It amounts to th We are pursuing the ideal of a "religion of authorit rather than the more fanciful and yet probably v worth-while ideal of a "religion of the Spirit," as French historian, Sabatier, would say. And the id of authority, with us, has centered in the elder sometimes overly-much so.

In the transition stage in which we now find o selves, with pastors, Bible schools, missionaries, Su day-schools and special activities developing very r idly, is the elder losing out? Do we want him to l out? If he does lose out, what becomes of our ideal authority? Should we drop our ideal of authority should we modify it? And if we modify it, shall commit it to other hands? Should we treat the el as an incident, or should we, after all, simply, fran and freely confess and re-avow our devotion to t ideal of authority, raising it from the lower levels legalism into the higher levels of moral and spiritu value and still expecting the elder to embody the id for us as of old?

It is needless for me to add that I am for the rete tion, the development, and the extension of the offi of elder in the Church of the Brethren; and I am co vinced that the coming of the pastor does not real minimize the office of the elder but rather ennobles for I am convinced that the very management and go ernment and administration and discipline of a co gregation, constituting the field of the elder, are su charged with opportunities for moral and spiritual e pression away beyond anything that any of us ev saw in an eldership of legalistic authority.

Twelve accepted Christ and one was reclaimed in the New Paris church, Ind.,—Bro. Manly Deeter, of Milford, same State, evangelist.

Twenty-six were baptized in the Walnut Grove church, Johnstown congregation, Pa.,—Bro. A. B. Miller, of Hagerstown, Md., evangelist.

Seven applied for baptism and one was reclaimed in the Pleasant Mount church, Tenn.,—Bro. Jesse D. Clark, of Jonesboro, same State, evangelist.

Twenty-four were added to the church during a series of meetings in the Mission Sunday-school, Mt. Pleasant, Pa.,—Bro. B. B. Ludwick, of the same place, evangelist.

Eighteen accepted Christ, sixteen of whom have been baptized, and five were reclaimed, in the Clovis church, N. Mex.,—Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Garden City, Kans., evangelist.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. H. B. Mohler, of Sterling, Ill., to begin May 10 at Parsons, Kans.

Sister Mary Martin to begin May 20 in the VanClevesville church, Pa.

Bro. Lewis Hyde, of Chicago, to begin June 15 in the Grandview church, Mont.

Bro. S. J. Burger, of Howe, Ind., to begin May 11 in the Walnut church, same State.

Bro. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, to begin April 20 in the Ross church, same State.

Bro. E. F. Caslow, of Chicago, to begin about July 20 in the Sugar Ridge church, Mich.

Bro. E. G. Diehm, of Royersford, Pa., to begin April 21 in the Everett church, same State.

Bro. Ira M. Lapp, of Miami, N. Mex., to begin July 6 in the Colorado Springs church, Colo.

Bro. F. D. Anthony, of Baltimore, Md., to begin May 11 in the Garrett church, Somerset Co., Pa.

Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe of Marshalltown, Iowa, to begin May 11 in the Thornapple church, Mich.

Bro. Jacob L. Meyers, of Loganville, Pa., to begin May 13 in the Antietam congregation, same State.

Bro. Moyne Landis, of North Manchester, Ind., to begin the last week in April in his home church,—Spring Creek.

Bro. W. G. Group, of York Springs, Pa., to begin April 26 in the Chickies church, at the Chickies house, same State.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. E. E. Woodie, of Winston-Salem, N. C., is to take pastoral charge of the Bluefield church, W. Va.

The General Educational Board held its regular meeting on Tuesday of last week with the full membership of the Board in attendance. The Secretary promises us an early report of the meeting for "Messenger" readers.

Northeastern Kansas has selected Eld. Geo. Manon as its Standing Committee delegate for the coming Conference.

The Standing Committee representative of the District of Tennessee for the Winona Conference is Eld. Jesse D. Clark.

The District of Southern California and Arizona is to be represented on the 1919 Standing Committee by Eld. W. F. England.

Bro. G. W. Hahn, heretofore connected with congregational activities in Indianapolis, Ind., is now located at Pendleton, same State.

Middle Indiana is to be represented on the Winona Lake Standing Committee by Elders Frank Fisher and Otho Winger. One paper is sent to the Conference.

Going Over the Top

The reports which are coming in to us indicate that the church is making a splendid response to the Relief and Reconstruction Appeal. Here are a few gleanings from letters and telegrams:

Pittsburgh, Pa., raised a quota of $425 in four minutes.

Kingsley, Iowa, with a quota of $400, answered with $505.60.

Sterling, Ill., with a quota of $260, raised $304.75.

Middletown Valley, Md., quota not stated, gives $325.

McPherson, Kans., quota not stated, says: "Incomplete returns show $1,432.51 today."

Miami, N. Mex., with a quota of $400, raised $550.

Hagerstown, Md., says: "Over the top, quota one thousand dollars, all pledged."

Spring Creek, Ind., with membership of 155, gives $1,477.77 and reports solicitation not finished.

One correspondent says: "All are happy to give." We believe it. We know it.

Will those congregations which have not yet made their contributions please do so at once? The campaign must close, for the time being, with the end of this month, so as not to interfere with other important interests.

Should any have failed to receive the explanatory literature, do not let this stand in the way. Do not wait longer. Take the offering in cash or pledges, and report at once.

The Lord be praised for the outpouring of his Spirit upon his people!

The Committee.

Bro. I. J. Rosenberger has returned from his winter's sojourn at Sebring, Fla., to his home at Greenville, Ohio. He writes us that he enjoyed greatly his stay in the South.

Correspondents of Bro. Isaac Frantz will please note his change of address from St. Petersburg, Fla., to Covington, Ohio. Brother and Sister Frantz have accepted the call from the Covington church, to assist Bro. Geo. W. Flory in the home and evangelistic fields.

Bro. D. L. Miller and wife reached their summer headquarters at Mount Morris Friday, April 4, after a stop of about one week at Hutchinson, Kans., with Bro. Miller's brother, Eld. A. F. Miller. They had contemplated a longer stay in Kansas, but changed their plans on account of the Mission Board Meeting being held a week earlier than the usual time.

In addition to those mentioned elsewhere, there were present, at a part of the Mission Board sessions, last week, Sisters Pearl Grosh and Sarah Replogle, Bro. Neils Esbensen and Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, Field Director of Religious Education. The first three named are students in Bethany Bible School. Sister Replogle is under appointment for the India Field.

Our mission fields were unusually well represented at the Board meeting last week. There were present Bro. J. F. Graybill, of Sweden, Sister Sadie Miller, of India, and Bro. J. Homer Bright and wife, Bro. F. J. Wampler and wife, and Sister Anna Hutchison, of China. The presence of these missionaries added much to the interest of the meeting and was especially helpful to the Board in considering the problems pertaining to their respective fields.

We were sorry to learn from Bro. J. F. Graybill, of Sweden, on the occasion of his recent visit to Elgin, that Sister Graybill's health is not at all good. She had hoped to attend the Mission Board meeting with Bro. Graybill, but was not able to do so. She is especially desirous of being able to attend and enjoy the Winona Lake Conference. It is feared that an operation may yet prove to be necessary. The prayers of all the faithful are earnestly requested in Sister Graybill's behalf.

Bro. Levi M. Neher, of Warsaw, Ind., Secretary of the Committee of Arrangements for the Winona Lake Conference, writes us that the park and buildings are being put in splendid condition for the meeting. Bro. Neher was made Secretary of the Committee to succeed Bro. J. E. Miller, the former Secretary, now absent on the Armenian Sunday-school Commission. The Chairman of the Committee is Bro. J. L. Cunningham, of Flora, Ind. The other members are D. J. Blickenstaff, Oakley, Ill., A. I. Heestand, Wooster, Ohio, Jacob Coppock, Tippecanoe City, Ohio, E. O. Norris, Ingalls, Ind., G. A. Snider, Lima, Ohio, and J. Edson Ulery, Onekama, Mich. "All are looking forward," says Bro. Neher, "to the greatest and grandest Conference we have ever had at this place."

Bro. J. E. Miller says in a personal letter, written as the party was nearing Southampton: "Our crowd is keeping well. Appetites are fine and the cooking is excellent. But when we really get there it will be another proposition, for telegrams say that conditions are a fright. It makes one shudder to think of it. . . . Mail from now on should go direct to me in care of W. W. Peet, American Bible House, Constantinople, Turkey. This means no mail till June 1, but I expected that when I left."

The General Mission Board met at the Publishing House on Wednesday morning of last week, as previously announced, with all members present, including the Life-Advisory Member, Bro. D. L. Miller. The docket of business was one of the heaviest in the history of the Board. With forenoon, afternoon and night sessions, Wednesday and Thursday, the Board reached the conclusion of its labors by Friday noon. In our next issue we shall attempt to give some account of the business transacted.

MISCELLANEOUS

The General Sunday School Board requests us to announce that it has completed an arrangement for the Third Year Teacher Training Course which will be explained in a leaflet, to appear very soon.

All correspondence regarding lodging at the Winona Lake Conference, we are informed by the Committee of Arrangements, should be addressed to Robert Hatfield, Secretary Lodging Committee, Winona Lake, Ind.

A sudden influx of news from the churches, as well as several lengthier congregational communications, just before going to press, prevents us from finding room for all this material in the present issue. We hope to accommodate this extra matter in next week's "Messenger."

Sister Levi Minnich, Greenville, Ohio, desires us to announce the following: "If there are any secretaries who have not yet reported their work for 1918 to their District Secretary, please do so at once, so they can report to the General Secretary. All reports should be in not later than May 1."

One sister writes, referring to the Armenian Relief Fund, "We have not the privilege of a church here but I want to do all I can. I will send what I had intended for my own needs, but I am convinced that my needs are not so urgent as theirs." Suppose we all felt like that? Why don't we? Isn't the sister right?

The East Wichita church, Kans., will ere long be without a pastor,—Bro. M. S. Frantz, who labored in that capacity for some time, having decided to move to California. Any minister who may feel impressed to offer his services to this needy church, may learn further particulars by addressing Sister Grace Schul, 1321 N. Lawrence, Wichita, Kans.

Bro. S. Z. Smith, Sidney, Ohio, desires us to make special mention of the following: "The District Meeting of Southern Ohio is to be held at Pleasant Hill, Ohio. Elders' Meeting is to convene May 7; General District Conference, May 8. The Secretary desires that all queries, and other matters of business be in his possession ten days prior to the meeting. Mail all such papers to S. Z. Smith, 320 Grove Street, Sidney, Ohio."

After the other pages were already completed, the following notice was received from Bro. H. K. Ober, District Clerk of Eastern Pennsylvania: "The annual sermon on the evening before the business session of District Conference, this year, will be preached by Bro. J. F. Graybill, who, with his wife, recently returned from Sweden, where they spent the past seven and one-half years in the service of the General Mission Board. His subject is: 'The Mind of Christ Concerning Missions.' Remember the date and place: Wednesday evening, April 30, at Palmyra, Pa."

AROUND THE WORLD

How Peace Terms Will Help Germany

While the conditions of peace, to be imposed upon the central powers, may be stringent, in many respects, some of their very restrictions are conducive to large financial savings. By the latest decision of the Peace Commission the German army is reduced to 100,000 men only. This, compared with the millions, supported heretofore, means a saving of at least eighty-five per cent by way of taxes,—an amount well worth considering at this time of Germany's great financial distress. All conscription is also abolished under the proposed peace terms. It is to be hoped that the allied nations, also, will see the great propriety of adopting like measures of reducing military forces.

Increasing Remonstrance to Fashion's Decrees

In many parts of our land the women are unanimously rising in denunciation of the arbitrary and senseless decrees of fashion. One of the most vigorous protests was entered into by the women of Sioux City, Iowa. They have issued a declaration that hereafter they will boycott anything in the dress line that is not sane and sensible. The gentler sex may have been a little slow in awaking to a realization of fashion's grievous bondage, but now, since the truth has become apparent and is duly recognized, we may rest assured that something of importance is going to happen. No longer will the dictators of fashion's vagaries decree what women are to wear, no matter how absurd or uncomfortable.

Promise of Peace Signed by Easter

Thanks to President Wilson's positive stand, the Peace Conference appears to be nearing an agreement on the essential points of peace conditions. Assurances are given that by Easter the proposed document may be ready for signatures. Should this statement prove to be correct, it will be received with profound gratitude by every lover of peace, and all the more so, since at this time war-like demonstrations are reported from at least twenty-seven places throughout the world. The early signing of the treaty of peace will go far in bringing about orderly conditions elsewhere, as much of the unrest, causing anxiety at the present time, might be wholly allayed by the salutary effect of decisive action by the great powers.

More Optimism Needed

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, the well-known author of "What Would Jesus Do?" is urging a reform in present-day methods of conducting funerals. He sees no reason why these occasions,—sad as they are, naturally,—should be wrapped in the deepest of gloom, when, according to every warrant of the Scriptures, they should be characterized by the most hopeful attitude. He maintains that the minister should emphasize more strongly the precious truths concerning a life beyond, as voiced by Christ and the apostles. Dr. Sheldon closes his plea with these words: "When I die, I want my people to sing the most exultant, triumphant songs in the hymn book. Let there be no dirges, no mournful plaints, but rather let there be pæans of victory. 'O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?'"

We Must Not Forget India

Famine conditions in India are still appealing to the heart of Christendom for adequate relief of its extreme need. The matter can not be dismissed by asking what the Government of India means to do,—all it can do will be inadequate. And at any rate,—as a missionary expressed it,—Christianity can not afford to leave the matter of succor for the starving, to the Government alone. The famine-stricken people must be given food in the quickest and most efficient way possible, ever remembering that, as we minister to these needy ones, we are ministering unto Christ himself. It is well, also, to remember the strenuous remarks of the apostle James, on the uselessness of telling a brother or sister to be warmed and filled, when "ye give not the things needful to the body." Here is a fine chance to prove our sympathy by our works.

Help Armenia Now!

As most of our readers have already learned, the winter in Armenia and the Caucasus has been exceedingly severe, causing intense suffering and great mortality among the refugees. "The Independent" tells us that in Erivan, the chief city in Russian Armenia, 45,000 are absolutely without bread. Even the Government has not a pound to give to the troops or the orphans. In all the Igdir region there is no meat. Not a single dog, cat, horse or camel is left alive. Quite recently a relief agent saw hinder. Misery is alarmingly spreading. The number of destitute refugees in the Western Caucasus alone is no 330,000. In Asia Minor the Turks are setting adrift a increasing number of Armenian women and children Food and supply ships, sent from New York recently have reached Turkey, and twenty cars of supplies hav by this time reached the interior of Asia Minor. But mo help is needed and should be given. It is a debt of hono

Great Dreadnaughts Superseded

Only recently the great superdreadnaught "Idaho" wa launched,—said to be the largest of its kind, and ampl able to back up the strongest claims that may be urged b our Government. There are twelve huge fourteen-inc guns and plenty of other equipment to make her a mos formidable fighting machine. Fifty-six officers and 1,14 men constitute her crew, but ere long they may see flyin above them an airship with four engines of 500 horse power each. In that machine the observing naval office will speedily see the end of all superdreadnaughts. A the cost of one ship like the "Idaho," a hundred flyin machines can be built, each one capable of sinking th "Idaho," though requiring but a crew of four men. Ap parently, therefore, the further construction of large bat tleships will simply mean the furnishing of additional tar gets at which the fatal flying machines can hurl their de structive volleys.

Our Blessed Hope

WHEN all in life fails in its promise, and all our optimism is buried, seemingly forever, the Angel of Hope still sits by the sepulcher and points to another life, where the inequalities of this one are adjusted, where the first is last, and the last is first. If there were no life but that which we see in this world, human existence would be an appalling tragedy. But the soul-life is endless, and this world is but its primary school. A sure optimism must reach beyond the earth life. Optimism in an army is called "morale"; in religion it is called "faith." Both are phases of the same attitude toward the world and life. A life well lived, and rightly adjusted to both the transient and the eternal, rises superior to every possible fate. We need optimism for health, for courage, for happiness. We get it by harmony with God and with his laws. Achieving this, nothing can finally go wrong. "God's in his heaven,—all's right with the world!"

Reconstruction Work in Palestine

These are busy days in the Holy Land. Reconstruction workers are laboring with unabated zeal. Orphanages are looking after the wants of hundreds of homeless children. A day nursery admirably cares for the smallest children, and releases the mothers who are among the 600 women, doing sewing for the British army. The Red Cross is giving special attention to health and sanitation problems. Many of the valuable olive trees having been cut down by the Turks, to furnish fuel for the railroads, the British soldiers are now setting out new trees in all waste places. Trees are also being planted in streets and towns all over Palestine. Many eucalyptus trees are to be planted, to purify the air. On the new railway from Palestine to Egypt, farm products will soon be shipped everywhere. British forces are building reservoirs on the heights around the Holy City, so that the surrounding country can be irrigated in the dry season. Improvement everywhere is the order of the day.

"A Captain of Industry"

Frank W. Woolworth, merchant and man of visions, died at his home in Glen Cove, L. I., April 8. He left as a monument the tallest building in the world,—the most beautiful of the turrets in the New York sky-line. The further fact that he leaves behind him possessions to the amount of $40,000,000 and beyond, is not of as great moment as the more important lesson that, even though visions may have a scant substantial basis, they can be made to come true. Mr. Woolworth's younger days were hardly indicative of special ability or genius,—so far as his employers were able to perceive. The meager stipend of $3 per week was only slowly advanced to $10, and his subsequent discharge must have been truly disheartening. He tried farming and failed. Again returning to store activities, he was given charge of a counter, stocked with five and ten cent bargains. There it was that young Woolworth saw a vision of possibilities that was more than an idle dream. Utica, N. Y., was the city in which his first commercial venture was launched, and the success achieved led to the starting of additional five-and-ten-cent stores in other cities of New York and Pennsylvania. HOME AND FAMILY

Eastertide

BY MYRA WELCH

The wind has stripped the branches,
The swirling, drifting leaves
Seek shelter in the gutter
And trough along the eaves.
The merry little brooklet,
That laughed and sang with glee
In nature's lap is sleeping
As quiet as can be.

The roses all are fading,—
And e'en the fairest die,
As dark and murky storm-clouds
Sweep o'er the wintry sky.
Then over all, in silence,
A blanket white and clean
Is wrapped about securely
And winter reigns supreme.

* * *

At length the breezes soften,—
The snow-drift slips away.
The buds burst forth in blossom,
And nature seems to say:
"Ho winter! Where's your viet'ry?
Ho frost! Where is your sting?
Though mighty in your season
You can not conquer spring!"

And so the Loving Father
Has set the bounds of death,
Though mighty in his season
To stop the halting breath.
And ev'ry bursting blossom
And ev'ry springtime flower
Proclaims the resurrection
And demonstrates its power.

Breaking Engagements, Is It Ever Right?

BY NORA E. BERKEBILE

THELMA, the romp, the light-hearted one, the life of whatever company she was in, was just now in an extremely quiet mood. It was rather a troubled mood than a quiet one, although she sat so still on the low stool in Aunt Margaret's sitting room, with elbows on knees and her dimpled chin resting in the cup formed by the upturned palms of her beautifully-formed hands.

Auntie did not disturb her. She knew she would speak out her troubled mind. For some time Aunt Margaret had noticed a restless, troubled look in the eyes of the usually light-hearted girl. She had imagined the cause, but kept her thoughts to herself.

Dicky sang away in his cage, the kettle sang softly out on the kitchen range, and Aunt Margaret kept on sewing. Still Thelma sat silently gazing at the toe of her slipper.

Then she suddenly looked up, saying: "Aunt Margaret!" "Yes, Thelma, child, what is it?"

"Is it ever right to break an engagement,—a betrothal, I mean? You see, I know a girl who is very much troubled over this question and I thought, perhaps, you might give me some advice to help her," and again she gazed at the shining toe of her slipper.

"Well, girlie, I scarcely know how to answer you," replied Aunt Margaret. "'Circumstances alter cases,' you know. Many betrothals have been broken for a mere whim, because of a sudden flare of temper, a jealous thought, or some other trifling thing, and many hearts have ached a lifetime because of it.

"But there are cases where it is right to break an engagement, although I would not want to say anything that would cause people to think it right to do so on the least provocation. There are too many sad hearts now, because of such things, without giving encouragement to it. But I repeat, it is sometimes the only right thing to do, to break an engagement."

"For instance, Auntie?"

"Well, one in particular I remember. She was a dear friend of mine. She loved a man, and was engaged to marry him. He came from a fine family and she felt he was worthy of her love. But a short time before their marriage was to take place, she learned he had been untrue. When he came, she asked him if the report was true. He confessed, but begged her to forgive him. She had loved him very much, but now she told him to go, although it broke her heart to know he was false. She begged him to go repair the wrong as nearly as possible, and marry the girl he had ruined. Any one would say that she did right in that case to break her vow to marry him."

"That is an extreme case, Auntie. This girl I am talking about is promised to a splendid young man,—one who respects womanhood and is a perfect Christian gentleman. She thought she did love him when she promised him. They have been engaged quite a while, but he lives in a different city, quite a distance from her home and only comes to see her occasionally. They have put off the marriage several times and sometimes she imagines he does not love her as a man should love the woman he marries. Her parents think he is the only one for her. Of course she likes to go out in company with the other young people and he not being here, she has gradually fallen to the lot of an old chum, as the other young people pair off, going here and there. The old friend is also engaged to a girl who lives away from his home town. They speak of the absent sweetheart and lover to each other, and each knowing that the other was engaged, they felt that it was the proper thing for them to do, to be chummy rather than to pair off with some one else. But they failed to reckon with the power of propinquity.

"One day they awoke with a shock to find that they were desperately in love with each other. Their very hearts cried out for each other. She knew he was her man. He knew she was his woman, although both were plighted to another. At first they bravely decided that they would part, but the binding tie was too strong.

"Her parents began to realize the state of affairs. They scolded, they tried to keep them apart and then, as a last resort,—knowing how conscientious the girl is,—they told her that the betrothal is really the marriage before God, and is almost as binding as the marriage vow. She had always been taught that the marriage tie is only severed by death. She knew God never meant people to separate and remarry, and knew the punishment connected with such a step. 'Now, if the engagement is as binding as the marriage,' she thought, 'by breaking it and marrying some one else I shall be lost.'

"Between threatenings and pleadings she is almost distracted. She needs help and advice, so that is why I asked you the question." Big tears were glistening in her eyes, her face was white and her lips quivered, and Aunt Margaret knew that the girl referred to was the one before her, but she pretended not to know it and said: "Poor folks! I wish I could help them. They must not make shipwreck of four lives. There may be something of the heroic in promising to give each other up, and following what some might call the right way. These two, who love each other so, might be able to make the sacrifice,—might be able to be good, kind companions to those they have promised to marry, but the risk is too great. Thelma, do you think it is right for young people to ever marry without love?"

"No, Auntie, it does not seem right, I know, but then there comes in the promise, you know."

"All right. Suppose this girl you speak of decides to give up the man she loves and marries the one she thought she loved, and when she comes to that part of the ceremony where she promises to love and to cherish until death, what does she do then? She then and there tells the untruth, and that is not all, for she must daily live an untruth, for she must pretend she loves when she does not. Had she better break her promise before she spoils four people's happiness for life, or go on and keep it and be a living lie all her life? Ah, Thelma, a promise should not be lightly given, but if it has been given and given in all good faith, and one finds she can not keep it, then the brave thing to do is candidly to confess that she can not keep it, and ask to be absolved.

"That girl, no doubt, loves her parents dearly and does not want to grieve them. She respects and admires the man she has promised to marry, but even this should not be the main point to consider. Do you think that man would want only the husks of her love? He does not know she loves some one else. If he knew and if he is a good, true man he would not want her without her love, and no one could do another a greater wrong than to marry that one when the heart belongs to another.

"I would pity the girl if she kept her promise. I would pity the man she loves, but most of all I would pity the man she marries, for he is the most wronged of all. Should he love her most devotedly, he had far better go through life alone than to be tied to a woman whose heart is another's. She can be good and kind and all that, but, ah, he will be able to see through the veneer to the empty heart beneath."

"Auntie, haven't parents any right at all in this?"

"Parents should advise, teach, warn against what might prove an unhappy marriage, but they have not the right to force their choice of a companion when there is no love in the child's heart for the person. Some parents have advised: 'Marry him. It is a good match. You may not get such a chance again. If you do not love him much now, love will come afterwards.' If love isn't there, better miss all the 'matches' and go through life alone.

"No, Thelma, that girl, and not her parents, must live with the man she marries, so she should decide who it should be. But there is one thing I should advise her to do, before she decides the question, and that is to get away for a time from the persuasion of her parents and from the man she loves, and take time to think over the situation, hearing neither from her lover nor the other man. She may possibly, by being absent from the one she thinks she loves, find that, after all, it may be merely infatuation and not real true, down-deep love.

"Ah, Thelma, these things must not be lightly considered; nor should engagements be lightly broken. But when once awakened to the fact that you have made a mistake, walk up bravely and confess, even though it be but five minutes before the ceremony. It would be better for both to suffer the humility of a broken engagement, and the censure of friends and enemies, rather than be bound for life where love is not. Do not think that I want to put a discount on the advice of parents to children on this question. They have a right to try to persuade them not to marry any one they know to be undesirable, but they have not the right to make their child marry some one the child does not want. I hope you see my point in this."

"Thanks so much, Auntie," said Thelma, in brighter spirits now. "You have said things that I am sure will help the girl to decide right. I am almost sure, too, she will go away for a while where she can not be influenced by either side, and when she is sure, she will decide to marry where love is greatest."

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

ARCADIA, FLORIDA

March 30 we accompanied Bro. J. H. Garst to Arcadia, fifty miles distant by automobile route. We met with the little band of believers in members' meeting, with Bro. Garst presiding. The most important item of business was a movement looking to the securing of a resident minister, to take charge of the work in Arcadia and the surrounding community.

Arcadia, with a population of not far from five thousand, is the center of an immense fruit and cattle industry. The soil is suited to the production of the best of vegetables. Here the Brethren have a neat chapel, all paid for. There are about twenty resident members, but no resident minister. Bro. S. W. Ball and wife, who have a good winter home and other property here, have been looking after the Sunday-school and preaching services during the winter months. They go north soon and that leaves the church without a minister.

Part support for a minister has already been pledged, and more will be secured. The plan is to secure a minister adapted to the work in an enterprising southern town, who can provide a part of his own support, or is willing, as was Paul, to do some work with his hands. Bro. J. H. Garst, of Sebring, is elder in charge, and any energetic minister, desirous of doing a good work for the Master at a point where his efforts will be appreciated, should communicate with him. The call is not a money-making proposition, but it is a splendid soul-saving undertaking, and we know of no better opening in the South for that purpose.

It was our pleasure to address a very attentive audience on Sunday morning. After having enjoyed the splendid hospitality of Brother and Sister Bail, we drove home, reaching Sebring in time to attend our evening services, where we listened to an exceedingly interesting sermon by Bro. D. H. Zigler. Bro. Zigler is a strong man in the pulpit, and the members in Sebring will look forward to his return in the coming fall. J. H. Moore.

BOYS' BOARDING-SCHOOL NOTES, INDIA

Growth.—At Vali there has been the largest growth, an increase from twenty-six, at the beginning of 1918, to sixty-four, at the close of January, 1919. About thirty were gained during the past month. This increase comes from two sources: (1) The third standard boys from Anklesvar, a class of seven, went to Vali at the beginning of the year, for fourth standard work. (2) Many parents, who have neither work nor food for their children, now are sending them to the Boarding-school. Famine conditions there are more keenly felt than at some other places in our field. This growth promises to continue. The District Mission Board, at a recent meeting, decided to send five of the eight boys in the little Boarding-school at Rudha, a village in the southern part of the Rajpipla State, to Vali, looking forward to the closing of the Rudha Boarding-school. According to present plans, the Anklesvar boys are to go to Vali. Others will continue to come from the villages around Vali, hence it will only be a short time when it will become our largest Boarding-school.

The Wankal Boarding-school, situated among the aboriginal tribes to the east of Bulsar, has increased, during the past year, from twenty to fifty. Twenty-two of this number have come from Jalalpor. Bro. Emmert had a small boys' Boarding-school for several months on the compound at Jalalpor. Prior to his going to America, arrangements were made to send these boys to the Wankal Boarding-school, where they would be associated with boys of their own caste. When it came time to go, many of their associates in the villages they were from, had decided that the Boarding-school must be a good place to go to, hence there were twenty ready to go in place of six or eight. Later, two Christian boys, who had refused to take advantage of the Boarding-school at Jalalpor, also went to the Wankal school.

The Boarding-school at Vada is still in its infancy. It is a new thing for the people, and they are not ready to send their children. Consequently orphan boys were brought over from the American Marathi Mission, who were unable to care for them. This increased the number of boys from three to twenty. Vada has had to depend on other missions for their workers, many of whom have proved to be unworthy. The hope is that from these boys will come a number of trusty workers.

The Boarding-school at Dahanu is at a village three miles east of the compound, making close oversight difficult. An increase from twelve to twenty during the past year is reported. When cholera broke out among them, a few weeks ago, they were brought to the mission compound, where they might be better cared for. Four died from this awful disease. The others who had it recovered and have since returned to the Boarding-school.

The people in the Dangs are slow to send their boys to the Boarding-school. Nevertheless, during 1918, the Ahwa Boarding-school increased from twelve to fifteen. At Bulsar there are forty-two, and at Vyara, seventy-five. No increase is reported at either place. Last year the Anklesvar Boarding-school increased from forty-four to fifty-five. This number has not been maintained during the past month, owing to seven going to Vali, and also because of the breaking out of smallpox soon after the first of the year. Two were sent home with the disease. Of three others, one had it in severe form and died, not having been vaccinated in time. The other two have nearly recovered. Others went home on account of fear, so the school will hardly reach its normal size before the boys will be sent to Vali.

In round numbers, the total number in our Boys' Boarding-schools is 340,—an increase of one hundred during the past year. In comparison with that we have 140 girls enrolled in Boarding-schools, as previously reported,—an increase of fifty during the year. This gives us a total of 480 children in our Boarding-schools, and a total increase of 150. How much famine conditions will increase that number, remains to be seen.

Since the above was written, this word comes from Vyara: "We count about seventy boys, usually, in the Vyara Boarding-school, besides some half dozen in night school. The night school boys are laborers by day. Some of our little fellows are irregular, hence we do not enroll them the first year."

Teaching.—The training of our boys in our Boarding-schools is to make them mentally, physically and morally fit for larger life and service. The intellectual training is fundamental to material and spiritual progress. People in this country are considered illiterate who have not studied farther than the first standard. According to the totals of our Boarding-school report for 1917, in the primary and first standard are listed 253 pupils, while those listed in the standards above that, number only 205. Thus, for that year the number of illiterates was forty-eight above the number of literates. Those numbers include the day-school pupils who live with their parents. This will take a turn for the better, in time, as many of these schools have not been in existence long enough to develop their pupils to the higher standards. For instance, the Bulsar Boys' Boarding-school is one of our oldest schools. It has pupils in all seven standards. The 1917 report shows twenty-seven in primary and first standard and thirty-nine in the six higher standards, thus giving the literates a majority of twelve over the illiterates. The Bulsar school is the only one reporting seventh standard pupils for that year.

The Anklesvar Boarding-school teaches only to the third standard. After that the pupils go to Vali for fourth and fifth standard work. Next year the Vali school will teach the sixth standard for the first time. Unless the seventh is added later, the boys who wish to go on after finishing the sixth, will go to Bulsar for the seventh. The Bulsar Boarding-school consists largely of boys from our Christian homes, many of whom are from Anklesvar and Vali. Several of our village teachers, who had not completed the seventh standard, are doing so this year at Bulsar.

The boys are also taught how to work, for it is very important in this land, where the educated feel it is beneath their dignity to labor with their hands, that the boys not only learn to appreciate the dignity of labor but also that they should learn a trade whereby they can make a living. At Vali, Vyara and Bulsar we have carpenters who teach the larger boys how to make chairs, desks and other pieces of furniture. There is also considerable gardening at most of our stations, which provides work for the boys, who assist in watering and caring for the plants. A gardener oversees their work. This not only teaches the boys how to grow different vegetables but it also provides beans, onions, tomatoes, etc., for the missionary's table and also for the Boarding-school children. These vegetables are usually paid for the same as if bought in the market. This helps to meet expenses of the gardens. Gardening and carpentry are also being provided for the Wankal Boarding-school. Provisions for the teaching of agriculture at Vali is under way since there is plenty of land near for practical farming. There is one place, among others, where our agricultural missionary will be of great help.

Our Boarding-schools are especially valuable in that they provide a Christian environment in a heathen land. Christian teaching and Christian influences have every chance at the boys, since they are removed from the evil and corrupting influences of the heathen environment, found in their villages. Consequently, the boys who have been in the Boarding-school long enough and are old enough, naturally become Christians. Last year six of the Vali and thirteen of the Anklesvar Boarding-school boys were baptized. The outer appearance of the boys is only an index to the cleansing within. In place of the dirty, ragged, half-clothed or naked boys, many of whom smoke, commonly seen in the villages (the same is true of the girls), our Boarding-school boys are clean, and neatly dressed, while their clear eyes and bright, intelligent faces fairly sparkle with new life! They do their own washing, too,—a regular occurrence on Saturdays. Where there were Christmas programs, as reported at Vali, Anklesvar and Bulsar, the boys had a prominent part in the exercises. They often go to villages with their teachers and others for evangelistic services. They help with the singing, and the speakers often point out the contrast between them and the village children who are always present at such times. In December, at an evening service before Sister Zigler's tent at Sagapur-bata, nearly three hundred people were present. Bro. Stover called upon the Christians present to testify, there being none in that village but the Christian master and his wife. The other Christians, who were present, were from Anklesvar. Among those who testified was Chagan, aged thirteen, one of our third standard Boarding-school boys, who had come along that evening to drive the bullocks. He told them that he was a Christian and spoke to them for a few minutes of the great benefit that he and the other boys were receiving at the Boarding-school. These boys are not only accepting Christ and being trained for Christian service but they are serving the Lord now more faithfully than many who are older. Truly, the future leadership of the Indian church is in the making in our Boarding-schools. Pray earnestly for the teachers and missionaries whose responsibility it is to father and mother these children. Increasing numbers of these children are seeking admittance into these schools! A. T. Hoffert.

feast, at which about fifty members were present. The meetings were well attended, with a marked interest from the beginning. The church feels greatly blessed and revived. Five renewed their covenant and eighteen accepted Christ, sixteen of whom have been baptized. Our Sunday-school reaches its interest and numbers, the attendance having gone over the one hundred mark far three Sundays.—Minnie B. Rodes, Clovis, N. Mex., April 8.

Miami church had a "red letter" day March 30. The attendance was larger than it had been for some time. Our pastor, Bro. Ira Lapp, preached his first sermon since recovering from pneumonia. The theme was "The World's Need," with special emphasis upon suffering America. After a strong appeal, he set the goal of $400 for us. The result of the day's collection was $535 and several pledges yet to be received. We are looking forward to the coming of Bro. Manly Deeter to begin a series of meetings April 6.—Mrs. M. N. Mikesell, Miami, N. Mex., April 8.

NORTH DAKOTA

Salem church met in council March 28, with Eld. J. W. Shively presiding. Bro. Isaac Wagoner was reelected clerk. Bro. O. G. Mills, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. J. W. Shively, elder. Three letters were granted. Our church work was hindered considerably this winter, on account of so much sickness, but services are again held regularly and the work is growing. We are planning an Easter program. Our young people's meeting will be reorganized. Our series of meetings will commence in June, with Bro. D. M. Shorb in charge. Bro. Geo. Studebaker will lead the song service.—Mertie Van Art, Starkweather, N. Dak., April 7.

OHIO

An Appreciation.—In behalf of our entire body af church workers in the Cleveland field, we desire to express the intense sorrow we feel in our pure in the sudden death of Sister Trellis Hartley. By reason of her quiet, strong spirituality and sweetly of heart, she had found a place with us that will be hard to fill. In our church work, especially, will her loyalty, interest and help be greatly missed. Our sympathy goes out to Bro. Harley in his bereavement.—C. E. Copeland, Cleveland, Ohio, April 5.

Cincinnati church met in council April 4, with our pastor, Bro. R. H. Leatherman, presiding. Sister Knoepfle was appointed church clerk for one year. It was decided to hold a love feast, together with the Constance, Kentucky, Mission at this church, May 31, at 7 P. M. Bro. Leatherman was elected delegate to the Annual Conference, and Sister Knoepfle, delegate to the District Conference. The work is rapidly on the increase at this place. At present we have six large classes in the Sunday-school and could easily have ten, if teachers were available. This is a large and pleasant field in which to work and the need of helpers is great.—Mabel Knoepfle, Cincinnati, Ohio, April 6.

Notice to the Churches of Northwestern Ohio.—The Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings will be held at Deshler, Ohio, August 26-28. Programme will appear later. Those desiring a visit of the Sunday-school and Missionary Secretary, will please corresponed.—Walter D. Landes, Lima, Ohio, April 9.

Ross church met in council April 5, with Eld. J. A. Guthrie presiding. We are expecting a series of meetings to begin April 20, with Bro. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, as evangelist. Our love feast is to be held May 10, at 2 P. M. Our people are going to do their bit in the Relief and Reconstruction Work. We desire to "go over the top." Our pastor, Bro. Wm. Forest, was elected delegate to Annual Meeting.—Mrs. Gertrude Guthrie, Spencerville, Ohio, April 5.

OKLAHOMA

Paradise Prairie.—We have changed the date of our meetings, and they will commocee May 11. Our love feast will also be deferred to May 24. Bro. Ray Wagoner, of Enid, was with us March 23 in the interest of the Child Welfare Mission. He gave two sermons during and gave a lecture in the evening, both of which were very much appreciated. Monday and Tuesday nights following, Sister Lydia E. Taylor, of Mt. Morris, Ill., lectured on " The Simple Life."—Cassie Carrier, Coyle, Okla., April 8.

Thomas church met in council March 29, with our elder presiding. Bro. F. E. Marchand was reelected elder; Bro. B. F. Stutzman, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Albert Williams, Christian Workers' president. A charity fund was arranged for, with Bro. Jos. L. Hutchison as receiver and distributer. A committee was chosen to secure an evangelist for meetings this fall. We will have no feast this spring. The Sunday-school was reorganized. Our elder will represent us at Annual Meeting. Brethren Robert Gripe and Frank Showalter were called to the deacon's office. Recently Sister Taylor gave an address on "The Simple Life."—Albert L. Williams, Thamas, Okla., April 3.

Washita church met in council April 4. Eld. J. R. Pitzer presided. We decided to hald our spring lave feast April 19, at 6 P. M. We put in a call for the District Meeting, to be held here the last of August. April 1 and 2 Bro. Ira Lapp was with us and gave good lectures on "Clothes and Character." Early a unanimous call to serve as pastor for two mare years, in addition to the one year he has yet to serve. We expect to hald our love feast May 25, at the Berkey house. Owing to the epidemic, aur series of meetings was postponed. Bro. H. S. Replogle, who had been secured, can not be with us this spring, so we have decided to wait until next fall unless some one else can be secured now.—Mrs. J. H. Weaver, Martinsburg, Pa., April 8.

Spring Creek.—We met in caunci1 at the Spring Creek house March 4, with Eld. J. H. Longenecker presiding. The membership was well represented. Five certificates were received and nine were granted. Eld. Longenecker was reelected elder. Bro. C. Edw. Frank S. Carpet; to District Meeting, Brethren Aaran Grubb, Benjamin Ebersole, Amos S. Blauch, Irvin Allwine. Our elder gave us a very interesting talk at the close of the meeting. We met in another council at the Palmyra house, March 31, with Eld. J. H. Longenecker presiding. A committee of arrangements was elected,—five deacons,—to arrange for the District Meeting to be held at the Palmyra house April 21-23. Our love feast will be held at the Spring Creek house, May 31 and June 1. We also decided to hold an election for a minister April 21.—Elizabeth Blauch, Palmyra, Pa., April 7.

Wainut Grove church, Johnstown congregatiaa, concluded a three weeks' series af meetings March 30. Bro. A. B. Miller and wife, of Hagerstawn, Md., were with us. Bro. Miller's sermons were inspiring and convincing, and the twenty-six who were received into the church by baptism. Our pastor, Bro. Clyde Horst, had charge of the music, which added much to the meetings. Bro. Horst met with the children a number of times for instruction, before receiving them into the church. He has announced a splendid "fallaw-up" program for the next six weeks which, we hope, will keep the revival spirit with us. Feb. 16 the Mission Band of Juniata College, represented by Sister Statler, Maynard Cassady, Grace Stayer and Nettie Gregory, rendered a much appreciated program. We held our general council April 4. Bro. Harry Shaffer and wife were installed into the deacon's office. Brethren L. B. Harshberger and S. W. Pearce were elected delegates to Annual Meeting and Brethren C. W. Harshberger, Gilbert Shumaker, L. B. Harshberger, S. N. Pearce and Sister Horst, delegates to District Meeting. It was decided to purchase individual communion cups. Bra. C. Thurnapple church expects to have the assistance of Bro. J. Edwin Barboe and wife in a series of meetings beginning May 11. Bro. P. B. Messner was chosen to represent the congregation at Annual Meeting, with Bro. Wm. Smith, alternate. Eld. S. M. Smith, whose health has prevented his active ministerial work during the past winter, was enabled to give another of his forceful messages of divine truth March 30. One week previous we had been favored by a visit from Bro. E. Miller, wife and daughter, of Grand Rapids. Their presence and work were much appreciated. Last Sunday all enjoyed an interesting discourse by Bro. Buryl E. Hoover, from Ivesdale, Ill. A special Sunday-school service, with Christian quarrel, was the review lesson, which had been carefully arranged for acceptable presentation by our superintendent, Sister Ruth Smith. A temperance address was given by Bro. I. J. Smith, of Hastings. A temperance program was also rendered by the Loyal Temperance Legion society.—The Sunday-school decided to send two offerings each month, the first half of the year,—to the General Mission Board, for use in home work.—Grace E. Messner, Lake Odessa, Mich., April 9.

Woodland Village church met in council March 27, with Eld. G. F. Culler presiding. One letter was granted. Bro. Culler will represent us at Annual Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast on the evening of May 10. Bro. Culler resigned the care of his church and John Edmund Haldeman was chosen in his place. Our church has given about $358 for missionary purposes during the last year. Since our last report four of our Sunday-school children have been received into the church by baptism.—Orpha Lehman, Woodland, Mich., April 3.

MISSOURI

Carthage.—We met in council April 5 and decided to have an old-fashioned love feast May 31. We place it at that time, thinking that brethren on their way to Annual Meeting may wish to be present. Bro. Oren, who has also labored for the church in Joplin, would also be very much gratified to have any visiting brethren stop there and preach. They have a convenient church building, just at the end of that branch of the Southwest Missouri Electric Line that goes to Smeltzer Hill and Joplin. It is easy to reach, as the car stops in front of the church, and there is a half-hour service. Bro. Liehtenwalter, of Neutral, Kans., has been covering them recently with some excellent sermons, which were much appreciated. Their recently-printed circulars read: "Come and he with us, and we will do thee good: for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel." Sunday-school, Christian Workers' Meetings and preaching both morning and evening, are kept going regularly each Sunday.—J. L. Switzer, Carterville, Mo., April 6.

Peace Valley church met in council April 5. Eld. P. L. Fike presided. Several letters were granted. Bro. Lester E. Fike was elected delegate to the Sunday-school Convention. We will hold our love feast June 14. Bro. Lester E. Fike has returned from Bethany Bible School and gave two inspiring sermons on Sunday.—Tillie Beidler, Peace Valley, Mo., April 7.

Prairie View.—Bro. Fred Wampler and wife, missionaries from China, were with us on Sunday, March 29. We enjoyed their lectures and talks very much.—Alice L. Mohler, Versailles, Mo., April 3.

MONTANA

Grandview church met in council March 29, with Bro. J. D. Reish as moderator. Five letters were received. Bro. S. A. Shoemaker was elected Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Nellie Kao, "Christian Workers' president; Sister Nellie Kao, "Messenger" agent, Sister Kattie Kellar was appointed delegate to Annual Meeting and Bro. J. D. Reish, delegate to District Meeting. Our series of meetings will begin June 1, with Bro. Lewis Bright, of Bethany Bible School, in charge. We decided to build a baptistry for the church. We expect to, hold memorial services May 30 for our members recently lost by death. Our good missionary sentiment is strengthening systematic giving and our ministers are urging an interest in the Forward Movement.—Mrs. Chalmer Barley, Froid, Mont., April 8.

Poplar Valley church met in council March 29. Bro. A. M. Swihart presided. Two letters of membership were received. Sister Freda Brechbiel was chosen Sunday-school superintendent. We will begin our series of meetings June 22, and our love feast is appointed for July 5. The Sunday-school Convention will be held July 4.—Jessie Dees, Selps, Mont., April 4.

Poplar Valley.—A special missionary sermon was preached April 6 by Bro. S. U. Reed. Afterward a collection was taken for the Armenians. At our last council Bro. A. M. Swihart was elected delegate to the Annual Meeting and Bro. J. D. Brown, delegate to the District Meeting.—Bessie Dees, Selps, Mont., April 8.

NEBRASKA

Afton church met in council April 5, with Eld. J. H. Snell in charge. One letter was received. Steps are being taken to arrange for remodeling of our church, in order to make it more convenient for Sunday-school purposes. We organized a Mission Study class, with Bro. Weybright as teacher; also a class for the juniors. The work of the Sunday-school is progressing and at a recent meeting of the officers and teachers, plans were made for personal work in homes not interested in the work of the Kingdom. March 30 our young people gave a missionary program. Our Christian Workers are doing definite study work for the rest of this year. We will support two Armenian orphans.—Constance Snell, Cambridge, Febr., April 7.

Notice to Churches and Sunday-schools of Nebraska and Northeastern Colorado.—Owing to a conflict, which makes it impossible for the instructors for the District Institute to remain for three days, it has been decided to limit the Institute to one day, immediately following the District Meeting, namely, Friday, April 28. Dr. D. W. Kurtz and J. W. Deeter are the instructors.—(See program for the meetings in this issue of the "Messenger.") The Old District Meeting asked each Sunday-school to devote one Sunday's offering to the support of the District Institute. Please send it along with your delegates. The meetings are to be held in the South Beatrice church, near Holmesville and all who come will be provided with good accommodations. Trains will be met at Rockford and Holmesville.—Edgar Rothrock, Moderator of Official Board.

feast, at which about fifty members were present. The meetings were well attended, with a marked interest from the beginning. The church feels greatly blessed and revived. Five renewed their covenant and eighteen accepted Christ, sixteen of whom have been baptized. Our Sunday-school grows in intcrest and numbers, the attendance having gone over the one hundred mark for three Sundays.—Minnie B. Rodes, Clovis, N. Mex., April 8.

Miami church had a "red letter" day March 30. The attendance was larger than it had been for months. Our pastor, Bro. Ira Lapp, preached a great sermon since recovering from pneumonia. The theme was "The World's Need," with special emphasis upon suffering Armenia. After a strong appeal, he set the goal of $400 for us. The result of the day's collection was $555 and some pledges yet to be received. We are looking forward to the coming of Bro. Manly Deeter to begin a series of meetings April 6.—Mrs. M. N. Mikesell, Miami, N. Mex., April 1.

NORTH DAKOTA

Salem church met in council March 28, with Eld. J. W. Shively presiding. Bro. Isaac Wagoner was reelected clerk; Bro. O. G. Mills, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Jacob Wagoner, delegate. Three letters were granted. Our church work was hindered considerably this winter, on account of so much sickness, but services are again held regularly and interest is growing. We are planning an Easter program. Our young people's meeting will be reorganized. Our series of meetings will commence in June, with Bro. D. M. Sborb in charge.—Bro. Geo. Studebaker will lead the song service.—Mertie Van Art, Starkweather, N. Dak., April 7.

OHIO

An Appreciation.—In behalf of our entire body of church workers in the Cleveland field, we desire to express the intense sorrow we feel in our loss through the sudden death of Sister Trellis Harley, of Lorain, in her quiet, deep spirituality, and sincerity of heart, she had found a place with us that will be hard to fill. In our church work, especially, will her loyalty, interest and help be greatly missed. Our sympathy goes out to Bro. Harley in his bereavement.—Eld. Jesse Ireland, Bryan, Ohio, April 5.

Cincinnati church met in council April 5, with our pastor, Bro. R. N. Leatherman, presiding. Sister Knoepfle was appointed church clerk for one year. It was decided to hold a love feast, together with Mt. Pleasant, Kentucky, Mission at this church, May 31, at 7 P. M. Bro. Leatherman was elected delegate to the Annual Conference, and Sister Knoepfle, delegate to the District Conference. The work is rapidly on the increase at this place. At present we have six baptized and in the Sunday-school and could easily have ten, if teachers were available. This is a large and pleasant field in which to work and the need of helpers is great.—Mahel Knoepfle, Cincinnati, Ohio, April 6.

Notice to the Churches of Northwestern Ohio.—The Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings will be held at Deshler, Ohio, August 26-28. Programs will appear later. Churches desiring a visit of the Sunday-school and Missionary Secretary, will please correspond.—Walter D. Landes, Lima, Ohio, April 5.

Rusa church met in council April 5, with Eld. J. A. Guthrie presiding. We are expecting our revival meetings to begin April 20, with Bro. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, evangelist. Our love feast is to be held May 10, at 2 P. M. Our people are going to do their hit in the Relief and Reconstruction Work. We desire to "go over the top." Our pastor, Bro. J. A. Guthrie, was elected delegate to Annual Meeting.—Mrs. Gertrude Guthrie, Spencerville, Ohio, April 5.

OKLAHOMA

Paradise Prairie.—We have changed the date of our meetings, and they will commence May 13. Our love feast will also be deferred to May 24. Bro. Ray Wagoner, of Enid, was with us March 23 in the interest of the Child Saving Mission. He preached in the morning and gave a lecture in the evening, both of which were very much appreciated. Monday and Tuesday nights following, Miss Lydia E. Taylor, of Mt. Morris, Ill., lectured on "The Simple Life."—Cassie Carter, Coyle, Okla., April 4.

Thomas church met in council March 29, with our elder presiding. Bro. F. E. Marchand was reelected elder; Bro. B. F. Stutzman, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Albert Williams, Christian Workers' president. A charity fund was arranged for, with Bro. H. L. Hutchison as receiver and disbursing officer. We expect to have an evangelist for meetings this fall. We will have no feast this spring. The Sunday-school is increasing in attendance. Our elder will represent us at Annual Meeting. Brethren Robert Gripe and Frank Showalter were called to the deacon's office. Recently Sister Taylor gave an address on "The Simple Life."—Albert L. Williams, Thomas, Okla., April 3.

Walnut Grove church met in council April 4. Eld. J. R. Pitzer presided. We decided to hold our spring love feast April 19, at 6 P. M. We put in a call for the District Meeting, to be held here the last of August. April 3 and 4, Sister Lydia Taylor gave us two good lectures on "The Simple Life and Characters." We enjoyed them very much.—Mrs. Gilbert Brubaker, Cordell, Okla., April 5.

PENNSYLVANIA

Ashright.—Dec. 28 Bro. Charles Garver began a series of meetings, continuing until Jan. 4, at which time Bro. C. O. Beery, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, came, remaining for two weeks. Great interest was manifested from the beginning. Fourteen were baptized. Our church having been closed on account of influenza, our fall love feast was not held until the close of the meetings. A number of visiting ministers were with us and we had a very inspiring meeting. March 30 our Sunday-school took an offering of $30 for the Armenian sufferers. At our last council meeting, it was decided to hold our love feast May 11.—Scott Johnson, Roaring Spring, Pa., April 4.

Conawago congregation met in council in the Bachmonville church March 5. Bro. Samuel Hertzler, elder of the Elizabethtown congregation, presided. Eld. S. Z. Witmer was elected delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. Chas. Madeira, alternate; Brethren John S. Baker and Jacob Brandt are our delegates to the District Meeting. The officers for the two Sunday-schools at Bachmonville and at Conewago were elected. Our Sunday-schools were organized April 6, with a good attendance at both places. Our love feast will be held at Bochnianville May 31 and June 1.—Leno H. Gruber, Bachmanville, Pa., April 7.

Everett church met in council April 7. Brethren Ira Holsopple and John Hershberger were elected delegates to District Meeting. We secured the services of Bro. Ira Holsopple as pastor for another year. As an expression of appreciation of his labors among us, during the past year, we presented him with a check for $105. Our series of meetings will begin April 21, with Bro. Diehm in charge. Two were recently received by baptism.—Nancy Lashley, Everett, Pa., April 7.

Honover church met in council April 2, with Bro. Daniel Bowser presiding. Eldera David Hohf and Jos. Long were also with us. Bro. Bowser was reelected elder. Two letters were granted and one received. Bro. D. L. Little will be our delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. Claude Miller was reelected Sunday-school for the year. Sisters Margie Whitmore, Emmo Little and Mary Myers were installed os ministers' wives. We decided to have a home department in the Sunday-school, with Bro. Chas. Huff, superintendent.—Mary A. Rhinehort, Honover, Pa., April 7.

Harrisburg (Hummel Street).—We were pleased to have with us elected to the ministry here.—Sallie E. Schaffner, Harrisburg, Pa., April 5.

Hostetler church met in regular servlee Sunday, April 6, and after reward organized the Sunday-school with Bro. Wm. Forest, superintendent. At this time Bro. Jacob Hostetler is suffering from a light stroke of paralysis, but we bope for his speedy recovery.—Mrs. F. C. Lint, Sandpatch, Pa., April 7.

Lost Creek congregation met in council at the Good Will church March 8, with Bro. John E. Rowland presiding. Three certificates of membership were granted. It was decided to hold a love feast May 17 and 18, at 2 o'clock, at the Good Will house. Eld. Geo Strawser was elected delegate to Annual Meeting.—Isaac P. Basbore, McAlisterville, Pa., April 2.

Marsh Creek church met in council April 9, with Eld. Albert Holdinger presiding. We decided to have a love feast at Friends' Grove May 11, beginning at 2 P. M.; also a love feast at the Marsh Creek house May 31, beginning at 11:30 P. M. The subject of compiling a church history, in conjunction with the Middle District of Pennsylvania, was brought up for consideration. Bro. B. F. Lightner will represent us at Annual Meeting. Two have been received by baptism and one restored since the last report.—Ida M. Lightner, Gettysburg, Pa., April 10.

Martinsburg.—Eld. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, began a series of meetings at this place March 16, and continued until April 6. One was reclaimed and one applied for baptism. The meetings were well attended, considering the busy season.—J. H. Crofford, Martinsburg, Pa., April 8.

Middle Creek congregation met in council March 22, with Eld. Silas Hoover as moderator. Our delegates to District Meeting are R. T. Hull, J. W. Wegley, H. H. Klmmel and S. A. Meyers; to Annual Meeting, Bro. S. A. Meyers. Our love feast will be held June 1. We will hold council prior to the feast, May 29.—Carrie Walker, Rockwood, Pa., April 5.

Mt. Joy church met in council March 29, with Eld. M. J. Brougher presiding. Brethren B. B. Ludwick and Harry Meredith were elected delegates to District Meeting and Bro. B. B. Ludwick, delegate to Annual Meeting. We chose Bro. H. H. Heiman, of Ohio, as pastor of the Jacobs Creek congregation. Bro. Heiman expects to come here some time during the summer. Feb. 24 Bro. B. B. Ludwick began a series of meetings in the Mission Sunday-school in Mt. Pleasant, which continued for three weeks. Twenty-four were added to the church. The Sunday-school there is growing nicely. Three of the Volunteer Mission Band, of Mt. Joy, visited Mt. Pleasant, 29 and 30, and rendered two very interesting programs. Our Sunday-school will render a program on Easter Day.—Sarah E. Neiderhiser, Mt. Pleasant, Pa., April 7.

Mt. Olivet union Sunday-school met in session March 30, to reorganize after being closed during the winter months. Bro. Ira Brandt was elected superintendent. We feel sorry to lose four of our members, as we are few in number, but we hope that others may come in their place.—Mrs. Ira Brandt, Mifflintown, Pa., April 4.

Moxham (Johnstown).—We met in regular members' meeting April 2, at 7:45 P. M., with our elder, Bro. C. M. Horst, in charge. Brethren David Shoemaker and J. C. Flora were elected delegates to District Meeting, with Sisters Shoemaker and Flora as alternates. Four letters of membership were received. It included the entire family, husband and wife and a son and a daughter. The father is a deacon and the son is a minister. Our pastor, Bro. J. C. Flora, presented his resignation in a formal way, to go into effect not later than June 1. A movement is on foot to raise the debt which is on our church property. Already over $1,500 has been pledged, and we believe that it will soon be all provided for. Recently, a sale of bakery goods and fancy work was held by our "Women's Bible Class," at which time $82 was cleared. The work is growing nicely here. Our love feast" will be held the evening of Easter, April 20, at 7:00 o'clock.—Mrs. J. C. Flora, 538 Coleman Avenue, Johnstown, Pa., April 8.

New Enterprise.—We met in council April 5. Bro. G. E. Yoder, of Norristown, was with us. Several certificates were granted. A missionary committee was elected to look after Relief and Reconstruction Work. Bro. D. T. Detwiler was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. We expect to entertain the Ministerial Meeting and Sunday-school Convention of the Old District in August. Our love feast will be held May 18, at 5 P. M.—Margaret Replogle, New Enterprise, Pa., April 7.

Palmyra.—April 6, at 9 A. M., we met for Sunday-school. Following the Sunday-school we had a Child Dedication. Our pastor, Bro. Hoff, from Sweden, preached a very helpful sermon from Ps. 91: 1, 2. He also sang a song and repeated the Lord's Prayer in the Swedish language.—Mrs. Jacob Blauch, Palmyra, Pa., April 7.

Scalp Level.—The District of Western Pennsylvania will be held in the Scalp Level church April 21-23. At our business meeting, April 1, delegates were elected to both District Meeting and Annual Conference. The delegates to District Meeting are Mary Blough, Ellen Spencer, J. H. Replogle and Ira Hoffman; delegates to Annual Conference, H. S. Replogle and S. B. Hoffman. Our love feast will be held May 18.—Amy Manges, Scalp Level, Pa., April 7.

Shndo Creek.—In February we began regular services at all of our three churches for the first time since last fall. We are glad to be able to go on with the work again. Our pastor, Bro. S. P. Early, with Sister Early did considerable visiting during the winter, and services were held at the Berkey house a part of the time. About $125 was contributed to the Armenian-Syrian Relief, and we expect to take another offering soon. We met in council March 29. Delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren S. P. Early and W. H. Fry; to District Meeting, Brethren J. L. Weaver, Ira J. Manges and the writer. We expect a deputation from the Juniata College Mission Band to be with us May 2 and 4. A resolution was passed, signifying our desire to work with the Brotherhood in carrying out the "Five-year Forward Movement," as outlined. We extended to Bro. Early a unanimous call to serve as pastor for two more years, in addition to the one year he has yet to serve. We expect to hold our love feast May 25, at the Berkey house. Owing to the epidemic, our series of meetings was postponed, Bro. H. S. Replogle, who had been secured, can not be with us this spring, so we have decided to wait until next fall unless some one else con be secured now.—Mrs. J. H. Weaver, Windber, Pa., April 4.

Spring Creek.—We met in council at the Spring Creek house March 4, with Eld. J. H. Longenecker presiding. Our membership was well represented. Five certificates were received and nine were granted. Delegates to Annual Conference are Eld. John C. Zug and Frank S. Gregory; to District Meeting, Brethren Aaron Gruhb, Benjamin Ebersole, Amos S. Blauch, Irwin Allwine. Our elder gave us a very interesting talk at the close of the meeting. We met in annual council at the Palmyra house, March 31, with Eld. J. H. Longenecker presiding. A committee of arrangements was elected, five deacons,—to arrange for the District Meeting to be held at the Palmyra house April 30 and May 1. Our love feast will be held at the Spring Creek house, May 21 and June 1. We also decided to hold an election for a minister April 21.—Elizabeth Blauch, Palmyra, Pa., April 7.

Walnut Grove church, Johnstown congregation, concluded a three weeks' series of meetings March 30. Bro. A. B. Miller and wife, of Hagerstown, Md., were with us. Bro. Miller's sermons were inspiring and encouraging, and a help to all. Twenty-six were received into the church by baptism. Our pastor, Bro. M. Clyde Horst, had charge of the music, which added much to the meetings. Bro. Horst, had

DEATH OF SISTER CATHERINE WENGER

Catherine (Studybaker) Wenger, of South Bend, Ind., who died March 25, 1919, was the youngest daughter of Bro. Samuel and Lydia (Leer) Studybaker. She was born in St. Joseph County, Ind., June 8, 1835. Her parents were among the early settlers and pioneers of the county, and at her death "Aunt Catherine," as she was familiarly known, was the oldest resident.

During her earlier life she worked hard to help the family make a living. Her father died when she was young, and she, with her sisters, ran the farm till to help provide for the family.

Jan. 28, 1858, she was united in marriage to Christian C. Wenger, a native of Lehanon County, Pa. To them one son was born, but died in infancy. After her husband died, Aunt Catherine left her farm at Mishawaka and moved to the home in South Bend, where, later on, she died.

Aunt Catherine united with the Church of the Brethren in the Bauge congregation and lived faithful to her vows and ideals till her death. In one sease she lived far behind her generation, fer it was her wish that she should have a horse and carriage fuoeral, rather than an auto fuoeral. On the other hand she lived fully abreast, if not in advance, of the age in which she died, for she was an ardent supporter of the mission work of the church under the General Board. Something over $30,000 she gave during her lifetime. It was a joy to help in this larger, reach of service for mankind.

Years ago she adopted a foster daughter, Sister Maggie Johnson, the only near one left to mourn the departure of our sister. The following nieces and nephews also survive: Christian Wenger, Mrs. J. M. Brightbam, Mrs. Emma Bowman, Mrs. J. M. Chilas, Mrs. Edith Giogrich and Clem. W. Studebaker.

Funeral services at 2:30 P. M., March 28. Elder Solen B. Royer, of Huntingdon, Pa.

er, foreman. Sister Ida Metcalf was elected Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, clerk and "Messenger" correspondent. All are much encouraged since the Sunday-school has opened again, as the attendance is good and the spirit splendid. Any ministers, seeking a new location, and preferring the Northwest, will please correspond with the writer. We should also be glad to hear from any one who could favor us with a series of meetings.—Pearl Hixson, Chewelah, Wash., April 7.

WEST VIRGINIA

Bluefield.—March 29 Bro. Virgil C. Finnell came to us, and while with us gave us four very interesting and instructive lectures on Sunday-school work. His stay with us was entirely too short, but we appreciated what he told us, and we hope to enlarge our work in many ways. Bro. C. E. Eller, of Salem, Va., President of the Mission Board of the First District of Virginia, was present at his last lecture, and held a members' meeting following it. He gave us good advice, relative to our pastor, who is to be with us this year. Bro. E. C. Woodle and wife, of Winston-Salem, N. C., have decided to take up the work in this church. All our people are glad to have them with us, and we trust that God may use them in their new field to the advantage of the kingdom. They will arrive April 14, and will continue until some time in September, when they will go back to school. We are praying that some one else will be ready to take up the work when they leave us.—C. E. Boone, Box 368, Bluefield, W. Va., April 7.

Notice.—The following gatherings for the First District of West Virginia will be held in the German Settlement congregation, May 15-18. The Mission Board will meet May 15, 1:30 p. m., at the home of the writer; Elders' Meeting on the afternoon of the same day, at 2 o'clock, at the Maple Spring church; District Meeting, May 16, at 9 A. M.; Ministerial Meeting, May 17, at 9:30 A. M.; Sunday-school Meeting, May 18, at 9:30 A. M. All are invited.—John S. Fike, Eglon, W. Va., April 5.

Spruce Run congregation met in council March 8. Our elder, Bro. Hutchison, was not able to be with us. We decided to hold our spring love feast May 10, beginning at 2 P. M. We arranged to have some one come each month to preach for us. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely. We are looking for a large attendance during the summer.—Mary R. Bradley, Lindside, W. Va., April 8.

VanClevesville.—We reorganized our Sunday-school April 6, with Sister McDonald, superintendent. Ours is an evergreen Sunday-school, in session throughout the entire year. Bro. Wm. Bradley is our pastor and is assisted by Bro. Lowry. We have preaching twice a month. Sister Mary E. Martin will commence a series of meetings May 20, continuing to June 1, at which time our love feast will be held, at VanClevesville. Sister Martin is an able speaker and much interested in the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God.—Mrs. V. O. McDonald, Bunker Hill, W. Va., April 7.

WISCONSIN

Maple Grove congregation met in council March 28, with Eld. S. C. Miller presiding. Bro. Geo. Shade was elected pastor; Bro. Alfred Pearson, church treasurer; Bro. F. E. Beddleman, clerk; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Leon Robinson, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Geo. Shade, Christian Workers' president. An offering of $21 was taken for church expenses.—Clara A. Pearson, Stanley, Wis., April 7.

The New Standard of Respectability

"The new call is for service and those who do not recognize it are going to be back numbers in this country."

SOUNDS like it might be from a sermon, or a new book, but it is not. The words were spoken by an American army officer just returned from France, to the soldiers under his command. He was trying to forewarn his men against the danger of lapsing from the high ideals of unselfish devotion which had inspired their service in the war.

Was the army officer right? Is it true that those who do not recognize the new call for service will be reckoned as back numbers? If it could be truthfully said that soldiers returned to civilian life could not make self-interest the goal of their ambition without jeopardizing their standing before their fellow-men, what about the rest of us?

We think the officer was right. His words are approximately true now, and they will be increasingly true as time goes on. Service is a much used word, 'tis true, but the idea it stands for was never so much alive as now.

Society will have little use for the man who disregards the rights of others and devotes his energies to looking out for number one. And history will have little to tell of the nation which essays to live unto itself alone. And God will have no place for the Christian who does not realize that he has been saved to serve.

Service is the new standard of respectability.

How to Find Your Heart

MANUFACTURING concerns which sell their goods to the general public, find it to their advantage to have large numbers of people as stockholders in the business. Colleges prefer to get their endowment from many sources rather than have it all come from one rich man.

The principle involved was stated long ago by Jesus: "Where thy treasure is there will thy heart be also." Why? Because the heart is the seat of the affections, and the affections are always centered on that which is most valuable. Jesus knew that the heart is the most valuable thing in the world, and that it is the only thing which God will accept in payment for salvation. Hence he urged men to lay up treasure in heaven, that their hearts might be there.

But why should the heart be in heaven? Why not on earth? Because heaven is the only safe place for it fund. It is believed that it will be wise to make greater efforts for the evangelization of the present generation, rather than simply or chiefly to hoard up money for the use of our children in missionary endeavor. The more the present generation is reached, the better it can take care of the future. It should not be understood that the Board wishes to discourage further contributions to the perpetual endowment fund. These are still welcome. But now, since a considerable endowment fund has been established, it is felt that the time has come for a shifting of the emphasis. Hence greater urgency will be attached to the securing of funds, both in the form of annuity bonds and direct donations, for immediate use in the great world field.

Approval was also given to the plan for strengthening the fund for relieving disabled ministers and missionaries. All who desire to help this worthy cause, while insuring for themselves a needed income, can secure the same rates of annuity as under other funds. At their death the money will be used to care for missionaries and ministers who, by reason of age or other infirmities, must retire from active service and are without available means of support. This work is most heartily commended to the consideration of our brethren and sisters who have means at their disposal.

A method of conducting the physical examination of our missionary applicants, which will utilize the experience of the doctors on the field, as well as the knowledge of our homeland physicians, is under investigation.

A home mission fund, to encourage and develop work in the homeland, is to be established by means of a general annual offering. The date designated for this purpose is the last Sunday in August.

India has called for eight missionaries, and the Board is looking for them. While a number were appointed at this meeting for India, it is hoped that others may file their application to go to India this fall. These applications can be considered by the Board at the Annual Conference and, if satisfactory, submitted to the Conference for approval. The Brotherhood is asked to remember, in their devotions, the critical nature of the situation in India. The Board is very anxious to secure the needed men.

A number of missionaries were also appointed for China. Present indications are that we shall have a larger body of missionaries going to the field this year than in any year of our history.

Here is an index to the growth of interest in the work throughout the Brotherhood. At least ten organizations or individuals have asked for missionaries to be assigned them for support and there are none to give them. Every missionary on the field is now definitely assigned. The Lord be praised, but where are the new workers to answer the call? We hope they will soon be ready.

The estimates for 1920 for India were not yet at hand and of course could not be considered. The estimates for China were presented and a large budget was approved for this field. A five-year program for China was offered and favorably considered.

Bro. J. F. Graybill gave in person a very full report on the conditions in Denmark and Sweden. The Sweden field, in particular, presents an encouraging outlook. The greatest need of these fields appears to be trained native workers. Bro. Graybill presented this matter very forcefully and the Board took action in accord with his recommendations.

Bro. J. E. Miller was reappointed for three years on the Gish Fund Committee. A number of new tracts recommended by the Tract Examining Committee were approved for publication.

One churchhouse loan was approved. An appropriation of $3,000 in various amounts was made for assistance to State Districts. The members at Fruitdale, Ala., asked that an evangelist be sent them for several months, to conduct revival meetings, and favorable action was taken on this request. The work at San Francisco is progressing very favorably. A suitable house of worship is greatly needed and the Board gave encouragement to this end.

That the money given for Armenian-Syrian Relief may serve to the utmost the purpose intended, the Board authorized the use of the office force in caring for this work, without any expense to the Relief Fund.

Contributions for the establishment of missions in other countries than those we now occupy were offered. While these have been accepted, pending future developments, the Board feels that it should not undertake new missions at this time, but should rather first develop more fully those already established.

Looking over the business of the Publishing House for the last fiscal year, the Board found a very satisfactory situation. The showing was a good one for any year, and particularly so, in view of the abnormal conditions created by the war. A full report will, of course, be made to the coming Conference.

One of the last acts of the Board was its decision to discontinue the Special Contributors to the Gospel Messenger. We refer to the office or name. No violence to these good brethren themselves is contemplated. On the contrary, it is hoped they may long continue to live and prosper, and bring their helpful messages to our readers. But they will not be listed hereafter as "special" contributors and their productions will await the light in the same drawer as do those of contributors generally, and will appear in like relation in our columns. We suppose the Board must have been affected,—unless infected is the proper word,—with the general trend toward democracy and brotherhood which is so characteristic of these post-war times.

It was one of the most strenuous of the meetings of the Board. May the blessing of Heaven be upon it. May it redound to the progress of the Forward Movement and the consequent enlargement of the Kingdom!

Is Jesus Coming?

When he was here on earth, Jesus told his disciples that he was coming again, and all of his apostles so thoroughly believed what he said, that they talked and wrote about the precious promise until their dying day. They never attempted to explain away or to spiritualize, out of reality, the promised return of their Master. They went everywhere, telling the people, and the believer especially, that Jesus was coming back to the earth sometime.

They did not argue the case, they simply said he was coming. They had stood on the eastern slope of Mount Olivet and seen him pass from earth up into heaven. Not only so, but they heard two celestial beings, right then and there, say: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11).

This was promise enough for them. They did not go back to Jerusalem, into the upper room and explain to the one hundred and twenty saints how it might be possible for this saying of the angels to be fulfilled by Jesus coming spiritually. They did not try to make it seem impossible, or improbable at least, for the Master to return literally. They might have explained by saying that while the Lord spent years in the flesh, his body has now become spiritualized, and it is only in the sense of the spirit that we can expect his return.

They did nothing of the kind. They had no use for such a theory. In fact, they knew better, and so, as the years go by, we hear of them comforting one another with the thought of the Master's return. They said and wrote all sorts of nice things about the coming of Jesus. Speaking of the resurrection, they said that the dead in Christ should rise first, and, along with the living saints, should be caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. In their exhortations they further added that the Lord himself should descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God (1 Thess. 4:14-18).

There is no occasion for misunderstanding this and a whole lot of other scripture, relating to the return of our Lord. A great deal more is said about his second coming than there was said about his first appearance, and what is said concerning his return is much plainer than what was prophesied about his sojourn on the earth in the flesh. Inspired men, in their writings, commented on what Jesus promised, respecting his return, not a time or two, but the matter is directly or indirectly referred to hundreds of times. Much more is recorded, relating to the second coming of Jesus, than has been said on baptism or the communion service.

As a people, the Brethren emphasize the fact that the salutation of the holy kiss is mentioned five times in the New Testament. If the number of times that an institution is mentioned should cut any figure in its favor, then those who believe in the second coming of the Messiah have much more reason for holding fast to their belief in this particular.

Furthermore, the New Testament writers, who refer to the return of their Lord, wrote just like the writers who now believe in the doctrine. They make it plain that the Master is to return. They could not have made the matter plainer. With them it was not a matter of uncertainty. They knew what the Lord himself said about it, and they understood perfectly what the Holy Ghost helped them to say. Had they believed that what the Master said, concerning his return, must be understood spiritually, they would have written differently. There is not the remotest hint, in all their writings, that the coming of Jesus should be regarded as a spiritual coming.

Those who hold that the return of Christ is to be accepted in a purely spiritual sense, do not write on the subject like the sacred writers wrote. By their writings one can easily determine on which side of the question they are, but to most careful readers the inspired writers seem to be decidedly on the other side, looking for the coming of the Lord in person.

In order to secure the least showing in support of the spiritual coming of Jesus, there must be more or less wresting of the Scriptures. They must be explained to mean something different from the plain statements of the sacred writers. Notice the statement in the last citation as made above: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven." What could be plainer? Or notice the other citation, Acts 1:11: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Could the words that make the doctrine of the personal appearing of the Master a certainty, be plainer? Did not the apostles see the Master go up into heaven? Most assuredly. Well, is he not to return in the same manner? By what method of interpretation can one get the personal element out of the last part of the statement of the angels and not remove it from the other? Half of the efforts put forth to reason a literal coming of Jesus out of this scripture would wholly eliminate literal baptism from the New Testament teachings.

The first appearance of Jesus was personal, or literal. And since the scriptures relating to his second coming are fully as clear as those applying to his first coming, why should we insist on the literal interpretation of one set and demand a spiritual interpretation of the other set? With such a method of interpretation one could reason away every sacrament mentioned in the New Testament. The apostles, and other holy men of Bible times, did not attempt to reason away the personal or literal element in what is said about the return of Jesus, and why should we? Their one united voice, in support of the personal return of the Lord, his coming in the clouds of heaven, and even his reign upon the earth, goes ringing all down through the New Testament, and is reiterated in next to the closing verse, as the final benediction to all that is inspired: "Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Rev. 22:20). The Gospel of Matthew starts in by referring to the first coming, while the Book of Revelation practically closes with what is said about his second coming. J. H. M.

The Good Part

BY MYRA WELCH

Two women sat down at their leisure;
One gazed from the window at length
On mountains majestic, eternal,
From whence cometh comfort and strength,
And thoughts that were sordid and common
Gave place to the infinite, grand.
The other one saw on the window
The print of a small, sticky hand.

The sky was so blue and so cloudless,
One revelled in ecstasy there,—
The other saw naught but her dishpan,
And dust on the round of a chair.
The one saw a beautiful sunset,—
The other remarked: "If it's fine,
I'll rise with the sun in the morning
And put my wash out on the line."

They sat with their patchwork and mending;
One mused on the state of her purse,
The other one builded a tower
O'erlooking the vast universe,
Where star after star in the heavens,
The sun and the moon and the world
All formed and controlled by Jehovah
Through space on their orbits are whirled.

Her thoughts were borne onward and upward,
And over vast silences hung,
Until her soul caught and reëchoed
The song that the morning stars sung.
The hour that brought her this blessing,
And tides of eternity spanned,
Brought naught to the other save day-dreams,
And thoughts of the patchwork in hand.

The one was so cumbered with serving
Her spiritual windows were dim.
The other sat down with the Master
And learned goodly lessons from him.
One spirit was free as a bird song,
Her mind was renewed and refreshed.
The other a slave to her housework,
Was caught by its net and enmeshed.

The Glorious Eastertide Hope

BY H. E. BLOUGH

There is a unique plant, known as the "resurrection flower." It grows out in the arid regions of the desert. When it has flowered, and the drouth becomes tense, its branches droop and shrivel up as if dead. But when touched by refreshing water it gradually takes on new life, its body expands, the leaves unfold and the plant approaches normal life again. This little parable illustrates the spiritual condition of many professing Christians. They seem to profess, yet have become dwarfed, shriveled up and spiritually lifeless,—inactive as far as a vital Christian life is concerned. They are not exactly dead but before they will be able to do much for him, they will need to be vitalized by the life-giving Spirit of the Living Christ.

This arid world is much in need of the refreshing blessings of the Easter season. It is then that we commemorate anew the glorious resurrection of our Blessed Lord. But there are many who have never caught the deeper meanings of the Eastertide. They seldom share its joys, its hopes, its blessings. Some have never gotten beyond the display of Easter style or of eating a dozen boiled eggs. These have no connection whatever with the true spirit of Easter. For centuries the human family had buried its dead in dark and hopeless graves. The race had been going down into death by millions, and no one was coming back. The grave had devoured mighty nations, but no one had returned a look, or revealed aught as to the abode of the soul. In all the graveyards there was no empty tomb.

But in that quiet Judean garden, early one beautiful Sabbath morn, some two thousand years ago, two earnest but bereaved seekers after the expectant Christ derful, angelic message of hope: "He is not here; he is risen, even as he said." The dynamic power of this freeing truth is fast gripping the soul of the human family. Because he lives, we shall live also!! The Christian's hope is that he shares the destiny of his blessed Lord, for "we shall be like him when we see him as he is."

We hear much, today, of "the new order,"—a "better tomorrow." True, indeed, far better things have been promised the world long ago, but the main issue is whether you and I will see them, and whether we will have part in their initiation. After all our progress and achievements in science, education, discovery, government, religion,—we are still in camp on the east banks of the Jordan. The best things our Maker has in store for us are still before us. The "greater works" are yet to be achieved, and they come by way of the uplifting power of a Risen and Living Lord. There are two kinds of death,—the cessation of the vital forces, which so many dread; then there is that diseased condition of the soul which kills off the spiritual forces, which makes all life wrong, and often ruins it forever. This is the death of deaths. From it, through Christ, we may arise into a new life here and now. Has Christ been lifted up in your life? Does Jesus Christ and the Easter hope have any significant bearing upon your life? Remember that eternity stretches from the present on into that which is never-ending, and that heaven is present as well as future.

The empty tomb of our Blessed Lord speaks today out of a far past. The drawing power of the uplifted cross shall pervade the uttermost parts. This is the great tide that is running through the souls of men everywhere. We hear echoes of gathering storms from over the earth,—it is the grinding process, going on as foretold by holy prophets of old. It is but the sloughing off of the diseased parts, after which there shall come forth a purer and better world. This Eastertide will usher in the beginnings of a League of Peace. Surely, this must be one of "the greater works"! Thank God for great souls who have the courage to tackle the big and hard things,—brave souls, whose noble spirit knows no giving up. They know of the presence and power of the Risen Lord. Like the mighty eagle, whose nest is secure in the niched rock of the high mountains, where the winds and rainstorms have no effect, so there are those who hide in "the Rock that was cleft" for all. Praise him that we need not live as those "having no hope and without God in the world"!

Observations in England

BY J. E. MILLER

A week in England is not sufficiently long to form much of an opinion as to conditions, and yet one can see much when conditions are unusual and favorable. Besides, traveling in a Commission, as we travel, avenues open for observation and information that do not usually come to one traveling alone.

Our party consists of nineteen, representing seventeen churches officially. We have a congenial party and each tries to do what he can to make the journey pleasant and profitable for all.

We have had a week in England. During that time I have personally seen Southampton, Winchester, Canterbury and something of London. Most of our time has been in London, but because of the uncertainty, as to sailing date, we were not at liberty to leave the city except on one day. We are now ready to leave for Paris. From there we go to Marseilles, from which port we sail for Port Said, April 2. We are aliens and as such find that we must register as all aliens do, secure our permission to enter a new land, get permission to go to Egypt, and what not. This red tape affair requires much time and patience. But to tell you something of England, I must hurry on.

England has a genuine feeling of respect and affec-

the work. It is hard to realize how the war has brought woman to the front and broken down other barriers that used to separate people.

We have permission to enter Port Said by way of Marseilles, from which port we are to sail April 2. Mail addressed to Constantinople, Turkey, in care of W. W. Peet, American Bible House, should reach us. We should be there by June 1. It will take about three or four weeks to reach that address by mail from America. Our party is all well and happy.

Report of the Educational Board Meeting

BY H. A. BRANDT, SECRETARY

THE GENERAL EDUCATIONAL BOARD of the Church of the Brethren met on Tuesday, April 8, for its first meeting in 1919. All of the members of the Board were present. A full day was spent in the discussion of the general educational problems, confronting the Brotherhood, and in planning to solve the same.

The Home Study Course for ministers was the first item of business taken up. The Board was able to make considerable progress with the Home Study Course. It may be remembered that the Conference in 1917 accepted a report of the Ministerial Committee, in which the following sentence occurs: "While we do not fix a standard of educational qualifications, we do encourage College and Biblical training; . . . we recommend a Home Study Course, arranged by the Educational Board, the books to be secured through the Gish Fund."

The Educational Board has given this matter considerable attention and is now able to announce the general plan of the course. The Home Study Course will extend over a period of four years and cover six subjects, viz., Old Testament, New Testament, Church History, Theology, Homiletics and Practical Theology, Sunday-school and Missions. In credits it is planned that the course shall be equal to two years of high school work. Ministers will be enrolled for not less than one year of study. The successful completion of two years of study entitles the student to a certificate, and the completion of the four years' course to a diploma, on the payment of a small fee. The books for the first year of the course will probably be announced by Conference time, and the books for the remaining years some time later, as they are needed. More definite announcements will be made when everything is ready for the enrollment of students. Until this announcement is made, we will not be in a position to answer correspondence on the Home Study Course.

The question calling forth the greatest amount of discussion was the relation of the General Educational Board to our colleges, especially as that relationship is affected by the Forward Movement. So much was said upon this subject that it is just a little difficult to know what to report for the general reader. Lest it might be overlooked, it should, perhaps, be mentioned right here, that one of the educational goals has been changed. Please remember that it is now "$300,000 per year for endowment and equipment," in place of that amount for endowment only. It was felt that, as originally stated, this point in the educational goals was too restricted.

The president of the Board, Dr. D. W. Kurtz, gave a report of a recent Educational Conference, held at Detroit, that proved to be very important. In the light of this report the Board decided that hereafter they must arrange to be represented at such meetings. It was decided that the president of the Board, or some one designated by him, should be in attendance at such conferences in order that our colleges may be sure to keep in touch with the progress of Christian education in the country at large. The president's report showed that it is the conviction of Christian educators everywhere that a new and tremendous responsibility has come to the Christian colleges. Not only religion, but our democratic institutions as well, can hardly survive except as Christian schools and colleges are made equal to the task of overcoming the disintegrating influences of materialistic philosophy and the great war engendered by it. Never was there such a need for the wide diffusion of the highest type of Christian education.

The Board considered at great length the problem of a general policy. As usual, the question of a paid secretary was up for discussion. There is much that such a secretary might do, and yet the Board feels that much that might be put into the hands of such a secretary can be done just as well, perhaps even better, by the local schools. In the matter of raising funds for endowment and equipment, the Board wishes it to be generally understood that it is squarely behind the Forward Movement financial campaigns of our schools. But when it comes to the campaign of any particular school, the Board feels that the local schools are so much better acquainted with local conditions and the best way of presenting specific needs, that these campaigns should be left, as largely as possible, in the hands of the schools themselves. As its name implies, the work of the Board is general in character. Problems that are common to all of our schools are the Board's proper field. In view of this interpretation of its work, the Board aims to keep the several schools informed of any changes in educational standards that may affect their standing, to keep the Brotherhood acquainted with our educational needs, to issue literature and posters for Educational Day and for the use of the colleges, to coöperate with the other Church Boards in the promotion of the Forward Movement program, and to hold itself ready to serve in any way in which the Board can be of assistance to all of the schools. The Board can hardly go farther than this unless its constitution is changed.

It has been arranged for the "Educational Offering" to be taken up at the close of the session on Monday morning, June 9, at Conference, this year. Dr. Kurtz will give the Educational Address immediately preceding the taking of the Educational Offering.

The plans for Educational Day, June 29, touch every sort of public meeting that will be held on that day. The subject for the Sunday-school lesson was selected with Educational Day in mind. The Christian Workers' topic is in the same general field; and as for the preaching services, arrangements are being made to send out, as usual, some material for ministers. It is hoped that this united emphasis on education in the Church of the Brethren will result in generous offerings for the day. At the suggestion of the General Mission Board, these offerings are to go to the local school, and the fund thus built up is to be used to help ministers and missionaries to get an education. The offerings sent one college, in 1918, were sufficient to assist twenty young people in getting through the school-year. There are great possibilities in the Educational Day Offerings, if the churches will only generally realize that the total of many comparatively small gifts aggregates a very large sum. It is the suggestion of the Board that these offerings be sent to the local school,—that is, the school owned by the District in which the church is located.

Many other matters of routine character were attended to, but perhaps the foregoing is sufficient to indicate the fact that the General Educational Board is squarely behind the Forward Movement in education in the Church of the Brethren. The Board is behind this movement not only because of the needs of the church, but also because democratic institutions in the world at large can not stand unless they are supported by a widely-diffused Christian education.

The Evolution of the New Order

BY HARRISON A. FRANTZ

In Three Parts.—Part One

There is nothing, perhaps, so much a part of human experience as progress, unless we should grant that the opposite is true,—that no quality is more marked than stupidity. We, in this twentieth century, note the progress of man, how he has brought the resources of nature to serve his will. He has hewn the forests, harnessed the streams and the lightnings, that they may serve him. By his ingenuity he has made for himself wings, that he may search out the heavens, and has taken on the marks of the fish, that he may explore the great deep. He hath builded lordly institutions, that he may get him learning. Yea, he stands as a mighty conqueror and says: "See the work of my hands and the mastery which my wisdom hath wrought! See how I have builded upon the work of my fathers, and have raised out of the dust of the ages monumental works of glory." Man is, indeed, a most wonderful being; his works are marvelous.

But methinks I hear the "Prince of Peace," as he stands with pitying eye, but his soul indignant with holy wrath as he utters the words, "Thou," man, "that art exalted unto heaven, thou shalt be brought down, for thou art lifted up with pride. Thou, who boastest of thy greatness, and of how thou hast mastered the elements, and of all thy wonderful works, knowest thou not that thou hast not yet conquered thine own worst enemy,—thyself?" "Wherein," says man, "have I not conquered?" The answer is plainly evident. Progress? Yes, much and glorious progress, after these many years have passed, but, lo, how many years progress has waited on war between man and man. We need but to recount the great wars and ages of manslaughter that fill the pages of history, to be made to feel that man is, after all, in some respects very stupid. Man's mind has been so fertile in inventive genius and in cultural taste, but the one blot upon his history is that he still, as did Cain of old, seeks his brother's life. He also seeks it for the same debasing causes,—jealousy and hatred. Therefore the same curse is upon man today. He has a mark upon him. In repentance only, and by the conquering of his own nature, can he redeem himself from that curse.

War is a monster and its ravages are dreadful. To this all men will agree. Why, then, do we still perpetuate so great an evil? Why do we, now in this golden age, tolerate and honor and bow down to the god of war? Men have, long ago, found the folly of man fighting man. Individually, they have, long ago, learned that it was unwise for tribe to fight tribe and have united tribe with tribe until they have built up great states and nations. But why have nations not discovered the folly of nation fighting against nation? Must the progress of man, as a social being, stop short just here? And is it true, as men of renown have told us, and are still telling us today, that we must always and forever have war among the nations? Men of renown? Yes, men of renown to a people who have yet to remove the veil from their eyes which has so long dimmed their clearer vision. Men of war have been our dictators in government. Men, whose ideals are no higher than brute force, have too long posed as the only men of knowledge, as the only men who have foresight, and as the only ones who can enact laws. Strange to say, we have been willing to grant them these claims. Of all men the militarist is the most narrow. The military expert can tell how to lay a mine and how much explosive to put into it. He can also tell us just how far a gun of a certain caliber will shoot, and how many inches of solid steel its ball will penetrate, and at how great a distance. He alone knows how to build forts, and how to plan great campaigns in battle. We are willing to grant him this knowledge in which he is expert, and are willing that he shall exercise in those functions at our command as need may require. But let him keep his place. He should be our servant, not our master. To this he will not agree, But insists on making our laws, appropriating our funds, and dictating our foreign policies. Yes, "foreign relations" is his pet phrase. His eyes are trained to the target and he is always looking with suspicion upon the motives and movements of other nations than our own, whereas our real statesmen, who have keener insight and a holier vision, would think in kindly terms of our brothers in neighboring states, though they are our rivals; rivals should inspire us; they need not cause us to be jealous and to hate.

The narrow mind and dwarfed soul of the militarist is unable to see beyond his own selfish interests, or, at most, beyond the selfish interests of his own nation. His soul is not attuned to appreciate and receive the deeper things which make for the true national life and prosperity. His whole training, experience, and environment tend toward the destruction of life and property. He is wholly unfitted to be a guide of a great people, or a dictator of laws and policies to govern a nation and to direct its people in ways that tend to life and peace. Why should human progress and brotherhood be thus blocked, and the spirit of hatred forever fostered, simply because men who love war insist on seizing and holding the reins of government? Why should the wealth of nations be thus wasted? Why should those nations, who are struggling to rise, and to educate their people, be kept ever in abject poverty, and seething in the crime and degradation incident to it, that these boasted supermen,—these gnostics,—should continue to feed their carnivorous appetites?

War settles nothing save one thing,—it determines who is the stronger, or who has used the most skillful tactics. It decides nothing as to the question in dispute. I quote from Hon. W. H. Taft this simple analogy: "Now, at common law, if one man sued another on a promissory note, and was a little short of witnesses, and the issue raised was whether he had ever made the note, or, if he had made it, whether he had paid it, the defendant could demand wager of battle. Then the judge handed out two swords and the defendant and plaintiff went at each other, and if the defendant cut off the head of the plaintiff, that proved either that the defendant had never made the note, or if he had made it, that he had paid it. They discontinued that several hundred years ago; but in what regard does that method of settling the issues in a court of law mental works of glory." Man is, indeed, a most wonderful being; his works are marvelous.

But methinks I hear the "Prince of Peace," as he stands with pitying eye, but his soul indignant with holy wrath as he utters the words, "Thou," man, "that art exalted unto heaven, thou shalt be brought down, for thou art lifted up with pride. Thou, who boastest of thy greatness, and of how thou hast mastered the elements, and of all thy wonderful works, knowest thou not that thou hast not yet conquered thine own worst enemy,—thyself?" We think with ridicule of such a method. We say that is a relic of the ancient past and belongs to barbarism. In such matters, both between individuals and between tribes or families, we have long ago abolished such illogical and barbarous methods, but in international relations we still use this senseless method. International law has not yet advanced beyond the laws governing individual differences in the tenth century, for then two litigants might go before a judge and have him decide their case on evidence brought, or they might end their differences by duel,—either was lawful. So now, nations may either arbitrate or fight a duel,—the one is just as legal as the other according to international law. As yet we have little more than international anarchy.

Opposition to peace progress exists because of war lords who feed their beastly appetites, first by sucking the vitality from the prosperous and peace-loving peoples of the world, by securing the appropriation of immense war budgets, that great profits may come to themselves from the war industries in which they have large investments. Among these are the gun and munitions factories, and shipbuilding industries. Then they proceed to create dissension, and after fanning it into the flame of war, they lap the blood of their brothers who are forced to go as their fighting fists, but under the pretense of defending the honor of their country.

Just now, at the close of the Great War of 1914, we are inclined to feel that with the defeat of Germany, victory has been won; but this is only partially assured, for victory is not yet certain. If the world goes on drilling with bayonets as before, we dare not claim victory, for then Prussianism shall have triumphed. What advantage to have crushed German militarism if the rest of the world goes on increasing armaments? Will not Germany rise again, to take revenge in later years? John A. Hobson points out that "supremacy of state" was not born in Germany but has also been found both in theory and in practice in Italy, France, and England. He cites this one example from his own country: "Nothing more shocked the conscience of the civilized world in the conduct of this war than the German contention that the 'necessity' of her situation warranted her brutal assault upon the neutrality of Belgium. Yet our sudden, unprovoked attack upon Copenhagen, in 1806, without declaring war, was justified by our Government of that day in language almost identical with that employed last year by the German Chancellor. It ran as follows: 'While he [the King] laments the cruel necessity which has obliged him to have recourse to acts of hostility against a nation with which it was his majesty's most earnest desire to have established the relations of common alliance, his majesty feels confident that, in the eyes of Europe and the world, the justification of his conduct will be found in the commanding and indispensable duty, paramount to all others among the obligations of a sovereign, of providing while there is yet time, for the immediate security of his people.'" ("Towards International Government," page 179.) Mere disarmament will not suffice. There must be developed an international mind whose conscience will not allow selfish aggression. There must be a plan whereby every nation can feel the security of its defense by the united powers of the world.

It is commonly accepted by all that war is not the ideal. Even the soldiers themselves say peace is the ideal, and they seek to end war as quickly as possible, that they may have the joys of peace. It is not, then, a matter of uncertainty, as to which is the ideal. It has been many times proved that all constructive progress must wait on war. Judicial settlement of international differences leads to prosperity, civilization, and peace, but armament leads back to barbarism. The only point of consideration, then, between arbitration and war is, whether or not we are able to work the ideal. Every sane-minded person must admit that with our present ethical attainment we are ready to break with the OLD ORDER and to lend our support to the evolution of the NEW ORDER. Some earlier wars may have served their purpose, but our ethics have advanced, and the question now is not, "Would the ideal have worked in the past?" but, "Can it be applied from henceforth?" Force has no foundation for its authority and never has had any right except as the instrument to enforce the ideal which some one has been unable or unwilling to grasp. The greatest men of all the nations are now ready to lay down the sword and reason together. "Force and right are governors of this world—force till right is ready." ("The International Mind," by Butler, page 8.) Right is now ready to claim her kingdom. "Public opinion is the real ruler of this country. Tomorrow it is going to be the ruler of the world. It is higher than congresses and parliaments, more potent than emperors and kings. This world belongs to the people and, sooner or later, they are going to rule it." ("Christianity and International Peace," by Charles E. Jefferson, page 274.)

"Peace is the outcome of justice; justice, the outcome of tarded our progress toward peace and disarmament in the past. But we are not in despair. Even while our hands are yet dripping with the blood of our brothers from the most dreadful war of all history, there is a most hopeful sign. The liberal and consistent thinkers of all civilized countries are today of a united mind on the great question of peace and war. Peace is the ideal. These are they who now speak the mind of the nations that are soon to be,—they are the harbingers of peace. Their united minds are today the embryo of the international mind of tomorrow.

But what do we mean by the international mind? Butler says: "The international mind is nothing else than that habit of thinking of foreign relations and business. It is as inconsistent with the international mind to attempt to steal some other nation's territory as it would be inconsistent with the principles of ordinary morality to attempt to steal the other person's purse. Magnitude does not justify us in dispensing with morals." (Butler, page 102.)

A nation, then, must have a conscience. Nations do have their own individual conscience. But there are, indeed, many and varied types of consciences. For example, and for the sake of contrast, let us note the type of conscience that prompted the United States to return to China our part of the great Boxer indemnity fund. This is the Puritan type of conscience. Then note the very different conscience that prompted Prussia, in 1871, to crush and bleed France as she did, and, too, without just cause for provocation. The same power, with a conscience hardened by the years, struck again in 1914, and little Belgium was the victim. This, perhaps, we choose to call the Prussian type of conscience. Each of the great nations has developed a conscience which is more or less sensitive, according to the type of men who have been in power. The democracies of the world are more sensitive to right and wrong than the autocracies.

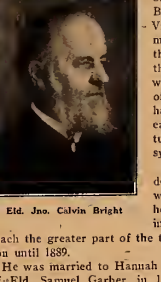
ELD. JNO. CALVIN BRIGHT

Eld. Jno. Calvin Bright, son of Eld. Isaac and Sarah (Rife) Bright was born Oct. 26, 1851, on Bear Creek, near New Lebanon, ten miles west of Dayton, Ohio. The Brights were related to the Virginia Dutch, through their maternal grandmother with the Garbers, and through their paternal grandmother with the Bowmans. They are of Swiss German descent, having come to America early in the seventeenth century and settled in the Pennsylvania woods.



Eld. Jno. Calvin Bright

Eld. Bright's health was delicate in his youth, but with an early taste for books he was able to teach school in 1867, and continued to teach the greater part of the time during the winter season until 1889.

He was married to Hannah Garber, youngest daughter of Eld. Samuel Garber, in 1875. He buried wife and daughter in July and August, respectively, of 1878. He then married Elizabeth Heistand, December, 1879. Their union was crowned with eight children, six of whom grew to maturity. The eldest, Homer, is a missionary to China, but at this time is at home on his first furlough, while another son, Daniel, is a young minister, at present a teacher at Camp Sherman. Both were able to be with their father during his last illness and assist in caring for him. Sister Bright died February, 1909. His third marriage was to Hettie Stauffer in August, 1912.

Bro. Bright moved from the Bear Creek to the Wolf Creek church in 1876. Here he was elected deacon in 1879, to the ministry in 1881, and ordained in 1892. He contributed articles for the church papers frequently. "The Gospel Visitor" came to his father's home from his birth.

Bro. Bright served with others as a committee over the churches in Highland and Adams Counties for many years, as well as on many other committees. He was on the General Educational Board for eight years. At the time of his death he was a member of the Historical Committee of Southern Ohio, and a District Trustee of Manchester College.

Eld. Bright has had charge of several different churches. Upper Twin (1897 to 1907), Wolf Creek (1897 to 1910), Palestine (1906 to 1913), Fort Wayne (1905 to 1911), and Harris Creek (1914 to 1917).

He moved to Brookville in 1911, presiding over this church one year.

In 1913 he moved to Troy, having charge of the church as pastor three years, then moving to Georgetown, in the Ludlow church. Much of his time, during the past few

THE ROUND TABLE

That Unused Page and Other Wastes

BY M. G. FLORY

THERE are millions of pages of stationery wasted in the fad of writing letters on one side of the sheet only. In all ordinary correspondence this habit is as useless and extravagant as putting a bit of good fuel upon the fire, to replenish it, and then throwing the same amount of fuel of equal quality away. What consumer would do such a foolish thing? Yet we waste these unused pages in social correspondence at the cost of country, home and life to others!

Whenever a certain lady gets a letter written on only one side of the paper, she writes her reply on the blank pages and tells the writer that she is a strong advocate of conservation even in writing paper. Let us all "do likewise."

Then, how about those billions of dollars spent for chewing gum, tobacco, candy, idle amusements at the cost of thousands and thousands of hungry, starving men, women and children?

How shall we account for the jewelry, laces and useless adornment at the cost of unnumbered souls, lost for lack of means to send them the saving story of the cross?

What an increase in the funds for Reconstruction and the Forward Movement of the church the computed costs of these various wastes would make! There will be a final accounting for every extravagance, though it may not be until the Master comes for the divine reconstruction of earth.

He taught a beautiful lesson in conservation by means of the simple command: "Gather up the fragments." Even in nature there are no wastes. Decay only produces more abundant vegetation,—just as a seed dies that many of its kind may have new existence and life. In all realms the divine law is beautiful economy and sacrifice for larger gifts of life. But we, of divine origin, go on in our world-old sin of extravagance, regardless of the high privilege of sacrifice for the blessing of others.

Reflection and Reality

BY IDA M. HELM

"For now we see in a mirror, darkly: but then face to face" (1 Cor. 13: 12).

AT the time Paul wrote to the Corinthians, mirrors were made of metal, and often they gave imperfect reflections. When we speak of looking into a mirror, we think of our own reflection there, and that is about the first thing we do see. When we look properly into the Bible mirror, we see ourselves and we see God. When we see ourselves in the Gospel mirror as God sees us, we are made to feel unworthy and humble.

On the day of Pentecost, three thousand people saw themselves in the Gospel mirror, as Peter held it before them, and invited them to look in. They were made to cry: "Brethren, what shall we do?" It was something far deeper than excitement that moved these men. They were not worked into high-pitched religious excitement by an emotional man. They saw the reflected, glorified Lord, and in the same mirror they saw themselves, as they really were,—sinful and undone. Conviction and penitence gripped their hearts. They wanted to be like Christ,—the Perfect One, and they cried out: "What shall we do?"

Peter was glad to tell them: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit" (Acts 2: 38). "And with many other words he testified, and exhorted them, saying, Save yourselves from this crooked generation" (verse 40).

They had to save themselves by yielding wholly to Christ. The mere fact that they had knowledge of Christ would not save them. They must become obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereby they might be delivered, and be made free from sin,—the thing that distorted them.

Now we see in a mirror, darkly. The knowledge of God has come to us through human language. Some things are only partially revealed,—much is not revealed at all. We have to use earthly language and figures to explain eternal truths of God.

"We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life.... Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey the lust thereof." "Neither present your members unto sin as instruments of unrighteousness; but present yourselves unto God, as alive from the dead.... For sin shall not have dominion over you."

Here we see the face of our Redeemer as in a mirror, and the reflected countenance is one day to give place to the full reality, face to face, if we devote ourselves in full obedience and loving service to the Master. The Psalmist says, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

The Heaven Smile

BY OMA KARN

THE shadow of the influenza epidemic lay over the land. For a time its deadly presence had eclipsed that of the war shadow. Death stalked everywhere. We knew not what an hour might bring to us. The sight of unaccompanied funeral cars, moving swiftly toward the silent city, out on the crescent-shaped hills, was not only a frequent, but some days an almost hourly occurrence. Save for matters of absolute necessity, the streets of the city were almost deserted. Business houses and places of assembly were closed. Homes were quarantined. Acquaintances hastened by one another as if fearful of contact. The very face of nature seemed changed. There was a feeling in the air as if the entire earth was mourning. Even the distant hills, standing rugged and bare in the changeable autumn haze, appeared to have lost their attitude of strengthening trust and to be sorrowing over the presence of the visitation in our midst.

In the gray of a chill, damp morning, a woman hurried along the street. In addition to the general gloom a dense gray fog had wrapped the earth in its fleecy drapery. The heart of the woman was as chill and as gray as the atmosphere through which she was passing. In her own home, in homes bound by the ties of kindred love, in homes endeared by the association of close friendship and Christian affinity, the grim spectre had entered, and was battling for the possession of loved ones, or else had departed triumphantly, taking loved and familiar forms and faces with him. It was a time of anxiety and heart-trial,—a time of darkness, as if God had, for a time, turned away from the world the light of his countenance and left it to its fate.

The thought came to the woman in a question: "Was it so? Had humanity sinned until the favor of Divine Providence was clearly turned against it?" As if in reply to this faithless wavering on her part, a sound cut directly across the question. Such a simple matter of fact sound as it was! Just the laughter of little children. Two little ministering angels, the only members of a family of six able to show a clean bill of health, on their way to the home of a married sister, with messages of assurance, and a bucket of mother's chicken-broth for its similarly epidemic-smitten inmates. Hand in hand they emerged from the enveloping mist, and as they passed they looked up and smiled.

For the woman, looking down into the two pairs of blue eyes, raised so trustingly to hers, the world all at once took on a new aspect. It was as if God had suddenly, graciously, turned his face forward again. Heaven smiled up from those blue depths. Sorrow, sickness, death, the war shadow, might be in the world, but God was there too. And with this thought the burden fell away. Hope revived and faith looked up. Smilingly she hastened on her way, and, lo, in a little while the fog had lifted, the sun was shining, and the earth was glorious again.

The heaven smile! It is never absent. There never was an earth-night so dark but that its gloom was illumined by its encouraging radiance. We find heaven's light in the darkest of times, in places where we least expect to see it. Never doubt! No matter how full of sorrow and suffering your life may be, that heaven does smile! Keep alert for the sight of it! Look into the face of a flower, catch the sunny expression on the face of a friend! Be cheered by the bright little incident! Look into the eyes of trusting, innocent childhood! Radiance is always to be found in something. Watch for it and you will see it!

Alcohol as a Medicine

BY ALICE TIPPY KLINGER

THERE is a question in the minds of some people whether there is any further need of temperance organizations and temperance committees. It should be remembered, however, that the temperance work has not been completed, but is just getting a good start. Among the many things yet to be accomplished, is the making of laws that will put a stop to the manufacture and sale of medicines that are largely dependent upon alcohol and other narcotics for their action.

The art of distillation of alcohol was discovered by an Arabian alchemist about the tenth century of the Christian era. As medical knowledge was very limited at that time, there was no accurate way of determining its action upon the human system. Its seeming effects were pleasing, and it was supposed that a great medical discovery had been made. Physicians were lavish in their praises of its curative powers. The following is quoted from a prominent German physician of the sixteenth century, to show the medical opinion of alcohol in his day: "It sloweth age, it strengtheneth youth, it helpeth digestion, it cutteth phlegme, it cureth hydropsia, it healeth the strangurie, it pounces the stone, it expelleth gravel, it keepeth the head from whirling, the teeth from chattering, and the throat from rattling; it keepeth the weasen from stiffling, the stomach from wambling, and the heart from swelling; it keepeth the hands from shivering, the sinews from shrinking, the veins from crumbling, the bones from aching, and the marrow from soaking."

If the medical profession is responsible for the belief that alcohol is of great value as a food and medicine, it must be remembered that it is to the same profession we are indebted for the correction of these errors. All through the centuries there were some who doubted and were opposed to its medicinal use.

The first American investigator of the effects of alcohol upon the human body was Dr. Nathan S. Davis, of Chicago, who, as early as 1848, published articles controverting the universal opinion that alcoholic drinks are warming, strengthening and nourishing. His experiments laid the foundation for the scientific study of the physiological effects of alcohol.

At the present time alcoholic liquors, as medicines, are condemned by the best medical authorities. The leading medical society of America declared in June, 1917, in special resolutions, that "the use of alcohol in therapeutics, as a tonic, or a stimulant, or as a food has no scientific basis," and "the use of alcohol as a therapeutic agent should be discouraged." In other words, alcoholic liquors should not be used for remedies in sickness.

One of the greatest American frauds of the day is the alcoholic patent medicine. The temperance man and the "boozer" may alike be guilty of its use. In fact, the manufacturers are realizing neat sums through the temperance trade. Why not make your own patent medicine? If you wish Peruna, for instance (quoted from an article by Samuel Hopkins Adams), "take half a pint of cologne spirits (190 proof alcohol), a pint and a half of water, add a little cubebs for flavor and a little burned sugar for color." What does Peruna cure? Catarrh. If you read the Peruna book, "The Ills of Life,"—you will be convinced that catarrh is whatever ails you. Pneumonia is catarrh of the lungs; so is consumption, and so on. Why does the United States Government forbid the sale of Peruna to Indians? Simply because it has been found too tempting and effective as an intoxicant. Among some mountaineers the "Peruna jag" is a standard form of intoxication, yet we temperance people are light in the darkest of times, in places where we least expect to see it. Never doubt! No matter how full of sorrow and suffering your life may be, that heaven does smile! Keep alert for the sight of it! Look into the face of a flower, catch the sunny expression on the face of a friend! Be cheered by the bright little incident! A more recent and popular alcoholic nostrum in some States now is Tanlac. The Cleveland Bureau of Health Bulletin says: "Tanlac is 18 per cent alcohol with a few bitter drugs having a slight laxative action, and is valueless aside from its laxative property. Tanlac will do nothing that a drink of liquor and a teaspoonful of castor oil will not do." It classes Tanlac as "boozē." Here, again, good temperance people are misled by the advertising of this nostrum, into thinking it is a beneficial medicine.

Is it not right that our pocketbooks and our health should be protected from these frauds? The temperance people of our land should work for really "bone-dry" laws; laws that will prohibit the manufacture and sale of these alcoholic patent medicines.

Spare Moments

BY PERNIE HYLTON FAW

"I HAVEN'T had time to study any of the lessons," said a member of the home department. She is kept busy with her home duties, but I was made to wonder if any one is so busy not even to have a half hour out of each week, to study God's Word. We don't find many people too busy to eat, but so many are too busy to partake of the spiritual food.

At the State Sunday-school Convention a speaker said: "We have the best District Secretary that can be found anywhere. She is the mother of five children, but never misses a District Convention, and she visits every Sunday-school in the District."

The very busiest people have some spare moments, but so many do not know how to utilize them. If we are prompt to seize and improve the very shortest intervals of time, it is astonishing how much can be accomplished. With perseverance, the very odds and ends of time may be worked up, and result in great value. An hour of study a day will make a well-informed man in ten years.

Marion Harland has accomplished wonders by economizing the minutes. She has written most of her novels and newspaper articles after she had put her children to bed. Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote her great masterpiece, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in the midst of her pressing household cares. Burns wrote many of his most beautiful poems while working on the farm. Longfellow translated the "Inferno" by snatches of ten minutes a day, while waiting for his coffee to boil, persisting for years, until the work was done. One of the great chancellors of France, by carefully utilizing his odd bits of time, wrote a book in the successive intervals of waiting for dinner.

A certain very successful physician began his study of medicine while working in the field. His father objected to his preparing for the medical profession, and so he had no chance to study while in the house. The boy used every spare moment he had, therefore, while about his work. He would sometimes hide his book in the furrow, to keep his father from seeing it. "Where there's a will there's a way."

Ironing ceases to be such a monotonous job if you try memorizing a psalm or poem, while at your work. Perhaps the ironing doesn't go so fast, to have to look at the book lying on the end of the ironing-board, but the few moments it takes for that are well spent.

Lincoln studied law during his spare hours, while surveying. Franklin took as little time as possible for his meals, so as to have more time to study. When a child, he became impatient at his father's long grace at the table, and asked if he couldn't say grace over a whole cask, once for all, and thus save time.

Great men have always been misers of moments. While Michael Faraday was employed binding books, he devoted his leisure to experiments. In writing to a friend he said: "Time is all I require. Oh, that I

A Sketch of the Life of Eld. John M. Mohle

The subject of this sketch was one of the active elde of the Middle District of Missouri until the infirmities old age made it necessary for him to retire somewh from the active work of life. He was born near Mecha icsburg, Pa., Dec. 8, 1835. When he was four years o his father's family moved to Covington, Ohio. Here grew to manhood, and early in life united with the churc He was the eighth of a family of thirteen children, all whom united with the church as they reached the years responsibility. Likewise, all of his children became fo lowers of the Master, as they grew to the proper age, a are in the church.

Sept. 29, 1860, he married Mary Ann Miller. Togeth they served the Lord, the church, and their fellow-me until she was called to her eternal home, April 11, 191 Since then he has ever longed to go also; however, he w still earnest in the Master's service, and always ready help in every good work, with good counsel, with the po er of a godly life, and with all the means at his comman

Bro. Mohler was chosen to the deacon's office whi living at Covington, Ohio. Oct. 15, 1873, he left there wi his family and moved to Johnson County, Mo., to the Mi eral Creek church, where he spent the rest of his life. Ja 1, 1874, he was chosen to the ministry and immediately b came one of the most active missionary spirits of t Middle District of Missouri. He probably did more tha any other one man to spread the faith of the Brethre throughout all sections of the District. He traveled muc in his own conveyance to visit out-of-the-way places, a was always a welcome guest wherever he went. The Go pel he preached was a Gospel of fellowship and kindnes but not to the neglect of the peculiar tenets of the Brothe hood, of which none was more zealous than he. Sept. 1875, he was advanced in the ministry, and Oct. 23, 1885, sound in the faith and in counsel. He was more of shepherd than a disciplinarian, and more of a teacher tha an expounder. His life will live in those that follow hi He preached the last time when a little past eighty-thre years old.

One of his daughters, Sister Jennie Mohler, is a missio ary-nurse in India, and this was one of the greatest joy of his life. He had a desire that other of his childre would choose the missionary service for a life-work. all his sickness and suffering he did not once wish tha

Four were received into the church at Hutchinson, Kans., Brother and Sister Oliver H. Austin, of McPherson, evangelists.

One was reclaimed and one applied for baptism in the Martinsburg church, Pa.,—Bro. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, evangelist.

Fifteen accepted Christ in the Pittsburgh church, Pa., during the evangelistic services, conducted each Sunday evening by Eld. C. Walter Warstler.

Seventeen accepted Christ in the Sidney church, Ohio,—Bro. R. N. Leatherman, of Cincinnati, evangelist; one was recently baptized at the regular Sunday evening service.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. S. S. Blough, of Astoria, Ill., to begin April 27 in his home congregation.

Bro. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans., to begin July 13 in the Onekama church, Mich.

Bro. N. W. Coffman, of Fishersville, Va., to begin May 18 in the Little River congregation, same State.

Bro. Elmer Gilbert, of North Manchester, Ind., to begin the last of May in the Huntington country church, same State.

PERSONAL MENTION

Middle Maryland is to be represented on the 1919 Standing Committee by Eld. Jno. S. Bowlus.

Bro. S. M. Stouffer, formerly residing at Carlisle, Pa., is now located at Newville, same State.

Bro. E. S. Rowland changes his address from R. D. 6, Hagerstown, Md., to R. D. 4, same city.

Bro. Nathan Martin is moving from Elizabethtown, Pa., to 1031 Poplar Street, Lebanon, same State.

Bro. Chas. Noble Stutsman, of R. D. 5, Wenatchee, Wash., changes his address to Manson, same State.

Bro. R. H. Cox, pastor of the Rockford church, Ill., has accepted a like charge in the Greenleafton church, Minn., where he is to locate in the near future.

Our Conference Offering

It is a very hopeful indication of the mind of our Brotherhood, concerning the forthcoming Conference offering, that already funds are beginning to come in to us from those who do not contemplate being present at Winona Lake. Likewise many inquiries are beginning to reach the Board rooms, concerning this great offering which will be lifted.

Especially are we gratified with these unsolicited expressions and inquiries, for it means that our brethren and sisters are thinking of the spiritual interests of the unsaved, and are planning on doing their full share in financial ministration for the heathen world.

Therefore we trust that these inquiries are but indicative of the state of mind which is developing towards the lifting of the largest Conference offering in our history,—a sum not below $150,000. This sounds like a stupendous amount, or, rather, would have sounded that way some years ago, but we have become accustomed to large gifts, in the last few years, and have come to know that the combined offerings of all, when each one does his duty, is very large. We have not yet been witness to the entire Brotherhood uniting in one large offering. Many have never been giving heretofore.

The General Mission Board, as a servant of the church, has planned to ask the Brotherhood to center its efforts for Conference upon the week of May 18 to 25.

Efforts will be made to help every congregation to get in touch with each of its members by an appeal to do something for this offering. And it is none too early for pastors and elders to be formulating their program for the work. Giving to the Lord on such a scale, with everybody helping, not only produces a large sum, but it also is very practical missionary education.

Fuller announcement will be made later concerning this great offering. In the meantime let us pray, and plan, and work, that we may give and receive the bounteous blessings of the Father.

Most fraternally,
GENERAL MISSION BOARD.

The Secretary of the General Mission Board is attending the District Meeting of Nebraska this week, and looking after some interests of the Board in that State.

Bro. J. A. Wyatt, of 6230 East Sixteenth Street, Kansas City, Mo., has accepted the pastorate of the First Church of the Brethren, same city, and should now be addressed at 6238 Hughe Street.

Bro. Geo. W. Hilton, pastor of the Bethel church, Carleton, Nebr., has resigned from that work, and has accepted an offer from the Los Angeles church, Calif., to teach in the Chinese Mission at that place.

Bro. C. O. Bogart, of Oronoque, Kans., is in a position to consider a pastoral engagement with a congregation which would provide a partial support. He would like to procure a small farm which would give employment for his son, while he himself devotes most of his time to pastoral work.

Bro. D. C. Moomaw, of Roanoke, Va., is employing a practical and unique method of stimulating interest in promoting the principles of peace. He has invited all the ministers of his home city to join in a friendly contest with the pen. He offers a prize of ten dollars in gold for the best essay on the subject, "The Incompatibility of the Gospel and War."

According to information just received, Bro. J. M. Blough and wife, of India, had arranged to sail for America, April 15. They hope to arrive in good time for the Winona Conference. They are coming via the Atlantic. Persons wishing to write them may address them at Gibraltar, Spain, or New York, care of Thos. Cook & Son, Incoming S. S. "City of Benares."

Bro. J. C. Flora, pastor of the Moxham church, Johnstown, Pa., has accepted the pastorate of the West Charleston church, Ohio, and will enter upon his labors there about the middle of May. His new address will be R. D. 4, Tippecanoe City, Ohio.

The District Meeting of the Second District of Virginia is to be held in the Elk Run church May 1 and 2. Elders' Meeting is to convene April 30, at 2 P. M.

The District Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings of Northern Virginia are to be held in the Greenmount church, Rockingham County, May 9 and 10. We publish the program in our next issue.

Reading the Bible Through in Thirty Days.—Most people excuse themselves from the task of reading the Bible from cover to cover because it takes too much of their time,—so they say. Dr. Weston divided the Bible into thirty parts, so as to cover the entire volume, and by devoting but twenty minutes a day to the task, he finished a careful perusal of the Holy Oracles within the allotted time.

We heard of a Sunday-school, the other day, that lays special emphasis on trained workers. It has this suggestive motto right before the school all the while: "Every Member a Christian; Every Christian a Worker; Every Worker Trained." Just what would happen,—do you think,—if even a hundred of our Sunday-schools had such a motto and would live up to it wholly and unreservedly? We would have an abundance of trained workers for Christ, so greatly needed everywhere. Christian leadership would be exalted to a position of real power.

Some Good Definitions.—It is well, sometimes, "to see ourselves as others see us," and a keen critic thus describes some of the leading characteristics of mankind: "VANITY,—the outward fullness of inward emptiness. SYMPATHY,—the unspoken language of another's heart. LOYALTY,—being in your place at every church service, whether you feel like it or not. EXCUSES,—the counterfeit coin with which many try to pay the debt of Christian duty. SELF-COMPLACENCY,—that resource of shallow natures, whereby fools are satisfied with their folly."

THE ARMENIAN CAMPAIGN

The encouraging reports which continue to come in,—not merely the figures but the comments which accompany them,—are a delight to the heart. We can not mention all here, but these additional gleanings from recent returns clearly show with what fine spirit our churches, large and small, have taken hold of this enterprise.

Johnstown, Pa.,—assigned a quota of $840,—has reported $1,180 and is not done yet.

Virden, Ill., has gone over the top with $336.

New Carlisle, Ohio,—quota not stated,—reports $1,515.64.

Woodland, Mich., with 50 members, has raised $255 and expects to make it $300.

Greene church, Iowa, raised over $850,—more than doubling her quota.

Bethel church, Nebr.,—with a quota of $400,—has brought her total to $927.58.

Logan church, Ohio,—quota $536,—has raised nearly $1,600.

Salem church, Ohio, quota not stated, gives $1,200.

Meadow Branch, Md., quota not stated, gives $855.

Richland Center, Kans., 85 members, raised $750 in ten minutes.

Pleasant Hill, Ohio, quota $837, raised $1,155.

A general report of the result of the present "drive" will be given as soon as this can be done, and our churches are again urged to send in their reports of both cash and pledges as soon as possible. An itemized statement of all money received is published each month in the "Missionary Visitor." The Committee.

NOTICE TO MINISTERS

The following Gish Fund books will be taken from the list on May 15, 1919:

Bushnell, "Character of Jesus." ..... 15 cents.
Pell, "Our Troublesome Religious Questions," .. 30 cents.
Gordon, "Quiet Talks About the Tempter," .... 20 cents.
Schaff, "History of the Christian Church," Vol. VII. ..... 90 cents.
Royer, "Thirty-Three Years of Missions," is out of print, and therefore no copies are available at present.

AROUND THE WORLD

Worshipers in Secret

Considerable interest has been aroused in India by an association which,—like Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea of old,—seeks to serve the Master in secret. The organization is known as the "Sanyasi Mission." Its 24,000 members are scattered all over the country. Their work is mainly confined to a select circle of their choosing. While the Bible and Christian literature are freely circulated among them, these "Christians in secret" have not yet learned the great lesson of boldly confessing Christ in public, and influencing others by the extension of the broad and comprehensive Gospel invitation: "Whosoever will." They have failed to see that Christians, as light-bearers, must shine out to others.

Disorders in India Growing

Recent reports from India indicate that the world-wide spirit of unrest is permeating many portions of that country. The British, who have been able, heretofore, to rule hundreds of millions in India, without very much difficulty, have at last been compelled to declare martial law. Apparently, the "home rule" element in Bombay has gained in volume and strength, and its insistence upon supposed rights and privileges has taken shape in attacks on officials, on Europeans in general, and on property. Apparently it is but another manifestation of the Bolshevism that is evidencing its destructive tendencies in Russia and elsewhere. Like a fatal blight it works havoc and devastation wherever it gains a foothold.

A Useless Undertaking

In various ways is the motion picture industry made use of to carry conviction to those who can be induced to attend its exhibitions. According to a recent announcement, the saloon defenders of the United States have raised a fund of $3,000,000, to show to the people of our country that the saloon is a good thing for the nation,—special emphasis being given to the fact that immense revenues are thus being raised for the support of our Government. This final attempt, to keep "John Barleycorn" from being ousted, reminds one very much of the proverbial clutching at a straw by a man in dire danger of drowning. In this case, however, there is no possible chance of escape. Liquor's doom is sealed.

Educating Georgia Negroes

Education of the right sort has been designated, by many students of the perplexing race problem, as the most logical solution of the question. Recently an important school for Negroes, at Fort Valley, Ga., has come under the supervision of the Protestant Episcopal Church. This is an industrial high school, which seeks to do for the million or more Negroes of Georgia, what similar institutions are doing in other States. Of the 600 students enrolled, 200 live in the dormitories. The others come from the surrounding country. A farm of ninety acres, and industrial plants valued at $60,000, are important factors in the work of the school. Each student is trained in some useful trade, insuring him the opportunity of developing into a helpful, contented citizen of the State.

Looking After the "Vanishing Indians"

It is not wholly creditable to the Christian forces of our land that sixty per cent of the American Indians are without religious affiliation. Only half of those, who are enrolled as believers, are Protestants. Illiteracy, too, is deplorable, for 260,193 of the 335,998 Indians in the continental United States can neither read nor write, and only one-third of the entire Indian population can speak English. Then, too, various ills, due to unsanitary surroundings and utter lack of personal hygiene, have ravaged almost every tribe. Special attention has been given to all these matters of late years, with the result that the death rate has fallen considerably below the birth rate, and now the Indian is no longer a "vanishing race," but developing physically, mentally and religiously. As everywhere else, Christianity is "profitable in all things."

Missouri's Drastic Anti-Cigarette Bill

When the Legislature of Missouri passed a bill, recently, against the cigarette evil, Governor Gardner, in signing it, took occasion to point out, in strong language, some of the evils of cigarette smoking. According to an editorial in the "Christian-Evangelist," the remarks of the Governor are most illuminating: "The glaring evil of the most high-priced and exclusive cafés and restaurants of St. Louis and Kansas City is the cigarette smoker. Most of these places smell like Chinese 'Joss Houses,' because way, more than any one else, the soldiers who smoke cigarettes, or else the person who gave them to them." A loud and emphatic "Amen" greeted the conclusion of the Governor's speech. With the "Evangelist" editor, many others will say "Amen" also, and with him we would fain add our protest against smoking cigars and pipes in public restaurants and street cars. Why should non-smokers be compelled to breathe the air that is vitiated by the vile fumes of nicotine?

The Quaker Principles Unchanged

Because a comparatively small number of men, belonging to the Society of Friends, voluntarily entered military service, some have argued that the Quakers in general have weakened on their old-time opposition to war activities. Such a conception is wholly erroneous. At the recent meeting of Orthodox Quakers of Philadelphia it was agreed that "a loving and tender spirit" should be observed towards such of their number as had been in military service, but it was also insisted upon that such a spirit of forbearance should not be construed that there has been a radical change in the old-time Quaker principle of opposing war. Not in the least have the anti-war principles of these people been lost sight of.

FUNDS NEEDED FOR DRESS REFORM WORK

May 4 is the day agreed upon by our Committee to ask all the churches of the Brotherhood for an offering for our work, now in need of funds, to carry out rapidly-developing plans.

A widespread interest on every hand is evident in the determined effort, by the various organizations, to throw off the shackles of Madam Fashion. The practical plan is through "standardization" of women's clothes.

Many firms are enthusiastic. Some very practical designs are being made and your Committee has the privilege of having an active part in this commendable work. Three tailored suits we are now ready to recommend to our sisters, and any other women wishing garments durable, sensible, made-to-measure, as against the freaks now on the market. Already the patronage is encouraging.

To get these before our people and to provide for the new "Book-list," to be published before Conference, we need your help,—this help, according to Annual Meeting Minutes, 1914, page 5, we are authorized to "request."

Sunday, May 4

is the day. Please announce the offering a week in advance,—April 27.

All sums will be duly acknowledged, if sent to the Secretary-Treasurer, Lydia E. Taylor, Mt. Morris, Ill., who, upon request, will also furnish particulars regarding the "standardized suits," mentioned above.

Fraternally yours,
Committee on Dress Reform.

The Korean Revolts

Under date of April 17 we are told that the seriousness of the situation and the alarming proportions of the riots prevalent throughout Korea, have led to the adoption of more rigorous measures than the employment of police force alone. It is also true, however, that the authorities are combining humanity with firmness. Reports of alleged Japanese cruelty are declared to be unfounded, and it is also asserted that there is no tendency, on the part of Japanese authorities, to intimate that American missionaries have been instigating the uprisings in Korea. Some malcontent Koreans,—it is asserted,—have sought to implicate the missionaries in their plots. This accusation has now been proved to be wholly unwarranted. In every instance have missionaries aligned themselves on the side of law and order.

Needs of the Near East

Cabled reports come from the newly-arrived missionaries to the Near East, saying that the field for missionary service is open as never before. Missionaries in Constantinople and in adjacent territory are well and hopeful with unexpected opportunities opening, as Mohammedans are being held under strict control by the allied powers. Great numbers of Christian children and girls, hitherto sequestered, are being rescued and adequately cared for. This is a responsibility impossible to evade. The need is an urgent one. The entire country needs the benign influence of Christian missionaries as never before. One hundred and twenty missionaries were in Turkey and

HOME AND FAMILY

Comfort the Living

We know one you loved is now missing;
We know you have sorrowed and wept.
We know you no longer are kissing
The lips of the one who has slept
Drear months in the earth. Are you giving
Too much to the soul that has fled?
Won't you give to the heart-hungry living
What you're trying to give to the dead?

You did all you could when you had him,
When you looked at him eye unto eye;
You staid till the end, and you bade him
A loving and tender goodby.
There ended the best of your giving,—
Just there when the farewells were said.
You can do,—oh, so much for the living,
But you can't do a thing for the dead!

In your heart keep the tenderness, dearie,—
The living have need of it all.
They need you all blithesome and cheery,—
Not reeking with wormwood and gall.
And I think he'll be slow in forgiving,—
Aye, perhaps he may chide you instead!
If, neglecting the heart-hungry living
You give all your love to the dead.

Flowers for the Living

BY EDNA VIOLET KERR

In Three Parts.—Part One

THE sun beat relentlessly down upon the smooth, gray-white board walk that led from the side-door of Mary Varley's cottage to the pump. The board walk was scrubbed every morning, whether it needed it or not, and so was the little side-porch where Mary Varley sat in a low, armless rocker, with its patchwork cushion.

It was early yet,—hardly nine o'clock,—but Mary Varley's work was done and she sat rocking gently, wondering if there might not be some little duty she had overlooked. A bee buzzed drowsily around a white clover blossom, and it was very peaceful, and very, very lonely. The clover blossom reminded Mary of the more pretentious posey-stalk around in front,—a pink geranium stalk that Mrs. Plummer had carried to her, down the hot dusty road, just a week before. Yes, she must go and see to it, and Mary bustled round to the front, oh, just as though there were mountains of work to be done, and only a few hours in which to do it all. Perhaps hungry harvest hands and a bouseful of little folks were all clamoring for dinner and a big baking under way and jelly to make, and a baby to rock to sleep,—yes, Mary Varley often pretended things just like that when time hung too heavily, and the loneliness came to crush her down.

Well, Mary knew the pink geranium wouldn't grow,—nothing would grow in the poor soil around Mary's house. If only some one would haul her a load of black loam from the woods, a mile away, she was sure she could raise a few flowers then. But who would do that? Every one was busy with his own affairs, while she had to hunt for little make-believe duties, for idleness drove her to distraction. If only she could remember to work slower and make it last longer, like a child nibbling slowly at a choice bit of candy,—there are children like that,—and Mary Varley was like that. Well, maybe in a few years the little Plummer child could take his red wagon to the woods for rich dirt and she knew well how she would reward him!

But in the meantime the pink geranium must die. Why, even the grass was straggly! And flowers, she felt, were the only things that could have kept her hands busy and fed her lonely soul. Flowers! Well, it couldn't be helped. But, O dear, the loneliness! She hadn't noticed the loneliness when Myra had been with her. Now Myra had been taken away,—not by death. It would have been better so,—but Myra's had been a mental sickness and Myra had been taken to Norwood, to the institution built for such cases, but the treatment had not proved effective and, like her pink geranium, Mary knew that Myra must wither and die, while she could not go to her. Myra, her old friend, who had shared her home for so many years! If only she could go once in a while to see her! But there was no way except by automobile, and who was there that would take a childish old woman to see a mentally-deranged woman fifty miles away? And what good would it do anyway? Myra wouldn't know her. But Myra had been a loving friend and Mary would have loved to carry her a festive bunch of flowers,—like those that one could buy at the big greenhouses in Norwood. But it was no use to think of those wild schemes. No one had time, these days, to bother with old women. Besides, Gibson Varley, Mary's brother, lived in Norwood and would see that Myra was treated well, for Myra had been an angel of mercy to Gibson Varley's family, years ago, when diphtheria had laid them low, and Mary knew that Gibson Varley never forgot a kindness.

And that was all the folks Mary Varley had, unless one counted Gibson Varley's daughter Ella and her family,—the Leonard Lee Brockmans, of Carroll City, twenty miles away. O, they loved Aunt Mary dearly, but never showed it, and they had loved Myra too, even called her Aunt, but just the thought of an asylum gave cold chills and horrors, especially to the daughter Flora and the son, Varley Brockman.

No, visiting Aunt Myra in the asylum was out of the question, but what was to prevent them from going to Aunt Mary's? Well, they did go once a year and every Christmas Aunt Mary received from them a box containing gray-knitted things, bought at the church bazaar. O, things very suitable for old, feeble folks, and Aunt Mary was not feeble nor did she feel old. But what more could one expect a niece and her family to do for an old woman twenty miles away, when the niece's family had so many affairs and so much going on?

If Ella Brockman's conscience ever troubled her, over her neglect of Aunt Mary, she always soothed it with: "Next year we will have her here for a long stay." But next year never seemed to come. Besides, Flora and Varley always had the house full, and the noise alone might kill Aunt Mary, used to the peacefulness of her little house,—and the intolerable loneliness,—Ella Brockman forgot the last.

"Well, tomorrow," promised Ella, "I will write a long letter to Aunt Mary, the dear, dear old soul. I just wonder how she is." But tomorrow never comes and letters somehow do not get written.

So the Leonard Lee Brockmans went about their absorbing affairs and Aunt Myra languished in the asylum, and Gibson Varley looked in at the institution every once in a while, and loneliness reigned supreme in Aunt Mary's cottage, as the sun continued to beat down upon her spotless walk, and the bee buzzed drowsily around the few white clover blossoms among the grass in her yard, while she ate her solitary meals and swept her already clean rooms, and made one glass of jelly at a time to make the work last longer.

Then, suddenly, there came a day when the Brockmans' hilarious household was startled and shocked by a yellow slip of paper, bearing the words: "Aunt Mary died last night. Funeral at ten o'clock Wednesday morning.—Gibson Varley."

The Story of the Pilgrim Testament

The publication of a new edition of the "Pilgrim Testament" makes this an opportune time to tell the story of this well-known "blue line" Testament. Perhaps most of those who have seen the Testament know that it is in reality the "Gish Testament" marked with red and blue lines. They know, too, that the blue lines emphasize the passages, particularly the words of Christ, that show the way to heaven. The red lines mark passages of warning. The "Gish Testament," thus marked, becomes the Pilgrim Testament, because it aims to show the pilgrim at a glance the passages pointing the way to heaven. All of this may be known, and still there is no clue as to just how the "Pilgrim Testament" came to be.

The Boiler Manufacturer that Blew Up

The man who marked the "Pilgrim Testament" is a very successful manufacturer of steam and hot water heaters and boilers. All his life he has been interested in Christian work and shared in such activities as were open to laymen in his church. However, in 1906, something happened which gave a new impetus to this work and in particular the "Pilgrim Testament." In 1905 the boiler manufacturer acquired a fourth factory; and, like many ambitious Americans, tried to supervise all the factories himself. But at last, from worry and overwork, the boiler manufacturer blew up. He was left with nerves so shattered that a complete rest was ordered by the doctors. The sick man visited various quiet health resorts, but particularly Mackinac Island, Michigan. Here the days were spent in walking about the island, and the evenings in rowing out on Lake Huron. These exercises were taken with a view of producing a physical exhaustion that would induce sleep.

Lost on Lake Huron

On one of the last evenings, in July, 1906, the boiler manufacturer went out for his customary row about the Island of Mackinac. Finally he grew weary, and then fell asleep in his boat. Near midnight he awoke and found himself lost and drifting on Lake Huron. The sick man had been praying for special guidance for weeks, but on this particular night he was in special need of Divine Guidance. Then something happened which the sick man instantly interpreted as an answer to prayer. He saw a large red star, and, reasoning that if it were of divine origin it would be in the East, he took his direction from the star and rowed for Mackinac Island. He rowed steadily the remainder of the night. About 3 A. M. the guiding star suddenly disappeared and the shadowy outlines of Mackinac Island came in view, far to the west. The whole experience was one which deeply impressed the boiler manufacturer. To him it was plainly nothing but Divine Guidance that saved him from becoming lost on the lake. Toward morning he saw also certain figures in the heavens which he interpreted as a call to deeper consecration to God's work.

The First Pilgrim Testament

It was not long after the impressive experience, related above, that the boiler manufacturer sat down in a car by a member of the Gideon Society. The latter showed his Bible, which was beautifully and wonderfully marked. Then in a flash came the idea of a "Pilgrim Testament,"—a Testament marked so that any one could see at a glance the passages that point to heaven. Different colors were experimented with, but it was finally decided that since blue is the color of the sky, that blue lines should mark all passages pointing heavenward. Since red is a commonly accepted sign of danger, it was selected as the color for underscoring all passages that warn of the perils of the lost. The "Gish Testament," marked in this way, becomes a "Pilgrim Testament," or Bible, as it is sometimes called.

Making Boilers to Save Men

As the years have gone by, the manufacturer of steam and hot water heaters has gone on making heating apparatus and money. But it has, in no way, dimmed the vision that came the night he was lost on Lake Huron. Besides distributing quantities of the "Pilgrim Testament," the boiler manufacturer has spent much time and thousands of dollars in related lines of Christian work. Today twenty per cent of his income and as much of his time is spent in the work of saving men to clean Christian living. The "Pilgrim Testament" has, in this way, been useful in bringing many to a knowledge of Christ, for, as can easily be seen, it is most conveniently marked for the use of personal workers, as well as inquirers after the way to heaven.

"INFANT CONSECRATION"

When "The Gospel Messenger" of Feb. 22 came, and I opened and read it, I noticed the above title. I hastened to read, and certainly feel like saying "Amen" and "Amen."

For many years the thought has been in my mind that children should be dedicated to the Lord, if we desire to secure workers for the Master in after-life. I have often wished that our church might have a consecration service to which we could take our children, to dedicate and consecrate them to the service of the Master. Yet I knew it was never a custom of our church, and I hesitated to mention it publicly, although I did so to individuals.

Of a truth, I do believe in the dedication before birth. And no mother should bring a child into this world without many prayers ascending to the throne of God in its behalf. But this is not sufficient. Can we ever have too much prayer? The prayer for dedication and consecration of children, while they are still innocent, may be answered as well as the prayer when they are born into the spiritual kingdom. Were not little children brought to be blessed in the time of Christ, because he heartily commended it? My own children are young and in the church, and I at-aters and boilers. All his life he has been interested in ristian work and shared in such activities as were open laymen in his church. However, in 1905, something ppened which gave a new impetus to this work and in rticular the "Pilgrim Testament." In 1905 the boiler anufacturer acquired a fourth factory; and, like many bitious Americans, tried to supervise all the factories mself. But at last, from worry and overwork, the boiler anufacturer blew up. He was left with nerves so shat-red that a complete rest was ordered by the doctors. he sick man visited various quiet health resorts, but par-ularly Mackinac Island, Michigan. Here the days were ent in walking about the island, and the evenings in wing out on Lake Huron. These exercises were taken th a view of producing a physical exhaustion that would duce sleep.

Lost on Lake Huron

On one of the last evenings, in July, 1906, the boiler anufacturer went out for his customary row about the Is-nd of Mackinac. Finally he grew weary, and then fell eep in his boat. Near midnight he awoke and found him-lf lost and drifting on Lake Huron. The sick man had en praying for special guidance for weeks, but on this rticular night he was in special need of Divine Guidance. hen something happened which the sick man instantly terpreted as an answer to prayer. He saw a large red ar, and, reasoning that if it were of divine origin it would in the East, he took his direction from the star and wed for Mackinac Island. He rowed steadily the re-ainder of the night. About 3 A. M. the guiding star ddenly disappeared and the shadowy outlines of Mack-ac Island came in view, far to the west. The whole ex-rience was one which deeply impressed the boiler manu-cturer. To him it was plainly nothing but Divine Guid-ce that saved him from becoming lost on the lake. To-ard morning he saw also certain figures in the heavens hich he interpreted as a call to deeper consecration to od's work.

DISTRICT MISSION BOARD, MIDDLE INDIANA

At the District Meeting, April 3, Bro. Emery Miller, of Huntington, was reelected and Eld. Charles R. Oberlin, of Hartford City, elected as a member of the Board. The new Board met April 11 and organized by reelecting Eld. J. G. Stinebaugh, of Camden, President, and Bro. Emery Miller, Secretary-Treasurer.

Cards are to be furnished our workers and reports of work done and claims for compensation sent to the Secretary-Treasurer.

The oversight of the Mission churches was apportioned as follows:

J. G. Stinebaugh, Camden, Ind.,—Peru, Logansport, Kewanna, Beaver Creek, Oak Grove and Walton.

G. E. Swihart, Roann, Ind.,—Wabash and South Whitley.

D. M. Byerly, Magley, Ind.,—Andrews and Hartford City.

Chas. R. Oberlin, Hartford City, Ind.,—Marion and Portland.

A general canvass is to be made, to procure money to build a churchhouse in Logansport.

Camden, Ind. J. G. Stinebaugh.

GENERAL INFORMATION FOR THE WINONA CONFERENCE

For the fourth time our Conference will be held at Winona Lake, Indiana. It is a splendid recommendation for the Winona Assembly that our church is coming back for the fourth time.

Winona Lake is situated on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railway, 110 miles east of Chicago and three miles east of Warsaw. The Winona Interurban Railway connects with the main lines of the Union Traction Company of Indiana, at Warsaw. The Big Four Line also passes through Warsaw. Interurban lines, railroad facilities, automobiles and hard roads easily place Winona Lake within the reach of all.

The grounds and buildings are in fine condition. The Auditorium and other public buildings, the spacious grounds, the fourteen miles of concrete walks, the fine shade trees, with open spaces for the sun, the beautiful lake, the good railroad facilities and the splendid people of Winona, all contribute to make this an ideal place for a religious Conference. The only objection that has ever been lodged against Winona is the size of the Auditorium. A movement is now under way to erect a new and much-needed larger Auditorium on these grounds.

Those coming to the Conference should send their baggage, freight, express and mail to Winona Lake, Ind., then call and claim the same.

Winona is amply prepared to take care of all who will come to this Conference. Both large and small residences are opening their doors to receive our people. Good lodging in private homes and hotels may be had at the rate of 50 cents a night, per person, or $1 for double beds. Cots may be had for 25 cents. Those who prefer hotel accommodations will find the large Winona hotel, "The Inn," and other hotels at their disposal, the rate being $1.50 per day for lodging and board. Meals, 35 cents each.

When it comes to eating, meals may be had at 35 cents at many places. The lunch counter will be conducted by members of our local congregation and will enable all to order just what they wish, thus reducing the price to the minimum. At the lunch counter, articles will be sold on a five and ten cent basis, payment being made by tickets, which should be purchased at the regular ticket stands. This lunch counter, conducted by the Brethren, is one-half block west of the Auditorium, at the same place it has been at all former Conferences.

A large number will come by auto. Space will be provided for parking a large number of automobiles.

Immediately on entering the grounds, you will see large posters, telling you where the various committees are located, and directing you to the place you wish to find. By following these, and the information given you by responsible guides, you will save many steps. The buildings are close together, so that you will be able to find them without trouble.

The Brethren Publishing House will have its usual stand, with bargains in Bibles, books, etc. Those in charge will be glad to give you any information, and supply all of your needs, if you but make your wants known.

The Mission Board, the Sunday School Board and the Educational Board will have suitable quarters and instructive displays. You will want to visit their headquarters, and learn what is being done in these three great lines of the Assembly and the people, will be the best. If y come to enjoy a spiritual meeting, you will certainly n be disappointed. Should the weather prove unfavorab at the time of our Conference, you will find about as co venient shelter and provision as at any place where t Conference has ever been held.

It affords the nine Districts of the central part of o Brotherhood great pleasure to invite you to Winona f the Conference of 1919. The Committee of Arrangemer consists of: J. L. Cunningham, Chairman, Flora, Ind.; M. Neher, Secretary and Treasurer, Warsaw, Ind.; D. Blickenstaff, Oakley, Ill.; A. J. Heestand, Wooster, Ohi Jacob Coppock, Tippecanoe City, Ohio; E. O. Norr Ingalls, Ind.; G. A. Snider, Lima, Ohio; J. Edson Ufe Onekama, Mich.

In behalf of the Committee,

L. M. Neher, Secretary.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF NORTHEASTERN KANSAS

Our Conference was held in the Ozawkie church Ap 6-8. It was the postponed meeting of last October. T attendance was not as large as usual, but all seemed to n tice the growth in vision and activity from year to year

The program was good. Postponement and sickne had made many changes necessary. Parts of it were s cast entirely,—due largely to a desire to bring the Fo ward Movement with greater emphasis before the Distri

The Sunday-school session was much benefited by t presence of Prof. J. H. Engle, Kansas State Sunday Sch Secretary. He filled his part of the program and ga much of inspiration and many practical suggestio through the entire session.

The Monday morning session on Temperance and Ed cation was merged into a Forward Movement program, which Prof. E. M. Studebaker gave the main addre Many are anxious and eager to see what they can do w the new standard. I am sure the delegates went ho with a new vision of our field and a consciousness th the church was coming into her own with a wealth dormant power, to be hitched to the seemingly impossib

Eld. Ira Frantz gave the main address in the Child Re cue session. He and his wife were in charge of t Home at Mt. Morris for several years, so he was able put real scenes and experiences into his message, th went home to the hearts of those present.

The sermons of the Conference were more or less fil with the Forward Movement. The writer spoke in t morning on the text: "Thus mightily grew the Word God and prevailed." Eld. R. A. Yoder preached on Su day evening on "Faith, the Fundamental of Christianit He led us to see that it is this that will overcome t world. Eld. W. H. Yoder, who is to take the pastora at Morrill, Kans., soon, gave the "Home Missions" s mon. The offering of $835 shows the force and power his appeal,—a high water mark for our District.

The Conference was organized as follows: Eld. G Manon, Moderator; C. A. Shank, Reading Clerk; F. McCune, Writing Clerk. There was little business to done, as we were through by three in the afternoon. A of our work was vital to a growing church. One chur East Maple Grove, was, since a minister had moved reorganized for work. The churches of the District d cided to support another foreign missionary. There we no queries for Annual Conference. Eld. Geo. Manon our delegate, with Bro. C. A. Shank, alternate.

The Ozawkie church was splendid in her entertainme They have a number of real old members but a fine gro of young people who are a credit to their leader, Eld. H. Brammell.

We pray God to bless the work done, to grant wisde and guidance for the leaders of the District, and th every member will do his full share for the Kingdom Christ.

Since our meeting had been postponed, it will be b seven months till we meet with the Appanoose church f the Conference of 1919. F. E. McCune, Clerk

EN ROUTE AGAIN TO "DO THE WORK OF A EVANGELIST"

2 Tim. 4: 5

We are again giving our time exclusively to the eva gelistic phase of church activity because of the recogniz urgency for every member of our Brotherhood being in t place where his efforts will count for the most in this o five-year "Forward Movement."

A few notes will be in place here, relative to the two l unreported months in the Second Church at South Ber Ind. Several of our members were on the sick list, a lar share of their time, and one was called to rest in the pe son of our faithful sister, Elizabeth Price. Just four hou before her passing over, a few of us met with her and e gaged in a brief service, much to her comfort. She w

DEATH OF BRO. REUBEN O. ROOSE

Reuben O. Roose was born Feb. 9, 1886, died Feb. 22, 1919, aged thirty-three years and thirteen days. When about fifteen years old, he united with the Church of the Brethren. He first served as church clerk and then was elected deacon, serving in this capacity for nearly two years. Dec. 6, 1912, he was elected to the ministry and was ordained to the full ministry five years later.

Reuben O. Roose

Sept. 4, 1910, he married Merle Wilson. To them three children were born. Surviving are his father, three brothers, six sisters, his wife and three children. His last illness,—nephritis,—was borne with much patience. He made a heroic fight for his life, but was wholly resigned to the will of God.

He called for the anointing. His desire was complied with by our former pastor, Bro. C. C. Kindy, and Bro. Ira Sollenberger. When the word came over the telephone, "Bro. Roose is dead!" great sadness was felt by all who knew him. The news touched every sympathetic heart in the whole community. We surely have lost a loved one, but our loss is our brother's gain.

Though here at Naperville but a few months, he and Sister Roose endeared themselves not only to the members of the church of which he was pastor, but to all who learned to know them.

His parents had recently moved to Goshen, Ind., where his mother died Feb. 19. Arrangements had been made for her funeral, when word came of the death of the son. A double funeral was held at the Yellow Creek church, where Bro. Frank Kreider officiated for the mother and Bro. T. E. George for the son. Interment at the Yellow Creek (Mennonite) cemetery.

ALABAMA

Fruitdale church met in council April 5. We decided to hold our love feast April 19. Bro. Glen W. Peicher was chosen moderator for this year.—J. Z. Jordan, Fruitdale, Ala., April 16.

ARIZONA

Glendale church met in council at the Phoenix church April 5, with Eld. Platt presiding. One letter was received and two were granted. Sisters Pepe Rodriguez and Emma Stover, and Bro. Arnold, were appointed as a Missionary Committee, to help us in reaching the goal of the "Five-year Forward Movement."—Emma T. Whitcher, Glendale, Ariz., April 10.

CALIFORNIA

Inglewood congregation was one of the many churches that enjoyed a visit from Brother and Sister Emmert and family. Bro. Emmert gave us a talk March 28 and also the following Sunday. He explained, in a clear and forceful way, the condition in India, and the work that is being done. An offering of $66.85 was received for the Boarding-schools in India. The midweek prayer meetings have proved quite a help for the spiritual growth of the church. The Sunday morning prayer meetings at 9:30 are held in behalf of our Decision Day,—Easter Sunday. The Men's Bible Class provided a special song and a number of Scripture quotations for the opening exercises of the Sunday-school April 13.—Susan Stoner, Inglewood, Calif., April 14.

La Verne church met in quarterly council last Monday evening, at 7:30, with our elder, Bro. J. F. Dickey, presiding. The regular business was transacted speedily and pleasantly. Our elder was elected delegate to Annual Conference, with our pastor, Bro. R. H. Miller, as alternate. Eld. J. B. Emmert occupied the preaching hour both morning and evening, last Sunday. He illustrated his lectures with maps and charts. He made some earnest appeals on behalf of the India mission field. At the close of the evening service the rite of baptism was administered to three applicants by our pastor. Eld. I. V. Funderburgh addressed the "section workers" at their regular biweekly meeting, last Sunday afternoon. He emphasized three characteristics of the earnest Christian: (1) Bible Study (God talking to us), (2) Prayer (talking to God), and service. A night school is held at our church five evenings, each week, for Japanese men, with about twelve enrolled. They are taught English by some thirty volunteers. At the close of the hour, spent in studying English, they adjourn to the home of the writer for an hour of worship in song, Bible study and prayer. These men get closer together physically and therefore mentally and spiritually, in a small room, and appreciate to the fullest extent the fact that an American home is open to them. Under the direction of the section worker delegated to the Mexican people, classes in English and sewing are being organized in the Mexican homes.—Grace H. Miller, La Verne, Calif., April 11.

COLORADO

Colorado Springs.—We invite all the members, who are looking for a change of location, to investigate our country. We have fine, rich, productive land here, that raises big crops, and, from Chicago, is not yet, at reasonable prices. We have two churches, one in the city and the other in the country, giving good church privileges to all. If interested, write the undersigned.—E. C. Cohun, 403 South Nevada Avenue, Colorado Springs, Colo., April 5.

Haxtun.—At the time of our last report, we were expecting Bro. M. M. Heiney to conduct a singing class each evening for at least one week. This was given up on account of bad weather and roads. Our pastor, Bro. S. G. Nielsen, is now conducting a series of meetings, leading up to Decision Day, Easter Sunday, at which time we will have a program. In the near future, we expect Sister Florence Dickey, of Chicago, to be with us in the interest of mission work. Our supply serving Bro. Ernest G. Hoff, of Chicago, will fill the appointments during the summer months.—E. L. Lapp, Haxtun, Colo., April 14.

Wiley church is recovering from the hardships of the winter and the influenza epidemic. We deeply feel the loss of Sister Cora Funk. Not until April 1 were we able to reorganize our church work for the present year. Bro. Homer Ullom was retained as our pastor, Jacob Funk as assistant, Jacob Lindaman as Sunday-school superintendent and Bro. Scott Martin, president of Christian Workers' Band. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Funk and Ullom. Bro. Funk is delegate to Annual Meeting. The financial board was increased to ten, including younger brethren, that they might be in training. We have raised over $300 for the Armenian Relief Fund. Our Sunday-school has organized for a personal canvass, and responsibility Sunday—Decision Day—will be a big day. Also a contest is being waged between the Wiley, Rocky Ford and McClave Sunday-schools for attendance and collection. Our organized classes are planning some definite work.—Laura V. Ullom, Lamar, Colo., April 8.

IDAHO

Nezperce church met in council March 25, with Eld. B. J. Fike presiding. Arrangements were made for the coming District Meeting, to be held in this church May 13-15. Our delegates are Bro. Perry Sanger and Sister Ella Billyeu. We are hoping for good roads and good weather, that many may enjoy the meeting. Our love feast will be held June 7.—Mattie E. Thomas, Nezperce, Idaho, April 5.

ILLINOIS

Lamotte Prairie church met in council April 5. Bro. J. C. Stoner presided. We were very glad to have Bro. Miller, from Allison Prairie, with us. We decided to send Bro. Stoner as delegate to the Annual Conference. Bro. Herbert Richards, from Chicago, has promised to be with us for our revival meetings during September.—Ruth L. Swinger, Palestine, Ill., April 7.

Liberty church met in council April 5, with Eld. I. D. Heckman presiding. Bro. Shank, of Bethany, has been chosen pastor for three months, beginning June 1. Our revival is to begin the middle of June. Eld. Heckman was chosen delegate to Annual Conference. Four letters were granted. Bro. Heckman preached two very interesting and spiritual sermons on Sunday following the council. His coming always puts new life into the church.—Lucas C. Akers, Liberty, Ill., April 9.

INDIANA

Arcadia church met in council April 5, with Brethren Wm. Burcham and G. F. Wagoner presiding. One Sunday of each month is to be set aside for a missionary meeting, beginning with April. Delegates to be our delegate this year to Annual Meeting. The committee reported that $3,222.50 had been subscribed toward the remodeling fund, and $1,000 had been donated from the cemetery fund.—Kate Smeltzer, Arcadia, Ind., April 10.

Auburn.—Bro. David Metzler, of Nappanee, Ind., recently conducted a series of meetings, preaching in all eleven sermons, which were much appreciated. We trust that much good has been done.—Mrs. Maud M. Wirt, Auburn, Ind., April 11.

Gosben City church met in special council March 6, with Eld. David Metzler presiding. Eighteen letters were received and three were granted. The services of Bro. Lampin have been secured for our evening services during April. At our council, held April 5, five letters were received: Brethren Walter Gibson and W. H. Grecnawalt were chosen delegates to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Chas. Sherman and Sister Dora Stiver, alternates. It was decided to hold a love feast this spring, the date has not yet been set. Our pastor's report showed a decided increase in the attendance at evening services. The Missionary Committee reported an offering of $14.93 on Missionary Day. The Temperance Committee reported that they had secured the services of Eld. T. E. George for a lecture April 27. March 23 Sister Cora Wise gave an interesting talk to the children after Sunday-school. She gave her illustrated lecture on "The Jewish Tabernacle" in the evening. April 13 Sister Ina Fields, of North Manchester College, is to give her recital, "The Prince of the House of David." Both lectures are under the auspices of the Christian Workers' Society. Two have been received into the church since our last repost.—Beulah I. Manahan, Goshen, Ind., April 8.

Huntington country church met in council March 29, with Eld. J. A. Sell presiding. Two letters were granted and two received. It was decided to hold a series of meetings the last of May, with Bro. Elmer Gilbert, evangelist. Bro. Q. L. Brower was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Emery Miller, alternate. April 6 we took offering of $16.50 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our Sunday-school seems to be increasing in numbers since spring has come. —Mary J. Miller, Huntington, Ind., April 15.

Indianapolis church met in regular council April 5. Elder G. W. Hahn presided. Six letters of membership were granted,—among them being those of Bro. Hahn and family. Bro. Hahn took charge here when the church was first organized. He was elected to the ministry soon after coming to Indianapolis, and after several years of service ordained to eldership. He has been unselfishly and earnestly while among us, and has been a great factor in keeping things together when the church was weak. We trust that, as he enters other fields of labor, his work for the Master will be effective, and that he will be a help in building up the Kingdom. His address in the future will be R. F. D., Pendleton, Ind. Sister Helen Gufan was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting. Other matters pertaining to the welfare of the church and Sunday-school, and in preparation for the coming of our new pastor, were discussed and planned for.—J. J. Kintner, 59 N. Holmes Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., April 8.

Logansport church met in council March 27, with Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh presiding. Bro. H. C. Murphy was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast May 25. The building of our new church was discussed with good results.—Dora Hirt, Logansport, Ind., April 9.

Maple Grove church is rejoicing over the many blessings received. Our three weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Wm. Buckley, closed April 6. The weather conditions were all we could have wished for and the attendance was splendid. Two have been baptized and two others await baptism. We organized a Christian Workers' Meeting April 8. We are hoping to secure a pastor soon. —Mae Mitchel, Center Point, Ind., April 8.

Rossville church met in council March 30. Seven letters were granted and four received. A committee was elected to arrange for District Meeting, to be held at this place. Bro. W. L. Hatcher was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Chas. Hilton, alternate. Bro. Ira Kreider, of Bringhurst, Ind., will hold a series of meetings here some time in May.—Lillian A. Hufford, Rossville, Ind., April 9.

Upper Deer Creek.—Bro. Geo. Mishler closed a very good two weeks' series of meetings here April 6. Four decided for Christ, three of whom have been baptized. April 13 Bro. Harvey Wolfe gave a short talk, setting forth the great need of the Armenians and Syrians. Pledge cards were distributed and we hope to receive a liberal amount.—Mrs. Geo. R. Murphy, Lincoln, Ind., April 14.

Wawaka congregation met in council March 29, with Eld. Wm. Hess, of Goshen, presiding. It was decided to hold our communion May 17, to be preceded by a week's revival. Hallie Miller was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Sister Etta Elson, alternate. Our Sunday-school is using the collections from the first Sunday of each month for missionary purposes. Interest in mission work is growing in our church.—Hallie Miller, Wawaka, Ind., April 9.

KANSAS

Lone Star church held a special service for Armenian Relief April 13. Bro. C. A. Ward preached a very inspiring sermon, after which a collection of $134.37 was taken, besides securing a number of pledges. Lone Star church was dedicated less than one year ago and represents a rural community of five church workers. Our church, which has electric lights, furnace, etc., is free from debt and we expect to go "over the top" with every phase of the "Forward Movement."—Mrs. J. W. Gorbutt, Lawrence, Kans., April 14.

Ramona church met in council March 31, with Eld. E. F. Sherfy presiding. One letter was received. Bro. Sherfy was chosen Sunday-school delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. C. E. Hart, alternate. The committee have reported that they had secured Bro. Clyde Forney to begin a series of meetings Nov. 4. Our love feast will be held May 24 and 25. At a special meeting, Bro. Heckman, of Madison, Kansas., was secured as pastor, to take charge in June. Bro. Sherfy and family are to take charge of the church at Monitor, Kans. We are sorry to lose this splendid family. Bro. Sherfy has done much good here and was well liked both in the church and in the community. Our birthday collection of $8.30 was sent to the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Welcome Sondergard, Ramona, Kans., April 10.

Rock Creek.—Our church services and Sunday-school are starting in fine this spring. April 13 we had 104 at Sunday-school. Our pastor, Bro. H. D. Bowman, delivers an address in behalf of the Armenian-Syrian Relief and a collection of $375 was taken. Bro. Bowman has been giving good sermons to large audiences. We resumed Christian Workers' Meeting on Sunday evening, with Ethel Davis, president. We hope to have a series of meetings the fore part of June, followed by a love feast.—Frank Hoover, Sabetha, Kans., April 14.

"An Idea Whose Time Has Come"

It doesn't really matter whether Victor Hugo said it or not. The important thing is that it is true: "There is only one thing stronger than armies and that is an idea whose time has come."

You see ideas have their times as well as other things. Slavery was always opposed to the spirit of Christianity. But the early church did not realize it. The time for the idea had not come.

The saloon is to be abolished in America, and elsewhere also, in the not far future. The time for the idea has arrived. It has not yet penetrated the Chicago Tribune, but it would be unreasonable to expect the world to wait for that.

The leading nations are about to join in a great compact to reduce the ravages of war. They will succeed. Not entirely, at first, perhaps. But it is a good beginning. And finally the monster will be slain. The reason is: It is a great idea and the time for it is near at hand.

The spirit of more aggressive Christian endeavor is seizing the churches generally. It is time for it, high time. Did you wonder why the Church of the Brethren also has its Forward Movement? It is "an idea whose time has come."

Where Does the Spirit Live?

You remember Paul's teaching that the Christian is a temple of the Holy Spirit. The idea occurs in more than one passage. Here is one of the most familiar: "Know ye not that ye are a temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?"

Did it ever occur to you to ask just where the Spirit resides? In what part of you? Would the surgeon's dissecting knife be able to locate him? Would a chemical analysis of the physical body disclose his secret hiding-place?

If a search of that kind seems too surely fruitless, suppose you explore the region of "the thoughts and intents of the heart." With the aid of the instrument which is "sharper than any two-edged sword," you ought to succeed in hunting out everything.

Look very carefully among your wishes and choices. If you find no trace of the Spirit there, it is hardly worth while to continue the search. You might as well conclude that he does not live in you.

Tenants of God and Trustees for Humanity

I FOUND two interesting sentences the other day. They were about the property relations that will prevail in that good time coming,—the time when men will have some just sense of their obligations to each other, and to God. And will really put the Golden Rule to practice.

You know there are those who say that private property will be abolished,—that everything will belong to everybody. This writer did not put it that way. He does not accept that view of things. But he said something just the same. This is what it was: "All holders of property will feel themselves tenants of God. All holders of property will feel themselves trustees for humanity."

What have you to say to that? Holders of property still, but not irresponsible holders, blind alike to the blessings of Heaven which have made their property possible and the claims of their fellow-men, without whom it would be of little worth. Holders of property? Yes, holders, but recognizing God as the rightful Owner, and mankind as the rightful beneficiary.

Absolute community of property will never be practical. If that statement is too sweeping, since never is such a very long way off, let us say that communism is not practical now and there are no present signs that it ever will be. But the signs are plentiful that the coming days will demand a new interpretation of the responsibilities of property holders. It is no disgrace yet to hold property. But the day has already begun in which it will be a disgrace to hoard property for selfish uses.

Three forces are at work in the public mind, tending toward this end.

One of them is the natural and powerful instinct for self-preservation. It is the voice of prudence calling for attention to the gathering storm. Only they who refuse to look can fail to see. For it is as clear as day that the only way to forestall the tyranny of the propertyless laborer is to stop the tyranny of his property-holding employer. The "lower classes" can be held in serfdom for a while,—sometimes for a very long while,—but in the eternal balancings of Divine Justice there comes the day of reckoning—the day when master and serf change places and the latter wields the lash. And we have only to look at Eastern Europe to see how mercilessly he can do it.

For the successful treatment of Bolshevism an ounce of prevention is worth a thousand pounds of cure.

The second of these forces is the growing conviction that the property holder, as a rule, has kept for himself more than is his due. Not that he has always been consciously dishonest. Sometimes he has, but often, perhaps generally, he has dealt honestly, according to the accepted standards. He has paid his employés the wage agreed upon. And he has sold his wares in the open market at the market price. But he has usually forgotten that the wages paid his employés did not represent the whole value of their labor to him. And he has entirely overlooked the fact that the public, which furnished the market for his products, was the biggest factor of all in bringing him his profits.

So the property-holder shows signs of waking up. He is beginning to ask whose these things which he handles really are? And who are entitled to their benefits? And the questions are making him uncomfortable.

But what is that third thing stirring in the public conscience? It is that sense of obligation which rests, not upon the claims of justice, but upon that deeper feeling which can not be quite content unless it is doing something—well, something you would appreciate having done to you, if you were in the other person's place. It is the feeling that perhaps, after all, we would all be happier if we were all happier, that is, if we all tried to do what we can to make everybody else enjoy life better. So people are just wondering more and more if it would not conduce to this result if the folks who have property would regard it as a sacred trust, to be administered by the holders thereof for the good of all.

Do you know what makes people have such mental questionings? Do you know the name of that peculiar feeling in you that just anyhow,—when you would not need to at all, if it were not for this feeling,—makes you want to take whatever of your holdings you can lay your hands on and do somebody some good with it? It's love. That's the big force which is disturbing old ideas of the rights, privileges and duties of the property holder.

"To have and to hold," the deed says, but instead of adding, "his heirs and assigns forever," it would be more fitting to say "during good behavior." It is a high enough position with which God has honored you,—that of manager of a small portion of his vast estate. Do not abuse your trust. The Owner might come and let your holdings out to some other husbandman.

Tenants of God and trustees for humanity! What if we all were faithful tenants and trustees? How the borders of the Kingdom would enlarge! God speed the day!

Sermons That Touch Life

"WHERE did you make that sermon?" the pastor was asked by one of his congregation after a discourse which seemed unusually impressive. The listener knew the pastor had been called away from home the previous week and wondered how he could have found time or conditions sufficiently free from distraction to enable him to prepare such an excellent sermon.

"On the train," came quickly the pastor's answer. And just as quickly came the parishioner's rejoinder, "Say, if you will travel again this week, I'll pay your fare."

Our information does not state whether the pastor accepted the proposition or not. Very likely he got some profit from the hint, anyway.

What was the new quality in that sermon? It was the note of contact with life. The preacher had been shutting himself up with his books. His sermons were good, no doubt. They were packed full of truth. But they were somewhat stiff and formal. They dealt mostly with abstract principles. They failed to connect with the concrete problems of the people. But that week he had rubbed elbows with human beings. He had heard them talk. He found out what they were concerned about. And his sermon, instead of being musty with the smell of mediæval lore, was fragrant with the freshness of living issues.

A preacher should have a place and time for quiet study. He needs good books and plenty of them. But he also needs contact with the world in which the people live to whom he tries to minister. He must know that the finest exposition of Scripture truth will miss its mark unless it touches human hearts exactly where they hurt and throb and struggle.

And the place to find out where the hearts hurt is on the highway, in the homes and shops and everywhere that people face the hard facts of life. Close up your books, go out and mingle with men. The sermon will come more easily and it will be better.

"An Idea Whose Time Has Come"

It doesn't really matter whether Victor Hugo said it or not. The important thing is that it is true: "There is only one thing stronger than armies and that is an idea whose time has come."

You see ideas have their times as well as other things. Slavery was always opposed to the spirit of Christianity. But the early church did not realize it. The time for the idea had not come.

The saloon is to be abolished in America, and elsewhere also, in the not far future. The time for the idea has arrived. It has not yet penetrated the Chicago Tribune, but it would be unreasonable to expect the world to wait for that.

The leading nations are about to join in a great compact to reduce the ravages of war. They will succeed. Not entirely, at first, perhaps. But it is a good beginning. And finally the monster will be slain. The reason is: It is a great idea and the time for it is near at hand.

The spirit of more aggressive Christian endeavor is seizing the churches generally. It is time for it, high time. Did you wonder why the Church of the Brethren also has its Forward Movement? It is "an idea whose time has come."

Where Does the Spirit Live?

You remember Paul's teaching that the Christian is a temple of the Holy Spirit. The idea occurs in more than one passage. Here is one of the most familiar: "Know ye not that ye are a temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?"

Did it ever occur to you to ask just where the Spirit resides? In what part of you? Would the surgeon's dissecting knife be able to locate him? Would a chemical analysis of the physical body disclose his secret hiding-place?

If a search of that kind seems too surely fruitless, suppose you explore the region of "the thoughts and intents of the heart." With the aid of the instrument

Tenants of God and

I FOUND two interesting sentences the other day They were about the property relations that will prevail in that good time coming,—the time when men wil have some just sense of their obligations to each other and to God. And will really put the Golden Rule to practice.

You know there are those who say that private property will be abolished,—that everything will be long to everybody. This writer did not put it tha way. He does not accept that view of things. But he said something just the same. This is what it was "All holders of property will feel themselves tenants of God. All holders of property will feel themselve trustees for humanity."

What have you to say to that? Holders of property still, but not irresponsible holders, blind alike to the blessings of Heaven which have made their property possible and the claims of their fellow-men, without whom it would be of little worth. Holders of property? Yes, holders, but recognizing God as the rightfu Owner, and mankind as the rightful beneficiary.

Absolute community of property will never be practical. If that statement is too sweeping, since never i such a very long way off, let us say that communism is not practical now and there are no present signs tha it ever will be. But the signs are plentiful that th coming days will demand a new interpretation of the responsibilities of property holders. It is no disgrac yet to hold property. But the day has already begun in which it will be a disgrace to hoard property fo selfish uses.

Three forces are at work in the public mind, tending toward this end.

One of them is the natural and powerful instinct fo self-preservation. It is the voice of prudence calling for attention to the gathering storm. Only they who refuse to look can fail to see. For it is as clear as day that the only way to forestall the tyranny of the property lawless laborer is to stop the tyranny of his property holding employer. The "lower classes" can be held in serfdom for a while,—sometimes for a very long while,—but in the eternal balancings of Divine Justice there comes the day of reckoning—the day when master and serf change places and the latter wields the lash. And we have only to look at Eastern Europe to see how mercilessly he can do it.

For the successful treatment of Bolshevism an ounce of prevention is worth a thousand pounds of cure.

The second of these forces is the growing conviction that the property bolder, as a rule, has kept for himself more than is his due. Not that he has always been consciously dishonest. Sometimes he has, but often perhaps generally, he has dealt honestly, according to the accepted standards. He has paid his employé the wage agreed upon. And he has sold his wares in the open market at the market price. But he has usually forgotten that the wages paid his employés did not represent the whole value of their labor to him. And he has entirely overlooked the fact that the public which furnished the market for his products, was the biggest factor of all in bringing him his profits.

So the property-holder shows signs of waking up. He is beginning to ask whose these things which he handles really are? And who are entitled to their

Patience

Christ never asks of us such heavy labor
As leaves no time for quiet resting at his feet.
The waiting attitude of expectation
He oftimes counts a service most complete.

He sometimes wants our ear,—our rapt attention,
That he some sweetest secret may impart;
'Tis always in the time of deepest silence
That heart finds deepest fellowship with heart.

We sometimes wonder why our Lord doth place us
Within a sphere so narrow, so obscure,
That nothing we call work can find an entrance,
There's only room to suffer,—to endure.

Well, God loves patience! souls that dwell in stillness,
Doing the little things, or resting quiet,
May just as perfectly fulfill their mission
Be just as useful in the Father's sight,

As they who grapple with some giant evil,—
Clearing a path that every eye may see,
Our Savior cares for cheerful acquiescence
Not less than for a busy ministry.

Then seek to please him, whatso'er he bids thee,
Whether to do, to suffer, or to lie still,
'Twill matter little by what path he led us,
If in it all we sought to do his will.

No Neutrals or Conscripts in the "Forward Movement"

BY D. F. WARNER

THE Great War is over, but the conflict for righteousness is on in dead earnest. The liquor men are showing the red eye of defiance as their iniquitous business is doomed. Politicians are opposing an international agreement to minimize the probabilities of war. And many classes and peoples are crying for justice in this new day of unrest. And now the church has no other honest and brave choice but to move forward in vigor and purpose with her healing and salvation.

But, in this day, when we are the more yielding to the impact of spiritual forces, set loose nineteen hundred years ago by the Man of Galilee, we are the clearer seeing that righteousness consists not in getting justice but in giving justice. President Wilson has already indicated that every country, participating in the League of Nations, must give up something of its sovereignty,—must make concessions to other nations. This is social righteousness. The key-principle of Christianity is giving,—not getting.

Now, this is a forward movement principle and ideal by which to live in this age. How many ideas there are, but how few the ideals! An idea becomes an ideal when we are willing to clothe it with sacrifice and devotion; when we enshrine it in flesh and make it live before men; and more, when we are willing to die for it. Jesus and Paul were moved by the eternal "must" and their lives went out as the martyr's price. Lincoln yielded to the assassin's bullet for an ideal, and Edith Cavell gloried in death at the hands of her cruel enemies.

Psalm 110 sets forth the church's program. In verse one we have the present and universal reign of Christ. His atonement is finished. His spirit has been released for men; and the conflict for truth shall rage until the restoration of all things. This is a time to die for others. "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." Jesus quotes this psalm, in Matt. 22: 44. It is a convincing proof of his Messianic power on earth,—a sovereignty which he makes the surety of the Great Commission.

Verse two represents the church as waging the conflict. "Zion," to the Jew, is the earthly Jerusalem; but to the Christian it is the spiritual Jerusalem, or church. "The rod of thy strength" is the rod with which the prophets and the Revelator saw Jesus smiting the nations, or the Word of God.

So the "Forward Movement" is to be won by the church wielding "the Sword of the Spirit." The church must rule in the midst of her enemies. They must be subdued by the power of the Gospel through the church. In this dispensation the world's sins must be purged out by the blood of the Lamb, through heralds that are willing to die to declare the news.

During this dispensation Jesus is to remain in heaven. When the church's task is finished he returns again,—not unto restoration but unto judgment. Then the door of salvation will be closed (Matt. 25: 10). Now, only, is our hope. Now is the time for a forward and united drive. Now is the time to answer Christ's prayer for unity, and to join in the Revelator's universal chorus: "Unto him that sitteth on the throne and unto the Lamb."

And for this glorious consummation God's people are willing to labor, for this is the day of the church's power, says verse three. This psalm is the war cry of our Great Commander, calling the church to mobilize against the enemy. It is a world struggle. It involves every man and every man's affairs. You can not be neutral. There is no God and Mammon in this movement. Either you are willing or not willing. But the call is to the willing,—to the volunteers. No drafted men are wanted. What a wonderful situation! There is no place in Christ's army for a conscript. Already we have too many of such in the church. When the call comes for a "Forward Movement," you have to send out an officer to get them in line.

And what have you when you have lined them up? Nothing. They won't fight. They look like soldiers but belie the name. With such an army defeat is certain. When Gideon reviewed his thirty-two thousand men, his close eye detected the fearful, and he said: "Go home; we can't use you." He had but three hundred left. They were volunteers that had the conception of their leader and the same stout faith in God. Every Bible reader knows how the sword of Jehovah and Gideon won. If the battles of the church are lost, they are lost to the fearful, the neutrals, and the conscripts. But heaven pity that soul and that church in the day when God shall let loose the winds of judgment, if they are not found bravely fighting! "By the water courses of Reuben there were great resolves of heart." Foch said: "Send me volunteers whose hearts are but for the fight." And this is fundamental in the success of our "Forward Movement." And it is an assured fact that no conscript or sluggard shall enter the Kingdom of God.

A guarantee of victory is found in verses 4-7. Jesus has gone into the great Holy of holies as a "priest forever," to offer his body as a moral satisfaction for the world's sins. But sinners must know this. The church must declare it. How long? "How long, O Master, the holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth" (Rev. 6: 10; see Luke 1: 8, 9, 21)? While our High Priest remains in the temple, the church is to keep up its fight against sin. Listen! The Master is praying that our faith fail not. How long? Until we rule over our enemies in his Name. Until every man and woman has heard the call to mobilization. Then the Priesthood ends, and Jesus comes out of the temple on the clouds of heaven to visit vengeance on the unwilling. He that is willing shall inherit the new earth, but he that is unwilling will be consigned to the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone.

Dear reader, the battle seems hard and long, but our Leader is interceding with a God that "hath sworn victory" and will not repent. We are hastening on to that glorious day, and in the "Forward Movement" of the church we love, let no one die the death of a neutral or conscript.

The Doctrine of Justification

BY J. H. MOORE

CAN a man be justified by faith? Paul, in Gal. 2: 16, says that "a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by faith in Christ Jesus." From this we learn that justification is by faith in Christ, and that the works of the law,—that is, the works of the Mosaic law,—cut no figure in the act. Jewish converts,—that is, Jews who were about half converted,—wanted to hitch the Gospel to the law of Moses, and have all believers obey the law, as well as to accept the further teaching of Jesus. That is why they contended so strenuously for justification by the law. However much of Christ they may have preached, still they taught the necessity of obeying Moses as well.

Paul was capable of a broader view of Christianity and taught that Christ was the end of the law, the end of the Mosaic system, and that those who accepted Christ in faith and obedience cut entirely loose from what Moses had enjoined. He would have all believers to understand that the whole Mosaic system, however fully inspired, was primarily intended to bring the generations up to Christ and thus prepare people for the teachings of Christ. This being true, the introduction of Christianity practically did away with the Mosaic requirements, and the compliance with any or all of these requirements served no purpose in the plan of salvation. Hence he lays down the broad principle that "a man is not justified by the works of the law," or by obedience to what Moses enjoined. But, says he, "justification is by faith in Christ Jesus." That is, justification is obtained absolutely independent of the Mosaic law.

This, however, does not mean that faith,—mere faith,—is the only thing that figures in justification. The Mosaic law cuts no figure, but that does not exclude everything else. In Titus 3: 7 it is stated that we are "justified by his grace." That is, by the grace, or favor, of God. Hence we have both faith and grace figuring in justification. Paul further adds (Rom. 5: 9): "Being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him." This gives a third item as being associated with justification. We now go to James 2: 24 for a fourth item, and there we read: "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." By works, in this instance, are meant the duties enjoined by the Gospel. Just before this, in verse 21, we are told that Abraham was "justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar." This does not refer to the works of the law, for the law of Moses had not yet been given. It was simply the obedience of the faith he had in God.

Reasoning from the experience of Abraham, James would have us understand that a man is justified by works, that is, through the performance of the duties set forth in the teachings of Christ. As Abraham, through believing in and obeying God, was justified, so is the man who believes in Christ and obeys his Word. Then, to fortify believers against another extreme, he affirms that a man is not justified "by faith only" (James 2: 24). While some loose thinkers taught that a man is justified by works, there were those who went to the other extreme and maintained that justification was by faith alone. To correct this error, James makes it clear that justification is not "by faith only." And to clinch the argument and to make it forever unanswerable, he lays down this broad, solid, fundamental principle: "As the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead, being alone" (James 2: 26).

In his logical reasoning, Paul gets entirely rid of the Mosaic law and introduces the Gospel as an independent plan of salvation, affirming as one of the fundamentals of this Gospel, that man is justified by faith, that is, the faith in Christ Jesus,—a faith that always has obedience of the Gospel associated with it. A faith without obedience would be considered dead or inactive. In justification even the works of the Gospel, independent of faith, will cut no figure. And the same is true of the faith that stands entirely alone. The two, that is, faith and obedience, must go together. Separate them and we have mere formality and death.

From the very start the Brethren accepted the doctrine of justification by faith and obedience, holding, as does James, that justification by faith only is a false and a misleading doctrine, being wholly at variance with the teachings of the New Testament. Pertaining to the doctrine of justification there are two schools,—one maintaining that a man is justified by faith only, while the other adds obedience to genuine faith. To the latter class the Brethren belong, and in their teaching, for more than two centuries, we find no uncertain sound along this line. Now and then one emphasizes justification by faith and not by works, as the result of a bit of carelessness in stating the proposition, or for strenuously for justification by the law. However much of Christ they may have preached, still they taught the necessity of obeying Moses as well.

Paul was capable of a broader view of Christianity and taught that Christ was the end of the law, the end of the Mosaic system, and that those who accepted Christ in faith and obedience cut entirely loose from what Moses had enjoined. Pertaining to the doctrine of justification there are two schools,—one maintaining that a man is justified by faith only, the lack of a clear understanding of the disunction which Paul makes between the law of Moses and the Gospel of Jesus Christ. But as a matter of fact, the Church of the Brethren is thoroughly committed to the doctrine of justification by faith, and obedience to the Gospel.

The Worst Kind of Materialism

BY D. W. KURTZ

ONE of America's greatest sociologists says that the three hindrances to happiness and social success are materialism, individualism and hypernationalism. What do we mean by materialism?

There are, for our purpose, two kinds of materialism,—philosophic and practical. Philosophic materialism is a belief, entertained by some scientists and philosophers, that ultimate reality is matter. The more modern terminology is "force," "energy" or "motion." This philosophy is now more generally called "naturalism." It can be defined best by telling what it is not.

It is a denial of the reality of mind, or spirit, or soul, or God. If all is matter or energy, there can be no such thing as mind or spirit. What we call "mind" is only a manifestation of a mechanism,—the machinery of the brain and nervous system. The mind and consciousness are compared to the music made by a piano. When the piano strings cease to vibrate, the music ceases. So with the brain. When its mechanism ceases to work, consciousness ceases forever.

Philosophic materialism can only be met on its own ground, by showing that the facts of life and mind are such as to make a mechanistic explanation an absurdity. My purpose is not to write a "Theism," but to point out the practical dangers of materialism. The philosophy that denies the reality of the Spirit, and the reality of God, undermines all hope of progress in social morality. All is determined, fixed, fatalistic, and growth in social or individual goodness is simply impossible. There is no motive for righteousness, honesty, unselfishness, brotherhood, or any of the social virtues. All is determined. There is no place for the word "duty" or "ought" or honor, dishonor, sin, worth, virtue, etc., for where there is no human freedom, there is no responsibility and no virtue.

A general belief in absolute determinism would stop all efforts at self-control, self-culture and self-sacrifice for a cause, and life would follow the strongest instincts. The lower forms of life have but two functions,—nutrition and reproduction. All their time and energy is spent in these functions. But man not only follows the instincts of nutrition and reproduction; he has a lot of leisure, and this leisure is used to build up a civilization. The civilization which man builds for himself includes education, culture, morality, religion, music, art, play, social life, etc. This whole work of civilization is due to the fact that man does not spend all of his time and energy in nutrition and reproduction,—which, for the most highly civilized man, take but a very small part of his time and energy,—but in behalf of ideals and aspirations to develop the inner life, the life of the Spirit, the Kingdom of God.

Materialism follows the lower instincts and thus will eventually destroy all idealism and spiritual values,—all civilization. Of course, I am sure that such a thing will not happen because materialism is false, and in spite of his philosophy, the materialist himself has a mind, and uses his mind to think out his philosophy. He is free to think that he is determined. He has a faith in the unity of the universe, and this faith drives him on to think and make his system of philosophy. His own life is quite sufficient to disprove his theory, to say nothing of the lives of the saints, the prophets and apostles and, above all, the life of Christ.

There is another kind of materialism. I call it form of insanity is the mania to own. One of the first acts of a person who comes into money is to load himself down with a pile of rubbish that makes his life a fret, and his death-bed terrible. The very rich collect. They get together spoons, canes, pictures, vases, pitchers, books, or marbles. When there is no more room for them in the house they build a wing and pack it full. The stores are heaped up with things. The most skillful men are employed to persuade people to buy things for which they have no earthly use. American living-rooms are as cluttered as Westminster Abbey. Every mantel is loaded with junk. The walls are covered with pictures, most of them bad. The floors are so thick with chairs and superfluous stands and tables that few can wind their way through them by day and none by night. Things, things, things! Bedrooms are full of them, closets heaped with them, the attic is choked with them, the woodshed and barn are running over. When we go away on vacations we take trunks full of things. When we go to Europe, also, we find that baggage is the plague of our life."

Six days in the week we work for things, and the seventh is often spent in thinking and dreaming about things. Life is spent in accumulating and collecting things; then worried to death in guarding and caring for things. This mania to outdo each other in getting things is one of the greatest curses of our prosperous country. In Bible times it was "hard for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of heaven," because of his emphasis on things and his lack of interest in the spiritual life. Today it is hard for the common man also to enter into heaven, for he, too, is interested in things as the mania of his soul. Will we ever learn that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth"? What is worldliness, if it is not just this love for things? Worldliness is not limited to one particular kind of thing,—but the interest in and love for things for their own sake, rather than the life of the Spirit, is worldliness.

This practical materialism is far more dangerous to our spiritual life than philosophic materialism, because it is so universal. We need a national revival of idealism, another pietistic movement, an ethical and spiritual evangelism that will turn the minds and hearts of men toward God. Let us read Goldsmith's Deserted Village and think on these lines:

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates, and men decay."

The wisdom of the past echoes down through the ages: "Where there is no vision, the people perish." And also, "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." Paul reminds us that "the things that are seen are temporal, but the things that are not seen are eternal."

An Irresistible Conclusion

BY PAUL MOHLER

THE following excerpts, from an article by Nixola Greely-Smith in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of March 2, 1919, are exceedingly significant. Notice them carefully:

"When is an evening dress a moral menace? At a meeting of the City Federation of Women's Clubs (in New York) last week, 1,000 women joined in discussion of this perplexing problem. The debate was led by Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, who pleaded for a modification of present-day fashions in the interest of our returning soldiers."

"'Women,' said Mrs. Wentz, 'have disgraced themselves by appearing with shockingly bare necks, bare arms, and bare backs, and it has a bad effect on our boys.'

"Some time ago, Mrs. Wentz expressed to an interviewer her earnest concern over the possible influence exerted on returned soldiers by shop windows laden with lacy lingerie."

Here followed the main body of the article, which tirade of profanity and obscenity, cursing his God, himself, the wind and the scattered papers in unbelievable shamelessness and blasphemy.

The point I wish to impress is that zeal for a theory of Christian faith does not go very far with people if its exponent does not show unmistakable evidence of that theory's power to cleanse a life of filth, profanity and all other forms of sin. Yes, "consistency, thou art a jewel," and all the more precious because so rare.

Those who are convinced that certain fundamental doctrines are essential to salvation, surely can not deserve criticism for seeking to bring before the people such evidence, influence and persuasion as will induce a large acceptance of those doctrines. Doubtless one error, of which most of us are guilty, is a failure to appreciate such fundamentals and to teach them as zealously as we should. But our own greater error may consist in reducing much wholesome truth and teaching into impotent mockery by inconsistent living,—by virtually denying that our religion has power to transform the life.

Let us ever teach, with zeal and intelligence, all the Bible doctrines, including those which are distinctive of our own church; but while doing this let us make sure that our lives in every detail may be a positive evidence that the Gospel, as understood and practiced by us, has power completely to cleanse from sin,—yea, even from the "appearance of evil." Let our lives give evidence that our religious experience has power to make us "new creatures in Christ Jesus." Such consistent living will make our teaching effectual. Such consistency is a "jewel" in the "King's" treasure house.

Observations in France

BY J. E. MILLER

It has always been "beautiful France." I labored over Cæsar's Commentaries when in school and later delighted in seeing others labor over them. When I first read them, the task was so difficult and went so slow that I failed to find the connected story and did not associate the events and places with modern France. Later I learned the connection and the narrative of Cæsar's conquests became an object of interest. It was war in Cæsar's time and it is war now. One still sees in France the ravages of war. And at this time it becomes especially apparent.

At present France is a cosmopolitan people, or, rather, contains people from all parts of the world. The Chinese, the Indo-Chinese, men from all her colonies and of all colors are seen in France. Everywhere the boys from America are conspicuous. Locomotives marked U. S. A. are seen on the roads and autos of all kinds and makes with the United States stamp are seen. You should see our boys smile as they behold one from the States. Their first question is as to how things are in America and their next statement is that they want to get back home as soon as possible. Three of our party have sons in Europe, in the army, and all three succeeded in seeing them.

France finds her people dressed in mourning. Everywhere black meets one's eyes. It would seem that every family has been called to mourn the loss of some member of the family. However, an American soldier informed us that women especially wear mourning even for a second cousin, thinking the dress becoming and popular. Surely, war is a cruel monster and cares not who is made to suffer.

France has paid a tremendous price, in money as well as in men. She is straining every nerve to recuperate as soon as possible. One must keep this in mind, as he hears the reports of the heavy claims France is making against Germany. This will also explain why everything in France is high and why there are rumors that even America is called upon for heavy payments for various purposes.

Amid all her suffering and mourning, France is gay and happy. If only one could say that she is not sinful, it would be a great relief. For years the standard of morals in France has been different from that of America. The home life of these two nations has not been the same. What one sees on the street is not of such a nature as to cause him to hope for the best. But even America has her dark blots in the social and moral life and so can not count herself guiltless.

Here and there may be seen the effect of air raids or of a shell from a "Big Bertha." The sand piled outside the building where Napoleon lies buried, tells of the days when his tomb was protected against raids. The cannon crowded within the Place de la Concord and extending in a double row as far as the Arch of Triumph, where again a large number is gathered, tell us that a great war has been fought. Crippled soldiers and the frequent display of artificial limbs in the windows tell that unusual conditions prevail. Guides glory in pointing out the grand hotel in which the Kaiser had ordered his banquet when he should enter Paris. That meal has not yet been prepared. His last argument failed him in the hour of deepest need. One may see on the cannon of Louis XIV. these words: "Ultima ratio regum." "The last argument of kings." The Kaiser has these words on his Prussian cannon, "Ultima ratio regis," "The last argument of the king." He recognized no king but himself and now the world and his own people refuse to recognize him. Man plans in vain when he leaves God and righteousness out of his plans.

Sentiment has a deep grip on the French people. They are very expressive. They talk not only with words and lips, but with their face and hands and entire body. Sentiment and appreciation led them to name one of their streets after President Wilson and others after other men of other nations that have figured prominently in the war. They even have a street named United States. Of course they give it in French and not in American. May there never be a day when the cordial relations between these two great nations shall be broken!

One sees in the rolling stock of the railroads and in other instances that the energies of France have been devoted to the successful prosecution of the war. Many improvements have been deferred until time and means will make them possible. Her depleted manhood as well as her depleted treasury and her devastated fields will consume years in rebuilding. To find English and French money at a discount must be annoying to these two great nations. Money values fluctuate from day to day, but the American dollar is the best dollar in the world at present.

If all goes as we plan, we board the Camberri at Marseilles April 4 and will sail when the boat sails. We are learning to wait patiently until passage can be secured, and try to improve the time as we travel from place to place.

The Evolution of the New Order

BY HARRISON A. FRANTZ

In Three Parts.—Part Two

The American colonies, in their relations to each other, just after they had won their independence from the oppressor, were in grave danger of losing their cause for lack of a unified purpose. They had fought together against a common enemy,—they had won. Now they were ambitious, but selfishly ambitious. Just so long as they fostered a hostile attitude toward each other, so long did their destinies hang in the balances. But there were those brave, unselfish men who had faith and courage enough to espouse the cause of unity. By these few, living above the dissension and discord of the many, they were able to lead to a victorious triumph the cause which was to determine the destinies of many nations who were then yet unborn.

Likewise today there are those brave volunteers who are giving their lives to save the international cause of the "United Nations." These men are giving their lives in an even more real sense than did the brave soldiers who fought the Prussians on the battle-fields of France. Those boys nobly sacrificed their life-blood on the battle-fields, but thrice noble are those mighty statesmen who stake their lives and their honor for the cause of a just peace, and who shall be able to steer the great ship of world-peace safely past the shoals among which she is now plying. International law has not called out these men. Not International law is yet but a helpless infant. These saviors of the world have come forth in answer to the call of human brothers who are in suffering, and in answer to the call of generations yet unborn. Their hearts are attuned to respond to the mighty call of humanity which had long fallen upon deaf ears. They are now laying the foundations for a glorious world organization.

Under the Old Order the various nations each have a Secretary of War. These secretaries seem to have succeeded quite well in promoting and handling wars. Let us now have also a Secretary of Peace, to direct the peace interests of our respective countries. These, in turn, may have under-secretaries throughout their respective countries. This will greatly assist in building up a unified and compact international mind. Among other things that are bringing greater world-unity are, the dependence of the nations upon each other for foods and raw materials, the great commercial interests, and the educational institutions of the world.

The American Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776. Therein our fathers proclaimed: "For the support of this declaration we mutually pledge our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor." The United States resulted. Let the peoples of the world now pledge their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor to President Wilson's declaration of interdependence. The United Nations will result. In the formation of the United States, one or two of the States had to be forced to come into the union, but they came in and soon were glad they were in. Perhaps it may be so in the proposed United Nations. Some may hesitate to come in, but they will come in and, as the peoples of the great world family of tomorrow shall look back upon this, our generation, they will marvel that so late as the year 1918 there was opposition to the uniting of the nations into a common family. The New Order has been evolving step by step for many years.

In Europe, as early as 1713, shortly after the Treaty of Utrecht, there was quite an elaborate document worked out by which there was to be formed "A League of Peace to Maintain Public Law." The document did not find favor, for there was no international mind, neither had the ethical standards of the time arisen to this ideal. Many efforts were made to establish the peace of the world at various times down through the ages. All these seemingly failed. But did they fail? No! These were the ideals of the race seeking expression, and when one martyr laid down his mantle, another took it up, each in his day getting a little more definitely before the world the great ideal which is now, even in this twentieth century, just beginning to be taken seriously by the nations.

Developments have been much more rapid since the meeting of the first Hague Conference in 1899, there being another in 1907. In spite of the much uncomplimentary talk about The Hague, its conferences and its organized movement have demonstrated to the entire world that arbitration between nations is no longer an experiment but that it will work. It HAS WORKED with marvelous success. During the ten-year period in which occurred four great wars, viz.: The Russo-Japanese war, the Boer war, the China-Japanese war, and the Spanish-American war, there were also six minor disputes, in which there was resort to arms. But during this same period almost one hundred national and international disputes were settled by arbitration. And some of those cases were of the most complex and delicate nature. Arbitration has seldom failed when it has been tried, but the difficult thing has been to get the nations to submit their cases for arbitration, and without international organization there has been no power to demand peaceful settlement. Meanwhile secret treaties and secret diplomacy have been responsible for bringing on many hasty wars. World democracy will change all this. The nations will court friendliness and brotherhood instead of war.

A notable evidence of the blessings of the absence of war is the fact that for more than forty years, prior to 1914, there were no wars of any consequence in all Northern, Central, or Western Europe, neither in North America (save the short Cuban campaign). During this period there was, in those countries, the most remarkable growth of industries and expansion of commerce that has ever been known to the world. On the other hand, wars have always demoralized business and trade, and have destroyed the homes and the lives of innocent peoples. In the late war every cannon belched forth, at a single shot, more than the equivalent of a suburban home. But this is not the worst. It is the loss of the best blood of the nations and the retarding of our civilization that is most of all unbearable. We will make almost any sacrifice, in times of peace, to save a single life, but when war is on, we recklessly sacrifice lives by the thousands. All that science, eugenics, and the evolution of the race have wrought for us in a thousand years, is despised and cast aside or diverted in a time when we are beside ourselves and not able to think or act consistently. And after all is said and done, WAR SETTLES NOTHING.

The apostle Paul said that the law of Moses was a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. And again: "But when that which is perfect is come that which is in part shall be done away" (1 Cor. 13: 10). So war in the past may have served a purpose (because men were unable to grasp the better way) and has served as a schoolmaster to bring us to the era of peace. We are now on the threshold of that era of peace. The country schoolmaster of fifty years ago thought the "hickory" an indispensable factor in the conducting of an educational institution. But with our present standard of ethics and pedagogical methods, the "hickory" has no place as a rod of correction. It is a relic of the past. Soon will the art and the implements of war be so classified.

Charles Edward Jefferson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, points out that for ages men believed in witchcraft. It was not an isolated belief. It was a universal belief. It was not temporary but persistent. Less than two hundred years ago the most learned and highly cultured men believed in the power of witches. Consequently in Europe alone, during the seventeenth century, more than one hundred thousand men and women were executed because they were charged with witchcraft. Men of that time, no doubt, believed that witchcraft would abide forever. Moreover today,—only two hundred years later,—it has vanished completely from all civilized countries. As soon as men ceased to believe in witchcraft, they ceased to kill men and women on the charge of being witches.

For centuries the courts of Europe, in order to find out the guilt of prisoners suspected of crime, subjected them to cruel torture. This method was sanctioned by the highest legal authorities in the world. Those instruments of torture are still on exhibition in museums and we look upon them with wonder and horror. As soon as men came to believe that truth could be ascertained more surely in some other way, those instruments of torture were laid aside. So, also, when men come to believe there are better ways of settling disputes than by war, they will lay aside the implements of war. That such a time will come is as certain as that witchcraft is dead, or that slavery is dead. "Victor Hugo spoke with the insight of a prophet when, years ago, he declared that the time would come when a cannon would be preserved in museums, and would be looked at with the same feelings with which we now gaze on the abandoned instruments of torture." ("Christianity and Universal Peace," Jefferson, page 203.)

We therefore note that there is being born out of the failure of the Old Order an intense desire for that which is better,—that which is life-giving and constructive rather than destructive. There is in evidence, on every hand, the issuing forth of that which is based on reason, love, and justice. This tends to life, whereas the Old has stood as an insurmountable barrier to progress and civilization.

What, then, is the meaning of the new order? It is not enough to want peace. WE MUST TAKE IT. Some believe that everything is coming out right, without our doing anything. WE LONG FOR BROTHERHOOD. It is the acknowledged ideal. We must lay hold of that ideal and never relinquish our grip until the end is accomplished. That may not be fully realized in our own generation, nor even in the next, nor the next. That matters not. "Work till the sun goes down and the night falls in which you can not work any more, and some one, noting your fidelity, will take up the work where you dropped it, and then another, and still another, and some day, somehow, the glorious triumph will be complete." (Jefferson, page 42.)

There are ups and downs in human life and so have there been in the progress of the race; and though sometimes we seem to slip back a little, there is a corresponding reaction which takes us far ahead of the place from which we slipped. After the beginning of the great war of 1914 the scoffers were on hand with their "I told you so." Germany had only a short while before, openly and slanderously defied the "Little Hague." But let the scoffers say what they will, our cause is just: it will live. The immortal names, Abraham Lincoln, Henry Ward Beecher, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and John Greenleaf Whittier speak to us of noble spirits that lived and died, devoted to ONE great cause. Frances Willard, though a woman, dared to rise against the organized forces of the liquor traffic and mother the W. C. T. U., which has since become one of the prime factors in rooting out alcoholism. General Booth founded the Salvation Army, Clara Barton the Red Cross, and we honor their names. "These all died in faith, not having" fully "received the promise," but their causes have lived and have won, and are still blessing the world. Those heroes and heroines lived and died for a cause in which they had faith. In each case the cause had only become well rooted during the life of those who gave it birth, and so nobly defended the early years of the movement.

In our own generation such men as William J. Bryan, David Starr Jordan, William H. Taft, Andrew Carnegie, and Henry Ford, are looked upon by many as being Utopian in character, as being idealists who try to promote theories which are not practical. Only by the great success with which President Wilson is now carrying forward his program for the establishment of a permanent peace is he shielded from the attacks of the more narrow-minded and war-imbued people of the present time. Let the scoffers scoff! These same men,—some of whom are being derided now,—will have monuments erected to their honor by future generations because they shall have been the heroes who have begotten and stood by the cradle-movement of the peace of the world. President Wilson, who is now the man-of-the-hour, has the courage and blessed privilege of taking from the cradle the infant "peace" and is now teaching it to walk alone. It will suffer many hard knocks and meet severe testings, but these shall be to it as exercise to the growing child. Out of the testings shall come strength. This child shall grow and "wax strong," for it is, indeed, a child of the Most High. It shall never again return to the cradle nor shall any injury, it may receive, result in its death. Of the "Prince of Peace" it is said, "Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end" (Isa. 9: 7).

Standardization

BY LYDIA E. TAYLOR

Our Part in the Movement

Of Special Interest to All Women.—All who have given the subject earnest consideration know that standardization is the practical way for the general solution of the dress problem. It gets at the root of the fashion menace, by abolishing the foolish, frequent changes of modern fashion, which just now have reached the climax of indecency.

After a long, strenuous effort, fraught with many difficulties, we are now ready to distribute among our sisters, and all others interested in sane dress, a little catalog of three standardized suits, containing illustrations, descriptions and prices, besides other material of an exceedingly interesting nature.

The plan is superior to anything we had hoped for, as a beginning. This tailoring firm offers you the made-to-measure plan in all-wool garments with guaranteed lining, at 15% to 20% below the price asked for the extreme designs in suits now on the market,—many of these freaks being only 27 inches wide at the bottom.

Your Personal Interest.—If you need a suit, or simply wish particulars, write for the catalog, or "Suit Booklet," to the Secretary of the Committee on Dress Reform. Any necessary questions regarding the work may accompany this request, and will be cheerfully answered. Send your order (using care to follow instructions) to Doff Cloak & Suit House, 1550 N. Robey Street, Chicago, Ill.

Do not write this tailoring firm unless you are ready to order. Remember their mail-order plan is a special arrangement to serve people outside of Chicago with these standardized garments. So make all preliminary inquiries of the Committee through the Secretary. These special suits already have an encouraging patronage. They are before us as a recommendation, not for adoption. It is our chance to help in this "Forward movement" for sane dress for women.

Is the Plan Practical?—For answer we cite you to the onward surge of the movement on all sides, voiced in the protests going up from various organizations over the country:

Our article on the "Biennial Clothing Conservation Conference," "Messenger," March I issue, gives the Conference speakers' part in the enthusiasm manifested, as well as the sweeping resolutions passed on that occasion. What follows here, is but a partial fulfillment of our promise, in March I "Messenger," that these resolutions would be "CARRIED OUT."

Several State Conventions have already "carried out" the "simply gowned" request of their State presidents. The October number, 1918, "Federation Magazine," not only gave one-half of its space to a full discussion of the subject, but at least three types of standardized dresses were illustrated and described in that issue.

Mrs. James G. Wentz, acting chairman of the "Decent Dress Committee" of the New York City Federation, has entered upon a general crusade of organized effort against the indecent freaks of fashion: By appeal to the designers; through a systematic censorship of shop windows; by supplying copies of the New York City Federation "Protest" to all the women's organizations throughout the country; and by the public appeal to women to dress modestly, since precept without example counts for little in anything.

Kansas City women were among the first to evidence their cooperation by the passage of pointed resolutions, ending in the appointment of a committee "to investigate conditions in Kansas City, looking toward moral improvement along these lines."

Massachusetts women gave the reform effort hearty approval at their Quincy Convention recently. "It is a serious question," declared Mrs. Frederic Bishop, in the discussion, "dress reform is a principle." And the "American" (Boston) comments, "The gates are opened, and fashion may be wrecked before the tide recedes."

Women of Nebraska, in Convention at Omaha, last February, sent out "letters of protest" to over 200 Nebraska women's organizations declaring: "Tight skirts are uncomfortable, embarrassing and immoral," and threatening to petition the State Legislature for the passage of laws against such evils in dress.

In March, the position of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was expressed through Mrs. Elizabeth Neff, leader in the "Campaign to Improve Style Standards," at their Cleveland, Ohio, Meeting where the address by Mrs. Neff was followed by the passage of very comprehensive resolutions, of which she herself is the author.

Last February, at a Chicago Meeting of the women deans of twenty-one Universities, these women, with a vision of the future, went on record in their united protest against modern fashions. In a personal letter, the president of that organization, Miss Ruby E. C. Mason, Dean of University, Urbana, Ill., comes out in considerate but emphatic defense of their position on the question.

An account of the work of New York and Nebraska women was concisely given in "Gospel Messenger" of March 29, last article, page 201, while the "vigorous protest" of the Iowa women at Sioux City is clearly outlined in "Gospel Messenger," April 19, page 249.

Ministers from the pulpit are coming out in bold defense of the movement. Rev. Arthur Staples, of Wilkinsburg, Pa. in a recent sermon on the subject, quoted a certain magazine editor as saying, "when a woman becomes 'stylish' she becomes cheap."

Certain Boston designers have admitted that the "jazz dress" of the ultra fashionables of our time, through reaction, is serving as an impetus to the upward movement of dress reform.

What is our part, brethren, sisters? Shall we "fold our hands serene and wait," while others do the work in this cause for righteousness? Or, shall we be big and brave enough to face the issue, and through organized effort, do "with our might" something constructive to help? What should be our attitude in a reform movement, involving so much of the "simple life" principle to which we have so long clung?

Note the following quotation from a Reform Bureau leaflet: "'Camouflage' is a word much used, because much needed to describe false pretenses,—strategie in war, but rank hypocrisy in most cases in civil life. 'Lord, make us real!'"

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Egan.—The work at this place is progressing nicely, most of the members being anxious to do what they can for the advancement of the church. Eld. J. P. Dickey was with us April 13. His coming is much appreciated. Jan. 26 Brethren W. I. T. Hoover and L. J. Lehman, of La Verne, came to anoint Sister S. F. Yoder, our elder's wife. They also filled the appointments for the day, giving two excellent talks. A Sunday-school has been organized at Egan Siding, with an enrollment of about forty. This is one of the one hundred new Sunday-schools for 1919, suggested in the program of the Forward Movement. It is the only school in the community and Christians of other denominations are lending encouragement and attending whenever possible. Sunday-school is held at 3 P. M., followed by a lively Christian Workers' Meeting and prayer circle, during which hour the children under twelve years are given kindergarten and memory drills in an adjoining room. Socials are being planned at the several homes and it is hoped the little church may prove a social center and a blessing to the community. A number of the Christian Workers' Band are preparing to spread Easter joy by sunrise singing. March 31 the Mission Band of La Verne College, and the District Christian Worker officers rendered two excellent programs. Bro. I. V. Funderburgh preached in the morning at Hemet and Bro. Albert Brubaker conducted a quarterly review during the Sunday-school hour at Egan. The members decided to have revival meetings and communion in May. We also decided to join a neighborhood prayer meeting, which meets every Friday evening.—Margaret Brubaker, Hemet, Calif., April 14.

Live Oak.—Not being able to secure Bro. M. M. Eshelman, we arranged with Bro. C. Ernest Davis, of Chico, Calif., for a series of lectures on the Book of Revelation. He commenced on the evening of April 6 and gave us twelve interesting talks, all stood for Christ, ten of whom were baptized, one joining the Presbyterian church and one not being allowed to unite with the church because of youth. April 19 our communion was held. An Easter program was given by the Sunday-school.—A. Crites, Live Oak, Calif., April 20.

Raisin church met in council March 29, with Bro. Stover presiding. Our pastor, Bro. Brubaker, was unanimously elected to serve for another year. The Faithful Workers' Class planned a beautiful Easter program, which was rendered on Sunday morning. We decided to hold our love feast May 18. Much enthusiasm is manifested along all lines of church work.—W. Harlan Smith, Raisin, Calif., April 20.

Reedley.—Our series of meetings, held by Bro. P. E. Robertson, of Lindsay, Calif., closed March 23. Seventeen were baptized. We are meeting with Eld. M. H. Miller every Friday evening, planning to do our share in the "Forward Movement." We have organized two teacher-training classes and also a home department. The Sunday-school has decided to use all the birthday collections to support a native worker in India. Great interest is being shown in all the departments of our church work and we hope to do better work in the future. April 21 we are expecting Bro. S. F. Sanger, from Empire, Calif., to be with us and to begin a two weeks' series of doctrinal sermons.—Mabel Armantrout, Reedley, Calif., April 15.

Waterford church met in council March 27, with Eld. J. W. Oesterdorf presiding. We decided to have a short series of meetings and a love feast as soon as arrangements can be made. Bro. Dayton McMillan was elected to the deacon's office and with his wife duly installed. Three letters were received. April 6 Bro. Albert Sharp, of Ceres, Calif., preached for us. His subject was, "The Living Water." Bro. L. E. Miller, of Empire, Calif., preached for us April 13. We are preparing for an Easter program, to be given Sunday evening. The opportunities are good for a greater church of the Brethren in this community. Interest and attendance are increasing.—Hattie Garvey Deardorff, Waterford, Calif., April 18.

COLORADO

Clay Creek Sunday-school reorganized April 6, with Bro. J. W. Jarboe, superintendent. Our school was closed from Oct. 6 to Feb. 2, on account of influenza. April 13 Bro. W. T. Lockett, from McClave, preached for us. He or Bro. Harris will come every two weeks. Isn't there a minister somewhere who would like to move here, to help us and to take up the work?—Susan Jarboe, Lamar, Colo., April 18.

Denver.—Easter Sunday a splendid program was rendered with Sister Molly Culler as leader. Bro. Geo. Burgin, our pastor, gave a splendid talk on the resurrection. In the evening we had a fine talk by Bro. Patzerueger, a Jewish Christian Baptist Bible School. His subject was "Japan." Bro. Chas. Shively also read a splendid letter to the audience from Sister Horning, our missionary to India. Our many new converts, as a result of Bro. Jarboe's series of meetings, are very earnest and taking great interest in our prayer meeting and Sunday-school, as well as all other departments of Christian work. Our dear sister, H. C. Long, who has been our Sunday-school superintendent for many years, is in the hospital at this time, but is now improving. We hope that she soon will be at her active work again.

THE ROUND TABLE

The Poet

BY JULIA GRAYDON

Once, so the story goes, God held a meeting in heaven with the angels who said, with one accord, that they needed another voice in the angel choir.

So God bethought himself of a pure and holy singer, who had sung on the earth for a long time, who was weary of earth's scenes and who yearned to soar beyond the blue sky he had so often sung about. And God said: "Let Gabriel fly thither and bring to us that waiting spirit."

Then the angel came to the poet at midnight and whispered in his ear, and these were his words: "Oh, great and good poet, we need you in heaven. There is a lyre waiting for the touch of your gentle fingers and a golden crown lies beside it,—this last being a reward for the good deeds done on the earth by thee, and best of all the Heavenly Father waits with open arms to receive you at the gates of glory."

Then the great poet replied: "Oh, messenger of death, the dear Lord's will be done. I have been waiting for this call during these late years of my life and now I gladly follow thee."

And the angel carried the poet on his bosom up to the mansion of light, and while heaven rang with songs of rejoicing, earth was wrapped in sorrow, mourning the departure of one who had lived a noble life. But they never forgot the words they had heard from the lips of the poet himself:

"The dear Lord's best interpreters
Are humble, hungry souls,
The gospel of a life
Is more than books or scrolls."

Ordinary Young Folk

BY G. W. TUTTLE

Young folks, are you ordinary young persons? Do you rub elbows continually with people who are brighter, better educated, or more talented than yourself? Do you get discouraged? Do you say to yourself: "I am only ordinary"?

Keep your eyes open and you will soon learn that the heavy end, the larger portion, of life's best work is done by people whom the world has regarded as very ordinary. Extraordinary people, who have great natural ability or talents, often get off in a corner by themselves. After a time they get so cold that their corner freezes over, talents and ability are frosted, and they are extraordinary no longer. There is no growth without exercise,—the meal and oil with which the widow fed Elijah would not have grown, had they not been used.

I use the word "ordinary" here as it is usually understood, but as a matter of fact I hold that young folks cease to be ordinary the day that the heart's door is opened wide for Jesus Christ to come in. Their eyes see new visions, their feet tread new paths, their hearts respond to the promptings of the Christ who abides within. There may be seasons of depression or discouragement; there may be difficulties and pains and losses to face, but life can never be ordinary again unless they turn away from God.

Young folks, are you ordinary? Are you? We are told that God has chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty. Hath not God chosen you, and chosen me? "Yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," Paul says. God's highest form of creation, made in his own image, ordinary? Is the melody of the mocking-bird, that falls on my ears just now, ordinary? Are my roses, in their wondrous beauty, ordinary? Is the beauty of the sunrise and the glory of the sunset ordinary to me? Young folks, look me in the eye, let your warm palms cross mine, and let us say together: "When thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, Lord, will I seek."

Young folks, our Father can make the humblest, most ordinary life, rich with service, fruitful with results, and fragrant with praise. No young person who has sought God's face, who lives in the sunshine of his presence, who does his work and goes gladly upon his errands, can remain common.

We become weary of the common round, the ordinary tasks, when there is no Christ in them. On the other hand, a Christian life makes luminous and helpful the most humble tasks. Back of the tasks is God. Shining through them is the light of him who said: "I am the light of the world." Remember these words: "It is the ordinary young folks, whose every door is opened wide for the extraordinary Christ to come in, who are the lesser lights of this old world."

Volunteers Wanted!

BY W. J. HAMILTON

The King of kings, and his only Son, Prince Immanuel, do not use the conscript method for raising their world-famous army of multiplied millions. They rely solely upon the volunteer system, which has proven so effective and efficient for several thousand years.

The war of the ages, which has been waged for almost six thousand years, with its marvelous campaigns in every land, is without a parallel in the history of the world. The number of soldiers enlisted under the blood-stained banner of Prince Immanuel is large, but those that follow the black flag of the Prince of Darkness, are incomparably larger in number than any host ever marshalled beneath the ensign of an earthly ruler.

The magnitude of the battle line, the far-reaching effect of the artillery, the strategic skill of the commanders, the heroism of officers and soldiers, and the patient endurance of those enlisted with Prince Immanuel, will ever be the wonder of the universe.

When the King of kings sits on his dazzling throne, to review the magnificent army of Prince Immanuel, rewards will be given to the soldiers for deeds of valor in the world conflict. These will far excel any received by those engaged on fields of carnage.

As the battle-line is advancing and lengthening in many lands, there is always room for volunteers in Prince Immanuel's Army, so that the ranks may always be full, and ready for the spiritual warfare at any time.

The battalion of every State District, and the regiment of every congregation need volunteers at once, for the summer campaign. Recruiting stations are maintained in every church, Sunday-school, and Christian Workers' Society. Volunteers will be gladly accepted at any of the stations. Applicants should apply to the officers in charge.

Word has gone out from headquarters, and is being passed down the line, from the highest in authority, down through the ranks, to the latest private recruit, to "advance" in a general "Forward Movement." Every soldier of Christ should do his best to bring every church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society up to the front line.

This is no time for "slackers," or for any Christian soldier to be straggling along in the rear. Let every one of us make a heroic effort to bring the entire Brotherhood up to the front line position, and "stretch forward" in the mighty advance against the hosts of sin!

What Do We Want?

BY ELIZA POPE VAN DYNE

Rasselas went hunting the world over for that feeling we call happiness—only he hunted for a condition of happiness, and there isn't any such thing, of course.

It's a delightful, bubbling sensation that must, of necessity, be transitory,—because of its very nature; because of the cause of the effect; but chief of all because a vacillating human being must do the feeling in the matter. And if a human being doesn't feel like being happy, he isn't going to be happy, no matter what happens, nor where he is, nor what combination of good things the world may place around him. It is mental.

Were one placed in a complete and irrevocable condition of delight, it is very easy to imagine such a one going mad before the prospect. For there is one thing that a person can't stand, and that's the same thing,—over and over and over, day after day. Dietitians have proved how imperative it is for food to vary,—physicians, and nature, the benefit of seasons. Philosophers have lauded the priceless worth of different interests, hobbies, contrasts.

And so with happiness. It is the unexpectedness of it,—the change, the difference,—that creates that new, effervescing life in the mind and body. If it were to go on continually, it wouldn't be what it is.

Those of us who have a brilliant, dazzling, sun-shining day but seldom, exclaim over it, love it. They long, somehow, to make this beautiful gift a permanent thing with us. Yet those who have it always, hate it. It hurts them. Their whole being cries out for a fog,—something dull, something dark even.

Is happiness, as we use the term, really our goal then,—the object of all our striving, of all our learning? Or is it peace, and, perhaps, indifference? For there is nothing in the world nicer than ease in mind and body; to be free to laugh when things are funny, to enjoy people without them hurting; to be one's self, regardless of the others, or the others' views.

It is a very great achievement to learn to accept the good and the bad calmly; and so go neither wild with joy nor with grief. We tear ourselves to pieces with feeling, one way or another, until, from constant, drastic changes, we are never really what we are,—and so never our best.
